

THE DISCIPLES DIVINITY HOUSE
OF THE
UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

HERBERT LOCKWOOD WILLETT
LIBRARY

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2012 with funding from CARLI: Consortium of Academic and Research Libraries in Illinois

BL 1

Education Day, January 17.

THE CHRISTIAN- EVANGELIST

A WEEKLY RELIGIOUS NEWSPAPER.

Vol. XLI. No. 1.

January 7, 1904.

$1.50 A Year.

The Educational Situation.

THE world needs the religious reformation that is urged by the Disciples of Christ.

We can supply what the world needs only in proportion as we have educated and trained leaders who are capable of dealing with the religious problems of our time.

We cannot have an adequate supply of such men unless our own colleges train them in the formative period of their characters, when religious convictions are taking shape and root.

Our institutions of learning are not adequately endowed and equipped to do thoroughly and satisfactorily the educational work which we look to them to do, and which is essential to the success of our mission.

It is the pressing and imperative duty of our churches and individual members to contribute both money and students to enable our colleges to do this necessary work.

This is the meaning of Education Day, January 17.

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING CO. ST. LOUIS, MO.

The Christian-Evangelist

J. H. GARRISON, Editor

F. D. POWER, Associate Editor

W. E. GARRISON, Assistant Editor

Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year

For foreign countries add $1.04 for postage.

Remittances should be made by money order, draft or registered letter; not by local cheque, unless 15 cents is added to cover cost of collection.

In Ordering Change of Post-office give both old and new address.

Matter for Publication should be addressed to the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. Subscriptions and remittances should be addressed to the Christian Publishing Company. Unused Manuscripts will be returned only if accompanied by stamps.

News Items, evangelistic and otherwise, are solicited and should be sent on a postal card, if possible.

Entered at St. Louis P. O. as Second Class Matter.

What We Stand For.

For the Christ of Galilee,
For the truth which makes men free,
For the bond of unity
Which makes God's children one.

For the love which shines in deeds,
For the life which this world needs,
For the church whose triumph speeds
The prayer: "Thy will be done."

For the right against the wrong,
For the weak against the strong,
For the poor who've waited long
For the brighter age to be.

For the faith against tradition,
For the truth 'gainst superstition,
For the hope whose glad fruition
Our waiting eyes shall see.

For the city God is rearing,
For the New Earth now appearing,
For the heaven above us clearing
And the song of victory.

CONTENTS

Current Events.....	3
EDITORIAL:
Unconquered Land.....	5
Education Day.....	5
The Chicago Holocaust.....	6
A Timely Funeral.....	6
Editor's Easy Chair.....	7
Notes and Comments.....	7
CONTRIBUTED ARTICLES:
The Cause of Christian Education.....	8
Old-Time Evangelism. F. D. Power.....	9
The Prophet of the Unknowable. W. Durban.....	10
An Unfortunate Situation. B. S. Ferrall.....	11
The Question of Overlapping. N. J. Aylsworth.....	12
The Minister in the House of Bereavement. J. H. Wright.....	13
Beginning the Christian Life. G. A. Reinl.....	13
NEWS FROM MANY FIELDS:
Indiana.....	14
Kansas.....	14
Northern California.....	14
Ohio Letter.....	14
Dallas, Texas.....	15
Kentucky.....	15
Texas.....	15
THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.....	16
MIDWEEK PRAYER-MEETING.....	17
CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.....	17
OUR BUDGET.....	18
CORRESPONDENCE:
Christmas—A Meditation, 20. A Significant Meeting, 20. A New Named Loan Fund for Church Extension, 20. Illinois Bible-School Notes, 21. C. W. B. M. in Missouri, 21. Rededication at Scranton, Pa., 21. Dedication of North Christian Church, 21. The Situation in California, 22. Ministerial Exchanges, 22. Dedication of the Church at Valley Junction, Ia., 23. Important to Bible Students, 23.
EVANGELISTIC.....	24
PEOPLE'S FORUM.....	26
THE QUIET HOUR.....	27
MARRIAGES AND OBITUARIES.....	27
FAMILY CIRCLE.....	28
WITH THE CHILDREN.....	31

A quarter's worth of Ivory Soap will do more washing than you might suppose, and it may save more than one fine garment from ruin by preserving the color which cheap, impure soap would destroy.

Ivory Soap
99 <sup>44</sup>/<sub>100</sub> Per Cent. Pure.

Why He Was Not Promoted.

He watched the clock.
He was always grumbling.
He was always behindhand.
He had no iron in his blood.
He was willing, but unfitted.
He didn't believe in himself.
He asked too many questions.
He was stung by a bad book.
His stock excuse was, "I forgot."
He wasn't ready for the next step.
He did not put his heart in his work.
He learned nothing from his blunders.
He felt that he was above his position.
He chose his friends among his inferiors.
He was content to be a second-rate man.
He ruined his ability by half-doing things.
He never dared to act on his own judgment.
He did not think it worth while to learn how.

He tried to make "bluff" take the place of ability.

He thought he must take amusement every evening.

Familiarity with slipshod methods paralyzed his ideal.

He thought it was clever to use coarse and profane language.

He was ashamed of his parents because they were old fashioned.

He imitated the habits of men who could stand more than he could.

He did not learn that the best part of his salary was not in his pay-envelope.

—Orison Swett Marden, in Success.

Judging from the methods by which Zion City was financed, Dr. Dowie is not only Elijah II., but he is Charlie Schwab II.—The Detroit Free Press.

THE CHRISTIAN EVANGELIST

"IN FAITH, UNITY, IN OPINION AND METHODS, LIBERTY, IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY."

Vol. XLI.

January 7, 1904

No. 1

Current Events

On the assembling of Congress, Jan. 4, after the Christmas vacation, President Roosevelt sent a special message containing an exhaustive history of the Panama episode up to date, and an explanation and defense of the course which he had pursued in that matter. He referred again to the declaration of Secretary Cass in 1858, that our respect for the sovereignty of the Central American states ought not to lead us to permit them to close their gates against the commerce of the world, or to encumber the natural highways of trade with such burdensome conditions as would prevent their general use. Translated into terms of the present day, this means that we ought to build an isthmian canal—with Colombia's consent, if possible, or without it, if necessary.

When the Hay-Herran treaty was submitted to Colombia for ratification, three points were already settled: first, that the canal should be built; second, that we would deal as justly and generously as possible with the people through whose territory the canal route lay; third, that the canal should be built upon the Panama route if a valid title to the property of the Panama Company could be secured. When Colombia refused to ratify the treaty, the President even considered so radical a plan as that which he expresses in the following terms:

My intention was to consult the Congress as to whether, under such circumstances, it would not be proper to announce that the canal was to be dug forthwith; that we would give the terms that we had offered and no others; and that if such terms were not agreed to we would enter into an arrangement with Panama direct, or take what other steps were needful in order to begin the enterprise.

To have entered into negotiations with Panama while that province was still a department of Colombia would have been equivalent to encouraging the secession of Panama, but from this necessity the administration was saved by the event which so promptly transpired, namely, the secession of Panama without encouragement. That our government was totally unaware of the preparations which were being made for a revolution in Panama, cannot be asserted, for such information was the common property of all who read the newspapers. But the President does assert categorically and emphatically that "no one connected with this government had any part in preparing, inciting or encouraging the late revolution on the Isthmus of Panama."

The President admits that the rule that a new state should not be recognized as independent until it has proved its ability to take care of itself, is a good rule under ordinary conditions, but it has some exceptions. Three considerations unite to make the Panama case one of these exceptions. These reasons are: our treaty rights under the treaty of 1846, our national interests and safety, and the interest of collective civilization.

The President closes his message with these significant words, which are evidently intended as an admonition to those senators who may feel disposed to block the new canal treaty by making a political issue out of the President's action in recognizing Panama: "In conclusion, let me repeat, that the question actually before this government is not that of recognition of Panama as an independent republic; that is already an accomplished fact. The question, and the only question, is whether or not we shall build an isthmian canal."

These closing words of the President's message strike the true keynote of the Panama question. There is, properly speaking, no politics in it. Those who attempt to make a political issue out of the recognition of Panama, will find themselves in the unfortunate attitude of delaying the canal project, without the slightest prospect of restoring to Colombia her lost territory. Colombian rule over Panama is a closed incident. The living question is whether or not we shall dig the canal. So far, there seem to be only two serious opponents to the administration's program: Senator Hoar, who is conscientiously troubled about the part which our government played in the secession of Panama, and whose fears ought to be quieted by the facts presented in the President's message; and Senator Morgan, who is so irrevocably committed to the Nicaragua route that he will catch at any straw in his hopeless struggle against the logic of events. The opposition which Senator Gorman has been endeavoring to organize and lead, is not to be taken altogether seriously. It is but an episode in that astute politician's somewhat frantic search for an issue, and is neither based upon any very deep convictions nor backed by the sentiment of his party. It is believed that the new Panama treaty will be reported back to the Senate during the present week, with the unanimous approval of the Foreign Relations Committee, including its Democratic members with the exception of Mr. Morgan.

We reported recently the fact that the United States Government had, through Governor Taft, closed the bargain by which it is to pay $7,250,000 for the real estate owned by the monastic orders in the Philippines. This agreement points to a speedy and happy ending of what might easily have grown to be an embarrassing difficulty for the government. With every possible wish to do no injustice to the friars, it was impossible for any unprejudiced person not to see that the title of the friars to the extensive property which they held in the archipelago rested upon a dubious foundation. During the Spanish regime, church and state had been so closely allied that it was easy for the property of the state to pass into the hands of the church, and such a transfer would be considered a matter of no particular importance. But with the withdrawal of the Spanish government from the islands, that transfer became highly important. It was as if a man should transfer part of his property to his wife before going into bankruptcy—though, of course, Spain had no thought of losing her colonial possessions when the property was put into the hands of the church. But the church, and especially the monastic orders, had strengthened their title by their undisturbed occupancy of this property for many years.

Some thought our government ought to confiscate the friars' lands without compensation, but that would have created endless hard feeling, and would have involved technical, if not actual, injustice. That was the policy which Henry VIII pursued toward the monasteries at the time of the Reformation in England, and though the monasteries of that time were vastly worse than the friars of the Philippines to-day, and there was much more urgent need for confiscation, his memory has never been quite cleared of the scandal of that act, even by the lapse of nearly four centuries. When the question of purchasing the church lands in the Philippines was first broached, the friars asked $15,000,000, and our government offered $6,000,000, so it will be seen that in the final agreement most of the concessions were made by the other side. Five-sixths of the friars have already left the islands, and most of the others will doubtless leave soon. The transaction will have a doubly beneficial effect: first, in ridding the Philippines of the presence and influence of the friars; and second, in giving the government a large body of cultivated land which it can sell upon easy terms to the tenants, thus encouraging the growth of a valuable class of small land-owners. Gov. Taft is to be congratulated on having brought this matter to a successful issue before closing his work in the Philippines. He is now en route for Washington. The President has submitted to the Senate his appointment as Secretary of War and that of Luke Wright to be governor of the Philippines. Both will doubtless be promptly confirmed. Gen. Wright is an ex-confederate officer and a Tennessee Democrat.

A Distinct Denial.

The most appalling disaster of its kind that ever occurred in this country was the burning of the Iroquois Theater at Chicago on Wednesday afternoon of last week. The building was crowded with women and children, and the alarm of fire precipitated an immediate stampede. The death list, up to the present time, numbers 588, and there are many persons still missing who are known to have been in the building at the time. The investigation has shown that the theater was not properly provided with the appliances prescribed by law for the prevention of fire. The same conditions have been found to prevail in nearly all of the other theaters in the city, and they have all been closed by order of the mayor until the proper appliances shall be installed. It has been hinted that the conditions in many of the churches are little better.

The trial of the persons accused of murder and assault in connection with the anti-Jewish riots at Kishineff last April, was an extraordinary travesty upon justice. The riots, it will be remembered, lasted three days. The full reports showed that 50 Jews were killed and 400 seriously wounded, that over 1,500 houses owned or occupied by Jews were wrecked; that 500 stores and shops operated by Jews were looted, and that about $1,000,000 worth of property was destroyed. In the course of the somewhat tardy operations of the police force, 816 of the rioters were arrested. Of this number, only 37 were brought to trial. Twenty-five of these, mostly obscure persons without friends or influence, were convicted. All but two received sentences of penal servitude for two years or less. Two received sentences of five and seven years respectively. The trials were conducted behind closed doors, so it was of course impossible to know what evidence was presented. It is notable, however, that the persons who, at the preliminary trial, were proved to have plotted and instigated the riots, were not indicted; that the editor of the newspaper which played the most important part in inciting the populace against the Jews by false and slanderous reports was not indicted; and that no action was brought against the local governor who, with twelve companies of infantry and eight squadrons of cavalry at his command, allowed the riots to continue unchecked for three days, although he could, with this force, have stopped them in an hour. The result of the trial, is to confirm the suspicion that the government authorities were implicated in the riot, if indeed they were not actively instigators of it. Rumors have been afloat that there would be further anti-Jewish riots in Kishineff on the Russian Christmas, which is celebrated on Jan. 7. These rumors have been officially denied from St. Petersburg, and assurances had been given that the authorities would be ready to prevent any such outbreak if it should occur.

A feeling is beginning to gain ground that hostilities between Russia and Japan are less imminent than was supposed a few days ago. To be sure, Japan's demands have been definitely formulated and will doubtless be backed by all the force at the command of the Little Giant of the East. It has been officially stated that Japan will wait only until Jan. 10, for a reply from Russia, and if satisfactory assurances are not received by that time, she will proceed to make good her claims by force. But Russia with all her millions of money and men, and with all her insatiable greed of empire, knows how to wait and how to back down, better than many a weaker power. The distinctive marks of Russian diplomacy are patience and continuity. What cannot be done this year, can be done next year or next century. So the wave of Russian influence has been slowly moving across Asia, as deliberately and irresistibly as a rising tide. When one sees Russia taking a step which seems hasty and ill-considered, there is good ground for suspecting that it is only a tentative movement, and not a part of the permanent advance. Doubtless Russia wants Korea—and doubtless she will get it within half a century. But the line of communication across Siberia by rail is too long and too feebly protected, and the acquisition of Manchuria is too recent to make the present time auspicious for further radical advances. It would be more consonant with Russian methods to wait until the powers have acquiesced in the Russian occupation of Manchuria, and have forgotten that it was ever anything but a Russian province, before resorting to force for the control of Korea. Sooner or later, unless Japan develops extraordinary powers of resistance, Russia will be knocking at the door of that ancient island empire. To the movements of modern political expansion, as to electricity, water is a conductor, not an insulator. Why, then, should Russia stop at the coast? Then will come the inevitable struggle. But as yet, the time is scarcely ripe. Russia, embarrassed by the fear of British aggressions in Thibet, and by the undigested condition of her recent Manchurian acquisition, may well hesitate to enter upon an important war at the present time. Japan, with much more spirit than discretion, will scarcely hesitate, but it will be well for her if the struggle can be postponed until she has still more fully gotten control of the new forces which came to her in her awakening to modern civilization.

An employee of the Missouri Supreme Court has been discharged because he wrote a novel in which he made rather too obvious use of his inside knowledge of political affairs at Jefferson City. His portraits were recognized, and the men involved did not seem to be altogether pleased. The clerk should have known better. If he has gained enough insight into the affairs of his office to write a creditable novel on the subject, he should have known that the members of the Missouri Supreme Court are perfectly competent to produce all the fiction which that department needs. The novel was written before some of the recent decisions were published. Perhaps that accounts for it. It would scarcely be possible now for anyone to suppose that there is need of an assistant romancer in the office of the court. The case is singularly parallel to that of the lieutenant in the German army who has recently been dismissed from the service and sentenced to six months imprisonment for writing a novel showing up some of the unadmirable features of German military life. The difference between the two cases is that in the latter some steps are being taken toward investigating and remedying the evils disclosed. Of course, it may sometimes be justifiable to punish a man who says unpleasant things, but if the unpleasant things happen to be true, something more ought to be done about it.

Unconquered Land.

That is a significant motto which the American Home Missionary, edited by our Home Secretaries, carries on its front page—"There remaineth yet very much land to be possessed." It was the word of the Lord to Joshua, when he was "old and well stricken in years." It was this last fact that gave to the message its urgency. It is a good thing for all of us to keep before our minds what we have not accomplished, rather than to dwell with too much complacency upon what we have already achieved. This was probably Paul's thought when he said, "Forgetting the things which are behind, and stretching forward to the things which are before, I press toward the goal." It has seemed to us a good time, at the beginning of the new year, to take at least a bird's-eye view of some of the unfinished work that lies before us.

As the basis for this view, however, let us state, very briefly and succinctly, some things which, under God, we have accomplished, as a reformatory movement within the church, seeking to restore New Testament ideals in faith and practice. This statement we desire to make in the spirit of profoundest gratitude to God for His blessing, and with a due sense of humiliation that, with such a cause, we have not accomplished more.

1. First of all, we have grown from a small beginning to a large company, numbering considerably more than a million, in little more than three-quarters of a century of active, aggressive work. This, in itself, is one of those striking phenomena in religious history which needs to be accounted for. Its only explanation is to be found in the fact that it was adapted to the needs of the times; that it was in harmony with the purposes of God, and possessed within it the elements of growth and triumph.

2. In this brief time we have also established a large number of colleges and other institutions of learning, founded religious journals and publishing houses, and built up a considerable literature, which, if not permanent in its character, at least was well adapted to current needs of the cause.

3. We have organized churches with more or less fidelity to the New Testament pattern, as we understand it, and have brought a large number of them into active co-operation for the spread of the gospel at home and abroad, and for the promotion of the general interests of the kingdom. A wide-spread interest in mission work in our own and other lands, has been excited, and foreign missionaries are being sustained in all the principal pagan countries of the world.

4. We have conquered recognition and respect which were not accorded to us in the beginning, and have won a place among the great religious forces of the age, working for the world's redemption. Neither our orthodoxy nor the value of the truths we emphasize are any longer called in question in intelligent circles.

5. We have, let us say it modestly, undoubtedly leavened the religious sentiment of our time with our plea for Christian unity, and with our rational and scriptural method of presenting the gospel to men, and winning their adhesion to Jesus Christ. To what extent this is true, God only knows. It is certain, however, that the tendency of religious thought, to-day, in all evangelical Protestant churches, is strongly in the direction of the things which we have emphasized from the beginning.

6. We have met and overcome a large number of practical difficulties which have arisen in the path of our progress, connected with questions of church government and discipline, organization for missionary work, methods of worship and certain doctrinal interpretations, in a way which, if it has not always gained universal consent, has at least avoided formal division and has opened the way to continuous advancement in our work.

7. It would be strange if, in the light of all these experiences, and with the evidences of God's leadings, we had not attained to a clearer conception of what is, and what is not, involved in our work as a religious reformation. This elimination of what is incidental and temporary in Christianity, and the attainment of a clear apprehension of what is permanent and fundamental, requires the test of time and of actual experience. With remarkable unanimity, the advocates of this reformation to-day, conceive themselves as standing for, (1) the exaltation of Christ above all creeds and confessions of faith, and (2) for the union of a divided church on Him, as the one foundation, and obedience to Him as the only condition and test of fellowship, involving (3) the abandonment of party names, party creeds and party spirit, together with (4) the restoration of New Testament ordinances—the Lord's Supper and Christian baptism—as they were understood and observed by the inspired apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ: the former being a memorial of Christ's death for our sins, observed on each first day of the week, and the latter being the burial in water, and the resurrection therefrom, of a penitent believer, as the human pledge of surrender to Christ, and the divine pledge of forgiveness; and all this leading to (5) newness of life in Christ Jesus, and to spiritual development in Him, by feeding upon His Word, and by consecrated activities for the advancement of His kingdom.

It is very much to have achieved all this in the brief history which lies behind us; but is it not, after all, merely the calling out and training and equipment of a people for the accomplishment of a great mission which lies yet very largely before us? So it seems to us, and in future articles we shall hope to point out what are some of these unfinished tasks remaining to be accomplished—the land that yet remains to be conquered.

The Chicago Holocaust.

The destruction of over half a thousand lives in the Iroquois theater in Chicago, last week, is one of those appalling events which compel men to think seriously on the problem of God's providence over the world. No number of such calamities can destroy the conviction in the hearts of believers that God does govern the world, and that His rule is in the interest of humanity. But such a catastrophe as that which has plunged our sister city in profound grief, and affected more or less the whole country with sorrow, may well cause us to consider anew the ways of God with men, that we may profit thereby.

In speaking of such disasters as transpiring under God's government of the world, we do not ignore, of course, the fact that they are the direct results of the operation of what we call natural laws. It is a superficial philosophy that rules out God from effects whose immediate cause is found in natural laws. What are natural laws but God's method of governing His material creation, just as moral laws are His method of governing intelligent moral beings? This was the strange mistake of a former school of scientists not yet wholly extinct—to doubt or deny the existence of a personal God, because they found the explanation of natural phenomena in the operation of certain laws which they had discovered. Many of these have come to see, what ought to have been apparent all the while, that this only removes the necessity for a First Cause one step further back.

If, then, God is in such appalling disasters as that of the wholesale destruction of human life in the Chicago theater, in the sense that it occurred under the operation of natural laws which have their origin in His wisdom and will, and these are a part of His general providence over the world, how are we to harmonize such calamities with the beneficent character of God and of His providence? This is the question that forces itself upon thoughtful minds at such times. The true answer, in our judgment, is to be found in the reasonable supposition that such events—awful as they seem to us—are but parts of an infinitely wide circle of the divine government, the larger portion of which lies beyond our vision, reaching as it does into the invisible and spiritual universe. We have no right to conclude that the small arc of the circle which we see, is all there is of it, and judge God's administration of the world accordingly.

We can see, however, that God could not annul a natural law, or suspend it, when ignorance or neglect fails to recognize it, without the most demoralizing effects. What God willed, in the Chicago disaster, was not the destruction of human life, but the universality and inviolability of those natural laws on which human welfare depends. There was a set of conditions in the Chicago theater, as we now see, that invited most disastrous consequences. There were a vast assembly of women and children, a large amount of combustible material on the stage, electric wires emitting sparks, stage machinery that was untried, inadequate precautions to prevent fire and wholly inadequate facilities of egress from the building. The calamity came. God's providence has its severity as well as its graciousness—its retributions for violated laws as well as its rewards for obedience. That much is clear. If the penalty or consequence of violated law seems to us too severe, and if the fact that innocent parties suffer with the guilty, puzzles and perplexes us, that is where the circle of God's providence, in its wide ranges, passes into realms which our finite wisdom can not penetrate. After all, "we walk by faith, not by sight."

Education Day.

The third Lord's day in January is Education Day. This is the day appointed for observance in all our churches in the interest of our educational work. In a general way, the Disciples of Christ have always realized the intimate relation that exists between education and evangelism, between the college and the church. We have founded many colleges. We have in increasing measure seen the need of an educated ministry. We have from the very first seen that foreign missionaries must be thoroughly trained men. And yet in spite of this theoretical recognition of the importance of education, the churches, as such, have done almost nothing for the support of education.

Individuals here and there have founded colleges and have contributed money to their support, but the whole educational side of our work has remained as it began, in a condition of disorganization which we have long since ceased to tolerate in our missionary work.

What is needed is a strong bond of unity between our colleges and our churches. The colleges need this, because they must derive from the churches the students whom they are to teach, the funds for the support of their work, and the warm and vital religious impulse which is both more fundamental and more ultimate than the merely academic appeal. The churches need it, because they need the men and women whom the colleges are educating, and because they need not less the general enlightening influence of education throughout the rank and file of the membership.

The American Christian Education

Society was organized under the authority of our General Convention at Kansas City in 1900. Its purpose is to encourage this feeling of unity between the colleges and the churches, and to organize it into a practical and efficient co-operation. Specifically, it asks of the churches two things in connection with Education Day.

First, an offering of money for the support of education.

Second, such a presentation of facts and principles as will encourage the young people of our churches to attend our own schools.

There ought to be an increasing number of large gifts for education. Men of large means should make large investments in this direction. But that is not enough. The church has no more right to depend upon the millionaires to support its colleges than to support its foreign missionary work. The churches themselves, as churches, must do their duty in this matter.

The plan adopted for the observance of Education Day is a very simple one which does away with any possible friction among the different college interests involved. It is simply this: Every church which makes an offering on Education Day is asked to specify the particular college to which it wishes its contribution to go. Where no preference is expressed, the money will go into the general treasury of the Education Society, to be applied to the general expenses of the campaign and to educational work at the discretion of the directors. It is hoped that, in time, a considerable number of those who are interested, not in one of our schools above another, but in the whole cause of education, will use the Education Society as a medium for distributing their gifts. For this purpose, the directors of the Education Society will constitute a thoroughly non-partisan board of advisors.

All of our colleges are co-operating heartily in this movement, and call upon their alumni and friends to make Education Day the success that it ought to be.

We urge all the churches to observe this day in the interest of education. It is of fundamental importance and has been too long neglected. All money for education should be sent to

HARRY G. HILL, General Sec'y.
Box 111, Indianapolis, Ind.

A Timely Funeral.

A brother whose zeal for Christian union is considerably marred, we fear, by a deep-seated prejudice against practicing it, writes to the editor as follows: "Did you attend the funeral services of Church Federation? The sermon was preached by Chalmers McPherson and published in the Christian Standard of December 19. The poor thing is dead!"

No, we did not attend the obsequies above referred to. The fact is, we never felt the slightest interest in the bantling. The kind of federation which was slaughtered at the Texas Christian Lectureship, and whose demise was chronicled in the Christian Standard, was the child of an over-heated imagination, and never had any chance of living. It was cross-eyed, bow-legged, and otherwise ill-favored from its birth. It was better that it should die young. Now that it is dead and buried, let us hope we have heard the last of it.

Let us now begin to practice the kind of federation which we all believe in, and to which we are irrevocably committed by the very logic and meaning of our plea, namely: such co-operation with other Christian people who love and serve our Lord Jesus Christ, as is in harmony with our plea for union; as will serve to manifest to the world the measure of unity which already exists; as will promote a more perfect unity, and as will enable the Christian forces of the country to accomplish objects for the advancement of the kingdom of God which they could not accomplish without such co-operation. This is the only kind of federation we have ever advocated, and the leaders of the Federation movement heartily endorse it. So far from being dead, it is just awaking into a larger life and wider activity. When this sort of federation is dead, our plea for union will become a hollow mockery. But it will never die so long as the spirit of Christ dwells in Christian people and prompts them to mutual love and co-operation in the furtherance of common ends.

Federation is a rising, not a setting sun. It may rise slowly, because it waits on Christian growth. But just as zeal for the kingdom of God gains the ascendancy over denominational zeal, this sun will rise, and when it reaches its zenith it will shine, we predict, upon a united Protestantism, if not upon a united Christendom.

Editor's Easy Chair.

It is New Year's evening. One day of 1904 has already fled to the unreturning past. Last night it came in noiselessly, on its own part, though its advent was heralded and welcomed by the clangor of bells, horns and whistles, and other instruments of torture known to the small boy. Why this demonstration of joy over the passing of the old year and the coming of the new? Is it not rather "a time for memory and for tears?" Perhaps not for the young, but it certainly is for those who realize the value of time and the rapidity of its flight. At such a time we face the ghosts of murdered hours—the shades of neglected opportunities, forever gone. O the irresistibility, the unrelentingness of Time, as the majestic procession of the years pass by! Not a moment returns to us, and not a deed done can be undone!

"The moving finger writes, and having writ,
Moves on: nor all your piety nor wit

Shall lure it back to cancel half a line,
Nor all your tears wash out a word of it."

And then there is solemnity in facing an unknown future. The year that lies before us is a trackless realm, over which no human being has ever passed; an uncharted sea, over which no vessel has yet sailed. What perils now unknown to us may arise to threaten our ship of state or church—no one can say. The war-cloud in the far east at this writing seems ominous. If war comes, no one can predict what changes will be effected in the map of Europe and of the east. To all of us, individually, there may come trials and dangers, in the year to come, of which we do not dream. Changes we know are bound to occur, but the nature of them, who can foresee? As England's poet laureate has just sung:

"Years moving onward, onward! Whence, and whither, and why?
Age after age in the self-same world, with the self-same stars in the sky;
The self-same glory of light in heaven and light that is still on the way,
Outlooking gaze of the damsel dawn and droop of declining day—
All things always the same, unchanged, unchangeable, all save we,
Who come like clouds, like clouds disappear, form and fall like waves of the sea!

"And the Lord of Right still sits on his throne, still wields his scepter and rod,
And the winds and the waves and the years move on, doing the will of God!"

Aye, that is the faith in which we work—that "the Lord of Right still sits on his throne, still wields his scepter and rod." On any other hypothesis life would not be worth the living. History would become a stream without any certain destination, and human life a riddle without any solution. It is comforting, too, to know that "the winds and the waves and the years move on, doing the will of God." If only all men everywhere would do the same! But in spite of human perversity, the will of God is being done more and more among men, and the earth is rolling sunward, out of darkness into light. What can we do to hasten the time when the will of God shall be done on earth even as it is done in heaven? We can put ourselves in harmony with God, and with His great purposes, and lend ourselves and our powers to Him to be used for the furtherance of His kingdom. Does the New Year find us ready to do that? Are we prepared to put ourselves, unreservedly, at the disposal of Christ to be used of Him to carry out his divine program in the world? Yes, if we are Christians indeed. By this test let us try ourselves as we front the New Year with its mighty possibilities.

We have one resolution for the New Year, but that covers much ground: To strive, with God's help to be a better Christian, and to make the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST serve the Lord Christ, with greater fidelity, by voicing the truth He would have us speak to this age, and manifesting His spirit while so doing. We own no Master but the Lord Jesus, and to do His will, to speak His message, to advance His cause, and to seek to build up His followers in faith and hope and love and in the unity of the Spirit, shall be our chief concern in the future as in the past. Who is equal to these things? No man, save as he is led of God and strengthened by His grace daily for daily tasks. Nothing but reliance upon such help could induce us to undertake the arduous and unrelenting labors of another year. In looking ahead at the questions to be met and solved aright by our own religious movement if it is to fulfill its appointed mission, we can but repeat from the depths of our heart Paul's request to the Christians of his time—"Brethren, pray for us!" Experience has taught us how much we will need the assistance of your prayers. Pray that we may have wisdom to see the truth, courage to utter the truth, and meekness to bear whatever criticism this course may draw upon us. And may God give us a year of joyous Christian fellowship together in His service!

Notes and Comments.

The four great English scientists of the Victorian Era, have now all gone—John Tyndall, Thomas Henry Huxley, Charles Darwin and Herbert Spencer. They were all learned men, but they gave themselves so exclusively to the study of material things and the laws of the material universe, that faith and the religious nature were atrophied, and they could not discern the spiritual universe with all its glorious realities, for these things are "spiritually discerned." It is too high a price to pay for eminence in scientific knowledge or in philosophic attainments to be ignorant of the kingdom of God and its enduring glory.

In the press of other matters, we have failed to make mention of the Baptist Congress which met in Philadelphia in last month. It is pronounced by the Baptist press as a more satisfactory meeting than some of its predecessors, because it steered clear of some of the questions of doubtful disputation which disturbed the serenity of former sessions, and dealt more largely with practical subjects. Speaking of the usefulness of the Baptist Congress, The Standard (Baptist) says:

It has given us a free forum for the struggle of theory with theory. It has provided a platform whereon our theological and sociological leaders may proclaim their latest theories. It has stimulated thought; it has encouraged tolerance; it has punctured wind-filled balloons of assurance and conceit. It has been a safety-valve for new opinions which otherwise would have burst, injuring their makers and innocent bystanders. But there is no sense in causing the escaping steam of new opinion or new statement of old opinion to shriek so loudly that denominational ears are deafened.

All this we may say of our own Congress. The attention of the makers of our program is called to the wisdom that lurks in the last sentence of the above quotation. So far, nobody has been deafened by the detonations from our Congress, and it is to be hoped that we shall profit by the experiences of others who have ventured too near the danger-line.

The friends of Chinese missions are proposing to erect an appropriate National Memorial to perpetuate the memory of the Christian martyrs of the Protestant Missions who have fallen in China during the last century, but more especially in memory of those who were faithful unto death during the terrible ordeal of the year 1900. The plan is to erect in Shanghai, the great commercial and missionary headquarters of the Empire, a large building which shall serve in many ways the cause for which the martyrs died. The committee, having this matter in charge, expects to have definite plans ready to submit, and to open their subscription lists some time in December.

Strange things happen in missionary conventions. A well-known preacher, it is said, was prevented from receiving a call to a prominent church by a single sentence in a public prayer. The preacher knew nothing of this, and perhaps does not yet, nor did he know that a committee was there watching his every utterance with a view of deciding on his fitness to be their pastor. He probably would not have accepted the call if it had been tendered, for he is more sought after, than seeking; but it was the prayer that prevented him from receiving the call. The reader can draw any moral he pleases from this incident.

"Hell is both sides of the tomb," says Dr. C. H. Parkhurst. He might have added with equal truth that heaven is both sides of the tomb. Both of these places or conditions have their beginnings here on earth, and only their culminations beyond the tomb. He must be exceedingly incredulous who can witness the awful ravages which sin is working here in the world, and doubt that its consequences extend to the life beyond. But he is equally incredulous who cannot see in many of the beautiful characters here on earth the fore-gleaming of that heaven of "the spirits of just men made perfect," of which the Bible speaks. "He that hath the Son hath life." It only remains for such an one to give free course to that life, that it may find development through service and prayer and study, until its possessor is conformed to the image of Christ. This is the end of all our earthly discipline.

The Cause of Christian Education

EDUCATION DAY, THIRD LORD'S DAY IN JANUARY

The Colleges and the Churches.

By Hill M. Bell,

President of Drake University.

It has always been a mystery to me why the Church of Christ did not take a greater interest in education. It is the one paradox in our movement. It may be said that the colleges have not been organized by the church, and are therefore not under the control of the church. If the colleges are not under the control of the church, they should be made subject at once. As for Drake University, the college with which I am connected, it has been, from the first, entirely subject to the Iowa Christian Convention, but the convention hitherto has done little but elect trustees that should have oversight of the university. Had it not been for the generosity and benevolence of a few individuals, these trustees would have had nothing to do. Recently a small beginning has been made in our state to secure the co-operation of the churches in education. Previous to this year, the church organizations of the entire state, aside from the C. W. B. M., have not given $500 altogether to the cause of education. This year, after almost herculean efforts, fifty churches will send $500 or more to Drake University, as a contribution toward this great work. It is not much, but it is more than Drake University had received previously in her whole history from this source. Nevertheless, it is a good beginning and a cheerful omen. It indicates the awakening of a long dormant conscience, that has been allowed to sleep, rocked in the cradle of church indifference for one hundred years. But why should the church support the colleges? Can not the colleges get along without the church? Well, they have been compelled to do this for nearly one hundred years, and I presume that private benevolence may be depended on to some extent in the future. Some of the colleges will be richly endowed and others will starve to death. Endowed and supported by whom? By individuals. Starved by whom? By the great Church of Christ they have tried to serve.

How many of those who read this are proud of what their churches are doing for education? How many look upon the colleges as a missionary enterprise for the development of Christianity? How many have asked the church as a whole to have some part in Christian education? I fear that the answer would not be encouraging to any of us, neither would it be complimentary to our intelligence as a people. Let us have an educational awakening in the church. Let us develop an educational conscience. The means to be used in this is the American Christian Education Society. The dawn of a new day is at hand.

What do the colleges need of money from the church? The answer mainly is to support the Bible Colleges and departments. At Drake University we spend annually in the support of the Bible College, $5,000 more than we receive for that purpose. Is it right for the church to permit that?

We want to declare our undoubting faith in the movement that has been started by the Education Society. We have the greatest confidence in its officers and in its organization, and we trust that the people will see to it that that support is given to this movement, without which the church itself is endangered.

The College Missions.

By Joel Brown.

The purpose of Christ's coming to the world was that the world might be saved by him. The purpose of the church to proclaim his great salvation. Hence missions are the supreme work of the church.

And since the ordained means of making known the gospel is by preaching, it is evident that the better qualified the preacher, the more effective will be his work. The colleges of the church are the natural means for preparing workers, both for the home and foreign fields; therefore it doubly holds that the greatest power for missions is a sufficient number of properly equipped colleges with well qualified faculties, where the students, mostly our own children, may have the opportunity both to be imbued with the spirit of missions and prepared to go eagerly and willingly into the many fields white already for the harvest. The work of our colleges has added no little already to the force of workers in the kingdom. Most of the churches are now supplied with preachers who received all or most of their training in our church schools. Many of the best workers in the churches are the men and women who have been in attendance at our schools from time to time.

Recently I wrote to the several schools of the church asking for a list of the students who had gone out as foreign missionaries, and from the replies received, I give the following: Bethany has furnished 23 missionaries; Hiram, 20; Eureka, 18; Texas Christian University, 5; Cotner University, 8; Drake University, 23. Some of the students were in more than one college.

From the above, we gather two facts: first, that, though poorly equipped as the schools are with apparatus and endowment, the best place yet to educate our own children, is in our own schools. Second, that to do the best work for missions, we must give more largely to the support of our schools.

The American Christian Education Society.

By Harry G. Hill, General Secretary.

So many requests for information regarding the scope and plan of the Education Society have been received, that we take pleasure in again restating its principles.

We need not at this time dwell upon the conditions of our educational institutions, of their need and problems, and our duty toward them. We choose rather to make plain the workings of the Education Society.

The corporate name of the society is the American Christian Education Society, with headquarters at Indianapolis. The society is made up of annual and life members. The annual members pay the sum of $5.00 annually, the life members pay the sum of $50.00, or $10.00 per year for five years. From the members of the society the board of directors is chosen. The president of the society is W. E. Garrison; recording secretary, Chas. A. Young; treasurer, W. W. Sniff; general secretary, Harry G. Hill.

The society is not to be ministered unto but to minister. It has no expenses save those of administration. Its purpose is to solicit and aid in securing financial aid for our colleges and universities. It also aims to increase the number of students attending our higher institutions of learning, especially those from Disciples' families. In every way it aims to be helpful to all our educational interests.

In order to reach its ends, the society has employed a general secretary who gives his entire time to field and the necessary office work, urging, through every available channel, the claims of Christian education. The success of our plea and the spreading of the kingdom depend upon an intelligent Christianity.

In order to increase the efficiency of the Education Society, the ministers of all our churches are asked to observe the third Lord's day in January as Educational Day. A sermon, urging the patronage and support of our own colleges, and the taking of an offering for educational purposes are to be made features of the day. These offerings are to be sent to the office of the general secretary, box 111, Indianapolis, Indiana, where proper credit will be given and the various amounts disbursed as the donors designate. Any amounts coming to the office with no preference expressed, will be used at the society's discretion.

Our colleges are in hearty sympathy and full co-operation with all these plans; indeed, the spirit manifested by all our institutions is highly commendable, and just what should be expected from Christian organizations.

Old-Time Evangelism By F. D. Power

We read in Acts of Apostles that in the persecution following the death of Stephen: "They that were scattered abroad went everywhere preaching the word." By aggressive movements the church is to prosper. The word of God must be carried to every man's door, pressed home upon every man's conscience. The world will not come to the church and crave instruction at her lips. She is commanded to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. And all her people are goers. The great majority of these dispersed Christians held no ecclesiastical office, yet they preached wherever they came without being called to do so by official duty or express commission. They were as seed scattered hither and thither by a storm and carried far and wide where they germinated and bore fruit. They were as sparks borne by wind, kindling a whole forest into flame, setting in a blaze the whole world. Not that they stood up in pulpits and delivered sermons. They had no time for this. They must hasten. Their enemies were upon them. They must flee to the next village. But before they went—"Just listen"—they would say. Then came the tale of Stephen, and then the name that Stephen loved—the name above every name—the story of Jesus and the resurrection. "And he saved us"—these preachers would say, "and he will save you if you will let him." This was their gospel. "And they traveled as far as Phoenicia, and Cyprus and Antioch. And the hand of the Lord was with them, and a great number believed, and turned unto the Lord."

The apostles did not go on this mission. It is stated that they remained in Jerusalem. This is the work of "the laity." There is no such privileged order as "the clergy" in the Bible. "Ye are God's Kleros, God's heritage, ye are a royal priesthood," is a word addressed to all saints. Every converted man is to teach what he knows, and the work of evangelizing is a universal work to which all the Lord's people are called with as holy a calling as ever came to the Prophet Isaiah or to the Apostle Paul. "Let him that heareth say, Come!" is the last great commission.

A revival of this old-time evangelism is needed. We have come to rely upon a regularly ordained ministry. That is good, but in every church are men and women who are gifted to go forth in the country places and villages and towns and bear the message. Sunday-schools can be gathered, missions can be opened, services can be held, and souls can be brought into the kingdom. A tremendous force is allowed to go to waste that might be utilized. Every church ought to have at least one mission, and a church of five hundred members should have one for every hundred. If its people are properly instructed in the way of salvation and the principles of the gospel they should be faithful men and women, able to teach others also, and should not be suffered to hide their light under a bushel. Lay-preaching was the preaching done by these early Disciples, and it was done by all men and women alike, old and young, learned and unlearned, rich and poor. When Guthrie looked upon one of the most squalid and wicked quarters of Edinburg, he exclaimed: "A beautiful field!" All about us are such beautiful fields. What we want is reapers. "Give me one hundred men," said Wesley, "who fear nothing but God, hate nothing but sin, and are determined to know nothing among men but Christ and him crucified, and I will set the world on fire!"

In the early period of the work of the Campbells and their coadjutors, the largest liberty was given to the people in the work of evangelism. Elders of local churches were often efficient preachers. Deacons, like Philip, who did such splendid service in Samaria and in the conversion of the Ethiopian prince, were often public teachers of the doctrine of Christ. Private members were ready always to give an answer to every man that asked, a reason of the hope that was in them, with meekness and fear. Recently I unearthed a great treasure in the diary of Francis D. Dungan, giving week by week the history of "the congregation of Disciples worshiping in North Street, Baltimore, 1837-39." It is unique. It describes the meetings each Lord's day, tells how they were conducted, who spoke and on what themes, names all brethren from a distance who had fellowship with them, mentions the sick, aged, marriages, deaths, those present and those absent, and records especially the missionary labors of that early day. Such men are named among visiting preachers as R. L. Coleman, Z. McComas, grandfather of the present United States senator of that name from Maryland; Robert Ferguson; Robert Richardson, of Bethany; Dr. William Hatch, of Kentucky; Parmly, of New York; Bohannon, of Virginia; Mendel, of Wellsburg; McCall, of Mississippi; and Bryant, "brother-in-law of A. Campbell."

Most of all, these interesting chronicles deal with the evangelistic labors of the little congregation. Every man in it seems to have been a preacher. Every entry has some story of missionary service in the city or in the country round about. Three meetings are held in "the meeting house" on every Lord's day and several mission points are supplied every Sunday evening. There is preaching "at Mrs. Wilson's house in Hollins Street," at Fells Point Institute, at New London Cross Roads, Pa., in Harford county, Md., and at other places. "Brother Austen" preaches,* and "Bother Carmen" preaches, "Brother Dungan" preaches and "Brother Sweeney" preaches, "Brother Mentzell" preaches and "Brother Morling" preaches. These are all members of the little church in North Street, which had perhaps forty souls, and they all minister in holy things without money and without price. And they are constantly baptizing people and planting churches!

Is this not strictly apostolic? Did not the churches in the first century multiply rapidly because the dispersed Disciples went everywhere preaching? Are the fields to-day in St. Louis and Chicago, Philadelphia and New York, Boston and Baltimore to be compared for a moment in difficulty and unfruitfulness with Ephesus and Antioch, Corinth and Rome, when the Master sent forth his handful of laborers and the Galilean conquered? Is the church of our time using one-tenth of its power in the great work of the world's conversion? Are there ten church members out of a hundred who, from one year to another, are ever known to speak to a sinner about the needs of his soul? How soon would the whole world be brought to the foot of the cross if every Christian would make another Christian in 1904? It is a very simple mathematical calculation.

The church is to make Christians. The work of ingathering is first, then the work of training. Christ's church is an evangelizing church; a deeply evangelistic spirit should pervade all its worship and all its work. Watching and working, hungering and thirsting for souls it must be, day and night, if the same mind be in it that was in Christ Jesus. Religion must not be a luxury, æsthetics must not become anæsthetics. The sermons, the Sunday-school and social meetings, the C. E. meetings and men's club meetings, the mothers' meetings and missionary meetings, the sewing meetings and prayer-meetings—all must have one great purpose that must never be lost sight of in any event—the making of disciples. Filled with such an evangelizing fervor, the church will not be content with its own circle; it will go out to the needy of the community, of the city, of the state, of the nation, of the regions beyond; it will make every man and woman and child of its membership an evangelist, and raise up preachers and missionaries to bear the glad tidings to the uttermost parts of the earth; it will spend itself and be spent, live not to be ministered unto but to minister, have abundant life and a joy that is full; it will be a true church of Christ.

✠
Spend the time you have spent in sighing for fruits in fulfilling the conditions of their growth. The fruits will come, must come.—Professor Drummond.

The Prophet of the Unknowable

By W. Durban

No event in the intellectual world has of late caused a sensation comparable to that created by the death last week at Brighton of Herbert Spencer. The career of this giant thinker was altogether phenomenal. He was the son of a Wesleyan schoolmaster, and became an engineer, but early in his manhood he plunged into the most abstruse philosophical studies, and undertook one of the most difficult tasks ever attempted by any genius. His aim was to synthesize all human knowledge under one category, and thus he became known through the world as the founder* of the system of synthetic philosophy, which his followers for years considered would take the place which Aristotle's works occupied in the early ages, and Bacon's Inductive Method captured in the later middle ages. The peculiar feature of Spencer's lifelong enterprise was that it was intended to supersede all positive religion and by eliminating the conception of the supernatural, to establish, permanently, a reverent and dignified agnosticism.

Where Evolutionism Failed.

Spencer died in his 84th year. He was a beautiful character, and his personality had much to do with his marvelous influence during the latter part of the nineteenth century. He lived to find himself left in social solitude, for he had no near relatives left. He was cremated at Golders Hill Crematorium, near Hampstead, London. His most determined opponent will admit that during the last forty years he proved himself an intellectual force of the first order. The wide sweep of his thoughts, and the commanding attention which he exerted, justify the rank thus assigned to him; and the representative relation in which he stood to the great scientific movement of the last half century makes the gap caused by his death all the greater. He had come to be widely recognized as the representative English philosopher, and above all, the representative English scientific philosopher. He seemed, on the one hand, to have perfected and established upon a broader basis the best doctrines of the traditional English school of philosophy as represented in the preceding generation by John Stuart Mill; and on the other hand, he was mentioned in the mouths of men along with Charles Darwin and Alfred Russel Wallace, as the man who had systematized the modern theory of evolution, and vindicated it as a universal principle of thought. Much of this estimate is already recognized as delusive, for it turns out that scientific thinkers are as much split into sects as are religious thinkers, and evolutionists already have their conflicting schools. Thus, Weismann, the greatest of the new German biologists, totally smashed the Darwinian and Spencerian theory of evolution, about ten years ago, by his wonderfully brilliant proofs of the existence of definite causes for definite effects, which causes could only be designed by some conscious mind. Yet Weismann is also himself an evolutionist, believing that when the supreme conscious mind has set primary causes in operation, then these causes are left to evolve the resulting effects, without any of the interferences which are supposed to come into play by the believers in a "particular providence." This is how, from my German reading, I have understood the philosophy of Weismann, only I have thus tried the difficult task of condensing the whole of his theory into a sentence.

The Doctrine of the Unthinkable and the Unknowable.

When we add to the other attractions of Spencer as a thinker the power that he possessed of presenting his thoughts in most lucid style, and in the most charmingly impressive fashion, we can comprehend why he was able to bring his ideas home to much wider circles than usually occupy themselves with such speculations. The mere fact of the enormous sale of his books, when we consider the abstruse subjects they dealt with, is itself a proof of the remarkable intellectual vitality of the author. I shall never forget the pleasure, though of course there was a measure of pain mingled with that feeling, with which I, years ago, read Herbert Spencer's "First Principles." That is, to my own mind, incomparably the greatest of his works. In this masterly book he sets forth his peculiar doctrine of the Unknowable. Spencer never posed as an infidel. He neither professed belief nor unbelief in relation to all that is understood to be included in evangelicalism. He was ready to believe all that could be shown to come within actual cognizance. As to God, he invented for the Supreme Being his favorite appellation of the Unknowable. Said this philosopher, certain things are unthinkable. So here came in a new category, which he called definitely the Unthinkable. The universe may be illimitable. But a creation which is boundless is unthinkable. Well, then, creation must have limits, or at any rate space is limited, if it is not illimitable. But we cannot think of the possibility of a limit to space, any more than of space which is illimitable. Thus Spencer maps out the doctrine of Agnosticism.

Agnosticism and Positivism.

Spencer's marvelous grasp of mind was shown by the fact that he anticipated Evolutionism before it was simultaneously discovered as a theory or hypothesis by Darwin and Wallace.

That simultaneous discovery was as romantic an episode in the scientific history of the last century as the simultaneous discovery of the planet Neptune by Leverrier, of Paris, and Adams, of Cambridge. But Darwin and Wallace both admitted that Spencer had previously adumbrated their doctrine, though he had not formulated it. But Spencer was a modest giant, ready to take a second place, to borrow from other great minds, and to acknowledge everything that was commanding in his contemporaries. He did not invent the term "Agnosticism," for that was Huxley's device. I recollect how one day dear C. H. Spurgeon told us in his college, during one of his wonderful Friday afternoon lectures, that Huxley and he had met and had chatted together. Huxley spoke of his own inability to assent to the Christian position, and said he must be content to remain an Agnostic concerning all that transcended demonstrated knowledge. "Well," said Spurgeon, "Agnostic is a Greek term, but I prefer the Latin translation of it, 'ignoramus,' and I consider it intolerably humiliating for any intelligent man to proclaim himself an ignoramus!" But for three decades, at least, the Agnostic school of thought reigned as the ascendant scepticism, taking the place of the scurrilous Bradlaughism which had been in fashion in England amongst unbelievers, and which had its representative somewhat later in America in Ingersollism. The ordinary and uncultured infidel talked of secularism, but secularism never gained any great footing. But Agnosticism gained a hold on many minds through the refined literary advocacy of Herbert Spencer and Matthew Arnold. And in France sprang up Auguste Comte with the dilettante and fantastic variation which French adapters of thought from other nations are sure to produce. One of the most extraordinary freaks of intellectualism during modern times is the Positivism of Comte, which is simply the Agnosticism of Spencer, Arnold, Huxley and Tyndall converted into a religion, sometimes styled the Worship of Humanity, with Frederic Harrison as its prophet and Mr. Congreve as its high priest in England. In England, Agnostics have had to dispense with a priest, but Spencer was their arch-prophet.

Spencer's Chief Prophecy.

And now I come to speak of what, to me, is the most singular of all Spencerian phenomena. Three years ago I was reading this philosopher's last volume. It was his final effort, his swan song. And it contained a most extraordinary declaration which astounded his ardent admirers, for in a very striking chapter he averred that there could be no greater than the notion that religion will die out. On the contrary, it must increase more and more, simply because the progressive wonders of the discoveries of scientific investigators into the secrets of nature will constrain men to look for some way of accounting for such marvels. Now, this admission on the part of the Arch-Agnostic showed the temperament of the man. Spencer cared nothing about his own reputation, or his own consistency, but he revered fact and truth, and spoke out of the fulness of his convictions. Had this man been a Christian, what a towering example he would have been! But the chief point to be impressed as the lesson of a noble life is that he was pure in life and righteous in action, and reverent in expression, because, all unconsciously, he was influenced by the Christian environment and the Christian atmosphere. Let Christians rejoice not only in the direct and acknowledged of our heavenly faith, but in the indirect but irresistible power which it exercises on the hearts of men, whether they will or not.

London, Eng., Dec. 19, 1903.

An Unfortunate Situation.

By B. S. Ferrall.

If you were to ask me why the church militant is not accomplishing what it should, I would unhesitatingly answer—because there are so many within it who are not there from any deep-seated conviction of their own. They united with the church because some one else did, or because their parents were members and they considered it wise that the family should be together, or because it is quite the thing in their community for people to give expression to their religious inclinations by becoming a member of some church, some time in life, or even because the first preacher who happens to invite them into the church of his choice, would be offended should they decline. Very often church membership is made wholly to hinge upon friendship. We like the preacher and church officers and can see no reason why we should not, at least for the present, cast our lot with the church near the corner of blank and blank streets. "Oh, it matters very little where one worships, or by what name he is known, since we are all aiming for the same place!" is one of the current phrases among members of the denominations, who, in the majority of cases, exhibit a woeful lack either of deep-seated conviction or a knowledge of the word of God—most often both. Men do not thus advise in political matters, or women in affairs purely social. True, we do not brand a man as a scapegoat, nor would we accuse him of disloyalty to country should he conscientiously and loyally vote a political ticket other than the one of our choice; but we never expect to meet a reasonably thoughtful man who, on election day, would tell the young man about to cast his first ballot, "To be sure and vote some ticket, since there are, after all, few, if any differences between the parties seeking supremacy," etc. Just imagine such a basis of operation in the matter of choosing a life-long companion! But it is quite the thing with thousands who profess to be the Lord's advance agents of righteousness. I have a profound respect for all studious and conscientious men and women who are trying to serve the Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity and truth. For one, I feel kindly disposed to any man—he be Methodist, Presbyterian, Lutheran, Congregational or what not, who, out of a deep-seated conviction, stands before the world as a representative of the King's standing army, but I demand the right to ask him to square his religious declarations and back his tenets of faith by a "thus saith the Lord," and would certainly allow him the same liberty toward me. Should this work be engaged in to any great degree, the religious world would be shocked at the appalling ignorance of multitudes who are supposed to know why they are what they are, but who shoulder most of the responsibility of making clear what they believe on "our preacher."

Recently, in conversation with a most excellent lady who has not been a resident of the city long, and is seriously thinking of becoming identified with some congregation, I was told that the day previous, in a friendly chat with a member of one of the wealthy religious bodies here, she was asked to "unite with her church." When told that she desired to look around a little first, before consenting to such a step, she was urged to permit her name to be presented now, even though not quite ready to join, since it would not be possible for her to become a member, in full fellowship, for twelve weeks at any rate. When asked for the church's authority for such a procedure, she was told "to see our pastor and he would explain it," and that "it was a custom of the church," etc. The thing I object to is the appalling ignorance of that apparently sensible woman, who is up on "club matters" and "social etiquette" and the latest things in hats, costumes and novels, but has not yet found the plain declaration of Acts 2: 47. Oh, climax of foolishness! The people must be taught that the pew need not depend upon the pulpit for an explanation of so plain a thing as "conditions of church membership," or the authority of such; that a conscience divinely educated is the only kind by which to be safely led; that taking a further step in the light is always in order when God's truth points the way; that it is not dishonoring the memory of a good old Lutheran mother, a pious old Presbyterian father or a spiritually minded Methodist aunt whose kindly ministrations linger in one's mind like a pleasant dream, to cease wearing the name they wore, or render implicit obedience to a Bible command they may have partially or wholly passed by. Paul affords a striking illustration of this very thing. "He consulted not with flesh and blood," when Christ called him to an abandonment of his religious views and an implicit obedience to the faith of the disciples, and his open, manly confession as recorded in Phil. 3, is a standing rebuke to those who are too cowardly to break away from error when it is clearly revealed by the Holy Spirit. After all, is not the thoughtful, studious man of conviction—who dares to use his text book—the Bible—and solve life's problems by its divinely revealed rules, the one the pastor can rely upon, and God can use and honor?

God pity such as come to Christ
With motives other than the best,
Whose shallow lives tell all the world
They care not for the Lord's behest.
Christ's blessed kingdom will not come
To others, through the stand they take,
His prayer for unity and love
Cannot be answered for his sake.
The Church is crippled—Satan pleased,
And worldliness remains at ease.

Buffalo, N. Y.

DOCTOR'S SHIFT

Now Gets Along Without It.

A physician says: "Until last fall I used to eat meat for my breakfast and suffered with indigestion until the meat had passed from the stomach."

"Last fall I began the use of Grape-Nuts for breakfast, and very soon found I could do without meat, for my body got all the nourishment necessary from the Grape-Nuts, and since then I have not had any indigestion and am feeling better and have increased in weight."

"Since finding the benefit I derived from Grape-Nuts, I have prescribed the food for all of my patients suffering from indigestion or over-feeding, and also for those recovering from disease where I want a food easy to take and certain to digest, and that will not overtax the stomach."

"I always find the results I look for when I prescribe Grape-Nuts. For ethical reasons please omit my name." Name given by mail by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

The reason for the wonderful amount of nutriment, and the easy digestion of Grape-Nuts is not hard to find.

In the first place, the starchy part of the wheat and barley goes through various processes of cooking, to perfectly change the starch into Dextrose or Post Sugar, in which state it is ready to be easily absorbed by the blood. The little parts in the wheat and barley which Nature can make use of for rebuilding brain and nerve centers are retained in this remarkable food, and thus the human body is supplied with the powerful strength producers so easily noticed after one has eaten Grape-Nuts each day for a week or ten days. "There's a reason."

Get little book, "The Road to Wellville" in the pkg.

The Question of Overlapping

By N. J. Aylsworth

The writer of this, about one year ago, made a somewhat careful study of the question of federation. He procured what documents he could from headquarters, and then wrote in various directions, obtaining statistics, statements, descriptions of practical working, etc. From an examination of this material and a careful consideration of the bearings of various questions involved, he came to the conclusion that we could enter very largely into this movement without prejudice to our mission as a people, and with positive gain to our usefulness in converting the world. He embodied his thoughts in a series of articles for the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, which were not partisan in nature, and which embodied some considerations which seemed not to have been given due weight by many of those who had written on the subject. The pressure on the columns of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST was too great to admit of their publication. The question presented in this article is one of those considered at greater length in those articles.

Should we wish to and can we enter into any arrangement with the religious peoples about us commonly known as evangelical, looking in any measure to a division of territory? We are not prepared to speak of this question until we consider the bearings of two prior questions.

In the first place, do we regard the members of these religious bodies as saved or lost? If we are to place them among the lost, the question is settled at once. No division of territory with them is possible, and further than this, our present relations with them are inconsistent. If the Christian Endeavor multitudes are hosts of the lost, what have we to do in their assemblies? So of many other associations. The truth is, we do not take this view. We believe these people have errors which we deprecate, but we believe that the faithful among them will be saved in the Great Day, and we should vastly prefer that people should belong to their bodies than not to be followers of Christ at all.

But this fact does not, of itself, form a sufficient reason for our dividing territory with them. While their errors are not mortal, they are not trivial, but harmful and damaging to the cause of Christ in various ways, especially as obstacles to Christian union, and we should be glad to remove them if we could. Unquestionably, if we can give the people the truth in its purity, as we see it, it is our duty to do it. If we stay out of any community, it cannot be on the ground of a compromise with error. If we can teach all men and every community the truth, it is our duty to do it, and we cannot barter away this duty. Thus far all is clear. But here we meet a momentous fact. We cannot do this. We are not prepared to do the religious work of this country ourselves. Are we prepared to raise $100,000,000 this year for home missions, and put 150,000 preachers into the field? Nor does this state the whole question. These men should be men of commanding ability, able to take and hold the field against rivals—men able to take the religious work of this country over to themselves. The fact is, we shall do but a small fraction of the religious work of this country during the coming year, or in this generation. The bearing of this fact on methods and policies is controlling, and any argument for or against federation is worthless that loses sight of this fact for a single moment. To overlook it is to shape our policy to an imaginary situation, to dream in the presence of an awful reality. Sin is rampant, men are dying and being lost, and we must not prove ourselves triflers with mere academic questions. We have a little power for good; what shall we do with it? That is the question.

You have two children, one of whom is lacking some of the comforts of life in the care of a friend, while the other is dying far away for want of what you might do for it. You stay with the former and make it comfortable, while the other dies. Is that duty? It is manslaughter. In a certain city there are two fields, each needing a church. We can, and as a matter of fact will, occupy but one of them. The census tables of the city federation show that we can operate more successfully in one, while the Presbyterians can do best in the other. In the face of these facts shall we deliberately choose that field in which we can do the least good? Or, the Presbyterians having entered upon this work, shall we go in there and spend our time and money in saving those who are not lost, or who would be reached by the people already on the ground, leaving the people of the other field to perish? If we do either of these things, there will be blood on our skirts in the judgment day. It may be that one of the indications determining which field each body can most successfully occupy will be the preference of the people. Is the principle, then, that each community shall have such teaching as it prefers, regardless of its truth or error? No; this would misstate the case. The principle of the determination is the salvability of the people—the people of that field where each body can accomplish most for the salvation of men. One—only one—of the indications of this will, in the nature of the case, be the preference of the people. To erect a sign into a principle would be disingenuous. The principle is one for our fidelity to which we must all answer before the judgment seat of Christ.

But how about surrendering ourselves into the hands of a committee to decide our course? There is no such thing. The committee is advisory or suggestive, leaving final decision with us. But does not our entering into the arrangement imply submission? It has not so worked, and need not. It would undoubtedly forestall our going back on the whole ground and principle of apportionment. If we have no sympathy with the principle and aims of federation, we have no place in it. If we have, details can be arranged, generally satisfactorily to all, since decisions rest not on whims, but on facts—statistics—and all are agreed on the principle controlling choice. In exceptional cases of disagreement, the committee has agreed only to advise, not to dictate.

There is a situation, however, lying behind this whole matter that we must all face. Organizations, like organisms, possess a certain tenacity of life. The supreme aim seems to be almost instinctively self-preservation and self-aggrandizement. Each religious people has asked, "Where is it best for me to be—what field will serve best my own prosperity and upbuilding?" We, with others, have asked this question. This object is not altogether unworthy. If we have the truth, our prosperity means, at least to a certain extent, the prosperity of the truth. But it is this organizational selfishness that has caused overlapping—the general scramble for the best places—and it is one of the most, if not the most, formidable obstacles to Christian union. This principle must give place to a higher organizational unselfishness. It is not for us to ask, Where is it best for us that we establish a church? but where is it best for the salvation of souls that we go? Are we large enough for this? I fear not. It is because our religious neighbors have not been large enough for it that federation has gained ground so slowly; for that is the federation principle. When we say we will never surrender the right to go where we please, if we mean where it is for our advantage to go, we are too small for federation; we need more Christlikeness. If we mean we will never surrender the right to go where the supreme love of souls would take us, federation says, "Amen! come along, and we will help you." With that sublime spirit regnant in all, it will be easy to arrange details.

Federation at bottom is the love of souls plus common sense. Its call is the trump of God. Let us not stumble at details; rather let us step forward and help to arrange them. If not then fully to our liking, let us go with the movement as far as we can—and that will be very far.

The Minister in the House of Bereavement.

By J. H. Wright.

The writer has often been called upon to visit the dying and the bereft, and has realized somewhat of the solemn duties which fall to his lot, but the recent death of my father and the tender ministry of his pastor has led me to pen these reflections.

When the message called me home, I found that his pastor had been a frequent and sympathetic caller. Quiet, dignified, he was always welcome. As his pastorate had lengthened, he had come to know my father better, and father ever spoke of him with respect and pride. A short pastorate rarely permits the forming of friendships deep and lasting, and he who holds himself aloof from the heart experiences of his people, loses many an opportunity to benefit them.

Into this home of sickness the pastor came with cheerful face and voice. At the bedside he was ready with tender words of sympathy or of hope. As my father loved to read, it cheered him to hear his pastor read of our evangelistic triumphs. Just before I came, he opened the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, and knowing a father's interest in his son remarked, "Here's a picture and a poem that will interest you," and showed him my picture and read to him the little poem, "Going, but Can't Tell Where!" It was tactful in the pastor. The veteran appreciated it, and after I came he spoke to me of this kindness. "We will not need such a sentiment as that upon your tomb," I said. "No, no," said my father. He looked forward to death as a glad release from pain and sorrow. No cloud of doubt overshadowed his sky.

As the end drew near, in behalf of the family I said, "You are father's pastor; he likes and admires you. We shall commit to you the funeral services. Let there be naught of gloom. He is a Christian nearing his home." With thoughtful consideration he said, "Perhaps there is some one else who knew him better, or whom the scattered members of the family know better and whom you would prefer." Assured that this was not the case, he accepted the trust. And well did he discharge it. It was a tender tribute to one who for nearly fifty years had held some position of trust in the church. There was no fulsome flattery, but calm expression of appreciation. His address showed careful preparation, fidelity to divine truth, confidence in Paul's assurance that for him (and for the Christian ever) "to live is Christ, and to die is gain." The message to the living was direct and forceful. It deepened faith, kindled hope, soothed the sorrowing.

And this I believe to be the pastor's mission. God sends us to the house of sorrow to bear a message of his love. Another pastor, quick to act, when he knew that my sister had come home on her sad mission, sent kind words of sympathy and hope, with expressions of appreciation of the father whom he had met occasionally. In the time of sorrow these words fell as soothing balm.

Let us of the ministry realize that we are God's spokesmen, sent "to heal the broken-hearted." I often ask myself, "What would Jesus say if he were here?" and in that spirit seek to do his will. Pure and holy men should serve at his altar. What need have we of unworthy, ignoble souls at such a time, however polished or eloquent they may be? God help us all to be God's men!

Beginning the Christian Life.

By G. A. Reinal.

In The Christian Endeavor World of October 29 is an article by Rev. James Stalker, D. D., the great preacher of Glasgow, Scotland, on "Beginning the Christian Life." He begins his article by saying: "A friend in whose judgment I place confidence, once remarked to me that she wondered preachers did not often explain from the pulpit how to begin the Christian life; for she was confident that many in the pews wished to be Christians, but did not know how to begin. She herself, she said, had been brought up under a clergyman who commanded her respect and affection, a good man whose preaching edified the experienced and mature; but he never explained clearly to the young what they had to do in order to be Christians, so that she sat from year to year expectant, but unsatisfied, and she was sure that the same was the state of mind of other young people in the church."

Then he adds, by way of introduction, that "all are aware that what they have to do in order to be saved is to believe," but what he had to say was for those who have tried to believe without any result, and who are not aware what they have to do when faith is recommended to them. To enlighten and aid such, he points them to Christ, stating that the thing to do is to pray to him directly about the matter. An appeal to him would receive a direct answer, but just what the answer would be, he does not say. Then he goes further by saying that if such an appeal does not bring the light, he would suggest that a decision be made in favor of Christ, and that said decision be made known, quoting Rom. 10:9, "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved."

It is strange that such a good man and able preacher as Dr. Stalker does not give a clearer answer to the great question, "What must I do to be saved?" The apostles have given us a remedy that has cured thousands of sin-sick souls.

Why try to improve upon it? Why not take that which has proven successful? Their answer to the question of salvation is, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." Acts 16:32. "Repent and be baptized for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." Acts 2:38. "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness, but with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." Rom. 10:10 (and this confession is to be made publicly, before many witnesses. 1 Tim. 6:12). "Arise and be baptized and wash away thy sins." Acts 22:16. "The like figure whereunto even baptism doth now save us." 1 Peter 3:21. To sum up this remedy is: (1) Faith in Jesus Christ; (2) repentance of sin; (3) confession that Jesus is the Christ of God; (4) baptism. In other words, he who desires salvation must believe, repent, confess and be baptized. If he does these things, he has the witness of God's Spirit that he is a son of God.

Here is something definite, something positive. How much better the Scripture way is than that of Dr. Stalker, and is it not much more safe and soul-satisfying to go God's way than man's way?

KNOWS NOW

Doctor Was Fooled by His Own Case for a Time.

It's easy to understand how ordinary people get fooled by coffee when doctors themselves sometimes forget the facts.

A physician speaks of his own experience:

"I had used coffee for years and really did not exactly believe it was injuring me, although I had palpitation of the heart every day.

"Finally one day a severe and almost fatal attack of heart trouble frightened me and I gave up both tea and coffee, using Postum instead, and since that time I have had absolutely no heart palpitation, except on one or two occasions when I tried a small quantity of coffee, which caused severe irritation and proved to me I must let it alone.

"When we began using Postum it seemed weak—that was because we did not make it according to directions—but now we put a little bit of butter in the pot when boiling and allow the Postum to boil full 15 minutes, which gives it the proper rich flavor and the deep, brown color.

"I have advised a great many of my friends and patients to leave off coffee and drink Postum, in fact I daily give this advice." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Many thousands of physicians use Postum in place of tea and coffee in their own homes and prescribe it to patients. "There's a reason."

A remarkable little book, "The Road to Wellville," can be found in each package.

News From Many Fields

Indiana.

The state board received an annuity gift this week from a good sister in Southern Indiana, which is hereby publicly acknowledged. Now is the time for others to carry out their plans for remembering the Indiana work.

The church at Valparaiso, J. H. O. Smith, pastor, contributed an even hundred dollars to state missionary work.

W. L. McElvaine is preaching for the church at New Carlisle.

S. W. Traum, New Castle, has received a call from the Madison Church.

W. H. Alford, Scottsburg, will remove to Ladoga and enter the general evangelistic field. Here is the prophecy that he will succeed.

Shelby D. Watts goes from Gas City to Fowler to take the work in that important field.

Bro. A. H. Moore, New Castle, one of our old young men, and one of our best preachers, will be ready to consider engagements after the first of the year. A church cannot make a mistake in securing his services.

The Bethany Church at Evansville, under the pastorate of W. A. Bellamy, has outgrown its present building, and having secured a magnificent site on Colombia Avenue, will proceed to build a fully equipped institutional church. We ought to have seven churches in Evansville. Seven years ago the Bethany Church was a mission Sunday-school, meeting in a cottage, but with a few consecrated families and some help from the state board and evangelist, and sacrifice on the part of the members, its growth is one of the wonders of Evansville. T. J. LEGG.

Kansas.

Dedication at Pleasant Ridge.

This is a country congregation about six miles from Dwight, in Morris county. The congregation was organized by W. J. Bryant about one year ago. He held a successful meeting last summer and during the meeting, the building enterprise was started. The work was pushed rapidly, and the house was completed in an incredibly short time.

The money necessary to free the house from indebtedness was raised on dedication day, Dec. 6, and with much rejoicing the building was set apart to divine worship. It was a high day for this faithful band of Disciples. Some of them had been striving for years to have a home, and this victory brought joy to all hearts. The building is a frame, 28x36, with entrance tower at one corner. The location is excellent.

The congregation at Dwight, where Brother Bryant preaches the other portion of his time, will also be ready to dedicate a new building soon.

Dedication at Oakland.

This town is a suburb of Topeka. The writer had the pleasure of assisting in this dedication, also, on Lord's day, Dec. 13. This is a new congregation, organized last winter by Bro. C. A. Finch, pastor of the First Church, Topeka. Through many difficulties these brethren labored to bring their building to completion. Now they have a neat frame building with auditorium and lecture room, stained glass windows, and are a united and hopeful people.

Enough money was raised on dedication day, which with a loan from the Church Extension Board, provided for all obligations.

Brethren Finch and Mallory of the First and Third Churches, Topeka, assisted in the exercises of the day. Members of the North Topeka congregation were also present, as well as the pastors of the Methodist and Friend's Church in Oakland.

Dedication at Cherryvale.

The writer had the pleasure of aiding these brethren and sisters in setting apart their beautiful and commodious house of worship on the last Lord's day of the year.

C. A. Shive is the hardworking and greatly loved pastor whose untiring diligence, with that of his loyal supporters, brought this enterprise to a glorious consummation.

They had a building 30x40. To this they built an auditorium 30x46, with pulpit and chair platform, baptistery and robing rooms. The floor of the older part was inclined, and a partition was made forming a nice room for Christian Endeavor and prayer-meetings. The entire auditorium is carpeted, the gift of the young women, and the room is seated with elegant oak pews. The entire building has a steel ceiling, while the acoustic properties are absolutely perfect.

A loan of $500 had been obtained from the Church Extension Board, but there remained a balance of $1,027 unprovided for. This seemed like a large sum considering what had already been raised. But when the final appeal was made at the evening service, and the totals footed up it was found that $1,032.83 had been raised.

These brethren now have the best church in the town, and one of the best among our brethren in the county, and this congregation, though hindered for years by antis and factionists, is destined to become a center of great influence for New Testament Christianity in the great oil and gas belt of southeastern Kansas. W. S. LOWE.

Topeka, Kan.

Northern California.

Evidences of prosperity are on every hand, both temporal and spiritual. A climate that permits people to work and live out of doors practically every month in the year, ought to and does give temporal prosperity to every zealous and industrious person.

Spiritual prosperity is manifest in the greater interest being taken by our churches in evangelism.

One year ago it was hard to get any of our churches to consent to meetings being held with them. Now we have many evangelists at work in the state and some good meetings being held, too. R. L. McHatton had over 30 additions at Santa Rosa and 37 at Lakeport. A. C. McKeever had 30 in two weeks with Fresno (home) church and had to close on account of sickness. F. L. Platt and D. W. Honn had 38 at Visalia with home forces.

Mrs. Hazelrigg is to begin a series of several different meetings Jan. 3.

I understand Northcutt is coming out for two or more meetings.

F. H. Lemon and D. W. Honn had over 20 in the Vacaville meeting. A. L. Platt and D. W. Honn are to hold a meeting at Colusa, in February. F. L. Platt and D. W. Honn at Tulare, in January.

Several meetings in weaker churches with fewer additions, but yet none the less good meetings.

A. O. Hushaw, for several years in the employ of the Foreign Society at Honolulu, has accepted the work at Winters.

R. W. Tener from Indian Territory is getting on well at Colusa.

J. B. Askev from Indian Territory has been called to Wheatland and Fairview and is expected Jan. 1.

G. E. Williams, of Kahoka, Mo., has been given a call to the Butte City church, and we hope he will accept.

W. F. Stafford, of Lexington, Ky., has been invited to Lodi, Jan. 3, and we hope it will be a case of love at first sight.

R. L. Morton, of Oklahoma, will likely take the work at Dinuba. He comes well recommended.

Others are coming and we feel that our pulpits are to-day more nearly filled and better manned than ever before. We are looking for great things in the future.

As I write, two days before the world festival of Christmastide, with the oranges bending the trees with golden fruit and even the apple trees attempting the "evergreen" role, and the sunshine bright and warm all about, with all the gladness comes just a tinge of sorrow that people in the frozen east cannot enjoy it with us, for we have in California enough of earth's good things for twenty-five times as many people as are here now.

Perhaps, though, some of you are sorrowing for us because we have to use cotton to have the appearance of snow in our Christmas festivities.

It is easier though to imitate snow than green grass. J. P. DARGITZ, Cor. Sec.

Healdsburg.

Ohio Letter.

It has been stated in the public print a few times, and once in these notes, that Hiram College had offered the presidency to different ones, but that it had been declined. It ought to be said that the Board of Trustees has offered the place to no one officially since Dr. Beattie resigned. The board would hardly make such a blunder as to offer the place to a man without knowing his mind. Those who have "declined" have done so to individuals who may have suggested the matter, not to the board. The present regime is perfectly satisfactory to most of us. No man is more universally beloved and few more efficient than the present acting president, E. B. Wakefield.

West Mansfield had a great day Jan. 3. The remodeled and newly furnished house was formally opened. P. H. Welsheimer, of Canton, a child of this congregation, came home to preach the sermons. But best of all the pastor, Walter A. Rounds, returned on this occasion after three months absence. Brother Rounds was taken with a severe and protracted case of typhoid fever Oct. 1. This is the first he has been able for service.

J. W. Lowe has trusted with the church at Piqua. The brethren there will hear some strong preaching from Brother Lowe, and will find him a genuine and a true man.

Jan. 3 was also a great day in our Zion at Dayton. The second church was formally set apart to the service of the Most High. President Cramblett preached the sermons and consulted the pocket-books. A fuller report is expected later.

H. L. Atkinson has done two things worthy of note. First he resigned at Geneva. Then he married one of Geneva's pretty girls. He will assist J. C. B. Stivers at Wellington in a meeting in January.

Arthur Braden, of New Castle, Pa., and a recent graduate of Hiram College has taken the church at Deerfield.

G. F. Assiter has shaken the dust of Missouri from his feet, and is now traveling up and down the streets of Martin's Ferry making pastoral calls. We welcome him to Ohio and intend to keep him here.

The Chicago Avenue Church in Columbus planned a big New Year's eve rally. They were to offer $1,000 in silver on their church debt. State Secretary Bartlett was present to add grace and dignity and help a little with persuasive power.

This is the month of meetings. This scribe knows of the following men and meetings: G. A. Ragan is at Marietta; S. H. Bartlett is with W. H. Smith and the Tiffin Church; J. H. Dodd is with home forces, Franklin Avenue, Columbus; Mrs. Princess Long is singing for W. S. Priest at Central, Columbus; M. B. Ryan is at Broad St., Akron; J. G. Slayter is preaching in his own meeting at High Street, Akron; Edgar D. Jones is with home forces at Franklin Circle, Cleveland; Ira Durfee is at Geneva; W. E. M. Hackleman is singing for the meeting at Collinwood, C. A. Freer preaching.

Let us keep up the evangelistic efforts. Every church should have at least one meeting each year.

H. L. Willett is spending the first week of the new year at the Euclid Avenue Church, Cleveland. He preached Sunday, Jan. 3, and also addressed the preachers at the Y. M. C. A. building on Monday.

The Coshocton Church has paid off all debts and has purchased a new lot further down in town and will rebuild. This is a wise move. C. A. McDonald is bishop there.

If you would like to have a meeting about the middle of March or first of April write to Coltinwood, Ohio. C. A. FREER.

Dallas, Texas.

On Oct. 29, to-morrow will be two months ago, I came to the city of Dallas under the direction of the A. C. M. S. and began work in a section of the city where there were four square miles of territory and ten thousand people, without a church of our order to attend.

In this two months we have bought a lot that cost us $2,100 and erected a comfortable house of worship on it that is 40x60 feet in the clear. We have this house well furnished, well lighted with electricity and well heated, with baptistery, matings, etc., all complete and paid for.

We have in this time organized a church and held a meeting that resulted in 102 additions in all. In the last two weeks we have had seven more additions. We now have 146 members in the church, 180 enrolled in the Sunday-school, 39 in the Y. P. S. C. E., 50 in the Junior Y. P. S. C. E. and about 40 in the Ladies' Aid Society. The Ladies' Aid has been organized two months, it being the first thing organized, and it has raised $446 to date. While this new organization has been buying and building every thing all at once, they have paid $100 a month on the preacher's salary from the very start.

We were sent here to buy a lot, build a house, organize a church and locate a pastor. Every thing is done but the locating of the pastor, and we think we have our eye on the right man.

As our work is done, or practically done here, we will either go to another city and do likewise, or enter the protracted meeting field in the early spring and hold meetings in the southwest until some other city is ready to establish a new church. If any preacher wants to apply for the pastorate of the new church just established in East Dallas, let him write to James Johnson Collins, Dallas, Texas, as I really have not the time to take care of that kind of a correspondence.

JOHN A. STEVENS,
Southwestern Evangelist.

Kentucky.

We have just learned that James Vernon, who has done such good work at Nicholasville for several years past, has resigned to accept a call to the church at Winchester, Ind., his resignation at Nicholasville to take effect on April 1. Brother Vernon is one of our strongest preachers.

W. B. Taylor, who has been located with the church at Versailles for the past eight and one-half years, has accepted a call to Santa Anna, Cal., where he expects to begin work at once. He has done a splendid work at Versailles, and the church disliked very much to give him up, but the health of his family necessitated his going to a different field.

George Darsie, of Frankfort, has just announced a special series of Sunday night sermons, beginning on Jan. 3, on "Some Noted Kentucky Pioneers."

Flournoy Payne, who has been located at Baltimore for several years past, has accepted calls to preach the ensuing year for the churches at Sulphur, New Castle and Point Pleasant. Glad to have him in Kentucky again.

W. S. Willis, who has been located at Falmouth for several years, has succeeded G. W. Nutter at Millersburg. We learn that the latter is considering a call to Aberdeen, Miss.

S. R. Hawkins has just closed a successful year's ministry at Murray, and will spend the ensuing year in the evangelistic field.

Evangelist S. M. Martin is in the midst of a splendid meeting with V. W. Dorris at Georgetown. There have already been about 50 additions. The meeting continues.

Charles E. Powell, who has been preaching

Aching Joints

In the fingers, toes, arms, and other parts of the body, are joints that are inflamed and swollen by rheumatism—that acid condition of the blood which affects the muscles also.

Sufferers dread to move, especially after sitting or lying long, and their condition is commonly worse in wet weather.

"It has been a long time since we have been without Hood's Sarsaparilla. My father thinks he could not do without it. He has been troubled with rheumatism since he was a boy, and Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine he can take that will enable him to take his place in the field." Miss ADA DORY, Sidney, Iowa.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills

Remove the cause of rheumatism—no outward application can. Take them!

for churches near Stanford the past year, has just accepted a call to Valdosta, Ga.

Thad. S. Tinsley, of Louisville, has just closed a very successful year's work with the Clifton Church of that city. There have been 254 additions at regular and special services there during the past year. A new church building has also been dedicated and a parsonage completed.

We are just beginning our fifth year with the church at this place. During the past year 52 have been received into our membership at regular services. Our missionary offerings have been larger than for a number of years.

P. H. Duncan, on account of his health, had to give up his work with the Parkland Church, Louisville, declining a unanimous call to remain with the congregation another year. He will locate at Latonia and preach for several country churches within reach of that place.

The new church building at Erlanger will be dedicated on Jan. 10. F. M. Rains will be in charge, assisted by G. A. Miller, of Covington, E. D. Jones, of Cleveland, Ohio, former minister, and L. B. Haskins, the present minister.

The many friends of Holton O. Frank will regret to learn of his death, which occurred at Lexington on New Year's day, after a lingering illness of several weeks. Brother Frank was one of our most popular young preachers, and will be greatly missed. He was a son of the late Joseph Frank, and a brother to R. Graham Frank, the present minister at Liberty, Mo. May God comfort the bereaved family. His funeral was held in the Broadway Church, Lexington, conducted by President J. W. McGarvey, assisted by Mark Collis. The remains were then taken to Flemingsburg, his old home, for interment.
Midway, Ky. GEO. W. KEMPER.

Texas.

The churches at Sabinal, Uvalde, Hondo and Devine would co-operate in the employment of a pastor. This is a splendid field for some young man who is active, zealous and energetic. These churches are all near each other and located in the most healthful portion of the state, not far from San Antonio.

The Tabernacle Church, Ft. Worth, has reached the high water mark in its Sunday-school. The number present two weeks ago was one thousand! This is by far the largest Sunday-school in Texas.

R. R. Hamlin, pastor of the First Church in Ft. Worth, is building up his church rapidly and has greatly increased the numerical strength of both church and Sunday-school within the past few months. Both the First Church and the Tabernacle Church in this city are growing rapidly.

J. G. Cresson, formerly of Norman, Okla., succeeds A. J. Bush in the pastorate at Cleburne, and we learn that he enters upon his duties as such January 1. He comes well commended [and] the brethren of Texas extend to him a hearty welcome.

The Texas Christian University, has recently been made, the recipient of another $1,000 from a friend who resides in the city of Houston. If one hundred more of such persons could be found, the University, by next September, could provide accommodations for the many pupils who will doubtless desire to matriculate at the opening of the session.

E. B. Watson has resigned the pastorate at Brownwood, but whither he goes we have not been informed. He has served this church for several years and is very much beloved by the members and the people of the city. Brother Watson is a strong preacher and a good pastor and any church securing his services will be fortunate.

The church at Comanche has about commenced the building of a new church house commensurate with the demands of the city and the growth of the membership. Arthur W. Jones is the popular and energetic pastor of this church and is also engaged in the business of closing up saloons, being a splendid prohibition lecturer.

The church at Carrollton has had a beautiful lot donated and they are planning for the building of a neat and comfortable church house in the near future. This church was recently organized by Evangelist B. J. Waugh, who has been called to the pastorate of the church at Beaumont, but he has not yet decided to accept.

Austin, Tex., Jan. 1.

Dedication at Weston, Ohio.

Eight years ago the writer held a meeting at Weston, Wood county, Ohio. A goodly number of people gave their hearts to Christ, and obeyed the gospel of his grace. We organized them into a church, and for these eight years they have held up the gospel banner, and God has given prosperity to the church. On Lord's day, Dec. 27, it was our privilege to go back to Weston and preach the opening sermon and dedicate their house of worship. It was a very happy day for the Disciples at Weston. In addition to raising money to pay all debts, we raised enough to buy them a new organ. The pledges run only thirty days. Quite a good deal was cash in hand.

Wabash, Ind.

RAPIDLY GROWING

in Popularity and Circulation
the Indispensable Companion of Young Men and Women
Everywhere

Our Young Folks

Begins its Fourteenth Volume with the First Issue for 1904. As an Aid to the Sunday-School and
C. E. Worker
IT IS UNSURPASSED

Subscription Price, 75c. a year
(52 Numbers)

Christian Publishing Co.
St. Louis : : Missouri

The Sunday-School.

Jan. 17, 1904.

THE BAPTISM AND TEMPTATION OF JESUS —Matthew 3:13-4:11.

Memory verses 4:3,4.

GOLDEN TEXT.—And, lo, a voice from heaven, saying, This is my beloved son in whom I am well pleased.—Matt. 3:17.

The Records.

In addition to Matthew's narrative, read also the very brief account of the baptism and temptation of Jesus in Mark 1:9-13. Mark nearly always narrates a given event in fewer words than any of the other evangelists. Luke's account of the baptism is also very brief (3:21,22), but he tells of the temptation (4:1-13) in words almost identical with those used in Matthew, but with the order of the second and third episodes reversed. John's Gospel lays great emphasis upon John the Baptist's testimony to Christ (1:6-34) but does not explicitly mention the baptism of Jesus, though it records the visible descent of the Holy Spirit upon him as the sign by which John the Baptist identified the chosen one (John 1:33). The fourth Gospel does not mention the temptation at all.

The Baptism of Jesus.

While John was preaching repentance in the wilderness of Judæa, Jesus came out with the multitude and presented himself for baptism. John protested on the ground that he did not need baptism. While he had rejected the hypocritical scribes and Pharisees on the ground that they showed no tokens of genuine repentance, his appeal was to those who had real and substantial sins to repent of. John could say, as Jesus afterward said, "I come not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance." It is not necessary to suppose that John recognized Jesus as the Messiah and based his refusal to baptize him on this ground. Indeed, in John 1:33, it is explicitly stated that John did not know Jesus (as the Messiah) until he saw the Holy Spirit descend upon him. If Jesus and John were second cousins (Luke 1:36), they may easily have been well acquainted, for, though one family lived in Galilee and the other in the hill country of Judæa, there were frequent opportunities of meeting at the feasts at Jerusalem. If John knew Jesus at all, he must have known his singular purity of life and might well have said, "I have need to be baptized of thee, etc.," even though he had at the time no suspicion of his mission.

Why Was Jesus Baptized?

Was it any wonder that John, knowing the blameless life of Jesus, should think it inappropriate and unnecessary for him to submit himself to a "baptism unto repentance?" Much more might he have thought so if he had known that Jesus was actually the Christ. Yet Jesus asked for baptism and explained his request by saying, "Thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness." What did he mean? Certainly not that baptism was itself a righteous act. John had been preaching repentance as a preparation for the new kingdom of righteousness. He had been awakening the people from their complacent belief that they would be saved simply because they were Abraham's children and "heirs of the promise." He had been showing them that they did not, as Jews, inherit a claim upon God's mercy and had been announcing the beginning of a new regime in which personal righteousness should be the only test. Those who were willing to accept this new order of things naturally repented of their sins and set about to make their lives conform to the new standard, and they were baptized in token of their submission to this new requirement. Now, though Jesus had no sins to repent of, it was eminently fitting that he should, through baptism, express his approval of this new view of life and duty which John was preaching. In this way he showed publicly his belief that one should "fulfill all righteousness."

DON'T BUY AN OUT-OF-DATE MACHINE ON A WORN-OUT REPUTATION

NOR A WEAK ATTEMPT AT VISIBLE WRITING WITH
TANGLEFOOT TYPEBARS AND SLOT GUIDES.

The Standard Visible Oliver Writers and Billers with 10 in., 12 in., 15 in. and 18 in. Carriages

Are Rapid
Convenient
Simple
Durable
And have
The Best
Touch
Method
Key Board

Enable
The Operator
To do
The Most
Of the Best Work
The Easiest

Write upon any size or shape of paper from a postage stamp or druggists' label to an insurance policy or freight way-bill, lined or unlined

Used by the Government and Largest Corporations

The OLIVER TYPEWRITER COMPANY

Century Building, 315 North Ninth Street,

ST. LOUIS, MO.

instead of depending upon sacrifices and ceremonies to win the favor of God.

A Real Temptation.

Why was Jesus tempted? Because it was impossible that he should not be tempted. Whatever may have been the measure of his earlier understanding of his mission, he was now getting a fuller consciousness of his own powers and of the purpose for which they were given to him. And every time of awakening power, in the life of any individual, is a time of temptation—the temptation to make a wrong use of power. Just how these temptations came or in what form Satan presented himself, it is not important to decide. The important point is that they were real temptations. They presented objects of desire which appealed strongly to Jesus. He wanted food. He wanted to convince all beholders that he was the Son of God. He wanted to possess all the kingdoms of the world. But the conditions that were attached to the immediate attainment of these ends were such that he could not yield without compromising his mission.

A Testing Time.

The greatest significance of the temptation, or series of temptations, was that it afforded to Jesus an occasion for defining the nature of his mission and choosing between two possible courses. He had received the divine attestation of his Sonship in the voice from heaven and the gift of the Spirit. He was conscious of a power which he had not yet put to the test. He saw himself the chosen one to set up a new kingdom upon earth. Should he use his special powers for the supplying of his own bodily needs? No, he would depend on his common human powers to meet human wants. To have done otherwise would have been an unworthy beginning to his ministry. Should he test his powers and give proof of them in spectacular displays and thus win notoriety at a stroke by a conspicuous miracle? No, while he wanted to draw men about him, he did not want them to come as curiosity seekers. He must not be a mere marvel-monger.

A Spiritual Kingdom.

The third temptation is the most significant of all, for it most nearly concerns the primary mission of Christ.

He had come to establish a kingdom, and now a kingdom is offered to him. There may have been many conceivable arguments in favor of accepting it. He would be able to rule wisely and justly. He would be able to deliver Israel from the hated Roman yoke. All the arguments by which politicians nowadays persuade themselves that they may use the corrupt machine to get into office, and make atonement by the good they will do after they are in, were applicable to this temptation, when Satan offered to Jesus "all the kingdoms of the world and the glory of them." The offer forced him to a final decision as to the nature of the kingdom which he should establish. If it was to be a political kingdom such as the Jews were expecting, then it might perhaps be worth while to accept this offer. But if, setting aside the current conception of the messianic regime, he was to establish a spiritual kingdom based upon faith and righteousness, then it would be fatal to make even the slightest concession to the powers of evil in return for the greatest gifts which they could bestow. This temptation was not ended when "the devil left him for a season," for throughout the ministry of Jesus, there were periods of popularity when the people, misconceiving his mission, wished to make him king. This, perhaps, was no serious temptation to him after he had come to a full realization of the nature of his work, but the temptation of the wilderness had just this value—that, by presenting an opportunity and a crisis, it helped him to attain full consciousness of the nature of the work which lay before him.

FERRY'S

SEEDS

MEET ALL NEEDS

Experience has established it as a fact. Sold by all dealers. You sow—they grow. 1904 Seed Annual postpaid free to all applicants.

D. M. FERRY & CO.
DETROIT, MICH.

Christian Endeavor.

By H. A. Denton.
Jan. 17, 1904.

OUR TEMPTATIONS.—

1 Cor. 10: 6-13; Heb. 4: 14-16.

For the Leader.

We come not to discuss theories of temptation to-night. If so, we would have almost as many theories as we have members to theorize. And it would not profit us much after we had heard them all. The fact of temptation is not in dispute. There is such a thing. Who is there who has not this evidence in his own experience? Have we not felt that strange and yet common thing called, for want of a better designation, temptation, drawing us, compelling us, enticing us, threatening us, arguing with us, holding us as if by a spell against our better judgment? This, under its many forms and names, is the topic we are to discuss this evening. Viewed thus from the Word of God and from our own experiences, the subject will yield us information, comfort, help and inspiration for the toils of another week.

For the Members.

1. We have temptations within. They are not the words or influences of any external influence or personality, at least, so far as we know. They seem to have their lurking place within. They rise up from some unforeseen hiding place in our hearts. We have no one to blame. The foe is not without, but within. Is not the absence of Jesus from the heart the opportunity for this uprising? Remember he is not absent unless put out by you.

2. We have temptations which come from the outside. They are external. Those who may think they are our friends may become our tempters. They will try to empty our hearts of the Holy Guest and enthroned there the enemy of all souls. Then there are influences, suggested thoughts, impure reading matter, things to possess and things to enjoy, and so on through all the list of things external to us, that influence us to do wrong. These are temptations from without. If the temptation from within is to be expelled, how much more is the temptation from without to be avoided!

3. We cannot discuss the question whether it were possible to have a world of human life and experiences without temptation. This would bring no message to the heart. It would afford no relief to those who are already struggling with temptations. But this we know: The Lord has promised that we shall never be tempted beyond what we can overcome through his help. See 1 Cor. 10:13. We have the knowledge that the efforts we put forth to overcome, will develop within us spiritual strength. This is just as simple and as certain as that physical exercise will develop physical strength. What is that beautiful grace we call patience but the strength of a soul that has wrestled with temptation? See Romans 5:3-5.

FOR HOME READING.

- |                            |                |
|----------------------------|----------------|
| M. Tempted by Satan.       | 1 Pet. 5:8-11. |
| T. Tempted through riches. | Deut. 8:11-18. |
| W. Tempted by men.         | Prov. 1:10-16. |
| T. God does not tempt.     | James 1:12-16. |
| F. God delivers.           | Psa. 22:4, 8.  |
| S. Works patience.         | Romans 5:1-5.  |
| S. Overcoming temptation.  | Heb. 4:14-16.  |

Bible College at Home.

Thorough courses by mail, leading to diploma and degree. Distance no hindrance. Students in every state and foreign country. Best testimonials. Catalogue free. Write C. J. Burton, President Iowa Christian College, Oskaloosa, Iowa.

Barnes Business College

BOARD OF EDUCATION BUILDING., ST. LOUIS, MO.
Established 22 years. Eight expert teachers. May we tell you what a business course with us means? And we'd be pleased to say something about our shorthand and Touch Typewriting course. We give personal instruction, and can offer advantages not to be obtained elsewhere. Catalogue free.

Midweek Prayer-Meeting.

By Frank G. Tyrrell.
Jan. 13, 1904.

UNDER THE EYE OF CHRIST.

—Heb. 4:13.

The watchword of this restoration movement is, "Back to Christ!" It is a cry that is echoed by all leaders of thought in the religious world, and Christendom is asking, "Where is he that is born King?" This study is to remind us that his eye is evermore upon us, when we serve or shirk, obey or transgress, march or fly. "There is no creature that is not manifest in his sight." His vision embraces all. We cannot hide from him. That which we least wish him to see may be the very first to arrest his attention.

We are confident that his is never a supercilious gaze: that it is, rather, tender and sympathetic. It is more than a glance, merely taking note of us, as the eye sometime does of a landscape, without the attention dwelling upon it. He looks with attention and sympathetic interest. He follows our careers; he foresees our perils and oppositions; he reads our thoughts. What a look of scorn he had for hypocrites of old, and with what fiery vengeance must that same glance fall upon the hypocrite's descendants! And who can imagine the world of pathetic reproof with which he looked upon Peter, after his denial?

There is great comfort in this assurance: for often we struggle hard, alone. Our efforts are vigorous, earnest, as well-timed as we can make them, and yet fruitless. We have toiled all night, and taken nothing. When we turn to our fellow-workers they look upon us with reproach and misgivings. But the Master looks upon the heart; he knows the ardor, the devotion, with which we have toiled, and he approves. Or if it be a flagrant transgression, for which men denounce us, he sees that also; but his gaze penetrates to the innermost recesses of the heart; he sees the underlying motive, which was overborne, perhaps, and his chiding is tender and full of healing balm.

We have the constant sympathy of him under whose eye we live and labor. He is our High Priest, touched with a feeling of our infirmities. He knows the fiery assault of temptation, and the feeble powers of resistance. What gratitude we should feel for his compassion! Now, in view of his sleepless watch-care, we should be steadfast. First of all, in high purpose; then, in doctrine. We should search the Scriptures daily, like men seeking goodly treasures—the translucent pearl or the flashing diamond. We should be steadfast in labor and travail. Men are not born into the kingdom without birth-pains.

A knowledge of divine love and sympathy should encourage us to come frequently and with boldness to the throne of grace. "Much reading and thinking may make a popular preacher, but much secret prayer must make a powerful preacher," says Dr. Berridge. Boldness in coming to the throne will endow us with mercy and grace that will make our Christianity both popular and powerful. And this boldness and persistence should result from the encouragement we find in him under whose sleepless eye we live.

His eye is upon us for good. He watches to protect, to cheer, to support. The way may be dark to us, but he knows it altogether. It may be a thorny way, and the thorns pierce our feet, but ah! they pierced his brow! Who is not anxious to walk and to work so as to merit at last the look which will accompany the blessed "Well done?" Do you not think the Master is pleased with the efforts the Disciples are making to restore the lost unity of his church? And do you not think he is saddened when he sees us filled with a party spirit, proud, arrogant, boastful, bigoted? No father ever watched with more jealous eye the progress and behavior of a loved child.

PRAYER

O Lord, we would realize thy sacred nearness. We would warm and grow under thy gaze, as flowers under the enkindling sun.

NATURE'S GREATEST CURE

An interesting letter to our readers from Hon. H. L. Dunham, Ex-Mayor of Dover, N. J.

Dover, N. J., Nov. 12th, 1902.

I had both kidney and liver trouble for over three years. I tried the best physicians in Washington, D. C., Pittsburg, Cincinnati and Chicago, and regret to say that I received very little benefit until I commenced taking the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. After taking the first bottle I noticed quite a change, which satisfied me that at last I had found the right medicine. I continued in every way, that I felt satisfied I was cured. But, to be positive beyond a question or doubt, I was in Chicago during July, 1902, and went to the Columbus Medical Laboratory, No. 103 State St., and had them make a thorough and complete microscopical examination which showed my kidneys and liver to be perfectly well and healthy. I have their written report in my possession, signed by the doctors of the above Medical Laboratory, which is recognized as one of the best in the country.

Very truly yours,

H. L. Dunham

Ex-Mayor of Dover, N. J.

The mild and prompt effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. Recommended and taken by physicians, used in hospitals and endorsed by people of prominence everywhere. To prove what Swamp-Root will do for you, a sample bottle will be sent absolutely free, by mail, also a book telling all about Swamp-Root and its wonderful cures. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and be sure to mention reading this generous offer in the St. Louis CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST.

If you are already convinced that Swamp-Root is what you need; you can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at the drug stores everywhere. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

May we abide in thee, rooted and grounded in thy love, surrounded by thee as by a celestial air, and finally see thee as thou art. Amen.

(Topic for January 20, "Prevailing Prayer.")
—Gen. 32:24-28.)

NEW INVENTION!

Write for new booklet, Special Offer this month. Our new Quaker Polishing Vapor Bath Cabinets, latest production. Everybody delighted. Enjoy at home for 30¢ each all the marvelous cleansing, invigorating, curative effects of the famous Turkish Baths. Open the 5,000,000 skin pores, purifies the entire system. Beats Hot Springs. Prevents disease. Saves Dr. bills. Cured thousands. Nature's drugless remedy for colds, grip, rheumatism, aches, pains, blood and skin diseases. Kidney trouble, children's diseases and female ailments. Guaranteed. Sent on 20 days' trial. Write to Sani-World Mfg. Co., 92 World Building, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Our Budget

—Here we are with our first number for the new year.

—We are sending this number to a large number of new readers, who have just been entered upon our subscription list. We tender them hearty greetings, and hope they will make themselves at home.

—What we ask of the whole of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST family, is their earnest co-operation with us to make the paper of greater service to our cause than ever before. If you like us show it in some of the following ways: Show the paper to your friends and speak a good word for it. If a preacher, call attention to the paper from your pulpit and urge the value of a religious paper in the home. Report to us briefly and promptly any news that may come to your knowledge. Send us also any clipping from any other paper which you think will interest us, enclosed in an envelope. Also send us any thought of your own, or any suggestion which may occur to you from time to time, looking to the improvement of the paper or the advancement of the cause.

—All the signs indicate a year of unusual prosperity and greatly increased circulation for the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. Our friends throughout the country are seeing more clearly the value of circulating widely the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST as a representative paper of our great plea, and are pledging their co-operation to assist us in fulfilling its mission among us. Now is the time of year when a little active work will tell most in the way of practical assistance.

—The past week has presented a scene of almost unprecedented activity in every department of the Christian Publishing Co., from the third story to the basement. Pressmen, compositors, proof-readers, janitor, Book Department, Business Manager and Cashier, Advertising Manager, Sunday-school Department, Subscription Department and Editorial Department—all have been up to their eyes in business, and the days have been too short in which to do the work.

—Bro. N. J. Aylsworth, who never fails to awaken fresh interest in every subject he writes upon, will be read with interest this week on one of the current questions of the time. Other contributed articles also will be found worthy of careful reading.

—We owe it to our colleges to which we are looking for the education of our ministers and of our Christian workers who are to represent us at home and abroad, that we make the third Lord's day in January, a day of educating the churches upon the subject of Christian education among us. In one of McGuffey's old school readers, we remember a sentence like this: "We must educate or we must perish." We may apply this to ourselves, as a religious body, as equally true of us.

—The editor reciprocates this kindly New Year's greeting from the successful and energetic general secretary of the Benevolent Association: "I wish you a useful and happy New Year. Through all the activities and stress of your busy life, may you ever hear 'the still small voice of God' speaking peace to your soul, and may you always be regaled by the consciousness that in the upbuilding of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST you are serving the Lord, and helping a large and growing constituency into all the graces of the Christian life. Accounting myself fortunate in being associated with you in holy service, I am, Your brother in Christ,

"GEO. L. SNIVELY."

—The sad word comes to us through a note from Bro. J. S. Lamar, of Georgia, that our beloved and gifted young brother, A. B. Phillips, pastor of the church at Augusta, Ga., died suddenly at his home in that city on Monday, Dec. 28. We learn that he was taken ill on the Lord's day and died the following day, with heart failure. This is truly sad intelligence. Brother Phillips seemed to have the promise of a long and useful life. He was educated, gifted, genial, popular and devoted to the work of the Master. The church at Augusta, and the whole brotherhood has suffered a great loss in what seems to us, his untimely decease. Georgia has recently lost, as Brother Lamar reminds us, two of her ablest men, the other being the venerable Dr. A. G. Thomas, whose death we recently chronicled. Dr. Thomas had long been identified with our cause in Georgia, and was a ripe sheaf ready for the garner. Brother Phillips has been called in the prime of his young manhood, and in the midst of his usefulness. We tender our sincere sympathies to his bereaved wife and church.

—The American Bible Society, whose work is too well known to need any commendation from us, announces that the contributions to its treasury have fallen off very seriously during the past year, and unless there is a considerable increase during the next three months, the work of the society, both at home and abroad, will be materially crippled. This ought not to be permitted. All funds should be sent to Mr. Wm. Foulke, treasurer, Bible House, Astor Place, New York.

—A. J. Bush, who has recently undertaken the superintendency of the Juliette Fowler Orphans' and Widows' Home at Grand Prairie, Texas, writes that there is no Christian Church at that place. He is taking steps toward organizing one.

—F. M. Green in sending a New Year's greeting to the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST and its editorial force, says: "As in the past, so now I will do all I can to endorse your work and extend your influence. I am now well into the fiftieth year of my active and often strenuous public life. When I reach the full limit, I expect to retire with only love and good wishes for those who must carry on the work."

—Walter Jordan will assume the pastorate of the church at Quincy, Ill., on Jan. 10. He will find the church in a healthy and active condition. E. S. Potter, a member of the board, says that the Sunday-school, under the superintendency of George Carley, is at a record-breaking point, and the mission conducted by the church has an attendance of about 75.

—The churches of Pittsburg, Allegheny and vicinity, will unite in a simultaneous evangelistic movement, beginning Feb. 7, and continuing indefinitely. Such evangelists as Dr. Chapman and Dr. A. C. Dixon will have charge of the work, and the joint committee of arrangements includes representatives of thirteen religious bodies. The Disciples of Christ are represented by C. L. Thurgood, R. J. Bamber, W. R. Warren, Wallace Tharpe, and W. H. Gardner.

—A. M. Growden writes that his work at Scranton, Pa., is growing splendidly and that his recent sermon on "No Creed but Christ" was, by request, published in the Scranton Republican.

—William Woods College has secured the services of C. Q. Shouse, of Nelson, Mo., who will assist Pres. J. B. Jones during the present year in soliciting funds and students. Brother Shouse has been a friend of the college from the beginning, and has before now successfully canvassed in its behalf.

—John G. Slater, pastor of the First Church of Christ at Akron, Ohio, sends us a printed report of their work for the year. It is a splendid report: 127 additions to the membership; their own missionary supported under the State Missionary Society, another under the home society, and another in a foreign field; $1,096.96 contributed to foreign missions, the largest amount given by any single organization among the Disciples of Christ; $8,000 raised during the year for all purposes. This is one of our great churches, but it has not yet reached the limit of its greatness.

—Pres. Hill M. Bell, of Drake University, writes that arrangements have been completed with the trustees of the School for Pastoral Helpers at Cincinnati, for the transfer of the school to Drake University. The transfer takes effect at once. The University will enlarge the scope of the school's work to include a number of specialties for Christian workers that have not hitherto been available in any of our Bible Colleges. The School for Pastoral Helpers has been a useful institution under the management of Brother Harvuot, and has made for itself a distinct and unique place. Its transfer to Drake will insure the permanence of the work, as well as its enlargement.

—J. T. Ogle, of Guthrie, Okla., writes that the church at that place has had 159 additions since going into their new building eleven months ago.

—W. H. Waggoner, our missionary specialist and evangelist, has recently held an institute at Sullivan, Ind. He reports that the work there is prospering under the ministry of David Francis, who has just been called for his third year. There have been 88 additions to the church in the last two years. Brother Waggoner writes that his missionary institute work during 1903 has been highly successful. He lectured every night for forty-two weeks in churches of all denominations through Indiana, Ohio, Kansas and Missouri. The work was better supported and attended than ever before.

—We regret to notice that the Christian Companion of Louisville continues to print misrepresentations of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. In a recent issue it refers to us as endorsing the name "Church of the Disciples," or the "Disciples' Church"—names which we have distinctly discountenanced and discouraged, both on scriptural and grammatical grounds. It also charges the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST with favoring the title "Reverend"—a thing about which we care so little that we say little or nothing concerning it. We never apply the term to any of our own preachers in the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, though we sometimes use it in addressing letters to preachers for purposes of identification. The title "Rev." means preacher—only that and nothing more; but we would not care to write "Preacher," even, before every man's name who is a minister of the gospel. We are then charged with substituting the word pastor for evangelist. This charge is entirely without foundation. The two words have very distinct uses, and we never use them interchangeably. We apply the word pastor to one who is a pastor or shepherd of a flock, and the term evangelist to one who is not a settled pastor, but who preaches the gospel from place to place and is engaged in evangelistic work. We had supposed the word pastor was quite as scriptural as the term evangelist. But the gravest misrepresentation which the Companion makes, is that this paper has endorsed the idea of receiving the unimmersed into fellowship. The Christian Standard was candid enough to deny that this paper favored such a practice, recently, and subsequently published an editorial from our paper distinctly repudiating such idea. And yet, in the face of all these facts, our Louisville contemporary, for some strange reason, repeats this charge. We call no one's motives in question, but we venture to express the hope that Brother Brown will strive to do to others as he would be done by, when he undertakes to represent the position of his brethren. Let us be just if the heavens fall.

—J. H. Fuller, of Ridgeway, Mo., will preach for the church at Moulton, Ia., during the present year. The four churches of the town are uniting in a union meeting which began Jan. 3.

—The dedication of the church at Brownstown, Ind., which was announced last week for Jan. 17, has been postponed until Jan. 24.

—George C. Ritchey is supplying the pulpit at Santa Ana, Cal., until the church shall secure a permanent successor to Brother Calvin. He reports two additions Dec. 13. He has accepted, a call to Roseburg, Ore., to begin Feb. 1.

—S. H. Duncan changes his address from Louisville to Latonia, Ky. He had a unanimous call to stay with his church in Louisville, and he leaves with reluctance, but he accepts churches in the country, with the hope of recruiting his health.

—J. D. Williams, of Tecumseh, Okla., has been called to the church at Butler, Ky., for 1904.

—Dr. Clark has left for Australia in the interest of Christian Endeavor. All Endeavorers will join in prayer for his safe and successful tour.

—S. D. Dutcher, pastor at Oklahoma City, will not go to Omaha, Neb. He did not make a success of his resignation at the former place. He will hold a short meeting at Hebron, Neb., commencing on Jan. 10, 1904.

—E. R. Childers passed through the city last week en route from Troy, Mo., to Middleborough, Ky., where he begins his work as preacher for the congregation at once.

B. A. Channer has resigned his charge at Caldwell, Kan., to take the pastorate of the church at Jewell City, Kan. During his three years at Caldwell there were 107 persons received into the church. The outlook for the church in Jewell City, he writes, is very promising.

—C. R. Noe, of Leon, Kan., has just given our National Benevolent Association his fourth sum of money on the annuity plan. The last bond is for $200. This is high commendation of the financial system of the association. Others wishing to help this great Christian enterprise may write to general secretary, Geo. L. Snively, 903 Aubert Ave., St. Louis.

—Samuel M. Bernard, minister at Boulder, Colo., will assist J. E. Pickett in a revival at Highland Church, Denver, in January. Bro. Bernard's work at Boulder last year was blessed with 170 additions, mostly baptisms, a new parsonage, increased salary for 1904, and best of all, eight missionary enterprises contributed to.

—The Church Extension Fund has just received two gifts on the annuity plan: $100 from a friend in Iowa, and $1,000 from friends in Illinois. The latter is the 99th annuity gift this fund has received.

—The church at Quincy, Ill., has extended a call to Bro. Walter M. Jordan, of Helena, Mont., which has been accepted by him, and he expects to begin his work in Quincy about Jan. 10.

—If any of our older readers in Illinois can send us a photograph of E. L. Craig, the founder of the Gospel Echo, who lived at Carrollton in that state for many years, we will be glad to receive it to make a cut from it for our anniversary number.

—Mrs. Dr. J. D. Hammett, of Huntsville, Mo., who is wintering at Pasadena, Cal., writes: "My husband and I are sitting in the shade of an orange tree that is laden with its golden fruit. There is abundance of sunshine, fruit and flowers everywhere. This is a beautiful city and an ideal climate. Our church is in a prosperous condition here." Such word, coming to an editor who is trying to enjoy zero weather, is well calculated to breed discontent.

—Thos. J. Easterwood, Theo, Tex., sends this message to the readers of THE CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST:

"This is the first day of the new year, and, dear reader, let us with the new year begin to live a new life. Let us put into practice the noble principles taught in our best family paper, the grand, good CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. May God bless it for the great work it is doing. We need to practice unity as well as preach it. And we so much need spirituality. May God revive us! May the incoming year be the most glorious in our history because of God's presence among us!"

—My work in this field is doing well. Have had seventy additions during my ten months' pastorate. The members have given us two surprises, bringing many useful presents. In many ways they show their appreciation.

Cisco, Tex.

R. E. MCKNIGHT.

—A note from Bro. J. C. Reynolds, Macomb, Ill., reports his condition steadily improving. He has just received a telegram from Tyn-dall, S. D., announcing the accidental death of his brother, whom he was visiting at the time his recent illness began. Concerning his own sickness, Brother Reynolds writes: "I cannot now undertake to tell the story of my terrible sufferings, but by the grace of a just and merciful and loving God, I am about recovered from that attack. I am not suffering now, though I am nervous and weak." We are sure a vast multitude will rejoice to know that our brother is on the road to recovery.

—J. F. Tout, of Centralia, Wash., would like to see the article of F. G. Tyrrell on Christian Socialism, which appeared in a recent number of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, in tract form. He believes it is a fair statement of the problem. He says: "If we do not seek to equalize the opportunities of humanity, instead of fostering and even advocating this wicked competition, God will raise up a people who will. The spiritual is our first consideration, but the fruits thereof should be borne so that the world may know us."

—How do you expect a musician to write for a prize when the hymn is made up of two kinds of metre, as "What We Stand For?" Make the last two stanzas the same as the first three, and it will go.

J. H. ROSENCRANS.

Carlton College, Bonham, Texas.

Any old musician could put music to poetry of the conventional type, containing the same number of feet in each stanza, but it requires something of a musical genius to write a piece of music of sufficient flexibility to fit a poem that is not concerned so much about its feel as about getting there! Hence the offer of a prize. See?

—T. H. Blenus, of the Church St. Christian Church, Jacksonville, Fla., writes that "the human birds of passage are daily and almost hourly arriving." Among the brethren reported as passing through are, J. M. Tisdale, of Covington, Ky., Brother Trout and wife, of Toronto, Can. But not only are the people arriving south, but he says on a recent pleasant day "when the air was soft and balmy" he heard "the sweet tones of the robin redbreast, which had perhaps just completed a long flight from some northern nesting place. This was the summer bird of our old Nova Scotia home, and its appearance and familiar notes awakened many a sweet and endearing remembrance."

—We acknowledge the receipt of the "World-Wide Christian Endeavor Souvenir Almanac" of 1904, from the World's Christian Endeavor Union at Boston. It contains the "Story of the Year" 1903 in Christian Endeavor, not in words alone, but in many beautiful illustrations, showing the progress of Christian Endeavor in foreign lands. It is a beautiful idea, well worked out, as these Endeavor people know how to do such things. Every Endeavorer would like to see one of these souvenir almanacs.

—President Josephus Hopwood, of Virginia Christian College, Lynchburg, Va., writes: "Our work continues very favorable. Enrollment one hundred and twenty, with fifteen or twenty more coming in January. A good spirit for the college prevails through a wide field, Virginia and adjoining sections. Yesterday was a great day in the little church in Lynchburg. It was very rainy and sleeting; not more than two hundred were present, but in a quiet way, more than $4,000 was subscribed, almost exclusively by the members of the church. This finishes paying for the Sunday-school and chapel portion of the church. T. E. Cramblett, president of Bethany, was the preacher for the occasion."

—President E. L. Barham, Female Orphans' School, Camden Point, extends his thanks and congratulations to the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST on its criticism of the Supreme Court's decision, and adds that in case there is any fine to pay for such criticism, that he would be thankful to be permitted to assist. He adds: "I am rejoiced to see our religious journals enter this fight. Our great metropolitan dailies are often subsidized and dare not speak out; or if not so bound, are compromised in such a way that their denunciations are without effect. Cry aloud and spare not." Fortunately, we have had no penalty to pay, so far, and do not anticipate any trouble of that kind. We are in the fight, however, for honesty in politics, and against all boodlers, bribers and bribe-takers, and in this we are glad to know that we have the approval of so large a number of our readers.

You pay five times too much for lamp-chimneys.

Buy good ones. MACBETH.

If you use a wrong chimney, you lose a good deal of both light and comfort, and waste a dollar or two a year a lamp on chimneys.

Do you want the Index? Write me.

MACBETH, Pittsburgh.

—The selection of Rev. Ira Landrith, LL.D., of Nashville, Tenn., as the General Secretary of the Religious Education Association, seems to us in every way a happy choice. Dr. Landrith is an honored minister and editor in the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and has a reputation for wise conservatism that will commend him to the confidence of the religious people generally. He has already entered upon his work and is expected to make a visit to St. Louis in the interest of the work of the association the latter part of January. In giving the reasons which led him to accept this position, in his paper, the Cumberland Presbyterian, Dr. Landrith says:

"Another determining reason for agreeing to go to Chicago has been the increasing conviction that the Religious Education Association has come providentially into being for just such a time as this, and that it promises to be the most phenomenally and comprehensively useful interdenominational and international religious movement of modern times. Intimate recent association with the men most concerned for the Association's well-being has compelled me to believe that every evangelical church, and every really righteous man, movement and method, has much to gain and nothing to lose by cordial co-operation with this omni-denominational agency for making stronger, wider and deeper every devout man's faith in God. Having had absolutely nothing to do with the suggestion of my name, and nothing to do with promoting the proposition of my election, and having been studiously kept in ignorance of all the facts, so that I did not know I had been considered until my election was practically assured, I have been sufficiently unembarrassed from the first to demand, when I came to consider the call, all the information there was to give concerning the incipency, aims and spirit of the Religious Education Association; and my friends in the Cumberland Presbyterian Church will not need to be told that due care and caution have been exercised by me, and that I now know that the Association will advocate nothing, because it desires to accomplish nothing, not in accord with the best wishes of the most thoughtful, earnest and conservative religious leaders in all the churches. In a word, I have learned enough about the cause to be able to stand for it without reservation of any kind, and with an enthusiasm born of such unqualified indorsement and confidence."

—A clipping from the Richmond, Va., News Leader contains an account of the arrival in that city of J. W. Harrison and wife, who are traveling in a one-horse covered vehicle from New York to Atlanta. The wagon cover is labeled, "The gospel wagon of an aged couple on a long journey, New York to Atlanta and back." This is our old friend, Brother Harrison and wife, whom we knew in England. He has a platform attached to the rear of his wagon and preaches the gospel to the people where he can get an audience. He is traveling for his health and is seeking to do good while passing along.

Correspondence

Christmas—A Meditation.

The thing I am thinking about is this: We were together the other day—the Board of Ministerial relief—getting ready the Christmas remittances for the recipients of our bounty, and a most pleasant thing it is to be able to send something to struggling ones who have helped to bear the burden and heat of the day, when word came to us of certain ones most honorably connected with our church and educational work, who were having, just now, a very trying time. They were persons who would shrink from asking us for help because of the feeling that it is somehow asking alms.

Whose fault is it, or is it anybody's, that the Ministerial Relief fund is thought of as a charity? Perhaps we cannot wholly dissipate such a notion, but I wish we could. Is it not possible? The fact is, it is not charity any more than the pension money paid out by the government is charity, or that given by the Pennsylvania railroad to its old and retired employees. So as I am sitting here on the anniversary of a deep and personal sorrow, not caring this year for the hilarity and cheer of the Christmastide, and I have been wondering if there were many helpless preachers or the widows and orphans of preachers, that were in this glad season feeling the pinch of poverty and yet too proud and sensitive to let us know about it? The Ministerial Relief fund can never be administered as it ought, until all notion of charity in connection with it is dispelled. We have never yet failed to send a remittance to those in need, if we have been apprised of it. It hurts us to think that any who deserve it should draw back from letting their wants be known. The board does not feel that it is dispensing alms, but simply paying a debt and discharging a trust. Shall we not all work together to this end that all shall feel and think in the right way about this? There are fine and sensitive natures, and they will be among the most deserving, who will never touch it if to do so is to sacrifice dignity and self-respect. We ought to have more money than we are getting, but we are getting now more than we need, if it is a charity. Let us think right about this matter—both for the sake of those who give, as well as those who receive. If it is put upon the higher basis, I believe we will get hundreds where we now get tens. This is all. I was just thinking about it. Won't you, gentle reader, think about it too? ALLAN B. PHILPUTT.

Indianapolis, Ind.

A Significant Meeting.

A very pleasant and, in all probability, a very profitable meeting was held at Springfield, Ill., in connection with the State Teachers' Association, which assembled in that city Dec. 29-31. President R. E. Hieronymus is president of the College Section of the Association. With characteristic sagacity he arranged for a meeting of the friends of Eureka College to be held at the West Side Church at noon on Dec. 30. A splendid banquet was prepared and served by the ladies of Brother Lynn's congregation. About seventy-five former students, preachers, teachers and professors were present.

The West Side Church is one of the most earnest and active bodies in the whole brotherhood, and what they do is well done. The dinner was up to their usual standard. Several brief talks were made by representatives of various lines of educational work. C. C. Morrison gave kindly welcome to the city; Anna M. Hale spoke for the women; H. T. Swift spoke as representative of County Superintendents, and Frank Thompson as a High School Superintendent; Prof. Coleman brought greeting from Butler College, and Prof. Jones responded as a member of the faculty of Eureka.

At the close Pres. Hieronymus made brief mention of three things which are worthy of the widest publicity. Brother Bondurant, of DeLand, Ill., has offered 120 acres of good land, in addition to the 200 already given, on condition that $100,000 additional be raised. The time of limitation of this offer has been extended to Sept. 1 next, and $40,000 of the amount is in sight. Brother Coleman, of Springfield, has proposed to be one of thirty to give $100 to the college, when the Aid Association has a membership of 2,000. Eighteen others have agreed to join him.

Jan. 17 is College Day, and the churches of Illinois must hear of the needs and the prospects of Eureka College and be given an opportunity to render aid.

This association of our educational interests with those of public education in general is, we believe, most fortunate and will, in the end, result in great good. One of the best addresses of the association was that given by Pres. E. A. James, of Evanston. He contended in a masterly manner that there is a rightful place in the field of education for both church and state, and that for best results they must go hand-in-hand and avoid the tendency to oppose each other. This diversion from former methods of advancing our college interests will bear development, variation and repetition.

S. S. LAPPIN.

Atlanta, Ill., Dec. 31, 1903.

A New Named Loan Fund for Church Extension.

Sarah A. Holman, of Peoria, Ill., has deeded this beautiful home to the Board of Church Extension to sell at once, the proceeds of the sale to go to the establishment of the Sarah A. Holman Loan Fund after $3,000 has been distributed among various enterprises that she has named. The house ought to sell for from $12,000 to $13,000. This will create a Named Fund of $9,000 to $10,000. The house is for sale at once, and is in the hands of the Title and Trust Company of Peoria, Ill. This is the largest straight gift ever made to Church Extension at one time. T. W. Phillips, of New Castle, Pa., gave $9,000 to establish a Loan Fund, but it was given at different times during a period of ten years. W. F. Goodhue and wife, of Carrollton, Ky., gave the Board $13,200 on the Annuity Plan, and David R. Pickens and wife, of Texas, gave a $5,000 annuity.

This house, the picture of which is herewith presented, cost $20,000, including the corner lot on which it stands, which is 50 by 118 feet. The house is located on two of the best streets in Peoria, and in the best residence district. The streets are both paved. The house is built of beautiful green Pennsylvania sandstone of a very hard quality. The roof is slate. The house is stone on the two sides facing the streets, and pressed brick on the two rear sides. There is not a crack in the building. Inside, the finish is all of the best hardwood on lower floor, hard pine above. The walls and ceilings are painted. There are ten rooms, including the reception hall. The house is heated with an economical hot water furnace that cost $1,500. In short, the house is modern in every way and elegantly finished and in good repair. The plumbing is of the best. The house is about eight years old.

The board hopes to sell the house soon, but

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL.

Few People Know How Useful It Is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly every body knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but, simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath, and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says: "I advise Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I got more and better charcoal in Stuart's absorbent Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

will not sacrifice it. The provision is made that Sister Holman shall live in the house until sold, at which time she promptly vacates. This is all arranged for in the contract. She desired to remain in the house to take good care of it and to show prospective buyers its good points.

Wealthy people are constantly moving into Peoria, and the board will be grateful to our brethren if they will help to sell the property so that from fifteen to twenty homeless churches may be housed. Mrs. Holman is very anxious that her money shall be building churches. She is very happy in the thought that this money will build over one hundred churches within a period of ten years by coming and going in the Church Extension Fund.

Mrs. Holman studied the question for nine years as she read of Church Extension in our newspapers and in Business in Christianity, which she has been receiving for ten years. There are scores of men and women in our brotherhood who could do the same thing. We ought to make this missionary year one characterized by the establishment of at least ten new Named Loan Funds for Church Extension. This is the second one, that of Frank H. Main, of Detroit, being the first for this year.

A Named Loan Fund is $5,000 or more, and is created by a church, individual or corporation giving the amount, either at once or in annual payments, of not less than $500. A Memorial Named Fund can be created by leaving $5,000 in a bequest, or by giving $5,000 on the Annuity Plan, if it is specified in the will or upon the gift of the annuity that you want a Memorial Named Fund established at your death.

Write to G. W. Muckley, Cor. Sec., Kansas City, about the establishment of Named Loan Funds.

Illinois Bible-school Notes.

With offerings from Illinois Bible-schools, churches have been established and sustained here and at Wyoming where we have 250 members. This began three years ago with 23 at both places. About half of these have been baptized while a large number "have been capsized," from the other religious bodies; thus is the Savior's prayer being answered. Here we have bought the old Presbyterian Church and are paying $3,000 for it. Meetings have been held here by J. Fred Jones, Harold E. Monser, and S. M. Martin, resulting in 120 additions. Men and women frequently obey the gospel at regular services.

There are three men now in the field supported by offerings from Illinois Bible-schools, viz., M. McFarland, Granite City, C. C. Harl, Wyoming, and the writer. These churches all promise much for the future, provided the offerings are adequate to the expense and time required. It takes patience, money and the grace of God, to plant and keep going a new work, such as these. The policy is all right, the results all that could be expected, that is, on the field, but the funds received are far below the ability of the great brotherhood whose service this is. If the receipts do not increase, as they are at present coming in, the work must be abandoned, and much of what has been done will be lost. This should not be considered an occasion for pride but shame and regret. There are 750 schools in the state, while less than two hundred have at any time had fellowship in the service. Our aim has been to secure a hearing before every school, and an offering therefrom, and the work would have gone forward with leaps and bounds. May we not count on you who read these lines to ask your superintendent and his school to take a part with us in the conquest of Illinois for the Christ and New Testament Christianity? Remember, we have no funds except those that come from our schools of this state alone, and that an offering is desired from every school.

Kewanee, Ill.

A. C. ROACH.

C. W. B. M. in Missouri.

To every auxiliary member our state board sends love and greeting, and a sincere prayer that the new year may bring to each home rich blessings, and to each heart unbounded joy in loving service for the dear Lord.

Many auxiliaries have not yet sent their reports for first quarter. I trust this matter will receive the attention of all. We have a good reputation in our state for prompt reporting; let us see that we do not fall back. Lack of promptness will debar an auxiliary from a place on the Roll of Honor. The conditions of a place on the roll are as follows:

1. The auxiliary must report each quarter to state secretary.
2. Must observe C. W. B. M. Day.
3. Must pay to general fund at least ten cents a month per member.
4. Must pay to state treasury at least five cents a month per member.

The state banner this year will go to the auxiliary giving the greatest amount per capita. This makes the winning of the banner and a place on the Honor Roll as possible to the small auxiliary as to the large one. We hope for and expect a spirited but loving contest for both.

If any auxiliary has, for any reason, not yet observed C. W. B. M. day, we hope it will see to it that some Lord's day soon shall be chosen. Let the earnest plea for members and offerings be made.

Let every woman take as her motto the one chosen by the southwest district as theirs, "Each one win one." This will double our membership and is easily possible, if the membership will consecrate itself to the effort. Will you, my sister reader?

The Memphis auxiliary has been called upon to give up a loved member, Mrs. W. L. Scott. She went to her heavenly home on Nov. 5. May the Father comfort her loved ones.

Mrs. Ella Donaghe, secretary of Sedalia auxiliary, writes: "Our auxiliary is on a

TOPIC CARDS FOR 1904

Mid-Week Prayer-Meeting Topics for the year, per hundred	$1.00
Y. P. S. C. E. Prayer-Meeting Topics for the year, per hundred	1.00
Y. P. S. C. E. Prayer-Meeting Topics for three or six months, with list of Officers, Committees and Leaders, per hundred	2.75
The Topical Hand Book, containing Mid-Week Topics, Y. P. S. C. E. Topics and Sunday-School Topics for the year, per hundred	3.00

AND ALL OTHER CHURCH SUPPLIES

Christian Publishing Co., 1522 Locust St. St. Louis, Mo.

'boom,' and we hope for bright results in the future. This is owing to the enthusiasm, work and prayers of Brother and Sister Rudy." May God bless this dear pastor and his wife. But we feel sure they would testify to the devotion and help of the members. It is only by united efforts that the Lord's work will move to his glory.

The St. Louis district held its regular quarterly meeting at the beautiful new Compton Heights Church on Dec. 29. The reports were good, the addresses inspiring, the spirit like unto that of the Leader. The principal addresses were by Mr. J. L. Brandt for the American Missionary Society, and Rev. J. H. Garrison for the Foreign Society.

The newly elected officers, Mrs. G. A. Handley and Mrs. P. L. Button, presided. We are proud of our choice and expect splendid results at the close of the year from their leadership. Mrs. W. D. Harrison was elected district historian, Mrs. Handley our representative to the Social Union.

St. Louis.

MRS. L. G. BANTZ.

Rededication at Scranton, Pa.

The Christian Church, (D. Station) Scranton, Pa., has been remodeled; the work was begun last October, and was rededicated in the presence of a full house, by A. M. Growden, Dec. 27, 1903.

A new main entrance has been built, the floor has been elevated, new furnace supplied, new oak pews, and Mr. Geissler, of New York, made the windows, one of which is a memorial. A complete renovation has been effected; the fresco designs are beautiful, the baptistery is now in the auditorium, the kindergarten room has been also renovated, the pulpit arch is finished in quartered oak; in the recess an artist has painted a large Bible under this motto: "No Creed but Christ." The building is a landmark, and will continue to be a blessing to the community. A. M. GROWDEN.

TO THE EDITOR OF CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, St. Louis, Mo. Dear Sir:—During the year 1903, the United States has forged steadily forward in material development at home and abroad, and this period has been marked by a continuance of the general and unprecedented financial and commercial growth of our people.

The Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern has kept pace with the times and improved its roadbed, motive power and equipment to meet the demands of its increased traffic, both passenger and freight.

Anticipating the World's Fair business, large orders have been placed, for the latest type of locomotives, coaches, parlor cars, dining cars and Pullman Sleepers to meet all possible requirements.

We wish to thank our friends of the press for the very liberal and friendly spirit with which we have been treated during the year now drawing to a close, and which we trust will be continued. In return we shall endeavor to maintain that policy of reciprocity, which has characterized our treatment of the newspapers in the past.

With the season's greetings,

Very truly yours,

O. P. McCARTY,

General Passenger Agent.

Cincinnati, O., Dec. 28, 1903.

Dedication of North Christian Church.

On the second Lord's day of December, 1900, the first Sunday-school assembled, known as the North Mission. This work continued until February, 1901, when Bro. L. L. Carpenter came to us and organized us into a new congregation with forty members.

In April, 1903, Bro. J. M. Cross, of Nineveh, Ind., began a protracted meeting of three weeks, which resulted in 68 accessions, 34 by confession. As a result of this meeting the brethren began the erection of a new house of worship, which was dedicated by Brother Cross on Dec. 13, 1903. Pledges were taken on dedication day, enough to clear the debt on the new house with a small amount over. In connection with Brother Cross' dedicatory visit there were 20 accessions to our membership.

Brother Cross is a strong man in the presentation of the gospel and winning souls to Christ. Also as a money raiser he is master of the audience. To any church wanting an evangelist to work up an interest and bring souls to Christ, or to raise a building fund or dedicate a house of worship, we recommend to you Brother Cross, for to a great degree our condition to-day is the result of his untiring energy.

Terre Haute, Ind.

ALEX MARTIN.

Have You Read A Christian or a Church- Member—Which?

By JNO. G. M. LUTTENBERGER, D. O.

*The Book
which should be in every home.*

Don't fail to get a copy at once.
Price, 50 Cents, Postpaid.

Address Author, 5104 Morgan St., or
Christian Publishing Co., St. Louis, Mo.

A Combination Offer.

1.—SUCCESS, the great monthly magazine of New York, known everywhere and esteemed for its superior excellence. Price per year, $1.00.

2.—OUR YOUNG FOLKS, which needs no commendation from those who will read this. A sixteen-page weekly. Price per year, 75 cents.

3.—JUNIOR ENDEAVOR WORLD, the best paper of its class in the wide world. A sixteen-page monthly. Price per year, 35 cents.

Regular price for the three, one year, $2.10.
All Three will be sent for $1.50.

Address, CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING CO.,
St. Louis, Mo.

The Situation in California.

After the raging of the conflict, the coming of peace and rest and tranquillity like a benediction from a sacred source, to heal the wounds made by the blows of strenuous controversy, is alike most welcome and wholesome. Or it may be like the refreshing calm, after a sanguinary conflict at sea; the enemy has skulked away in dishonorable defeat, and the breezes blow to waft the good ship henceforth on errands of peaceful exploits that shall tend upward and onward.

Such, I believe, is the present status of our educational and ecclesiastical affairs on the California coast. When the great convention of the churches of central and northern California received the reports of the Berkeley Bible Seminary during the two weeks proceedings last July, there was not a dissenting voice raised from any source, but with thrilling enthusiasm, the delegates from the churches expressed in no uncertain terms, their confidence in the trustees and in the dean and the financial secretary. The disposition which the state convention made of the whole business, brought rest and joy to the hearts of our whole people, like the instant bursting forth of glorious sunshine after a long siege of fog or stormy weather. That very day the hearts of our people took on new courage, and the outlook became bright with promise. Elbow touched elbow; heart spoke to heart, and the confederated churches stood up shoulder to shoulder, and are to-day a unit in all these great matters.

The winter of our discontent has utterly and happily passed away and the seminary has come forth with renewed vigor.

Berkeley, as the seat of our Bible seminary, has come to be our Mecca or rather our Jerusalem. It necessarily becomes the center of our state interests. Its dean, Dr. Hiram Van Kirk, is by the same law, our representative in educational matters.

It is indeed fortunate for the brotherhood in California, that they have so thoroughly equipped a scholar and instructor to represent them—a Christian gentleman and an able preacher, qualified to take rank and acquit himself with the dignitaries and scholars of the State University as well as the preachers of the various churches in that university town.

Our brotherhood stands by the dean. As additional emphasis to the enthusiastic endorsement accorded him and his fellows of the seminary by the State Convention at Santa Cruz last July, it is quite pertinent to mention that he was elected by a large vote, to represent the California brethren in the National Convention at Detroit.

Only a few days ago I visited Berkeley, the seat of the University of California and the seat of our own Bible Seminary. I soon learned that Berkeley had taken care to make a patriotic use of Thanksgiving day—that in the presence of a large audience with President Wheeler and many members of the University faculty and the preachers of the city about him on the generous platform, Dr. Hiram Van Kirk delivered the formal Thanksgiving address, and that no interest worthy to be mentioned on such an occasion was inadequately represented.

All things considered, the event was extraordinary and memorable, and surely testifies of the high standing of our representative in the highest ranks of Berkeley society.

Dean Van Kirk is now a member of the university faculty; has his times and classes in the university buildings, and discharges his professional duties and obligations as other professors. He has a class of 51 students in Jewish history, which is made up of Juniors and Seniors, and will be continued in early Christian history next term.

He has another university class in early Hebrew history, and in this there are 105 students. This class is open to all students, but is made up mainly of freshmen and sophomores. Besides these there have been many visitors who attend regularly, but are not enrolled.

For some time I know the way has been opened by the dean, for the same service to be rendered by him or his assistant-to-be in Stanford University about thirty miles south of Berkeley at Palo Alto. The time is ripe for this enlargement. Are we ready for it? Where is the man and who will help to sustain him as he does that work?

The situation in California is most hopeful. The forces now at work are aggressive in working up to the measure of their resources, and they are united in every department of the Lord's work. I would not be astonished if their hopefulness and courage would inspire them to invite the general conventions to come to San Francisco in 1905.

THOMAS D. BUTLER.

Ministerial Exchange.

G. A. E. Troutman, 2627 E. 11th St., Kansas City, Mo., is open for engagements to hold meetings.

John Joyce, 790 W. Town St., Columbus, Ohio, is open for engagements as a singing evangelist.

N. Rollo Davis, St. Joseph, Mo., wishes to secure an appointment for two Sundays in each month with churches within reach of St. Joseph.

Edward Amherst Ott, pastor Monroe St., Church of Christ, Chicago, writes: "I am looking for a pastoral helper—but want somebody of maturity and experience in church work, regardless of whether a graduate of a Pastoral Helpers' School or not. A woman of education and practical church experience is required."

S. R. Hawkins, is open to hold meetings anywhere during 1904.

G. A. Hess, Nora Springs, Iowa, reports that he can supply a fine soprano soloist either for meetings or for permanent work.

The Christian Church at Hermon, Knox county, Ill., desires correspondence with preachers less than 45 years of age, with experience. Salary $400 for half time. Other good churches near. Mrs. C. H. Shipplett, church clerk.

The church at Tarkio, Mo., wants a pastor at once. Salary from $800 to $900. Address H. W. Hurst.

The church at Kahoka, Mo., wants a minister to locate at once. Address Jas. C. Stauffer.

B. F. Cato, Thorntown, Ind., is open for a call as pastor. Applicants for pulpit at Thorntown, Ind., address Tony Horner, clerk.

J. H. Painter, 10 Madison St., Memphis, Tenn., would like to engage to preach for churches in Tennessee and Mississippi within reach of Memphis.

Chas. E. McVay, singing evangelist, is open for engagements after March 1. Permanent address, Cotner University, Lincoln, Neb.

James Vernon will close his pastorate at Nicholasville, Ky., on March 31, and begins work April 3, at Winchester, Ind. Applicants for pulpit at Nicholasville, address W. S. Hendren, clerk of official board.

Helps to Faith.

DEAR BROTHER GARRISON:—I have read your book on "Helps to Faith" with great pleasure and profit. This is one of the best pieces of work you have ever done. It is fresh, strong, illuminating. While not professedly a work on Apologetics, it puts the argument for Christianity in splendid fashion. It does not claim specifically to be a treatise on the plan of salvation, and yet its treatment of that phase of the theme is convincing, satisfactory and up to date. Your presentation of the ideals of Christianity would be hard to beat. Your statement of essential Christianity as the essential proof and argument for Christianity is the most timely that has appeared in our literature, and is eminently well adapted for circulation among all classes of the reading public at the present time. I hope the book will have the vogue it so richly deserves. J. J. HALEY.

Cynthiana, Ky.

"Helps to Faith" is neatly bound in cloth, contains 245 pages, on good book paper, and sells for $1.00, postpaid. Address Christian Publishing Company, St. Louis, Mo.

Jehovah's War Against False Gods AND OTHER ADDRESSES

By J. M. ATWATER

A Splendid Cloth-bound Volume
of 370 Pages

Compiled and edited by
ANNA ROBISON ATWATER

Price, $1.50, Postpaid

Christian Publishing Company
ST. LOUIS, MO.

THE QUESTION IS

HOW TO UNDERSTAND AND USE THE BIBLE.

And is answered in neat book form in a volume of 116 pages by J. H. Bryan.

Price: 50 cents. Postpaid.

Christian Publishing Co.
1522 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo.

WRITE CATALOG
WORLD'S GREATEST BELL FOUNDRY
CHURCH, PEAL and CHIME BELLS
Best Copper and Tin Only.
THE E. W. VANDUZEE COMPANY
Burgess Bell Foundry, Cincinnati, O.

BLMYER CHURCH BELLS
UNLIKE OTHER BELLS
SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE.
WRITE CATALOG
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

FOR SCHOOLS AND CHURCHES BUY
American Bells
Sweet Toned, Far Sounding, Durable.
AMERICAN BELL & FOUNDRY CO.
FREE CATALOG NORTHVILLE, MICH.
41 Cady Street.

$3 a Day Sure
Send us your address and we will show you how to make $3 a day absolutely sure; we furnish the work and teach you free, you work in the locality where you live. Send us your address and we will explain the business fully, remember we guarantee a clear profit of $3 for every day's work, absolutely sure. Write at once.
ROYAL MANUFACTURING CO., Box 125, Detroit, Mich.

SUBSCRIBERS' WANTS.

WANTED.—To hear from brethren wishing to get or dispose of M. Hartingers. I want 1883 and 1884. Address J. F. Callahan, Noble, Ohio.

EARN STENOGRAPHY—Send 50 cents to the Oliver Typewriter Company, 415 North 9th Street, Century Building, St. Louis, Mo., for self-instructor in shorthand and typewriting.

Dedication of the Church at Valley Junction, Iowa.

On the Wednesday before Sunday, Dec. 20, which was to be dedication day at the Christian Church at Valley Junction, Iowa, (a suburb of Des Moines) the writer was telegraphed to assist the church in raising its indebtedness to the amount of $2,400, in order that the church might dedicate its splendid new building and secure the loan of $2,000 from the Annuity Fund of the Board of Church Extension. The writer had no knowledge of what he was getting into, but as the telegram said, "We are in great trouble and it is very important that you come," I concluded to go.

Arriving on Saturday morning, it was at once necessary to get acquainted with the situation. The most hopeful people in the church, outside of the pastor, felt that no more than $1,000 could be secured from Valley Junction. Bro. F. M. Rains was to have dedicated the church on Nov. 22, but on account of the sudden death of Lila, the little daughter of the pastor, Bro. L. F. McCray, the dedication was postponed. Brother Rains could not be secured at this date. This little girl was universally beloved by the community, and as the only child was a great loss to Brother and Sister McCray. Lila was fourteen years old, and was a great favorite among the railroad people of Valley Junction, who make up the principal part of the population. On the morning of dedication, one of the first pledges that was made was $100 in gold from Brother and Sister McCray in memory of their daughter Lila. This was given from a salary of only $500 a year, and greatly stirred the assembled congregation. Several hundred dollars were at once given, and the 50's, 20's, 10's and 5's quickly followed. The largest pledge was from the ladies' aid society, which was $500.

There are three Protestant churches in Valley Junction: the Congregational, Methodist and Christian Churches. This formal opening of the Christian church was made the occasion for the finest demonstration of Christian unity, in one sense, that it has ever been my pleasure to know of. The Congregational and Methodist Churches have $4,000 frame buildings. The Christian Church building is of brick and cost over $10,000, it being the largest and finest building in Valley Junction. The Congregational and Methodist Churches both dismissed their Sunday-school and their church services for the day and helped to fill the spacious auditorium, gallery and Sunday-school room of the Christian Church at all three of the services. The Methodist and Congregational pastors, together with our own pastor, went through the audience as solicitors. The three choirs furnished the music and pledged $100. The ladies of the three churches pledged $200, the money to be made by giving teas at the different churches. When Dr. Burt said he would give $100 if another $100 could be secured, the three pastors pledged their congregations for that amount.

The greatest credit of this work is due Brother McCray and his wife who, for nearly three years of unmitigated toil have, through strenuous efforts, put up this church building. They have worked night and day and have known no discouragements. When the leading people of the community said to Brother McCray, "You are building too large a house and can never pay for it," Brother McCray would smile benevolently and proceed. He felt like Governor Roosevelt did when he was in the executive chair at Albany. He stated at one time, when the people were discouraging him from doing a certain righteous thing, that "A man must sometimes stand alone upon a mountain peak." Brother McCray seemed to be on an elevation where no one could reach him with discouraging words. In brief, it is worth while to have lived and wrought for three years in a community in order to have done the work that Brother McCray and his wife have done, which has so increased the faith of the people of the community in attempting great things for God. Two thousand four hundred dollars was needed to pay the outstanding indebtedness, except what the $2,000 borrowed from the Church Extension Fund will pay. The total result of the three services was $2,765.48.

I am not in the habit of dedicating churches, and refuse all such calls. This was a special case and I was used because, after telegraphing to a number of experts, no one could be secured. H. O. Breeden, pastor of the Central Church, Des Moines, and T. J. Dow, of the East Side Church, helped us in the afternoon services. Bro. W. W. Williams and Prof. Quissenberry were also with us. We gratefully acknowledge their services.

G. W. MUCKLEY.

Any church wishing to secure a bright young man as pastor will do well to write Bro. W. S. Cash, Tarkio, Mo., who leaves us Jan. 1. He is a graduate from the Bible College and an A. M. of Kentucky University, Lexington. In him you will find an earnest, thoughtful and consecrated young minister, active and progressive in all departments of church work. His purity of life is a spiritual uplift in any community. We learned to esteem him very highly and heartily recommend him.

A. J. BICKEL, Elder.
W. N. TEMPLETON,
J. M. HURST,
H. W. HURST, Deacons.

Important to Bible Students.

THE CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING COMPANY, St. Louis, Mo.—You have not asked me to do so, but I propose to say a word for "the Christian Lesson Commentary for 1904." First of all I thank you for a copy which came to me a day or two ago.

The first thing that arrested my attention, and pleased me, when I opened the book was "The Temple in the Time of Christ." Well done.

The arrangement of "The Life of Christ," is invaluable in a study of the lessons from January to July, 1904. The average teacher will receive great help from this arrangement of the facts in the life of our Lord. Without this, or some similar service, they will not conceive of the life of Christ as a whole, and without some such conception, the study of the separate lessons will be comparatively valueless.

The "Daily Readings" are also worthy of commendation. They can be used profitably in the family devotions. Used thus, with brief, pertinent remarks, the children will unconsciously, and without effort, on their part, go to the Bible-school on the Lord's day with a pretty good general knowledge of the lesson. There is also a relief map, showing a section of Palestine from north to south that I have not seen in any other book. B. B. TYLER.

158 S. Penn. Ave., Denver, Col., Dec. 26, 1903.

A copy of the Christian Lesson Commentary will be mailed promptly upon receipt of $1. Christian Pub. Co., St. Louis, Mo.

The Best Book Ever Written

on the subject, is

The Verdict of Thousands
who have read

Moral and Spiritual Aspects of Baptism

By N. J. AVILSWORTH
Cloth, 471 pages, $1.50

Christian Publishing Company
1522 Locust Street St. Louis, Mo.

A New Weekly for Girls and Boys.

EDITORS { W. W. DOWLING,
METTA A. DOWLING.

This New Paper is issued weekly, and consists of eight pages of three columns each, printed on fine book paper, in the best style of the art, and will not suffer in comparison with any similar paper in the land.

Its Contents.—THE ROUND TABLE is quite distinctly a "Story Paper;" five of its eight pages will usually be occupied with Serial and Shorter Stories, always pure in tone and instructive in character, with fine illustrations. The remaining pages will be filled with Table Talks on a great variety of themes; Odds and Ends of useful information; Outlines of the Sunday-school Lessons and Endeavor Topics; A Puzzle Drawer full of Riddles, Charades and Problems, to exercise the wits of young readers, and in each issue a sufficient amount of Pepper and Spice to keep its readers awake and smooth out any wrinkles that may have a tendency to gather in their faces.

Subscription Price.—One copy, one year, 50 cents; in clubs of five to one address, 40 cents each; in clubs of ten or more to one address, 36 cents each. Quarterly subscriptions at proportional rates.

Address Christian Publishing Company,
1522 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo.

THE LITTLE ONES

The Leading Paper for the Little People

W. W. DOWLING, Editor  Colored Pictures in Every Number

THE LITTLE ONES is a little WEEKLY for the Primary Department of the Sunday-school and the Little Ones at Home, and the immense circulation it has obtained is an evidence that it meets the want.

THE CONTENTS

1. The Stories and Talks.—Each number contains charming little Stories and Talks, in short words, easy to understand, all teaching useful and interesting lessons.

2. Rhymes and Jingles.—Merry Rhymes and Musical Jingles abound on its pages, which are sure to please the little folks, and fill their minds with facts and truths which they will remember.

3. Bible Lesson.—The Bible Lessons for each week is presented in the form of a short story, followed by questions and answers, and often accompanied by special illustrations.

4. Fine Pictures.—From two to five pictures appear in each number, the first always printed in colors, which delight both old and young. The pictures are made expressly for this paper.

Form and Price. THE LITTLE ONES is a Four-Page paper issued Weekly, and sent to Subscribers postpaid in clubs of not less than five copies to one address, at 25 cents a copy per year. In clubs of less than five, the price is 50 cents copy, and all the numbers for the month are sent at the beginning.

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING CO., - St. Louis, Mo.

Evangelistic

We invite ministers and others to send reports of meetings, additions and other news of the churches for publication in this department. It is especially requested that additions be reported as "by confession and baptism" or "by letter."

Additions Reported Last Week.

Baptisms.....2,207
Letters and statements.....605
Denominations.....132

Total.....2,944

M. L. BUCKLEY.

Harrison, O., Dec. 31, 1903.

COLORADO.—Rocky Ford, Dec. 28.—The First Christian Church, Rocky Ford, has just closed a very successful meeting of four weeks' duration with 59 forward: 42 by confession and 17 by letter or statement. W. L. Cline, of Manzanola, did the preaching week day nights, and the pastor on Lord's days. Brother Cline is an earnest, enthusiastic presenter of the truth. He uses charts most of the time in the meetings, and their help was very good. The church is now a little over two years old and has 200 members. It erected a modern house of worship this year, at the opening services of which, the entire amount lacking in payment for building and furnishings was pledged payable in one year. The opening sermons were preached by Wm. Bayard Craig, of Denver, and were highly appreciated. We enter the new year with splendid prospects.—M. MILLARD NELSON, pastor.

ILLINOIS.—Camp Point, Jan. 1.—Our meeting at Maryville, Mo., closed last night with 65 accessions, 42 by primary obedience and the remainder by letter, restoration and from the sects. Bro. W. A. Fite, one of our growing young preachers is pastor of this great church. This was my second meeting with them.—R. A. OMER AND SPRAGUE.

Alvin, Dec. 30.—Just closed a three weeks' meeting last Sunday evening with 18 additions: eight baptisms, five by statement, and five from the denominations. Sunday evening was made memorable by the coming of the banker and his wife, she by statement, he by confession, desiring to be baptized "the same hour of the night," which was gladly attended and witnessed by a large crowd of people.—More expected soon at regular services.—C. F. GAUMER.

Barry, Dec. 26.—We have just closed a four weeks' meeting, 20 added, J. H. Hughes, of California, evangelist. Most of the new converts came from our Sunday-school and Christian Endeavor societies, where they have been preparing to make good soldiers of our Lord and Master under the leadership of our pastor, E. B. Richey, a young man of more than average ability as preacher, pastor and manager. His able ministry is in every way acceptable to the church, and his increasing influence has won many friends for Christ. The closing year finds us with much for which to thank God and take courage. Our Lord's day services have large and attentive audiences, well filled and growing Sunday-school; the mid week prayer-meetings are a source of spiritual uplift, well attended and always interesting. Our Christian Endeavor is constantly growing. The C. W. B. M. are finding new meaning in the "go or send" and working with a zeal never before manifested. Our cause for regret comes from the fact that we soon lose our young pastor and wife. Brother Richey goes to his new field of labor at Blandonsville, Mar. 1. May God's richest blessings attend them is the wish of the brethren as well as a host of friends made during their stay among us.—E. L. GADDIS.

Carmi, Jan. 3.—One added last Lord's day. Work here going on to triumph. Will begin the erection of a $10,000 church April 1. Schemes to raise money would be appreciated from the brethren.—FRANK B. THOMAS, pastor.

INDIANA.—Gas City.—One added to church from Baptists, Sunday, Dec. 27.—S. D. WATTS. Kewanna, Dec. 28.—Three accessions yesterday; one by letter, one from the Presbyterians by baptism, one confession, yet to be baptized.

Jan. 1.—Three accessions last eve at prayer service; one restored, two confessions, making six this week at regular services. Our meeting begins next Lord's day, and our prospects seem good for a large ingathering.—I. G. SHAW.

Mishawaka, Dec. 31.—I closed my work at Webb City, Mo., last Sunday, having been their pastor three years. The work was one of the most pleasant of my life, and resulted in the advancement of the church's interest in every way. The church is out of debt, and has the most comfortable house in the city. During the last six weeks of work there, there were 52 additions to the church, mostly by conversion. Begin work at Mishawaka, January, 1904. I was formerly pastor here for four and a half years.—E. M. BARNEY.

Rushville, Dec. 30.—In the last three months we have had 22 additions in regular services, of which nine have been by obedience. We shall have a short series of meetings with home forces early in the year. All departments of the work are flourishing. We are installing an individual communion service.—WILLIAM W. SNIFF.

IOWA.—Nora Springs, Dec. 28.—Just closed a short meeting eleven miles out in the country. Splendid interest, prospects good for aggressive work in the future. One reinstated yesterday here at Springs.—G. A. HESS.

Liscomb, Dec. 28.—Three added here recently, two by primary obedience and one restored.—W. M. HOLLETT.

Webster City, Dec. 28.—Five added here by letter the past month. We begin a series of meetings next Lord's day. J. P. Garmong, of Denver, Col., will conduct the music.—J. W. WALTERS, minister.

Adel, Dec. 29.—We are glad to report a little progress here. We have had 25 accessions since Jan. 1. We will hold a short meeting beginning next Lord's day. The congregation is active and we are expecting a goodly ingathering.—H. JAS. CROCKETT.

Newton, Dec. 28.—Protracted meeting in which J. P. Garmong led the singing and the writer did the preaching, closed Dec. 20. There were 46 added as follows: Two restored, two by letter, eight from denominations, and 34 confessions. With best wishes to the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST.—E. F. LEAKE.

KANSAS.—Kansas City.—A series of gospel meetings has recently closed at the North Side Church in this city. For three weeks the pastor was ably assisted by Evangelists Omer and Kerr, whose splendid efforts resulted in an accession of 51 members. The four services following, which were conducted by the pastor, added 14 more, making a total of 65, with a dozen yet committed by promise. By primary obedience there were 40, by letter eight, by statement 10, the remaining seven being from the denominations. The total accession represents 40 different families, 32 of which have not hitherto been represented in our membership. The work of both evangelists was thoroughly executed, and they left a wholesome and lasting impression upon the community. A pathetic incident of the meeting was the death of Brother Omer's mother, which called him home a week earlier than we were ready to release him. During the pastor's twenty months, there has been a net increase of 140 members. During this time we have raised for all purposes a little more than $3,000. A valuable corner has been purchased in the heart of our field, and with God's blessing we shall begin our new edifice

RHEUMATISM Cured Through the Feet

External remedy so successful that the makers send it FREE ON APPROVAL to anybody.

TRY IT.

If 100,000 men and women, suffering with every kind of rheumatism, acute or chronic, have been cured by a harmless draft on the foot, isn't it worth a trial?

Send your name to the Magic Foot Draft Co. They have so much confidence in the merit of the drafts that they send them to every sufferer in the world they can hear of—without a cent in advance. You pay One Dollar when satisfied with the benefit you receive—otherwise you pay nothing—you decide.

The Drafts are worn on the soles of the feet because the entire circulatory and nervous systems are most easily reached through the extremely sensitive skin at this point; but they cure rheumatism in every part of the body, to stay cured, by drawing the acid poisons out of the blood through the foot pores. Write today to the Magic Foot Draft Co., S. I. 9 Oliver Bldg., Jackson, Mich., for a pair of Drafts on free approval and valuable free booklet on rheumatism.

next spring. Our various departments are well organized, harmonious and progressive, and the future of the church is radiant with promise.—C. P. SMITH, pastor.

Lawrence, Dec. 31.—Just closed a three weeks' meeting in North Lawrence on Dec. 21 with 10 accessions, eight by confession and baptism, and two by statement. My brother, C. C. Bentley, of Olathe, did the preaching, and did it well. The church is much encouraged.—F. H. BENTLEY.

Winfield, Dec. 28.—Our local church was greatly encouraged yesterday by two excellent additions by letter. I feel sure I have never seen a work more full of spiritual and material possibilities than this. The church is ready to work, and 1904 will find us well in line for a great religious campaign.—ALBERT NICHOLS.

MICHIGAN.—Saginaw, Dec. 28.—Two added here yesterday; one confession of a man of about 45 years of age and father of a family. Hold a meeting beginning Jan. 20; will be assisted by Howard S. Saxton and wife as singing evangelists.—I. S. RAUM.

Belding, Dec. 26.—Our work here moves along slowly but surely. Eleven added recently. Our new church will be dedicated in February. It will be the most commodious house in the city and is suitable for all church purposes.—W. H. KINDRED.

MISSOURI.—Hamilton Avenue, St. Louis, Jan. 1.—Two additions to-day by statement. The new year is opening very auspiciously for us. With God's blessing we expect to do much for the Master in 1904.—F. J. NICHOLS.

Kirkville, Dec. 31.—We had eight additions here last Sunday.—H. A. NORTHCUTT.

Kidder, Dec. 28.—We have just closed a short meeting at Bridgeport with five additions. The meeting gave the church such a revival that they are now ready to employ a preacher. We are now in a meeting at Mt. Olive. Good attendance and good interest. Preachers desiring a location in northern Missouri should write us at once, as we want to locate three or four preachers in the next 30 days.—C. E. HUNT AND WIFE, evangelists.

Grant City, Dec. 28.—Two added yesterday; 124 additions, 20 weddings, 16 funerals since Jan. 1, 1903. Present membership 325. Revival begins Jan. 3, 1904. I continue with the church for the coming year. We received a handsome silver water set from the church on Christmas eve.—J. A. MCKENZIE.

Butler, Dec. 27.—Five added at the evening service, one from the Congregationalists. Bro.

FROM LAST TO FIRST

People used to take plain cod liver oil for coughs, colds, throat and lung troubles after other remedies had failed.

Scott's Emulsion is the modern idea of cod liver oil—the first instead of the last resort when such ailments appear.

The taste of the oil is not apparent and the oil itself is partly digested—makes it easy for the stomach. Scott's Emulsion is a quick, reliable help at all ages.

We'll send you a sample free upon request.

SCOTT & BOWNE, 409 Pearl Street, New York

Oreal Elder goes from here to Canton, Mo., this week to study for the ministry in Christian University.—E. H. WILLIAMSON.

Richland, Jan. 1.—We closed out the old year in our regular work with a red letter day Sunday. We had two confessions at our afternoon appointment at Swedeborg. One confession, four by letter, and one from the United Brethren at Richland at night, and we went back to Swedeborg on Monday to baptize those candidates, and took four more confessions that night. There had been three by letter at that place at a previous appointment. F. M. Hooton, of Marshfield, begins a meeting with me at Richland next week; all promises well.—J. R. BLUNT.

Dearborn, Dec. 29.—Closed a three weeks' meeting here with H. W. Newby, of Guthrie, Okla. Thirty-one additions. One by letter at Bethel, Mo., Dec. 13. Delivered four sermons at Hickory Grove, Mo., with two confessions, one reclaimed.—R. E. CALLITHAN.

Hinton, Dec. 27.—I have just closed my fourth year with Old Perche Church, this county, and called for the fifth year. During these four years the church membership has increased more than one hundred per cent, and contributions for all church purposes have been increased five hundred per cent. In addition to this, the brethren have painted and refurnished their church house. I have been called for one-fourth time at New Hope, Howard county, and one-fourth time at Freedom, also in Howard county.—B. F. GOSLIN, R. F. D. No. 6, Columbia, Mo.

Windsor, Dec. 28.—We closed a three years' pastorate here yesterday. During the time we had 139 additions; 100 baptisms, 39 otherwise. All but nine without outside assistance. I married 29 couples and I preached 20 funerals. At the conclusion of my farewell sermon, the superintendent of our public school made the good confession. We received $2,676.18 for all purposes this year; $261.13 for missions and benevolence.—W. F. HAMANN.

Kansas City, Dec. 26.—Bro. Edgar Davis helped us in a meeting at Sibley. There were 32 confessions and seven restored. The work at Sibley is much strengthened.—W. H. EMBRY.

Sheridan, Dec. 25.—J. A. McKenzie, of Grant City, recently conducted a good meeting here with 19 additions, 14 by primary obedience. Brother McKenzie is one of our ablest and most successful ministers. J. H. Sweetman and wife were in the meeting, part of the time conducting the music. Cause much benefited by this meeting.—C. F. W.

Kansas City, Dec. 31.—We are closing the year here at the West Side Church very successfully. We had a general church rally the last Sunday of the year. The church mortgage was burned and all current and back indebtedness was provided for. The church is in better financial condition than ever before, for which we thank God and take courage. I have been pastor here five months. Have made 300 calls; have had 17 additions, five weddings, three funerals; all regular appointments filled. We are entering the new year with bright prospects.—CLINTON ABER, pastor.

Calhoun, Dec. 29.—Following is a report of my work for the year 1903. I located at Calhoun, Mo., in February and gave one-fourth time each to Calhoun, Haydens' Grove, Cloverdale and Eldorado churches. The report is for eleven months: Sermons, 171; additions, 47; funerals, eight; weddings, four. Money raised for all purposes $969. My plans for the year beginning Jan. 1, 1904, are as follows: Eldorado Church, first Lord's day; Haydens' Grove, second Lord's day; Calhoun, third and fourth Lord's day in each month Haydens' Grove are planning to remodel their house of worship right away. Our motto for 1904 is more and better work with these churches than ever before. We ask the prayers of the brotherhood and the direction and help of our Heavenly Father in all our work for this cause.—W. H. SCOTT, minister.

Dr. Coffee Cures all Eye Diseases at Home 80-page eye book Free

Dr. Coffee wants to send his famous 80-page illustrated book on "Eye Diseases" Free to every reader of this paper who is afflicted with Cataracts, Glaucoma, Granulated Lids, Sore Eyes, Ulcers, Scars, Spots on Eye, Weak Eyes, Failing Vision or any kind of eye trouble. This book tells how you can cure yourself and restore your sight perfectly, at your home. Very small expense. Big free book tells how to prevent blindness, gives rules of health, physical culture exercises, etc.

Dr. Coffee restored sight to Miss Lulu Tait, Emmetsburg, Iowa, after six surgical operations left her blind. He cured M. B. Powles, Jackson, Mich., after three surgical operations made one eye blind. Thousands of remarkable cures of all kinds of eye diseases. Dr. Coffee's professional opinion free to all who tell about their case. Write today—don't wait to go blind. Address, DR. W. O. COFFEE, 950 Good Block, Des Moines, Ia.

Sedalia, Jan. 1.—Last year I preached 178 sermons, resulting in 103 additions. With the new year we begin our tenth year of pastoral work with Christian union. We leave Jan. 9 to hold a meeting at Anadarko, Okla.—J. I. ORRISON.

Eldorado Springs, Jan. 1.—We have just closed a four weeks' meeting here. Bro. J. J. Lockhart, of Nevada, Mo., did the preaching. He is a strong man and sound gospel preacher. He made a fine impression on the public. There were 85 additions: 53 by letter and statement, and 32 by confession and baptism. I have preached here half the time for two years. Begin the third year to-day for full time.—W. W. BLALOCK.

Weaubleau, Dec. 28.—Report of year's work for half time for Weaubleau church, ending Dec. 27, 1903: Sermons preached, 84; funeral sermons, three; additions by baptism, 17; additions by letter and statement, five; total additions, 25.

Money raised for foreign missions.....	$6 00
" " " state missions.....	8 50
" " " state Bible-school missions.....	1 10
Money raised for pastor's salary.....	250 00

Total money raised.....$265 60

Incidentals not included, and no money raised for protracted meeting. Held my own meeting. Eighteen of these members came in during protracted meeting; 26 sermons preached during meeting. Will preach for them next year.—S. E. HENDRICKSON.

NEBRASKA.—Broken Bow, Dec. 26.—Two additions at this place last Lord's day, and the work was never in better shape than now.—JESSE R. TEAGARDEN.

NEW YORK.—Buffalo, Dec. 30.—One more added to our numbers by letter. Our Cantata was a decided success. Many gifts made by Sunday-school to Havens Home at East Aurora, N. Y.—B. S. FERRALL.

OHIO.—Bethel, Dec. 24.—One of the most successful meetings in the history of the Bethel Christian Church was closed Dec. 10, with 53 additions. J. M. Helm, of New Richmond, O., did the preaching. His sermons were full of Christ and New Testament Christianity. The house was crowded each evening, and many heard who have never heard our people before, and have almost decided to cast their lot with Christ's people, and we will for months to come reap from this faithful sowing. It was here that Bro. Henry Lockwood preached for forty years, and since his death, Bro. J. W. B. Smith has been supplying the pulpit. Bro. R. H. Dodson, of Georgetown, O., has been unanimously called to be their next minister, and will begin work with them Jan. 1.—M.

OKLAHOMA TERRITORY.—Oklahoma City, Dec. 30.—Eight additions last Sunday, twenty during the month of December.—S. D. DUTCHER.

Geary, Dec. 31.—We did not report in November; we built two churches, had one baptism at Woodworth on Dec. 2; commenced a meeting at Whitehead on the Santa Fe R. R. P. O. Oleta. Left there Dec. 23. During the time planted a church of 15 members, 11 by statement, one from the Baptist, one from the Presbyterian, one from the M. E., and started a church building, which was enclosed, and they were putting the roof on when we left. We want a good up-to-date preacher for Oleta who is consecrated and filled with the missionary spirit, and will help take the surrounding country for Christ. Address me at Geary. We are at Buffalo Flats 34 miles west of Whitehead, holding a meeting. Planted a church here Dec. 27, 1903, with 10 by statement. Large attendance, great interest.—R. S. SMEDLEY.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pittsburg, Dec. 12.—Closed a three weeks' meeting with the church here last night. Bro. F. M. Gordon, pastor. A good meeting; twenty added, twelve by baptism. Johnstown Jan. 3.—F. A. BRIGHT, evangelist.

WASHINGTON.—Dayton, Dec. 26.—Since dedicating our new house of worship here we have continued the meeting, which has now been running 27 days. Up to date we have had 81 accessions. We hope for many more. This is the greatest meeting ever held in this city.—H. T. MORRISON.

Changes.

S. D. Watts from Gas City, Ind., to Fowler, Ind.
J. D. Williams from Tecumseh, O. T., to Butler, Ky.

PILES

Piles Can Be Cured Quickly and Without Pain by Using Pyramid Pile Cure.

A Trial Package Mailed Free for the Asking.

We want every pile sufferer to try Pyramid Pile Cure at our expense.

The treatment which we send will bring immediate relief from the awful torture of itching, bleeding, burning, tantalizing piles. If they are followed up as directed we guarantee an entire cure.

The Discoverer of the World's Greatest Remedy for Piles.

We send the free treatment in a plain sealed package with nothing to indicate the contents, and all our envelopes are plain.

Pyramid Pile Cure is put up in the form of suppositories which are applied directly to the affected part. Their action is immediate and certain. They are sold at 50 cents the box by druggists everywhere and one box will frequently effect a permanent cure.

By the use of Pyramid Pile Cure you will avoid an unnecessary, trying and expensive examination by a physician and will rid yourself of your trouble in the privacy of your own home at trifling expense.

After using the free treatment, which we mail in a perfectly plain wrapper, you can secure regular full-size packages from druggists at 50 cents each, or we will mail direct in plain package upon receipt of price. Pyramid Drug Co., 114 Main Street, Marshall, Mich.

J. P. Pinkerton from Kansas City, Mo., to Plattsburg, Mo.
H. B. Wright from Pittsburg, Kan., to Kansas City, Mo.
H. L. Atkinson from Geneva, Ohio, to Oberlin, Ohio.
E. R. Childers from Troy, Mo., to Middlesborough, Ky.
J. Morgan Harris from Des Moines, Iowa, to Rock Rapids, Iowa.
T. T. Holton from DeLand, Ill., to Lincoln, Ill.
Chas. E. Powell from Stanford, Ky., to Valdosta, Ga.
O. E. Palmer from Plymouth, Ind., to Armour, S. Dak.
M. D. Clubb from Midway, Ky., to Watsonville, Calif.
E. O. Tilburne from Tonawanda, N. Y., to Buffalo, N. Y.
F. A. Wright from Andover, Ohio, to Erie, Pa.

ENTERTAINMENTS

CHURCH SCHOOL MAGIC LANTERNS, STEREOPTICONS
for illustrating sermons, giving entertainments, illustrating hymns. Finest collection of slides. Large catalogue FREE. McALLISTER 49 Nassau St. New York.

PISO'S CURE FOR
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.
CONSUMPTION

People's Forum

Alleged Dissensions Among the Disciples.

I have been much interested in the editorial reply to the criticisms of the Interior, alleging growing dissensions among the Disciples, the article from the Interior being published in full in the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST according to the very honorable precedent of the papers of the Disciples.

The reply is certainly excellent and convincing, so far as it goes. I am glad to note the editor's denial that there is any surrender of principle or freedom of action in the matter of federation, about which there has been so much discussion, but I confess that I do not like either of the terms "associate membership" or "fraternal associates," both of which appear as if quoted from the deliverances of the Hyde Park Church. And least of all do I like the statement which the editorial reply seems to leave uncontradicted, that members of said church, on removing to places where there is no church of Disciples, are advised to join other communities. This looks too much like a tendency on the part of somebody toward a betrayal of truths and principles for which martyrs have burned and bled.

Just notice for a moment how Dr. Arthur Penrhyn Stanley, the late learned Dean of Westminster, states the matter of the change from immersion to sprinkling. "It is a larger change," says he, "than that which the Roman Catholic Church has made in administering the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper in the bread without the wine. For whilst that was a change which did not affect the thing signified, the change from immersion to sprinkling has set aside the most of the apostolic expressions regarding baptism, and has altered the very meaning of the word. . . . It shows how the spirit which lives and moves in human society can override even the most sacred ordinances."

I quote these words of the learned Dean in order that the so-called "liberals," if there are really such, may be able to see what they are doing, and consider how far they are willing to go in helping the spirit of human society to override the ordinances of the Lord, the commandments of God. It is true that the pseudo-baptism, introduced on merely human authority, has prevailed so widely that it has wrought a confusion of terms by which hundreds of thousands of people have been deceived, and are still being deceived. But that is no reason why those who know the truth should help on, or in any way connive at the deception. There has been fully enough suppression of Christian truth in the supposed interest of Christian courtesy, and there has been no gain to any real Christian interest thereby. The right and duty of declaring the things which are surely believed among us, should not be compromised, even by tacit understanding, in any union or federation movement.

The only possible concession, in my opinion, which can be made by Baptists or Disciples to Pedit-baptists in the interests of union, is that which, if I remember correctly, was tentatively suggested by Dr. W. T. Moore some years ago. That is, that if immersion should be accepted as imperative for all the future, it might be left to the conscience of each individual aspersianist thus accepting it, to decide whether or not he ought to be immersed on joining an immersionist church. There may be some ground for such a concession, in the fact that baptism stands properly at the beginning of the Christian course, and cannot have precisely the same significance or importance for one already midway in the course.

There are perhaps some indications that some immersionist bodies will reach the parting of the ways in the not distant future; that they will stand more firmly by their convictions and declare them more freely than in the past, or else virtually abandon them and concede that they are of no practical importance. There have been rumors of a quiet movement among eastern Baptists in some sections, to bring the denomination to the position which has so largely nullified the testimony of English Baptists. Some may be carried over by such a movement to find their home eventually in Pedit-baptist churches. There have been some defections from the Baptists in the past, and possibly there may be others in the future. But I think it well that neither in Baptist churches nor in those of the Disciples, will there be any heresy trials. Each individual will be left free to follow the dictates of his own judgment and conscience, of whatever quality these attributes in his case may be. But the defections from immersionist bodies in the past have not been of men like Carson and Judson and the Campbells, and neither will be those who in future may follow them. And I am willing to predict that both Baptists and Disciples will be actually stronger for any such losses which they may sustain. Indeed, I do not consider it at all extravagant to expect that immersionists, instead of being only one-third, as at present, will, within the next fifty years, constitute a large majority of all Protestant Christians in the United States. Magna est veritas et prevalebit. D. G. PORTER.

Waterbury, Conn.

[We are thoroughly in agreement, with our brother on the importance of immersionists standing firmly and uncompromisingly by their principles. There is more disposition, we think, among Baptists of the east than among the Disciples to surrender their historic position as relates to baptism. There is no need for this in order to co-operate with other evangelical Christians along lines of common interest. Those who have convictions and are true to them, are respected far more than those who are ready to compromise what they believe to be truth, in the interest of a false idea of courtesy, or of how to promote unity. The men who are leading the federation movement are large-hearted and liberal-minded men who see clearly enough that there can be no common basis of co-operation that does not give room to each religious body and to each individual Christian worker to bear witness to what they believe to be the truths which they hold in trust for the world. The device called "Fraternal Associate"—the name is unimportant—is designed to avoid what our brother deprecates—the going of our members into other churches, or the coming of other members into our own churches, contrary to their principles, in order to have Christian association and a place to worship. This plan says, grant them the latter, and let them retain their membership where they are, unless their views are changed so as to enable them to enter into the church conscientiously and intelligently, or until they have a church of their choice.—EDITOR.]

Baptists and Disciples of Christ—Why not Unite?

I want to express my appreciation of your editorials and musings; also, that in the tangles and conflicts of opinion here and there among the Disciples, the clearness and kindness of your writings have been well-becoming the subject. I wish more brethren who use the press had better spiritual insight. How can we ever be one in Christ, if we do not come into explanation and understanding of each other's thoughts? Can we help becoming one if we all love truth and love each other, as we love ourselves?

My judgment is, the Baptist people and Disciples ought to commit their thoughts, their plea, unto God in the fulness of faith, that they can be made to understand each other and to come to a oneness in Christ Jesus. Within the last year or two I have heard two or three of them preach. On each occasion the preaching was relatively straightforward gospel preaching, and invitations were given to come forward and confess Christ. "That strange spell, a name," however, as we used to hear the boys declaim, has a traditional power with Baptist brethren that some of us know but little about. If somebody could write an article to show the fitness and

CHURCH FURNITURE

Pews, Pulpits, Etc.

The best that money can buy.

Grand Rapids School Furniture Works

Corner Wabash and Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

oughtness of wearing the name Christian, and put it in such a way as to get general attention, I believe it would do as much as any other one thing to advance the union of the Disciples and Baptist people. Aside from that, and the close communion in some corners of the country, there is hardly any more difference between Baptist people and Disciples than there is between different sections and classes of Baptists or different classes of Disciples. It would simplify Christian work and give greatly increased power if these two bodies could be made one. Is not the time here for an expression of oneness in Christ Jesus, our Lord, by all who love him and are willing to obey him? If we all hear him and believe him with the whole heart, and obey him out of these convictions, and seek to live his life, to remain hid with him in God, what more can any or all of us do? His life fulfills the demands of the human mind for completeness or perfection, his love is unquestioned and full. Our hearts can call for no more. He satisfies both intellect and heart. He is the answer to all that man can want.

There must be some way to come into this understanding. If the brethren of both churches who edit the papers could come together and call with them a few friends who have some discernment of judgment and breadth of understanding, it seems to me a beginning might be made. Let this body of writing men realize their responsibility. It is very great. Let it sink into their hearts and let them give up everything for Jesus Christ, for leading all men into personal fellowship with him. The spirit of God is working in the world. He can bring these men into understanding of each other's sincerity that they may reason together in love.

We rejoice in the high standard and good spirit of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. The Lord give you life and strength for many years and give you wisdom to associate with you those men who love him and love our race. Your brother in Christ,

J. HOPWOOD.

Lynchburg, Va., Dec. 23, 1903.

[If all Baptists and all Disciples of Christ were like-minded with President Hopwood, we could guarantee a speedy union of the two bodies. Let the two peoples cultivate the spirit of unity and seek, as Brother Hopwood says, to understand each other.—EDITOR.]

"The Weakening of Worship."

The number of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST for Dec. 10 is worth the price for the whole year. Especially was Brother Aylsworth's article timely on "The Weakening of Worship." The lack of reverence for sacred things is certainly apparent in many places. It is bad enough when manifested by those who make no profession, but ten times worse when it is seen in his ministers. Enough to cause the tears of Gethsemane to flow anew, and the wounds on Calvary bleed afresh. More excruciatingly painful than the crown of thorns which pressed the Savior's brow, more piercing than the sword which spilled his blood, crucifying the Son of God afresh, and putting him to an open shame before the world. "Tis pitiful to court a grin when you should woo a soul; to break a jest when pity would inspire pathetic exhortation."

Madison, Ind.

J. MURRAY TAYLOR.

WE WANT TO SEND

Free and prepaid, to any reader of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST a small bottle of Vernal Saw Palmetto Berry Wine. Only one dose a day perfectly cures Indigestion, Constipation, Kidney, Bladder and Prostate gland to stay cured.

Write now to Vernal Remedy Company, 19 Seneca Building, Buffalo, N. Y.

This remedy for sale by all leading druggists

Marriages.

ATKINSON—BOWER.—Married at Geneva, O., Dec. 22, 1903. H. Lawrence Atkinson, pastor of the Church of Christ of Geneva, O., and Ida May Bower, of Trumbull, O. Rev. Jacobs of the M. E. Church and Rev. E. Othman Smith of the Baptist Church and Rev. R. S. Lindsay of the Congregational Church, each of Geneva, officiating.

BARNES—STOFFLE.—Married at Washington, Kan., Dec. 30, 1903. Jno. Barnes and Miss Mabel Stoffle, Edward Chittier officiating.

COATES—GLASCOCK.—Joseph William Coates and Edna Florence Glascock both of whom live near Veedersburg were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents, Dec. 24, 1903, H. Randle Lookbill officiating.

HORRAS—UTTERBACK.—Married at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. Frank J. Horras, of Denver, Colorado to Miss Pearl Utterback of Lancaster, Iowa, C. H. Strawn officiating.

JONES—BLAND.—Married Dec. 24, 1903, Mr. A. J. Jones, of Walker, Iowa, to Miss S. O. Bland, of Sigourney, Iowa, C. H. Strawn officiating.

McCLELLAND—LYONS.—Mr. Jacob McClelland, of Chicago and Miss Nell Lyons, of St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 24, 1903, at the residence of the officiating minister, Gay Hoover, Chicago, Ill.

THOMAS—COFFEY.—Married at Herington, Kan., Dec. 30, 1903, Omer B. Thomas and Etta Coffey, F. M. McHale officiating.

WAMACH—BUZARD.—Married Dec. 20, 1903, David C. Wamach to Miss Buzard, at the home of the bride's parents, W. A. Dameron officiating.

WILLIAMS—NIXON.—Married Dec. 29, 1903, Frances M. Williams to Miles R. Nixon, at the home of the bride's father, W. A. Dameron officiating.

WILSON—HITCH.—Lee Roy Wilson and Fannie May Hitch both of whom live near Darlington, Ind., were united in marriage at the home of Alf. Lookbill, H. Randle Lookbill officiating.

Obituaries.

Notices of deaths (not more than four lines) inserted free. Obituary memoirs, one cent per word. Send the money with the copy.

AYRES.

A. A. Ayres, age 66, one of our elders and superintendent of our Sunday-school, an enthusiastic worker in the Endeavor Society and a leader in all departments of the church services, died Dec. 12, of heart failure while convalescing from typhoid fever. He moved to Oregon from Iowa in 1884, where he had been an elder and superintendent of the Sunday-school. He was married at the age of 19 to Charlotte Eastborn and by the union had eleven children; four of them have passed on before him. His wife died in 1887. Two years later he married Mrs. Elizabeth Corbin and they moved to Pomeroy in 1891. Their house has been the preacher's home. Brother Ayres was a man among men, and bore the respect and confidence of all.

A. SANDERS.

CATTLETT.

Robert C. Cattlett, died near Bartley, Neb., Dec. 19, 1903, aged 58 years. He has been a member of the Christian Church 39 years, and leaves a wife and five children to mourn his loss.

CONSTANT.

Died, Nov. 21, 1903, in San Francisco, Cal., after a protracted illness, Margery J. Constant, daughter of Archibald E. and Maria Constant, and sister of Mrs. Mary Elliott, now residing in Guthrie, O. T. She was born in Elkhart Grove, Logan county, Ill., in 1835. Her mother was daughter of Judge James Latham, of Elkhart Grove. Margery was educated in Pleasant Hill Seminary, West Middleton near Bethany College. She graduated with the honors of her class. Miss Constant taught for several years in this seminary, and afterward she taught at Lake Fork, near Elkhart Grove, Ill. After the death of her father and mother she held the position of vice-principal in Bettie Stewart Institute in Springfield, Ill., for many years. She read many good books and was remarkably well versed in the history and literature of the Christian Church, of which she was a member, true to the faith until death. She lays down her work at the call of her Lord to enter into the rest prepared for all those who love his appearing.

J. H. MCCOLLOUGH.

LEARNED.

Mrs. Annie Learned (Lederman) passed away in East St. Louis, Monday, Nov. 30, 1903. She was born at Kimmisburg, Mo., March 10, 1876, and moved to Festus, Mo., where she resided until a few years before her marriage, Sept. 13, 1902, to Harry Learned to which union was born Myrtle Anna Louise Learned. Her example and character proved a blessing to many of her friends and associates and her loveable disposition will dwell in the memory of those who knew her best. The funeral service was held in the Christian Church at Festus, Mo., Wednesday, Dec. 2.

Jno. G. M. LUTTENBERGER.

REYNOLDS.

Cyrus W. Reynolds was born in Warren, Co., Ill., May 9, 1845, and met an accidental death in Tyndall, S. Dakota Dec. 26, 1903. He moved to Iowa in 1870, and in 1887 moved to Tyndall, S. Dak. He was a half brother of J. C. Reynolds. He was the pillar of the church and a noble Christian gentleman. He was a member of the State Board of S. Dak., and his heart and means went into the work of the Lord. Those who feel their loss the keenest are his aged mother and faithful sister, who, since the death of his wife, 32 years ago, have kept house for him and raised his two girls into womanhood.

Elder F. Shoemaker, of Platte, conducted the funeral service assisted by the local Methodist preacher, and the G. A. R. post, of which the deceased was a member.

Albia, Ia., Dec. 29.

W. J. HASTIE.

TAYLOR.

On Dec. 8, 1903, at the home of her granddaughter, Mrs. W. R. Brown, of Harrisonville, Mo., Mrs. Sarah Hanley Taylor exchanged the burden of old age for immortal youth. Only thirteen months and she would have reached her four score years. Born Jan. 9, 1825 near Crab Orchard Springs, Ky. Married to Richard G. Fisher 1840. Came to Mo., 1844. The cholera scourge of '49 claimed her husband and she was left with the care of four children, two having died in infancy. All preceded her but one, W. T. Fisher, Nevada, Mo. In 1859 she was married to Dr. Sam Taylor, of Pleasant Hill, Mo. Again left a widow, she made her home with her daughter, Mrs. J. D. Lysle, of Harrisonville, Mo. It was my privilege to know sister Taylor intimately, having lived in the same home for some time. It was a pleasant home where every member contributed to the happiness of each. Through the years gone, I have often thought of that model home.

After Mrs. Lysle's death, she spent the remainder of her days with her granddaughter. Here she found another delightful home. In her old age she was not thrust aside; it was a pleasure for Mr. and Mrs. Brown to minister to her comfort. Her great grandchildren were her jewels. They miss her sadly; even baby Margaret often asks if grandma won't soon come again. No, dear child, "grandma" will not come again to us; we will wait a little while and go to her.

Sister Taylor was a lifelong member of the Christian church. During her widowhood she was matron at Christian College, Columbia, and Woodland College, Independence, Mo.

All over the state are women who fondly remember her motherly ministrations during their school days.

The funeral service was conducted by the writer at the Christian Church, Harrisonville, and her remains was laid to rest in the cemetery at Pleasant Hill, Mo.

G. E. SHANKLIN.

La Monte, Mo.

WRIGHT.

In the passing of Bro. Andrew Wright, of Atlanta, Ill., another of the old guard has gone home. He was one of the many sturdy pioneers who gave stability to the restoration movement for many years. Bro. Wright was born in Sangamon county, Ill., 77 years ago. He was married to Margaret Clark at Jacksonville, Ill., in 1848. Of their seven children three died in infancy. The four now living are J. H., who is pastor of the church at Woodbine, Ia., W. J., of Butte City, Mont., F. M., of St. Louis, and Eva M., of Atlanta. Such a life is worthy of more than passing note. Personally, he was a man of sober, earnest purpose. He saw the lighter things of life in the right light. It was a pleasure to him to give pleasure to others. If others gave too much time and talent to the mere enjoyment of life he had no word of reproach; for himself he fed on stronger meat. He loved truth and right. He was a most patient searcher after the sure foundation. His mind was active and interested in every good thing to the last. To him his home was a haven of rest. For more than 49 years the home life went on without a jar to mar its peace and beauty. The beloved companion went home six years ago, and since then Brother Wright has been as one leisurely waiting for a ship to be loosed from its moorings that he might start on a voyage. As death drew near, the children came home with their families, and the old pilgrim felt asleep under the caress of love. Truly do the words of Goldsmith apply to him in the home relations:

"His ready smile a parent's warmth expressed,
Their welfare pleased him and their cares distressed;

To them his heart, his love, his griefs were given,
But all his serious thoughts had rest in heaven.
As some tall cliff that lifts its awful form,
Swells from the vale and midway leaves the storm,
Though round its breast the rolling clouds are spread,
Eternal sunshine settles on its head."

Politically, Brother Wright was a Prohibitionist; not, I think, because he saw those of the immediate success of that party, but because he found no other ground where so conscientious men could afford to stand. But it was in his religious life that the elements of character were most prominent. He was for many years a member of one of the denominations. By personal investigation he found his way to the simpler ground of the New Testament. He was a charter member of the Atlanta Christian Church, organized in 1855, and during all the years of its history has been elder, deacon, Sunday-school teacher or superintendent, and often filled more than one of these places at one time. He never lost interest in the study of the Word, nor in the affairs of the church. When the Free-thinker wave of skepticism swept the country, he was in his prime. He believed that the Gospel could be sustained. It was due to him that the Burgess-Burrows debate was arranged to take place here. Since that discussion, spiritualism and infidelity have never made a boast in this community. At the time of his death, Brother Wright was an elder of the church. The deacons carried his body to the church, the two remaining charter members and the elders following. His chair, second from the front on the middle aisle, is vacant, and his kindly eye will greet the pastor no more as he preaches, but death is not the end. We shall meet again.

S. S. LAPPIN.

Atlanta, Ill., Dec. 10, 1903.

The Quiet Hour

"So teach us to number our days,
That we may get us a heart of wisdom."

So preached Moses, the man of God, at some season of the year, or period in his life, which had impressed him with the brevity of human life. He saw the life of man, like a flake of snow, lighting upon the stream and disappearing, and compared that with the eternity of God, who has been the dwelling-place of man in all generations.

The heart of this petition we have quoted above seems to be that we might be so impressed with the brevity of life as to apply our hearts diligently to those things that are of enduring worth. Is not this a wise prayer to make at the beginning of the year? How few there are who realize the fleeting nature of this earth-life, and the vast issues that hang upon it! Even the uncertainty of life—the frail tenure by which we hold it—fails to impress the many with the importance of living in readiness for that change which may come at any moment.

How may we get us "a heart of wisdom?" The great French preacher began his funeral sermon over Louis the Great with the statement, "Only God is great!" It is equally true that only God is wise. We must, therefore, be taught of God if we are to have a heart of wisdom. Jesus Christ alone can reveal the Father to us, and even he can only reveal God to us as our hearts hunger for the living God. To sit at the feet of Jesus, therefore, and to learn of Him about God, and about the meaning of life and how to use it, and to practice His teaching—that is to get "a heart of wisdom."

Our knowledge of God is somewhat like climbing one of our Welsh mountains. When you are at the base you see but little, the mountain itself appears to be but one half as high as it really is. Confined in a little valley, you discover scarcely anything but the rippling brooks as they descend into the stream at the foot of the mountain. Climb the first rising knoll, and the valley lengthens and widens beneath your feet. Go higher, and you see the country for four or five miles round, and you are delighted with the widening prospect. Mount still, and the scene enlarges, till at last, when you are on the summit, and look east, west, north and south, you see almost all England lying before you. Yonder is a forest in some distant county, perhaps two hundred miles away, while here the sea, and there a shining river and the smoking chimneys of a manufacturing town, or the masts of the ships in a busy port. All these things please and delight you, and you say, "I could not have imagined that so much could be seen at this elevation." Now, the Christian life is of the same order. When we first believe in Christ we see but little of Him. The higher we climb the more we discover of His beauties. But who has ever gained the summit? Who has known all the heights and depths of the love of Christ which passes knowledge? Paul, when grown old, sitting gray-haired, shivering in a dungeon in Rome, could say with greater emphasis than we can, "I know whom I have believed," for each experience had been like the climbing of a hill, each trial had been like ascending another summit, and his death seemed like gaining the top of the mountain, from which he could see the whole of the faithfulness and the love of Him to whom he had committed his soul. Get thee up, dear friend, into the high mountain.—C. H. Spurgeon.

Oh, Thou who hast been our dwelling-place in all generations, and who art the refuge of all who put their trust in Thee, we come to Thee, trustingly, at this beginning of the year, and ask that Thou wouldst teach us the true wisdom, and help us to so use the life that we now live in the flesh as to win everlasting life, through our Savior Jesus Christ. Amen.

Family Circle

A Reg'lar Santa Ana.

By Samuel B. Letson.

December's sun had sunk to rest
In quiet autumn colors dress'd,
Leaving a soft and peaceful glow
On sky above and earth below.
So restful all from sky to sod,
That scarce a leaf was seen to nod.
The moon, as full in beauty bright,
Rising, completes the lovely night,
While many souls in grateful glow
Rejoice that nature blesses so.
Hush! Hark! Just hear that awful roar!
It breaks from mountain more and more.
Have Sierras changed to organ grand,
To pour such bass o'er all the land?
Where Santa Ana's floods are found,
Betimes when she's above the ground,
It breaks through rap. Rage ploughs her bed,
Sending black billows over head,
So very dense, to such a height
That dreadful darkness claims the night.
Trees kiss the earth and there they lie,
While all things loose to'd ocean fly.
All from the street rush, swish, click, clang!
Windows and doors shut, whack, slam, bang!
Missiles and sand pelt such a storm
As make the luckless traveler "warm."
No bake nor freeze. Not hot nor cold;
But windy wind and dirt untold!
Oh, Sister Ann! It such a breeze,
Absent a thousand years, with ease
You pour o'er mountain, orchard, glade,
While here what twisters you had made!
How long will Ann our optics fill,
Our breath avert, our patience kill?
"Three hours at least, three days at most,"
Old Santa Ana serves her toast.
Safe, while she shoots such searching shot
The saintly dame is not forgot.
"From one to three times in the year"
She flings her fury feather gear
And smites us hard mouth, eye and ear,
And leaves us feeling rather queer.
But then she blows the land so clean!
No microbe left (that can be seen).
Miasma blown go-whizz-co-zee
Way out some twenty miles to sea!
Now, hold this fast. For rest of year,
Spring, summer, autumn, pour their cheer.
Such miles and miles of celery green,
The best that I have ever seen.
With soil as good as found out door,
Clear water, pure, in ample store,
And grains and nuts and fruits galore,
God's garden this, tho' Ann may snore!
Library, press, schools, churches, light,
Not a saloon! Thank God! That's right!
—Santa Ana, Orange Co., Cal., Dec. 5, 1903.

A Miss as Good as a Mile.

By H. B. Wallace.

(A TRUE STORY.)

About thirty years ago, a Methodist protracted meeting was in progress at Bolivar, a small town on the Pennsylvania Central Railroad, and a party of young people from Fairfield, a town five miles down the river, were attending, going and returning each night on a hand car.

By leaving the church promptly at ten o'clock, they had a clear track and were able to reach home before the night express was due there.

Following the express were a number of trains, locals, freights, etc., so that the track was clear for only a few minutes at a time. The road between the two towns runs most of the way on a narrow shelf, or ledge, on the mountain side; so narrow, indeed, that it here consists of but a single track, though in other places the track is double.

One night when the meeting was unusually interesting, the young folks forgot the hour, and did not leave the church till fifteen minutes after ten. As they stepped upon the hand car, Jack Harmon, who was engineer of a local freight, and knew the exact time of every train on the road, whispered to the other young men: "Now, boys, we must do some stiff pulling; but don't let the girls know we are late, or they will be frightened." They had not gone far when Jack's sister, Nannie, noticing the unusual speed, asked the reason for it.

"Why, we don't want to freeze this cold night. We must work to keep warm and get you girls home before you perish," her brother answered as lightly as he could. But the girls noticed that he looked at his watch every few minutes and then said something to the boys which had the effect of increasing their speed, but which they could not hear for the rattling of the car and the whistling of the wind. At last he could conceal his uneasiness no longer, and fairly shouted: "Faster, boys, faster!"

With long, swift, even strokes, the boys sent the car bounding forward. The girls clung to each other and to the car, which threatened at every curve in the road to fly the track and land in the river one hundred feet below.

The boys at the handles breathed hard; the girls held their breath; and Jack Harmon stood, watch in hand, now glancing at it, and now counting the telegraph poles as they were passed in rapid succession; thus computing the time they were making, and comparing it with the time they must make, to reach a place of safety before meeting the train.

The night express was famous all along the line for its punctuality, and they dared not hope it would be a few minutes late. Jack now sprang to a handle and began working it like a madman. He was a young Samson, big, raw-boned and muscular. The car shot forward at terrible speed. As they rounded the last curve, they saw what all had been expecting and dreading for some time, the headlight of the locomotive like the fiery eye of some monster, as it bore down upon them. Here the track ledge widened, river and mountain both receding, making a safe landing place for the car. But could they stop in time? Happily, both car and train had reduced their speed by this time, the

IT IS YOURS
for the asking without one cent of cost.
This is no deposit scheme; no 30 days trial scheme.
You simply send us your name and address and we send you the Belt. It is yours to keep forever and we under no circumstances ask for or accept any money for it either now or in the future. This is a plain, simple, positive statement of facts. We guarantee it THE BEST ELECTRIC BELT MADE. Five minutes' trial will prove to you its power, a week's wearing of it will restore to you all lost vigor, giving to you the strength and manhood which is your birthright. Many forms of such as Impotency, Varicocele, Spermatorrhea, etc., yield at once to its magic influence. We give it away free to all who can be cured by the one great curative agent, Electricity. After you are cured your friends will each want one and from this sale we will make our profit. Be a strong, vigorous man among men. This generous offer may be withdrawn at any time, so you should write today for the "Free Supreme Electric Belt."

NERVOUS, RHEUMATIC, KIDNEY AND LIVER DISEASES

IT WILL CURE YOU!
Address: PHYSICIANS' INSTITUTE,
7 Gault Building, Chicago, Illinois.

car in anticipation of meeting the train, and the train, because of the dangerous run on the mountain side. Almost before the car was stopped, the boys jerked it from the track, and not an instant too soon, as the cow-catcher grazed one of the car wheels, and the suction from the train, as with a shriek it passed, drew the hat of one of the boys from his head.

The young people were perfectly willing to walk the short remaining distance to their homes, but the girls were so overcome by fright and cold that their limbs almost refused to carry them, and even the boys admitted that their nerves were somewhat shaken. Youth recuperates quickly, and morning found them none the worse for their narrow escape, but very thankful to the Preserver of life and the Giver of every perfect gift. Next evening they went to church as usual, but were careful to start home a little before ten.

BIBLE STUDY COURSE
At home by mail. This book "Home Bible Study" free if you enroll now. Terms easy. For free catalog write C. J. BURTON, President Iowa Christian College, Oskaloosa, Iowa.

A Start on the Road to Riches is always made by saving. One dollar or more will start a savings account with us. We pay 3 per cent per annum, compounded twice a year. Write for leaflet on instructions in regard to depositing by mail.

Capital, Surplus and Profits..... $8,200,000

MISSISSIPPI VALLEY TRUST CO.
FOURTH & PINE STS. ST. LOUIS

The Treasure of the Wise Man.

Oh, the night was dark and the night was late,

And the robbers came to rob him;
And they picked the locks of his palace-gate.
The robbers that came to rob him,—
They picked the lock of his palace-gate,
Seized his jewels and gems of state,
His coffers of gold and his priceless plate,—
The robbers that came to rob him.

But loud laughed he in the morning red!

For of what had the robbers robbed him?
Ho! hidden safe, as he slept in bed,
When the robbers came to rob him,—
They robbed him not of a golden shred
Of the childish dreams in his wise old head—
"And they're welcome to all things else," he said,
When the robbers came to rob him.

James Whitcomb Riley.

Only A Word.

A young girl sat on the piazza of her home, her pale cheek and drooping figure telling of recent illness. She was watching the raking of leaves from the grass, and as the man passed near her with his rake she aroused herself from her languor to say.

"You keep the lawn looking so nicely, John. I like to see it that way."

He was only a hired man, a stranger in a strange land, and this was but one of a score of duties that he was paid for doing. Probably no one had ever thought of praising him before, and he had no answer ready.

A week later the gentle invalid was gone—slipped away suddenly out of encircling arms, out of the world like the vanishing of a snow wreath. No one thought of John as among the mourners; he was only driver of the family carriage which carried some of the friends, but to one of these with whom he found himself alone, he told of the kind commendation, the last words he had heard the girl speak, and added, with voice growing husky:—

"As long as I stay there the lawn shall be kept as Miss Helen liked to see it."

The little word had left a legacy of brightness and awakened a heart to new loyalty and faithfulness.

The art of saying appropriate words in a kindly way is one that never goes out of fashion, never ceases to please, and is within the reach of the humblest."—Christian Missionary Alliance.

Lifting Up to Love.

"And ye don't drink any more, Jim?"

The question came as two workmen walked along together.

"No."

"And ye don't talk as ye used to, either—dropped a lot of swearin' that used to come pretty handy. What's up?"

"It's the wife and boy," answered Jim, half-pleased, half-embarrassed that the change had been noticed. "Ye see, the little one was nothin' but a baby when I went away, but he's gettin' to be a smart boy now. Lizzie believes in me. And that boy—he really thinks his dad is the best man in the world. I'd sort of like to have him keep on thinkin' so, that's all."

Trying to live up to someone's thought of him, someone's faith in him, was making his whole life higher and purer, as it has made many a life. It is an ignoble nature that is not at once humbled and uplifted at finding itself

Starving With Plenty to Eat.

That's What Thousands With Poor Digestions Are Doing Every Day.

DON'T BE ONE OF THEM.

They have no appetite or if they do have an appetite and eat what they require it does them no good because the stomach does not digest it and the fermenting mass of food becomes a source of disease, of headaches, sleeplessness, languor and the thousand and one symptoms of disordered digestion.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets promptly relieve and cure all forms of indigestion. They have done it in thousands of cases and will do it in yours. The reason is simple. They digest the food whether the stomach works or not and that's the whole secret.

Mr. Thomas Seale, Mayfield, Cal., says: "Have used and recommended Stuart's Tablets because there is nothing like them to keep the stomach right."

Mr. E. H. Davis, of Hampton, Va., says: "I doctored five years for dyspepsia, but in two months I got more benefit from Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets than in five years of the doctor's treatment."

Mrs. E. M. Faith, of Byrd's Creek, Wis., says: "I have taken all the tablets I got of you and they have done their work well in my case, for I feel like a different person altogether. I don't doubt if I had not got them I should have been at rest by this time."

Phil Brooks, Detroit, Mich., says: "Your dyspepsia cure has worked wonders in my case. I suffered for years from dyspepsia, but am now entirely cured and enjoy life as I never have before. I gladly recommend them."

Mrs. G. H. Crottsley, 538 Washington St., Hoboken, N. J., writes: "Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets just filled the bill for children, as well as for older folks. I've had the best of luck with them. My three-year-old girl takes them as readily as candy. I have only to say 'tablets' and she runs for them."

Miss Lelia Dively, 4627 Plummer St., Pittsburg, Pa., writes: "I wish everyone to know how grateful I am for Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. I suffered for a long time and did not know what ailed me. I lost flesh right along until one day I noticed an advertisement of these tablets and immediately bought a 50-cent box at the drug store. I am only on the second box and am gaining in flesh and color. I have at last found something that has reached my ailment."

At all druggists 50 cents a box. A little book on "Stomach Troubles" may be had free by addressing F. A. Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich.

idealized by some loving heart. Almost unconsciously we try to be what we are expected to be. And if this is true, what volumes it speaks in regard to thinking, hoping, expecting the best of those round us!—Selected.

Goldsmith's Kindness.

Hearing of Dr. Goldsmith's great humanity, a poor woman, who believed him to be a physician, once wrote to him begging him to prescribe for her husband, who had lost his appetite, and was altogether in a bad state. The kind-hearted poet immediately went to see her, and, after some talk with the man, found him almost overwhelmed with sickness and poverty.

"You shall hear from me in an hour," said the doctor, on leaving, "and I will send you some pills which I am sure will do you good." Before the time was up, Goldsmith's servant brought the poor woman a small box, which, on being opened, was found to contain ten guineas, with the following directions: "To be used as necessities require. Be patient and of good heart."—London Sunday-School Times.

The PRAISE HYMNAL

The Ideal Church Music Book. Half leather binding, $70 per 100. Vellum cloth, $50.

THE FILLMORE BROTHERS CO.
CINCINNATI, OHIO.

Music Publishers and Dealers. Also Bands and Orchestra Instruments and Music. Catalogues Free, Correspondence Solicited.

Taking Care of Them Herself.

"Yes'm, she's pretty well, mother is," said the old man, pausing with his foot on the wagon wheel to answer an inquiry concerning his wife; "pretty well, if only 'twasn't for worryin' about the children. 'Lizabeth's up to Conway this season, and mother's all the time afraid she'll be took sick away' from home. Samuel's got a good place at Tanfield, and he's doin' well, too, but his boardin' place is across the river. Sometimes he goes by ferry-boat and sometimes he goes by skiff, and mother she can't get over the feelin' that he's likely to be drowned. The two younger ones is home yet, but she says she's anxious about the time John'll be wantin' to strike out for himself, and she's always been afraid we'd never raise Car'line.

"No'm there's nothin' special the matter with any of em' now, and the truck garden has done fine this year. Mother hain't had a touch of her rheumatism all summer, and she'd be pretty well off if 'twasn't for worryin'. Christian? Bless you, yes, this forty year! She ain't afraid but what the Lord will take care of her and all the rest of the world, but seems like she ain't got faith yet to b'lieve He's to be trusted with the children."—Well-spring.

Temperance Facts.

In 1880 the consumption of wine and liquors was about ten gallons per capita. Now it is over twenty gallons, an increase of 100 per cent.

Edward Page Gaston says that Chicago drinks enough liquor in a year to float the biggest ship on the lakes.

Lord Robert says that one-third of the British Army in India, who were abstainers, furnished 2,000 more effective troops than the two-thirds who were not abstainers.

The Wine and Spirit Gazette says that salicylic and benzoic acids, bisulphates of lime, soda and potassium, and a compound of ammonium fluoride and hydrofluoric acid, are used to keep beer from spoiling.

Japan, with practically the same poor laws as Great Britain, has only 24,000 paupers, while Great Britain has 100,000. A Japanese statesman, being asked to explain, replied: "The Japanese drink tea; the British drink alcohol."—Selected.

It said that Michael Angelo, the world's greatest artist, that when he was working on a statue or a painting he wore over his forehead, fastened to his artist's cap, a lighted candle, in order that no slightest shadow of himself might fall upon his work. The story may be purely fanciful, but it contains such a beautiful suggestion that one would not willingly reject it. It is the shadow of self that spoils work and eventually spoils character. We must eliminate self-consciousness before we can hope to accomplish anything that is truly great or beautiful. —Selected.

Only a Broken Knife-Blade.

A ship was once wrecked on the Irish coast. The captain was a careful one. Nor had the weather been of so severe a kind as to explain the wide distance to which the vessel had swerved from her proper course. The ship went down, but so much interest was attached to the disaster that a diver was sent down. Among other portions of the vessel that were examined was the compass; that was swung on deck, and inside the compass-box was detected a bit of steel, which appeared to be the small point of a pocket-knife blade.

It appeared that the day before the wreck, a sailor had been sent to clean the compass, had used his pocket-knife in the process, and had unconsciously broken off the point and left it remaining in the box. The bit of knife-blade exerted its influence on the compass, and to a degree that deflected the needle from its proper bent, and spoilt it as an index of the ship's direction. That piece of knife-blade wrecked the vessel.

Even one trifling sin, as small as a broken knife-point, as it were, is able to rob the conscience of peace and happiness.—Rev. John McNeill.

Spurgeon Proverbs.

"Buy not silk while you owe for milk. Better do than dream; better be than seem. She who buys 'bargains' is often 'sold.' Avoid what makes in thy pocket a void. Sellers need tongues; buyers need eyes. Desired things may not be desirable. Fear of failure is father of failure. Why kill nettles if you grow thistles? Pegging away will win the day. Maybes are no honey bees. Add pence to pence, for wealth comes thence. He surely thrives who owns many hives. Better a good groat than a bad banknote.

"A maid's best dress is bashfulness. Father's fraud drives sons abroad. Play not with fire nor ill desire. To be loved be lovable. It's risky riding when the devil is driving. Lessons learnt in the cradle last to the grave. Be hardy, but be not hard. The good wife's face lights up the place. Don't get a helpmeet till you've got meat to help. Better be one-sided than two-faced. If you can't be clever you can be clean. To avoid a second quarrel, avoid the first. None but the crazy give alms to the lazy. Better single still than wedded ill. An untried friend is an uncracked nut. Men build houses, women make homes. Turn your backs on village clacks. When wife will gad, husband is sad."

Asserted His Freedom.

"Well," said Tom, sleepily, to his room-mate, "did you solve that puzzle?"

"No," snapped Dick, as he got ready for bed.

"Huh! You said you'd solve it if you had to stay up all night to do it."

"Well, I didn't have to stay up all night. This is a free country."—Philadelphia Press.

WE WILL PAY YOU

Six Per Cent

ON YOUR MONEY, IF PLACED WITH US UPON
THE

Annuity Plan.

IT IS A SAFE INVEST-
MENT WHILE YOU LIVE,
INTEREST GUARANTEED
BY A BOND

AS GOOD AS GOLD.

IT IS A SAFE INVEST-
MENT AFTER DEATH.
YOUR MONEY DOES THE LORD'S WORK AFTER
YOU HAVE CEASED TO LABOR.

NO NEED TO WORRY
ABOUT SECURITY, TAXES,
LAPSES OF INTEREST OR LOSSES.

IF YOU DESIRE TO HELP
ON THE LORD'S WORK
IN AMERICA, WRITE FOR OUR BOOKLET ON

THE ANNUITY PLAN.

The American Christian
Missionary Society,

BENJAMIN E. SMITH, Cor. Sec'y.
CINCINNATI, O.

A TRIO

of devotional books which have aided thousands of readers.

Alone With God
The Heavenward Way
Half Hour Studies at the Cross

Written by J. H. Garrison,
Editor of THE CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST

They are similar in size and binding, and being all written for the purpose of comfort and spiritual strength, they constitute what may properly be called

A Devotional Library.

PRICE,

Seventy-Five Cents a Volume, or
Two Dollars for the Set of Three Volumes, Postpaid.

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING CO.,
1522 Locust St., St. Louis, Mo.

With the Children

By J. Breckenridge Ellis

I was telling you what the little orphans at the Orphan Home in St. Louis wrote about our little orphan. Here is what Lucy Unbehaun has to say: "Little Joe has light hair, small white hands, small feet, height three feet, six inches. He is twenty-five inches around the waist. His fast friends are Chase Brown, Nellie Meservy, Clinton Tobias, etc. He goes to bed about half past six in the nursery dormitory. He likes for us to tell him about bears. He loves to play with the tricycle and fire engine. We all love him, although he has a quick temper. He loves the school teacher and calls her 'Mit Bell.'" Jennie (last name not given) says: "He has brown eyes and is very sweet natured. Sometimes he has a little temper; but not very often. And he is very sweet about his play, and hardly ever quarrels with the little orphans. He is five years old." Nina Fitch writes: "He is a bright little boy. A gentleman gave him a little engine, but the children played with it so much, they broke it. He took the wheels up to Miss Bell and asked her to put them away for him. He loves Nellie Meservy and always waits to go in the dining-room with her." Clinton Tobias, who is eleven, and an especial friend of Little Joe, says: "He has brown eyes and a pretty complexion. He sleeps with Chase Brown; he cannot talk plain. He said this morning, 'Mit Bell, hab you dot two wheels yet?' (to put on his broken engine.) He is a smart looking boy. Almost all the visitors take notice of him. He has a pug nose. He eats very hearty." And here is a letter from Miss Tena Williamson, the matron of the Home: "I inclose notes written by our school children. You might imagine more about Joe's nose than is true; I never thought of it being more pug than most small boys'. He loves the company of those older than himself. His manners suggest Little Lord Fauntleroy. He is generous, and begs off for the children when the nurse intends to punish them. One day Chase had been bad, and Joe said, 'Mit Sue, don't whip Chate; I will beg Chate's pardon to you, Mit Sue.' In sympathizing with a child, he said one day, 'I sorry for him; he a poor boy.' We all love him dearly. He is not forward, but rather shy. At times he seems serious and sad, and speaks like an old person. One day he said, with a look of longing in his pretty face, 'Mit Sue, I hasn't any mamma, nor any papa, nor nuffin.' God bless the work of the Advance Society."

And He has already done that. Here is from Lolo Cox, Toppenish, Wash.: "I inclose 25 cents for the Av. S. orphan. I am keeping the rules now. Oh! I do have the awfulest time 'way out here' by myself—I mean alone in the Av. S. It is so hard when you have to work alone, but I can't get anybody to join. I am studying at home this winter. The clock has just struck nine; you know that means—study."

Mrs. F. A. Gatten, Beeler, Kan.: "As you have given the old people a chance to help with the Av. S. orphan, I inclose 30 cents. Grandma."

Mrs. W. A. Mason, Nevada, Mo.: "I have kept the Av. S. rules twelve weeks, and think it very beneficial. I inclose my mite (10 cents) for the orphan. I am an orphan myself, but not a little helpless one. May the good work continue, is my prayer."

Everett Hall, Leon, Kan.: "I am seven. I live on the farm with my grandpa. I like the farm and I like to go to school. We all think our teacher is good. I have two kittens and a dog; his name is Bruno. He is glad when I get home from school, and we have a good play. My birthday is Nov. 25. I will send 25 cents for the orphan as a birthday present. I hope you will get the money so the little child will have a good home."

Mary Rice, Harrisonville, Mo.: "I came near forgetting my Bible verse the last quarter, and just barely thought of it. It is so easy to forget when one is in town from Monday to Friday, going to school, and out in the country the rest of the time, helping with the work. I send a quarter for the orphan. I wish I could send more to help the plan along. I take the first year work in high school and enjoy Latin very much. Is Bertha Beesley teaching school this winter? I remember she got her certificate. You asked where Brother Eugene is? He's teaching school. I believe I'm the only one in Cass county who belongs to the Av. S. I hope to be in St. Louis when we have the Av. S. meeting."

Stuart, Kan.: "I am not a member of the Av. S., but I wish to help Little Joe. I send $1, and my prayer is ever for the Av. S. and this noble work. I have read 'With the Children' a long time. Don't publish my name."

Lawson, Mo.: "I am not a member of the Av. S., but believe they are trying to do the best work that can be done on earth, that is, helping those unable to help themselves. I am an old reader of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. I send one dollar."

Clara Elliott, Wichita, Kan.: "I would like to join the Av. S. I will try to keep the rules. I am a little girl, ten years old. I belong to our Junior C. E. at St. Lawrence Church; we are keeping an orphan in India. Her name is Gunmat Kelley Wichita." (I hope she has a strong constitution.) "We named her after Sister Louise Kelley, the C. W. B. M. organizer."

Elizabeth Graham, Jonesboro, Ark.: "I have wanted to join the Av. S. ever since grandma told me about it. I am an orphan myself, but I have a good home. Grandma came with us from Missouri to take care of us. I think old gold and blue are nice colors. Our minister said he wanted us to help build the new church, and each one of us to buy a brick to go in it; but I am going to help support the orphan and buy a brick, too. I send 30 cents. I am nine years old. I have begun to keep the rules."

Higbee, Mo.: "My sister and I send 50 cents for the orphan fund. We think it a grand plan, and hope for its success." (Which brings us to $49.29. Not long ago Dora, Grace and Ruth Thompson, who live across the street, all in the same house, came to see me; Dora brought a quarter for Little Joe. We talked. They wondered that since

GEO. KILGEN & SON

BUILDERS OF HIGH GRADE

Pipe Organs

ST. LOUIS, MO.
Best of References. Correspondence solicited.

If you purchase a

PIANO OR ORGAN

with the name

upon it, you will have the VERY BEST MUSICAL INSTRUMENT that money can buy. Prices and terms most reasonable. Catalogues free to any address.

THE ESTLEY CO.

1116 Olive St., St. Louis, Mo.
Mention this paper.

there are 3,000 members of the Av. S., more money had not come in. I told them I think this is one reason: we have hundreds of members who drop out because they forget the rules, while new ones come in who haven't become interested in our work. And besides, to give away money for an orphan you may never see, is a very unselfish act on the part of those who haven't much money to spare; and among 3,000 people it's pretty hard to get a crowd together who are really unselfish. So when they went home, I had $49.54. I went down town to buy things for Christmas and I found a bureau with three drawers and two knobs to each drawer, and a red back where you could fasten a looking-glass, all for five cents. And Mrs. John Grayson met me there and gave me a dollar for our orphan. So that made $50.49, and our money is raised! We prayed that the $50 might come in, and I know those were sincere prayers. I know they helped. Let us be just as earnest in our prayers, now, thanking the God of the orphans and the helpless that He has made it possible for us to support Little Joe. Are you not glad? I am sure of it! Hurrah! It took 73 persons to raise this money; they are from 16 states, and from England. I am glad it is so, because the more who gave, the more there are to take an interest in our work. Now you know I don't charge a cent for my time and labor in this matter. But in order to carry it on, a good many stamps are necessary. I gave a dollar to the fund, and don't feel able to give more than just one dollar. In order to secure Little Joe, I have already corresponded with people to the amount of 63 cents, stamps. I'd like to get back these stamps. Besides, in sending the money to pay Joe's board, I'll have to buy money orders. I suspect the year will cost me about a dollar. I hope to pay this dollar out of our fund; I don't feel that I can pay it out of myself. I mention this so when I report expenses, as I shall to the penny, you will not feel I am getting rich off our orphan. Every cent you have sent goes to support Little Joe, and these stamps are just as necessary as the butter on his bread. I wish you a good, useful, happy year.)

Plattsburg, Mo.

Christian Publishing Company

1522 Locust Street

J. H. GARRISON, President
 W. W. DOWLING, Vice-President
 W. D. CASE, Sec'y and Adv. Manager
 R. P. CROW, Treas. and Bus. Manager
 G. A. HOFFMANN, General Superintendent

Good Cheer from Friends.

I do not want to miss a copy.

ED. R. BRYAN.

I feel lost without the Christian-Evangelist.
 MRS. MARY HURFORD.

I could not do without the Christian-Evangelist.
 MELLIE SALADY.

I don't want to be without the Christian-Evangelist.
 CATHARINE WOODS.

I always find the Christian-Evangelist very instructive.
 G. G. REID.

It is the best paper published in the brotherhood.
 T. L. READ.

May God bless and prolong the life of the editor of the Christian-Evangelist.
 MARY E. DAMERELL.

The Christian-Evangelist has become a necessity of my life. Why say more?
 T. R. HODKINSON.

Kindest regards for the editor-in-chief. Long live the Christian-Evangelist!
 JOHN BALLINGER.

The Christian-Evangelist is all the preacher I have. May I never be without it.
 MRS. MARY F. HODGES.

I wish you and the good old "Evangelist" abundant success for the coming year.
 W. P. CARUTHERS.

The more we read the Christian-Evangelist, the harder it would be to live without it.
 M. F. COLLINS.

We cannot make up our minds to do without a paper we have taken for over a quarter of a century.
 C. E. STIFFLER.

The Christian-Evangelist is an honor to us here. May God bless it and make it more prosperous.
 R. L. PRATT.

After having read the Christian-Evangelist for sixteen years, I could not afford to be without it.
 JOHN E. ARNOLD.

I cannot do without the Christian-Evangelist. It is my silent pastor and it is a great company to me.
 MRS. OLIVE J. WILSON.

I cannot afford to do without the Christian-Evangelist. It brings sunshine, joy and strength to my life.
 R. W. LILLY.

We are highly pleased with the Christian-Evangelist. May the Lord bless you in the good work you are doing.
 MRS. M. E. TAYLOR.

Grandfather is still a delighted reader of your paper and expects to continue as such during his remaining years.
 PATSY FLECHER.

The Christian-Evangelist brings comfort and cheer into my home, and is the very bread of life to anyone who is trying to live a Christian.
 MARY WILLARD.

May the blessings of God rest upon the Christian-Evangelist during 1904, and may its influence deepen and widen throughout our whole people.

 W. F. RICHARDSON.

Isolated as I am from church privileges, the Christian-Evangelist is such a comfort to me. May the dear Lord spare you many years to labor in his cause for the good of humanity.
 MRS. M. J. EVANS.

I commenced taking the Evangelist when it was printed in Oskaloosa, Ia. I am ninety-three years old and I love the paper still. It is next to the Bible with me.
 MRS. JANE A. WALKER.

I am much interested in the proposed anniversary number of the Christian-Evangelist, having been a reader for many years. Heartly congratulations for its long continuance and success.
 MRS. J. L. KENNARD.

I have been a constant reader of the Christian-Evangelist for more than twenty years. It has made great progress and never was quite so good as now. May it have many more years of usefulness.
 J. M. VAWTER.

"I do not want to miss a single number of my highly prized paper, the Christian-Evangelist. It is ever fresh and new, and its contents are meat and drink to my soul. Have been a constant reader of its pages for more than twenty years. Long may its mission be continued."

This is my eighty-eighth year in the Louisiana Purchase west of the Mississippi River. I am now past ninety years old. In 1813 I took cradle in Erie county, New York, eighteen miles southwest of the city of Buffalo. Siege of Ft. Erie was on. Left in 1816. I have patronized your Christian papers for over fifty-five years.
 CALVIN SMITH.

Let me express my thanks for your high-toned, clear, potent editorial on "An Interior View of Our Religious Reformation." Nothing could have been more telling and biblically unanswerable.

With very good wishes for the new year, and prayers for your persistent and increased success.
 ROBERT ELMORE.

I have long believed that the Christian-Evangelist has caught as much or more of our plea than any other of our papers, and time confirms me in this belief.

I enjoy reading the "Evangelist" very much, and take pleasure in recommending it to the members of my congregation on every possible occasion.
 P. W. HUNTSMAN.

A Trip Across the Ocean

may not be a possibility to you now, but You Can Go in fancy and enjoy some of the delights of the journey by reading

WHEELING THROUGH EUROPE

A most interesting book of 263 pages, containing many scenes photographed by the author, W. E. Garrison.

At a Cost of Sixty Cents

you may have this book sent, postpaid, to your address. THIS IS A SPECIAL CHRISTMAS PRICE. THE REGULAR PRICE IS ONE DOLLAR

Good Music is of Supreme Importance

When we say good we mean both in sentiment and melody.

LIVING PRAISE

By CHAS. H. GABRIEL and W. W. DOWLING
Is that kind of a Song Book.

Drop us a postal card request and we will tell you all about this superb collection of 267 pieces of sacred music. Three styles of binding.

Christian Publishing Co., 1522 Locust St., St. Louis, Mo

1903
 1
 1904

The sum total

Of the matter is that we are rapidly filling orders for the

Nineteenth Volume

OF

DOWLING'S*Christian Lesson Commentary

Which contains the very best aids to the International Sunday-school Lessons for 1904 that our superior facilities and experience can produce.

PRICE

Single Copy, post-paid $1.00
 One Dozen, not prepaid, 9.00

Order From*CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING CO.,

1522 Locust St. St. Louis, Mo.

An Interesting Story in a Handsome Volume

Altar Stairs

by

CHAS. J. SCOFIELD

Author of "A Subtle Adversary."

Contains 320 pages on fine book paper. Illuminated cloth binding. Seven illustrations. New type. Price

$1.50, Postpaid

-Order from-

Christian Publishing Co.,

1522 Locust St.,
 ST. LOUIS, MO.

THE CHRISTIAN- EVANGELIST

A WEEKLY RELIGIOUS NEWSPAPER.

Vol. XLI. No. 2.

January 14, 1904.

$1.50 A Year.

HARRY GRANISON HILL,
General Secretary American Christian Education Society.

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING CO. ST. LOUIS, MO.

The Christian-Evangelist

J. H. GARRISON, Editor
F. D. POWER, Associate Editor
W. E. GARRISON, Assistant Editor

Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year

For foreign countries add $1.04 for postage.

Remittances should be made by money order, draft or registered letter; not by local cheque, unless 15 cents is added to cover cost of collection.

In Ordering Change of Post-office give both old and new address.

Matter for Publication should be addressed to the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. Subscriptions and remittances should be addressed to the Christian Publishing Company.

Unused Manuscripts will be returned only if accompanied by stamps.

News Items, evangelistic and otherwise, are solicited and should be sent on a postal card, if possible.

Entered at St. Louis P. O. as Second Class Matter.

What We Stand For.

For the Christ of Galilee,
For the truth which makes men free,
For the bond of unity
Which makes God's children one.

For the love which shines in deeds,
For the life which this world needs,
For the church whose triumph speeds
The prayer: "Thy will be done."

For the right against the wrong,
For the weak against the strong,
For the poor who've waited long
For the brighter age to be.

For the faith against tradition,
For the truth 'gainst superstition,
For the hope whose glad fruition
Our waiting eyes shall see.

For the city God is rearing,
For the New Earth now appearing,
For the heaven above us clearing
And the song of victory.

CONTENTS

Current Events.....	35
EDITORIAL:
Unconquered Land. II.....	37
Blight of Religious Denominationalism..	37
Brother Spayd's Experience in South Africa.....	38
A Worthy Tribute to a Noble Man.....	38
Editor's Easy Chair.....	39
Notes and Comments .....	39

CONTRIBUTED ARTICLES:

Faith and Belief. Cephas Shelburne...	40
As Seen from the Dome. F. D. Power...	41
The New Battle with Bacchus. William Durban.....	42
The Religious Minded. W. O. Moore.....	43
Sectism Among the Disciples. L. W. Spayd.....	44
Believe in God and Keep the Fires Burning. Z. T. Sweeney.....	45
Railroad Parables.....	45

NEWS FROM MANY FIELDS:

Northern California.....	46
Chicago .....	46
Topeka, Kansas.....	46
Washington State.....	46
Nebraska.....	46
Texas.....	47
Maryland, Delaware and District of Columbia.....	47
C. W. B. M. in Missouri.....	47

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.....	48
MIDWEEK PRAYER-MEETING.....	48
CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.....	49
OUR BUDGET.....	50
CORRESPONDENCE:

A Plea to the Pastors and Brotherhood of an Imperial State, 52. Installation of Drake University Pastor, 53. Missouri Bible-School Notes, 53. Four Years and Four Months at Warrensburg, 53. School of Christian Workers, 54. Council Grove, Kan., 54.	55
--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------	----

MARRIAGES AND OBITUARIES.....	55
EVANGELISTIC.....	56
PEOPLE'S FORUM.....	58
THE QUIET HOUR.....	59
FAMILY CIRCLE.....	60
WITH THE CHILDREN.....	63

SUNDAY-SCHOOL SUPPLIES.

Quarterly Helps.

The Beginner's Quarterly.

A Lesson Magazine for the Very Youngest Learners.

TERMS.—Single copy per quarter, 10 cents. In clubs of ten or more 5 cents per copy per quarter; 20 cents per year.

The Primary Quarterly.

A Lesson Magazine for the Youngest Classes. It contains Lesson Stories, Lesson Questions, Lesson Thoughts and Lesson Pictures, and never fails to interest the little ones.

TERMS.

Single copy, per quarter, 5 cents.
10 copies, per quarter, $ .30; per year, $ .75
25 copies, " " .30; " 1.50
50 " " .75; " 3.00

The Youth's Quarterly.

A Lesson Magazine for the Junior Classes. The Scripture Text is printed in full, but an interesting Lesson Story takes the place of the usual explanatory notes.

TERMS.—Single copy, per quarter, 5 cents; ten copies or more to one address, 21-2 cents each per quarter.

The Scholar's Quarterly.

A Lesson Magazine for the Senior Classes. This Quarterly contains every help needed by the senior classes. Its popularity is shown by its immense circulation.

TERMS.

Single copy, per quarter, $ .10; per year, $ .30
10 copies, " " .40; " 1.25
25 " " .90; " 2.00
50 " " 1.60; " 6.00
100 " " 3.00; " 12.00

The Bible Student.

A Lesson Magazine for the Advanced Classes, containing the Scripture Text in both the Common and Revised Versions, with Explanatory Notes, Helpful Readings, Practical Lessons. Maps, etc.

TERMS.

Single copy, per quarter, $ .10; per year, $ .40
10 copies, " " .70; " 2.50
25 " " 1.60; " 6.00
50 " " 3.00; " 10.50
100 " " 5.50; " 20.00

Bible Lesson Picture Roll.

Printed in 8 colors. Each leaf, 26 by 37 inches, contains a picture illustrating one lesson. 13 leaves in a set. Price per Roll—one quarter—reduced to 75 cents.

Christian Picture Lesson Cards.

A reduced fac-simile of the large Bible Lesson Picture Roll. Put up in sets, containing one card for each Sunday in quarter. One set will be required for each child in the class. Price reduced to 21-2 cents per set.

MODEL SUNDAY-SCHOOL RECORD.

Each book contains blanks for two years' records. Cloth.....$1.00.

MODEL SUNDAY-SCHOOL TREASURER'S BOOK.

Good for three years. Fine paper. Pocket size, cloth, 25 cents. Morocco.....$ .50.

MODEL SUNDAY-SCHOOL CLASS BOOK.

Good for one year. Single copy, five cents. Per dozen.....$ .50.

Christian Publishing Co., 1522 Locust St., St. Louis.

THE OLD RELIABLE

THERE ARE IMITATIONS IN ABUNDANCE, BUT THE ORIGINAL

CHRISTIAN LESSON COMMENTARY

IS EDITED BY W. W. DOWLING

THE NINETEENTH ANNUAL VOLUME

(LESSONS FOR 1904)

Is now on sale. Make no mistake in choosing your lesson help for the year—a year is a long time to struggle along with poor aid, but send at once ONE DOLLAR FOR A COPY, postpaid. In lot of one dozen or more, not prepaid, $9.00 per dozen.

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING COMPANY, 1522 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo.

AN ENDEAVORER'S WORKING JOURNEY AROUND THE WORLD

By JOHN F. ANDERSON

Introduction by ROBT. J. BURDETTE

Fully Illustrated / / Intensely Interesting

"THE most interesting book of travels published since Mark Twain wrote 'Innocents Abroad.'"—Hon. Champ Clark.

$1.50 Postpaid.

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING COMPANY, St. Louis

THE CHRISTIAN EVANGELIST

"IN FAITH, UNITY, IN OPINION AND METHODS, LIBERTY, IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY."

Vol. XLI.

January 14, 1904

No. 2

Current Events

In spite of official assurance to the contrary, a strong impression prevailed that there would be another anti-Jewish outbreak in Kishineff on the Russian Christmas, Jan. 7. Two days before that time, there were some not very serious riots in Kishineff, and again on Christmas day. But the official Russian assurances were evidently given in good faith, for the police acted promptly and effectually in restraining the rioters. It would have been altogether too obvious for the government to have failed to preserve order, after such ample warning had been given the whole world. The outcome of the trial of those who participated in last year's riots gives too much ground for suspecting that the local, and perhaps even the imperial, authorities are in sympathy with the anti-Jewish movement. It would have been most injudicious to give further ground for that suspicion while the result of the trial is still fresh in the memory of the public. It must not be forgotten, however, that the Jews have some official friends in Russia. Prince Urussoff, governor of the province of Bessarabia, in which Kishineff is located, gives much credit to the Jews for the prosperity of the province and has presented to the Czar a written recommendation that the special laws which place oppressive restrictions upon the Jews as to occupation, place of residence, etc., be repealed. The Czar has professed interest in this proposal and has appointed an imperial commission to go over the whole subject.

United States Senator C. H. Dietrich, of Nebraska, who was indicted for bribery, has been discharged by the U. S. Circuit Court. It was charged that he accepted a consideration in return for his senatorial influence in the appointment of a postmaster. It was decided that, as he had not taken his seat in the Senate at the time when the alleged acts occurred, they did not constitute bribery within the definition of the statute.

A similar case came to a different issue in New York on the same day. Ex-congressman Driggs was convicted of receiving a bribe for his influence in the letting of a government contract. In the defense it was shown that at the time of the alleged act of bribery he had not yet taken his seat in Congress. The judge left it to the jury to decide whether a congressman-elect becomes a public officer, within the meaning of the statute defining bribery, at the time of his election or when he is sworn in and takes his seat. The jury took the former view, and brought in a verdict of guilty. The contrary verdict would have opened up large opportunities for corruption with immunity from punishment. When it is remembered that a period of thirteen months elapses between the election of a congressman and the beginning of the Congress to which he is elected, it will be observed that congressmen-elect would have ample time before taking the oath of office to sell their votes on any number of measures which are to be introduced.

It has been popularly supposed that the United States had a monopoly on that rough and ready form of international intercourse which is usually known as shirt-sleeve diplomacy, but Gen. Reyes, the Colombian envoy in Washington, has been giving some interesting examples of this art. Secretary Hay's answer to his first note, in which the Secretary, speaking for the administration, declined to reopen the Panama question, seems not to have been sufficiently definite. In a second communication, Gen. Reyes not only recapitulates Colombia's grievances against the United States, but enters an emphatic protest against the recognition of Panama, charges the United States with acting in bad faith in not taking steps to defend Colombian sovereignty over the isthmus, and urges Secretary Hay to send to the United States Senate the entire correspondence relating to this matter. Secretary Hay's reply quietly omits all reference to Gen. Reyes' accusations of bad faith and his gratuitous suggestions touching the relation of the State Department and the Senate, and repeats the opinion previously expressed, that there is nothing in the present situation to form a proper subject for arbitration. President Marroquin has recently been quoted as saying that Colombia confidently counts on the Democratic party to block the canal treaty in the Senate. Even this improbable event, however, would not, as the President points out in his recent message, restore Panama to Colombia. Credible reports from Bogota assert that popular sentiment there is clamorous for war against the United States and that, in the event of the ratification of the canal treaty and the rejection of the proposals for arbitration, the Colombian government will inevitably be wrecked by a popular uprising unless it declares war.

Russia has sent her reply to the Japanese demand touching Korea, without waiting until the time limit when Japan asserted that she would declare war. The reply is non-committal and, unless the local tension becomes too great, it will probably have the effect of postponing the beginning of hostilities pending some further diplomatic exchanges. The Russian reply has not yet been made public, but it is said that, while conceding Japan's status in Korea, Russia makes counter-demands which more than offset this concession. All such statements must, however, be entirely conjectural until the text of the correspondence is given to the public. The Japanese cabinet is engaged in drafting a reply to the Russian note. The most immediate danger is that hostilities will break out spontaneously, without waiting for a declaration of war. A Japanese fleet has been dispatched to intercept and bring back a fleet of colliers, which were recently chartered from their Japanese owners by Russian representatives, and which sailed for Port Arthur before the government was aware of their destination. A Russian fleet has also been dispatched to meet the colliers and prevent their capture. In a case like this, it is almost inevitable that there should be trouble if the two fleets come together. It has been reported that a collision between these two fleets has already occurred, but the report is not confirmed. United States marines from the "Vicksburg" have been landed in Korea, and have proceeded to Seoul, the capital, where they will be in readiness to protect American interests.

The position which the European and Asiatic powers will assume toward the Russian-Japanese imbroglio, is a subject for interesting conjecture, but one about which there is but little trustworthy information. One report, which is so far uncontradicted, says that the Triple Alliance (Germany, Austria and Italy) has agreed to keep out of the fight whatever may happen. This report has the advantage of inherent probability, especially so far as Austria and Italy are concerned. Germany is certainly too much interested in the ultimate partition of the Chinese Empire to assist Japan in repelling the force through which, if at all, that partition will be brought about. At the same time it can easily be seen that in the event of a victory, even with the help of Germany, Russia would have far more to gain than her ally, and the Kaiser is probably too shrewd to burn his fingers in pulling Russian chestnuts out of the fire. France, Russia's avowed ally, has little interest and less sympathy with the program of aggression in Manchuria, and cannot be counted upon to give more than perfunctory support to Russia in the war. Great Britain, by the terms of her recent treaty with Japan, is bound to come to her assistance if any power comes to the aid of her enemy.

Pope Pius has issued an edict intended to abolish the right of veto in all future papal elections. It is to be remembered that the civil governments of several Catholic countries, such as Austria, France and Spain, have the right to present through their respective cardinals a veto to any candidate for the papal office. It is understood that Austria exercised this right in the recent conclave. The Pope's new edict imposes a sentence of excommunication upon any cardinal who shall hereafter present such a veto. The possibility of the exercise of a veto by France has been especially galling to the Catholic hierarchy since the anti-clerical tendencies of that government have become so pronounced. It has been unpleasant enough to the papacy to concede the right of a republic to exercise a veto on papal elections, but for it to be exercised by a republic which expels the monks and breaks up religious organizations which have not received the governmental sanction, is intolerable. This whole question of the right of veto in papal elections is in many respects parallel to the mediæval contest over the investiture of bishops. The civil authorities in the Holy Roman Empire claimed the right to invest the bishops with the symbols of such temporal powers as were considered to belong to their office, thus indicating that the bishops received their temporal authority from the emperor and not from the pope. Such a claim could, of course, have validity only so long as it was conceded that the bishops had a certain authority as temporal princes. Similarly, the claim of the civil governments of Europe to a voice in the election of the popes, can have no great force now that the papacy has ceased to be itself a civil government.

It is doubtful whether any special protest will be made against the pope's recent edict, and even if there is a protest, there is no possible way in which the powers can back it up, as the emperors backed their claims in the old investiture controversy by withholding the temporal dignities—because there are no longer any temporal dignities to withhold. The incident illustrates the fact that the papacy as a purely spiritual power is far more independent than it could ever be while exercising temporal sovereignty. It is interesting to note, too, that while Pius the Tenth, like his predecessors, is pleading for the restoration of the papal sovereignty over Rome and its vicinity, he is taking advantage of the loss of that sovereignty to gain for the papacy a degree of independence which would not otherwise have been conceded to it.

We are becoming somewhat accustomed to the idea that, in spite of civil service reform, the public service is considerably honeycombed with dishonesty. Such revelations as the recent post-office scandal and the known corruption of many legislatures and city assemblies, give ground for congratulation that the public service is not more extensive than it is, and furnish an argument against government ownership and control of those important classes of business which are called natural monopolies. But is there more corruption in the administration of the government's business than there is in private corporations? The president of an important manufacturing concern, writing anonymously in "The World To-Day," asserts that the contrary is the case, and backs his statement by a large number of illustrations drawn from his own experience. According to his statement, it is a common practice for salesmen representing large manufacturing companies, to bribe the salaried buyers of jobbing houses. In this way a buyer receiving a salary of perhaps $3,000 a year may receive from three to five times that amount from the concerns which he favors in placing his orders. Sometimes it is only a question of choosing between equally desirable goods at the same price, the order being given to the firm who will pay the largest bonus into the private purse of the buyer. More often, the buyer, influenced by the bribe, gives an order for inferior goods at a high price, thus treacherously betraying the firm which places confidence in him and pays him his salary. Just how far this practice extends in the business world it is impossible to say, for even when such irregularities are discovered by the firms that are victimized, the matter is hushed up for fear it will injure the reputation of the company. There is no such publicity given to the affairs of private corporations as there is to the operations of the various departments of the government. The writer of the above mentioned article expresses the belief that there is a far smaller percentage of corruption in public than in private business. Perhaps if we knew all the facts regarding the methods employed in the administration of large private corporations, we would be less afraid of government ownership and control, as offering increased opportunities for graft.

Japan's best chance of finding an ally lies in the awakening of China, who is now coming to somewhat tardy, but none the less vivid, realization of the fact that if the Russian-Japanese war issues in a funeral, she will be the corpse. The reports regarding the number of Chinese soldiers who are ready to march to the aid of Japan the moment hostilities begin, are too untrustworthy to be worth repeating, but it is significant that the Chinese Grand Council has proposed to the Dowager Empress an alliance with Japan. Some of the particulars of this proposal are that China shall prepare at once to act on the offensive if Russia does not withdraw from Manchuria, and that England shall be invited to join the combination and shall be compensated by the cession of territory in southern Thibet. As China's hold upon Thibet is merely nominal, this gift of territory would cost the giver nothing, and would have the additional advantage of being an acute annoyance to Russia, who is jealous of every foot of English advance in that direction.

Some of the Russian papers, taking shrewd advantage of this Chinese awakening, are urging a pan-European alliance to combat the alleged pan-Asiatic alliance. This appeal is too futile to be very significant. The "pan-Asiatic alliance," otherwise known as "the yellow peril," is all humbug, at least so far as present conditions are concerned. It might serve the purpose of a bogey-man to frighten the European powers into alliance with Russia, if the sign "made in Russia" was not so apparent upon it. As it is, the appeal is only one way of inviting all Europe to fight for the advancement of Russian interests in the far east.

Brevities.

A financier is a man who handles other people's money for them and lets them stand the losses if they lose and takes the profits if they win.—The Birmingham Age-Herald.

A newspaper devoted to reforms in China is to be published in New York. Judging by results, we infer that the newspapers devoted to reform in New York have been published in China, and delayed in transmission.—The Washington Post.

Unconquered Land.—II.

In a previous and preliminary article, we stated in a very condensed manner, some of the chief things we have accomplished in the brief period of our existence as a religious reformation. This statement was designed merely as the basis and background of a few articles indicating some of the land yet remaining to be conquered and possessed. We now proceed to that task, but not without a deep sense of the responsibility involved in such an undertaking, and of our own inability to deal adequately with some of the problems which we will have to consider. We ask our readers to think these questions over with us, and to aid us by their suggestions or criticisms in reaching right conclusions.

1. Geographical Extension. We may as well consider first the unfinished work in making known to the people, in all parts of our own country, the principles and objects of our religious reformation. There are large sections of the United States where the masses of even the religious people have not so much as heard that there be a religious movement having for its object the restoration of the Christianity of Christ, and the consequent union of the people of God. What is even still more surprising is, that there are multitudes of people in the various churches and in the world, all around about us, who have a very false or vague and inadequate conception of what we are seeking to accomplish. It is not so much our purpose to point out the cause of this wide-spread ignorance of our religious movement, as to seek some remedy for it; and yet in so far as a knowledge of the causes may help us to find the remedy, it might be will to deal with some of these causes. No doubt the hostility which is always felt toward any new movement that disturbs the status quo in religion, has acted as a barrier to the free transmission of correct information as to the nature and purpose of our work. The fact that there has been a great diminution in partisan bitterness in recent years and a corresponding growth of the spirit of fraternity among Christians of different names and creeds, ought to make it more practicable now than it has been heretofore, to disseminate a correct knowledge of our plea for religious reformation. Another fact contributes to the same end, namely: that there has been a marked development of the irenic spirit among the advocates of this reformation, which enables them to state their position in a way to command a wider hearing. This is the natural order of development in all religious reformations. There is, of necessity, at first, the period of debate and controversy, in which attacks upon the new movement are repulsed and counter-attacks are made upon the attacking hosts. When, at last, a peace has been conquered, and the movement has won recognition, then follows a constructive period in which the irenic spirit predominates over the pugilistic, and there is a clearer and wider view of its relationship to other religious forces, and to the whole circle of religious truth. Henceforth its work is carried forward by different methods and in a different spirit. The Disciples of Christ have fairly entered upon this constructive period of their development, and are facing some of the new problems which belong to this stage of their growth.

The time would seem to be opportune, then, for a new effort to bring before the whole religious world a statement of the ideas and ideals for which we stand, seeing that the world is better prepared to receive it, and we are better prepared to give it. How may this unfinished task be best accomplished? First of all, it seems to us there should be fresh statements of the various features and fundamental principles of our movement, prepared for the express purpose of giving the desired information, and giving it in a form likely to prove most acceptable to those whom we wish to receive it. Many of the former statements were adapted, wisely enough, to the times for which they were intended, and a few of them may serve their purpose yet, but in the main we must rely upon modern, fresh statements to meet the demands of our own time. One of the tasks, therefore, that lies immediately before us is the enlistment of the very best talent of the brotherhood in the preparation of brief, cogent tracts or booklets on the various topics which enter into a full presentation of our plea to the world. This should be followed by some systematic method of getting such literature before the people for whom it is intended.

In the second place, the pulpit has an important part to perform in making known to the people among whom the churches are located, the distinctive features of our movement. A series of Sunday night sermons, dealing with the whole range of subjects involved in our position, in the real spirit of Christian union, would do much to place us in the proper light before the various communities in which our churches are located. The time has come when this can be done in a spirit that was hardly possible a generation ago. This needs to be done for the benefit of our own young people that are growing up in the church, as well as of those without. Henry Ward Beecher once said: "You can say anything to people that you want to say, if you love them and say it in love." That truth is worth remembering in undertaking to deal faithfully and loyally with the evils which afflict the modern church.

But all our literature and all our preaching will lack effectiveness, unless it be backed up by a practical manifestation of the spirit of unity in our relations with each other and with the religious peoples about us. There has been a growing approximation to

New Testament ideals on the part of all the evangelical Protestant bodies, and especially has there been a growth in the spirit of fellowship and of co-operation. Not to recognize such tendency, and to refuse to enter in and co-operate as far as possible with all other Christians, for the promotion of common ends, is to deny in practice what we preach in theory, and to largely neutralize our plea for unity. Perhaps the most effective way that is now open to us for giving the religious world a correct conception of what we are, and of what we are here for, is our hearty entrance into all the great co-operative movements of the time, that our brethren of other churches may know us better, may be able to see our point of view and catch something of the motives that animate us in our work. That this course involves the sacrifice of any truth or principle for which we stand, is not true. On the contrary, we cannot refuse such co-operation and be true to the spirit and purpose of our own religious movement.

A vigorous and wise use of these three methods of making known our position to the world, would, within the next decade, accomplish the most marvelous and desirable results along the very line of the fulfillment of our mission in the world.

"Blight of Religious Denominationalism."

It is well occasionally for the Church to know how keen, discriminating minds, unbiased by denominationalism, look upon our ecclesiastical divisions. The following excerpt from an editorial in the Springfield Republican will serve to indicate how the divided condition of Christendom militates against some needed reforms:

Our public schools are founded on two principles which should never be abandoned, and these are, first, democracy in education, as opposed to the caste idea of the British aristocracy; second, absolute freedom from the blight of religious denominationalism. It is impossible to introduce the influence of religious denominations into the system of public education without destroying its unity and gravely impairing its efficiency. Until religious denominations find a common basis of belief and action, until the unification of religious thought and worship is accomplished sufficiently to eliminate religious rivalries, prejudices, and hates, let ecclesiasticism leave the education of the masses to that agency which alone, in this country, has the means and the power to make education at once free, universal, and democratic. That agency is the state.

There is a growing feeling that the fundamental principles of morality, at least, and perhaps of religion might be and ought to be taught in our public schools as a necessary condition of good citizenship. But the fear of carrying denominationalism into the public schools stands as a barrier to every effort to make them factors in the moral life of the nation. "Until religious denominations find a common basis of belief and action, until the unification of religious thought and worship is accomplished sufficiently to eliminate religious rivalries, prejudices and hates"—we must postpone many of the great moral reforms which the world so much needs. "How long, O Lord, how long?" Has not the time come when we can at least "eliminate religious rivalries, prejudices and hates?" Great progress has already been made in this direction, but more is yet possible. Working together for objects of common interest is the best way to promote such progress.

Bro. Spayd's Experience in South Africa.

In another place, we publish an article from our brother, L. W. Spayd, who has recently returned from a visit to South Africa, and who relates his experience among the brethren in that far-off region of the world. It is not difficult for us to understand why Brother Spayd should feel very deeply, and write rather vigorously upon the subject he treats, as the editor of this paper had a very similar experience with the same kind of brethren in England more than twenty years ago. If we had known of the existence of these churches in South Africa and whence the evangelists came who established them, we could have saved Brother Spayd his long journey to that country with a view to co-operating with them. It is not possible for any representative man among the Disciples of Christ in this country, to co-operate with those whom we sometimes speak of, as the Old Brethren in England, or in South Africa; and retain his freedom and self-respect. Unconditional surrender to whims and fancies that have no solid basis in Scripture, is the only condition of fellowship and co-operation with them.

The editor of this paper during his stay in England of nearly two years, made every effort in his power to find a basis of co-operation with these old churches, by which he could maintain self-respect and a good conscience; but every such basis was rejected by these brethren. We did not ask of them, as Brother Spayd did not ask, that they should change their views, or modify their practices, but that they would allow us the same liberty of opinion which they claimed for themselves; but this, they would not grant. Not that these brethren were schismatics, consciously, for we agree with the testimony of Brother Spayd, that they are conscientious and faithful to their conception of what their duty is; but there is a quiet assumption of infallibility by these brethren, that we know little of in this country, except in a few abnormal cases. It is this fact, together with their peculiar views, that makes co-operation with them impossible. What their peculiar methods are, is indicated in Brother Spayd's article. It is not to be wondered at that he feels he has been wounded in the house of his brethren. We would call this intolerance, but these good brethren in South Africa and those in England who sent them out, call it "fidelity to New Testament teaching."

With characteristic generosity and magnanimity, Brother Spayd advises, in spite of this unbrotherly treatment, that South Africa be left to these brethren and those who agree with them, and that we seek other mission fields. In this, we believe Brother Spayd is right. Why should we engage in competition with these brethren, narrow and sectarian in spirit though we believe them to be, when there remains so much unoccupied territory into which we may go? This question might have been raised with reference to England, but it is only just to say that there were and are, reasons for establishing churches in England that fairly represent the spirit and catholicity of our plea, that do not apply to South Africa and other similar mission fields. England is itself, a great missionary center, from which there radiate continually, religious influences throughout the world.

While we agree with Brother Spayd that, under the circumstances, South Africa might be left to these brethren to evangelize, we think it would be well to leave them to rely on assistance from such brethren as believe with them, and can heartily endorse their methods of work. Speaking for ourselves, we prefer to give our money where it can be devoted to the presentation of the gospel in a different, and, as we think, in a more scriptural spirit. If it be true, that we have a class of brethren in this country, whom Brother Spayd calls the "Independents," who can conscientiously co-operate with these brethren in South Africa, let them do so by all means. We are of the opinion, however, that there are very few brethren in the United States who would sympathize with these brethren in all their ideas. Our "Independents," as they are called in this country, are opposed to missionary societies, but these extreme conservatives in the old world have their missionary organizations, and ecclesiasticism counts for much more with them than it does with us. Then their close communion practice finds little sympathy among the brethren in this country.

The main lesson to be drawn from the facts mentioned in Brother Spayd's letter, is, that when we depart from our historic position of making faith in Christ our only creed, and obedience to his plain commands, our only test of fellowship, and begin to erect our opinions into tests of fellowship, and to regard them as sacred as the plain commands of Christ, we are on the plain road that leads inevitably to sectism. Those who pursue that course have forgotten, or have never learned, the principle laid down by Thomas Campbell: "Where the Scriptures speak, we speak; where the Scriptures are silent, we are silent." That is, where the Scriptures bind us, we are bound: where the Scriptures leave us free, we are free, and no man, nor church, nor committee, nor conference, nor council, "nor any other creature," shall enslave us.

A Worthy Tribute to a Noble Man.

The Augusta (Ga.) papers contain lengthy reports of the funeral services of our deceased brother, A. B. Phillips, whose sudden death has plunged that city in profound grief. The venerable J. S. Lamar, the first pastor of the church, was present and conducted the services. The papers mention his grief as he paid a loving tribute to his departed friend and brother. "Hesitatingly and with many a fond look at the casket, the patriarch spoke and wept." The report says:

"The service was one of the saddest and most touching ever witnessed in the city. Scarcely could a dry eye be found in the church. Stalwart men, accustomed to the sorrows and hardships of life, of iron nerve and great self-control, bowed their heads as the casket was borne to the altar, and the warm, glowing tributes to Mr. Phillips fell from the faltering lips and aching hearts."

Rev. Spark W. Melton, pastor of the First Baptist Church, speaking in behalf of the other ministers of the city, paid an eloquent tribute to Brother Phillips, from which we make the following extracts:

"We admired Mr. Phillips for his intellectual strength. No man could meet him as we met him, without admiring his deep learning, his broad culture, his keen discrimination, his superb mental grasp of almost an endless variety of subjects. There was no avenue of thought along which he had not walked. There were no fields of investigation into which he had not entered, and from which he brought many sparkling gems, as the reward of his efforts; and yet, so modest was he that it never occurred to us to envy; but he inspired us always to admire him for his intellectual triumphs.

"We loved him for the catholicity of spirit that characterized him always, in all his relations with his brethren. On his tomb might be written, and none would ever question the sentiment, 'He loved his fellow men.' His was a love that recognized no sectarian or denominational bound. He was big enough, and broad enough, and Christlike enough, to love his brother, whomsoever and wheresoever he might be found. After all, what higher tribute could be paid him than this, for has not revelation told us 'that we know that we have passed from death unto life because we love the brethren?'"

"My venerable friend has spoken to us of the spiritual side of his life. I, too, knew him in this relation, and I never left him without feeling that I had been with a man of God.

"Other things I might say, if time permitted, but I do desire to say in all candor and sincerity that I have never known a man who possessed more lovable characteristics and fewer faults than our beloved brother.

"Tis said that no one could enter the presence of the statue Apollo Belvidere without standing erect, and if we, my brethren in the ministry, are not fuller men, broader men, better men, for having touched his life, the fault lies with us."

That life is not brief that leaves behind it a record like that. It is as long as eternity itself.

Editor's Easy Chair.

"I have been all this week," writes a good sister, "trying to help a poor family, and this burden on my heart has been lightened by the third stanza of your poem, 'What We Stand For.'" To lighten the burden of any human heart, and especially of a heart whose burden is the desire to help the poor and the needy, is a task we imagine angels might well covet. The letter set us to wondering how many of those in comfortable circumstances make it a burden of their heart to help some one else who is less fortunate than themselves. The real royalty of such service is not always appreciated. George MacDonald has somewhere said that it is in this life alone that we learn the lessons of patience and self-denial, "for there are no sick beds to watch by, no sufferers to soothe, or mourners to comfort, in the mansions of the Father's house." It ought to be some compensation for the hardships and privations of life, that we enjoy opportunities for service here in the world, where so many kind ministries are needed, that even the angels of heaven probably do not enjoy. This fact ought to reconcile us to living just as long as we can serve, and stimulate us to serving just as long as we live.

We have met people whose chief trouble in life seems to be that there are mysteries which they cannot solve. They seem possessed with the idea that if they could know the whys and wherefores of everything, life would be supremely happy. Such persons seem to have overlooked the saying of Paul, that though one have the gift of prophecy, and know all mysteries and all knowledge, he is not necessarily happy or useful. It is love, rather than knowledge, that makes life worth living. Why should we trouble ourselves about the mysteries of life? A recent writer has said: "It is well that there is an area of the vague in life. It is well that truths are so vast as to be insoluble by our present philosophy and our present faculties. It is well that mystery rises upon mystery in ever deepening obscurity. It is well that the riches of Christ are 'unsearchable.' For the area of the vague, the insoluble, the mysterious, the unsearchable are measures of the future possibilities of our spiritual development." They are the prophecies, in other words, of that endless progress in knowledge and in virtue, which is one of the brightest and most alluring hopes of the future. If we knew all the mysteries connected with this earth, we would want to get out of it as soon as possible and into another world, where there was something to learn.

"It is surprising to me," writes a brother who has been dipping into our earlier history a little, "that the pioneers in our movement were able to accomplish so much against all the religious prejudice, superstition, and tyranny of creeds which they had to encounter in the beginning of their work." It is marvelous, and it has but one explanation. They were men of faith. They had profound convictions of truth. This brought them into touch with God and with the infinite resources of heaven. The great men of all the ages past, who have lifted the world up to higher moral levels, have been men of faith. If you are looking for a man of strength, and of power to influence men for right, look for one with a stalwart faith in God, and with deep convictions of truth and duty. One such man in the midst of a community, standing for truth and righteousness, is worth more than a thousand weak and wavering souls, who believe nothing in particular, and do not believe that very strong. Get hold of the eternal verities with a strong grip, and you have a leverage by which to lift the world to higher altitudes. To lose faith, is to lose one's grip on spiritual realities and to forfeit the opportunity of being of any special service to the world.

In one of Dr. McLaren's sermons, he says, "I have been in villages in the Alps where, at the end of each narrow street or alley, there towered up a great, giant white peak. That," he says, "is what our lives may be, however noisome, crowded the little lane in which we live. The Alp is at the end of it, there, if we only choose to lift our eyes." In other words, the great preacher would tell us that in our most commonplace lives there are events, opportunities and duties which partake of the nature of the infinite and sublime, if we only had the vision to see them. This is a truth which, in one way or another, the Easy Chair has often sought to point out to its readers. When we view the objects and events of life in their higher relationships, there is nothing small or unimportant. That visit you made to the house of mourning to speak a word of comfort, seemed to you a very commonplace event, but being born of love, it partook of the nature of the divine and was an Alpine peak piercing the heaven. That word of encouragement which you spoke to the despairing woman, upon whom the thoughtless world was trampling, you deemed unimportant, but it was a note in the divinest symphony which reaches the ear of God from this discordant world. There is not an unselfish act, nor word of needed praise, nor generous deed, that does not lift the life above the commonplace, and give it a touch of the infinite and the eternal. Yes, there are white peaks rising at the end of the alleys and the streets on which we live, if we only have eyes to see and hearts to understand.

Notes and Comments.

Union corpus Sumus in Christo, is printed on the seal of the Evangelical Alliance of the United States, in its invitation for the week of united and universal prayer. "We are one body in Christ," is an excellent motto for the Evangelical Alliance. We do not always act as if this were so. The fact is there ought to be and must be a large amount of adjustment to make the motto fit the ecclesiastical situation. The ideal is the true one. Christ has but one body of which He is the head, and all who are partakers of his life are the members. Let us, then, have unity in the body.

That is a true statement of the needs of the church, too, in the circular letter of the Alliance:

What she lacks is precisely what she may gain through united prayer:—the augmenting of her faith; the sanctifying of her life; the perfecting of her unity in the Spirit and in the bond of peace; the re-ekindling of her enthusiasm for humanity and her passion for the saving of the lost; the setting on fire of her loyalty to Him who gave His life a ransom for the world.

We believe that prayer is essential to supply the lack indicated, but to be effective prayer must be accompanied by earnest, practical efforts to put away what we know to be displeasing to our common Lord, and to put into practice what we know He approves. Prayer for additional light and power and unity, will be more effective when we make a wise use of what we already possess of these blessings. This is a law of God from which even the most evangelical churches are not exempt.

The Pacific Christian, which has a way of hitting a nail on the head whenever it strikes, has an editorial on, "If We Want to Unite," in which it says:

Genuine Christlikeness—a real lovelikeness of Christ—would bring every honest believer in the power of prayer to his knees in humble, fervent petition to Almighty God that Christ's disciples might all be one. When Christians want to be one as Christ wanted them to be, they will pray for it as he did. And the absence of such prayer, which is remarkable upon close observation, is evidence of the absence of the desire. It is doubtful if we ourselves, who think we know the way to union, pray as fervently for the thing as did old Father Thomas Campbell even before he knew the way. He found the way because he had the desire. There is danger that we shall be too well satisfied to know the way and a million and a half of people who claim to be walking in that way with prospects of rapid increase as a people. Christ prayed that they all might be one and the full measure of his love shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Spirit will cause us not to be less solicitous about the unity of the church than about the conversion of the world.

Just so. No matter how much we know about the New Testament basis of unity, if we have not Christ's desire for unity, we shall neither be united among ourselves, nor with others. It was the desire for unity on the part of our fathers that enabled them to find the way to unity. Although it was a way that involved the sacrifice of many things they had once held dear, they hesitated not because they had the spirit of unity.

Faith and Belief

By Cephas Shelburne

To-day we were called upon to preach the funeral of a man who had been killed in a railroad wreck in Iowa, and his body shipped here from Des Moines. Arriving at the home, I had only a few moments' conversation with the wife before the services. She said, "Well, what do you want to know?" Said I, "Was your husband a Christian?" Her reply was, "He was a firm believer, but we could never get him to take the step." On inquiry as to what she meant by being a "firm believer," she said he believed in the Bible, Christ and the fundamental facts of the Christian faith, and was just as strong in our position as she was. And that he had sat under the preaching of the gospel for twenty years and had been through meeting after meeting held by our ablest evangelists, but had never brought himself to the points of surrender or the exercise of faith.

This position is not new or abnormal. There is hardly a man to-day who does not believe in the Christ, the Bible, and the fundamental facts of the Christian religion. Ninety-nine men out of every hundred will tell you that they believe these things, and they will go so far as to say that they know they ought to accept them.

There is a vast difference between faith and belief. James tells us that "devils believe." But they are very far from doing what faith always carries with it—acceptance. Belief is intellectual assent to the truth of a proposition, and this assent is natural and inevitable as soon as sufficient evidence is presented. Assent to certain religious doctrines, or even to the truths of the Bible and its Christ, is not the exercise of faith. Belief is passion; it rests upon evidence; it examines the facts and says, "I see." Faith is intelligent, action choice; it rests on facts, looks back to the testimony, but it also looks and moves forward and says, "I act." On the day of Pentecost, when they heard the facts as presented in Peter's sermon, they cried out, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" Faith always carries with it conviction, surrender, obedience, the doing of something. Christ, in giving commission to his apostles, said: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature: he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." There must be a surrender of the heart and life to Christ.

Faith is not an assent, it is an acceptance; not simply a belief in Christ, but trust in a personal Savior; not a condition merely, but an act of receiving. My beliefs are ever changing; my faith is as steadfast as the object of my faith. My faith in God cannot change, because God never changes. He is the same yesterday, to-day and forever. Faith is the first great principle that underlies all things and that governs all things, and that leads to salvation. The kind of faith required is that which cries out, "What wilt thou have me do?" That will enable the man who hears the truth, not simply and only to believe it, but to say: "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation." The 982 persons who heard the gospel in the great Joplin, Mo., meeting might have heard, as thousands of others do—believed every word of it, but not accepted it or surrendered in obedience to it. No man has exercised gospel faith until it is the power of God unto his salvation. This is the kind of faith by which the worlds were formed; by which Noah prepared an ark; by which the Red Sea was crossed; by which the walls of Jericho fell; by which kingdoms were subdued, righteousness was wrought, promises were obtained, and the mouths of lions were stopped.

The theologians tell us: "Only believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and a magical transformation will take place within you at once, and you will be changed from a child of Satan to a child of God; from a state of condemnation to a state of forgiveness." Christianity is not a doctrine or system of beliefs; it is a life.

Faith is not a mere belief, nor a mere matter of feeling. It is the acceptance of truth; the submission and obedience to truth's demands. Christ says: "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them."

Neither does faith require that it be logically demonstrated. Paul says, "For we walk by faith, not by sight; believing where we cannot prove." A sceptical age asks for the proof. "Prove God, immortality, the future life, and we will believe it." But there is no logical or scientific demonstration of God, the soul, the hereafter. These higher, spiritual things are deeply cut in the faith of humanity. It is true, in higher things, that "Nothing worthy proving can be proved." You cannot prove the soul, God, immortality. Levi Gilbert, in his splendid new book, "Side-Lights on Immortality," expresses this thought in these words: "The most precious things that dignify life—truth, love, beauty, righteousness, goodness—are all alike outside the test of the geometrician, the logician or chemist. We believe on higher evidence than the testimony of the physical senses, or solutions through algebraic symbols, or the precipitations in a laboratory. We have no linear measurements for a great ethical principle; we cannot give the troy-weight of a surging emotion of the heart; there is no quantitative analysis that can be applied to a mother's prayers; the tears of a bereaved one cannot be put into a scale-pan and so valued; patriotism cannot be estimated in precise monetary equivalents; by searching with a telescope we cannot find God; scopic and microscope have never discovered the soul. Reason is not the only faculty of man by which he ascertains truth. There are higher and other tests."

True; for here we walk by faith, not belief of the five senses. The great things of the universe and of the soul make their appeal direct to the human spirit. Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard them; they are recognized intuitively as true. Paul has it, "Faith is the assurance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." It is intuitive confidence, an inward impulse, a soul outlook. Reason can run no lines to heaven, and no plummets reach hell. "The divine pedigree of man, and his title-deed to immortal life are written upon the tablets of his own soul," and not upon tables of stone or leaves of books. Like Victor Hugo, he feels in himself the future life. He is rising, he knows, to the skies.

Jesus was not the first to proclaim immortality and a future life. It was in the faith of humanity. The old Jew lived in the presence of the eternal; and Plato and Aristotle taught the doctrine of immortality. Christ brought it to light, awakened the soul-thought, inspired hope, set the affections on things above, linked the finite with the infinite, in whose immortal image it was created, and gave the heavenly outlook. The agnostic may try to reason himself into the sentiment:

"The coffin nails rust,
The brain is white dust,
And the sleeping that knows no dream."

And Ingersoll, "in fine frenzy rolling," may find satisfaction in the rhetorical and poetical speech: "We are face to face with a great mystery. We question, but there is no reply. Out of the waste seas there drifts no spar. Over the desert of death the sphinx gazes forever, but never speaks. Beyond we do not know. Fate is speechless. Destiny is dumb, and the secret of the future has never been told."

Very good, and very beautiful for an agnostic. But we shall continue to thank God that there are such men, and scores and thousands, whose faith and hope and trust flood all life with glory and beauty; lifts them out of such gloom and black despair; places their faith on the external soul principle, "we know;" and like our brother in the faith, C. P. Williamson, who, dying in a hospital in Brooklyn, calmly wrote: "I can look the enemy square in the face and tell him I am his master, and I do not fear him for a moment. He is mine, for all things are ours, whether life or death, or things present or things to come."

As Seen From the Dome By F. D. Power

The opening of our new year is saddened by the death of our beloved Alonzo B. Phillips, of Augusta, Ga. He greatly endeared himself to our Washington people during the exchange of pulpits for the month of February, 1903. In his own field, as pastor of the historic church which he has sewed so worthily for nearly five years, he was universally loved. No minister ever stood higher in the estimation of the people of the beautiful Southern city, irrespective of denominational affiliation, and his death caused universal sorrow. He preached his last sermon Dec. 20. It was an earnest and direct appeal to the unsaved. Early in the week he contracted a severe cold, but no one thought it serious. Thursday he called in a physician who pronounced it an attack of the "Grippe," and on Monday at noon he passed away. It was a great shock to his family and friends. On Tuesday the last services were held, conducted by J. S. Lamar, who was assisted by the other ministers of the city. A large congregation assembled to pay tribute to his memory, representing all classes and denominations. His body was placed in a vault and will be taken later to Kansas City, Mo.

Our brother was born near Barnesville, O., March 25, 1861. He was educated at Bethany College and Union Seminary, N. Y. While at Union he was assistant to B. B. Tyler. Completing his course of study he became pastor of the South Prospect Street Church, Kansas City. A new church building was erected during his pastorate and the congregation doubled. Here he married Miss Elizabeth Kerr, and their home life was very happy and beautiful, and blessed with two children. For several years he served the church at Fulton, Mo., and was then called to Augusta, Ga., where he succeeded Wallace Tharp. The work here prospered under his ministry. He had perhaps the largest Sunday evening audiences of any pastor in the city. The church was usually filled to its utmost. He was a favorite, especially with young men. Of a cheery and friendly disposition, with a cordial and encouraging word for every one, he readily made friends. A genuine wholesome sort of Christian he impressed all with a sense of the peace and good will of the gospel he preached. A lover of the best books, and a clear thinker and forceful speaker, his sermons were always effective and stimulating. He was a useful man, and had won an honored place in the church and community. His gentleness and kindness, his charity and liberality, his nobleness and purity of life will leave an abiding fragrance. Our Washington people share in the grief of the good brethren of Augusta and extend their tender sympathy to his dear ones in their bereavement. L. A. Cutler, A. B. Phillips and A. G. Thomas are three of our Eastern preachers, standing high in the counsels of the brotherhood, who within a few days of each other have entered into the better life. Thomas R. Bond, of Virginia, one of the supports of our work in the Old Dominion, has also fallen asleep in Christ. God buries His workmen, but carries on His work.

Plans are already maturing for the coming summer at our seaside resort, Bethany Beach, Delaware. President Cramblet was recently in Washington, and we mapped out an attractive program. The board of control by direction of the Maryland Christian Missionary Society is enlarged to include in addition to the present committee, Cramblet, Bagby and Power, the following: J. J. Haley, of Richmond; Dr. E. E. Montgomery, of Philadelphia; W. H. Graham, of Allegheny; Dr. Eli Long, of Buffalo; S. T. Willis, of New York; J. A. Lord and S. M. Cooper, of Cincinnati; A. R. Teachout, of Cleveland; Z. T. Sweeney, of Columbus; C. A. Young, of Chicago; B. A. Jenkins, of Lexington; F. H. Main, of Detroit, and J. I. Bitner, of Hagerstown. Many improvements may be expected in the accommodations at the Beach and in the features of the Assembly. While planning for the St. Louis Exposition, "Christian Church Day," and a call at Alexander Campbell's "Study," keep in mind the far greater attractions of Old Ocean and Bethany-Beside-the-Sea.

Here at the seat of government, churches like republics, are born in a day. When we were enjoying one of the chief benedictions of the old year—the visit of J. H. Garrison—the cornerstone of our Thirty-fourth Street Church was laid. On New Year's day we formally organized in the chapel, fifteen signing the charter membership roll, and one making a good confession. The little chapel where the editor of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST assisted in the corner-stone laying is up and in use. About forty persons will go into the organization. It is located in a rapidly growing suburb and we expect to have a strong church there in two years. This is our fifth church. The same week the Thirty-fourth Street Church laid its cornerstone, the Vienna congregation had a similar celebration. This work, started in the little Virginia town by some of our Vermont Avenue Church people ten years ago, is now, under the labors of Jas. T. Watson, a church of forty members. The location is very desirable, eighteen miles from the city and is rapidly building up with the overflow of the capital. The corner-stone is historic, being a piece of marble from the old capitol building secured by Joel Grayson. The new church will be known as Antioch. We may claim this as our sixth. Our seventh is on the way. The mission in the Southeastern section of the city was opened under most favorable auspices Sunday, Jan. 3rd. The lot is purchased at 13th and D. Sts. S. E. and plans already drawn for a house to cost $6,000. This mission we expect to be supplied by a swarm from the Ninth Street Church, which now has a membership of eleven hundred.

The churches here are growing. Nine have been added recently to the Ninth Street Church, eight to Whitney Avenue, and two were baptized Sunday, Jan. 3, at Vermont Avenue. The H. Street Church welcomed their new pastor, J. Murray Taylor, the first Sunday in the New Year. He comes to us with the record of good work at Madison, Ind., and is taking hold with enthusiasm. The possibilities of this field are great. F. B. Sapp, the retiring pastor, will give himself for a time to the work of an evangelist. Across

(Continued on page 59.)

GIVES "GO"

Food That Carries One Along.

It's nice to know of food that not only tastes delicious but that puts the snap and go into one and supplies staying power for the day.

A woman says: "I have taken enough medicine in my time to furnish a drug store but in later and wiser years I have taken none but have depended, for the health I now enjoy, on suitable and sustaining food of which I keep on hand a tested variety, plain but nourishing.

"Of these my main dependence is Grape-Nuts, especially if I have before me a day of unusual effort either mental or physical. In this case I fortify myself the first thing in the morning with about 4 teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts moistened with cream and not much else for breakfast and the amount of work I can then carry through successfully without fatigue or exhaustion is a wonder to those about me and even to myself.

"Grape-Nuts food is certainly a wonderful strengthener and is not a stimulant for there is no reaction afterwards but it is sustaining and strengthening as I have proved by long experience." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason four teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts and cream will add more strength and carry one further than a plateful of coarse heavy food that is nearly all waste. Grape-Nuts food is condensed, pre-digested and delicious. It contains the parts of the Wheat and Barley grains that supply the rebuilding parts for Brain and Nerve Centres.

Look in each package for a copy of the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville.

The New Battle With Bacchus

By William Durban

The world outside the United Kingdom may wonder at the marvelous phenomenon of a wrecked government remaining coolly and comfortably in power. Never in the whole course of English history during the 600 years since, in the reign of Edward I., the Parliament was inaugurated, has any cabinet been more badly shattered, and never has a disintegrated government clung thus tenaciously to office. It is to be noted, however, that whenever any administration has attempted to perpetuate itself in the supreme position it has always been Tory. There is something about Conservatism, which generates lust for power. Toryism means selfish tenacity. That was why Britain lost America. King George was a full-blown Tory and adhered stubbornly to every vestige of prerogative. And we are now in England tasting a fine sample of the genuine article called Conservatism in politics. Unfortunately for us, political Conservatism also means Conservatism in Churchianity. In Christianity the Conservative element is of value. So it is in politics. But when we have two elements combined in a certain blend, the mixture is a fearfully combustible compound, and it is now setting the land on fire.

Religious Radium.

I am reminded by the singular position of affairs, of an analogy in current science. The scientists in England, France and America are all greatly excited over the researches and the revelations in connection with that mysterious element called radium, extracted from pitchblende. But the most extraordinary fact about radium seems to be that it entirely upsets the old atomic theory of Dalton, by giving off another element called helium. This is the kind of process which is evolving in our national life. Our state religion is like radium in that it gives off strange emanations very different from real religion. We get class pride, prelatic presumption, the overwhelming arrogance of many a church dignitary, the spirit of emulations, strife, varyings and drunkenness with the Circean cup of secular patronage and privilege. Hence the terrific blunder of the late Archbishop of Canterbury, Frederick Temple, and of the late Lord Salisbury in conspiring with others of the peerage and the prelacy to crush out the national free schools and to hoist on the nation the yoke of a sectarian system of instruction which is, above all, semi-papist. But the government under the influence of Balfour, our dilettante Premier, and of Joseph Chamberlain, ex-Colonial secretary, and now stump-orator on innovated fiscalty, is seeking to perpetrate another political crime. That is to say, this administration of cripples is begging for the support of the big brewers and colossal distillers as the props of a decadent Tory regime.

Judas Under the Upas.

The drink traffic is the upas tree under which this government is now taking refuge. Mr. Balfour does not disdain the shadow of any political shame. It is grievous to have to pronounce such a dictum on so accomplished, versatile, able and charming statesman. But his urbanity is of a dangerous type. His great relative, his uncle, the Marquis of Salisbury, was blunt, often repellent, taciturn except when compelled to make big orations, and delighted to administer the most brutal metaphorical kicks to Demos, which servile corpus seemed to love to grovel at the feet of the last of the Barons. But the nephew of Mr. Balfour, is sleek, unctious, golf-trotting, piano-playing, philosophic-doubting, indolent and mysteriously lucky, for the fates have uniformly favored this scion of the great house of Hatfield. "The Luck of Balfour," is proverbial. But fortune is fickle and may not long be as propitious as heretofore. It is a firm conviction with the public that the government intends to remain in power at least long enough to redeem Mr. Balfour's shocking pledge to the brewers and publicans that a Compensation Bill for licences refused to be continued by the magistrates shall be carried through next session. Thus, the "strongest government of modern times," as this administration was called during Salisbury's lifetime, is next going to depend on the smiles of the beerocrats. It has basked first in the favor of the landlords, for it started off with a bill for the payments of a large proportion of the land-taxes out of the imperial exchequer; and it secondly courted the approval of the clergy by increasing the subsidy of their schools out of the rates; and thirdly it is on the eve of propitiating the fiend that squats in the wine-vats and sweats in the mash-tun. This is the lowest depth of degradation. When King Edward opens Parliament in February it is fully expected that he will be constrained by his apostate ministers to proclaim himself the faithful ally of Bacchus. Vast numbers of us here do not relish the program. We do not tolerate patiently the prospect of seeing the king whom we have learned to love for his constant geniality standing on the throne of this Empire, to fling to the devil a sop soaked in the tears of widows and the blood of massacred innocents. But that is exactly the spectacle for which we are prepared by all the portents.

The Awakening of London.

Here in my great London—this colossal city of cosmopolitan associations, of indefinable fascinations, of midnight horrors, of meridian delights, of gardens springing up everywhere, of new palatial edifices in formation, of boundless affluence, of pitiless poverty, of blazing fashion, of abysmal misery, of magnificent churches, of direful infidelity—here in my dear old and new London, always the same yet ever changing, like a huge fairy kaleidoscope, we are witnessing a stirring of the dry bones of citizenship. For the people of this mammoth county city are being stirred at last to a deep sense of the iniquity which has for years formed the principle of polity on the part of the government. We have been victimized by plunderers all during the hideous Boer war, the guilt of which was due to Chamberlain and Kruger alike. We have submitted as a nation to the proud domination of the most arrogant section of our aristocratic grade. We have lain still in somnolent obesity while John Bull's purse has been rifled by ecclesiastical raiders and pirate land-grabbers. And now, bewildered by the new Chamberlain escapade, and worried by the awful revelations of jobbery and robbery disclosed by the War Commission Enquiry, the people of London, usually lagging behind the rest of the nation, are suddenly giving signs of wide-awake indignation. A tremendous reaction is in prospect. And I believe that the final precipitating cause of upheaval which will absolutely smash the government of unscrupulous mediocrities (for such the majority of this Cabinet are) will be the policy of the Premier in relation to the drink traffic, especially on the crucial question of compensation. Mr. Balfour is remaining in London. His beloved Whittinghame, that beautiful Scottish home, claims him, but he cannot go north. Great events are in store, and great preparations are in hand. A very striking speech was delivered at Newport, in Monmouthshire, a few days ago, by Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, in reply to various allegations by Mr. Chamberlain. He said that we have in power a government which has patched itself up for the express purpose (they have never spoken of any other purpose) of preventing the reduction of public houses. Their one avowed purpose is to find an enormous subsidy for the drink trade. No less a sum than 180 million pounds a year is spent on strong drink, and it is to be treated as a freehold, and the discretion of the licensing magistrates is to be revoked and curtailed. If the brewers want compensation, they will get it in the enhanced value of the unextinguished licenses, and as nine-tenths of the licensed houses are "tied houses," the difficulty cannot be insuperable. That is the argument of Sir Henry Campbell Bannerman. (A "tied house" is a great institution in Britain. It simply means a drink shop bought up by a big brewery, and the vast majority of the public-houses are now thus the property of the brewing plutocrats.) One of America's dangers is the aggrandizement of the brewing interest. Should the temperance people sleep and allow this alligator to grow in the social swamps till it matures as it has done in the old country?

Now, by the awakening of London, I mean the stir that is beginning on this drink question in its political aspect. The policy of the government is creating much indignation. We have had in the borough where I am living a municipal election. It was a glorious victory for the grand progressive party to which I am proud to belong. And all over London much the same process of ousting the "moderates" took place. November, 1903, was a month that will be remembered in London. The Moderates are the municipal henchmen of the Tory politicians, the agents of jobbery and corruption in many a direction. But their ignominious rout all over Greater London has reversed their victory of four years back, which was gained by a pretended program of economy and retrenchment. That has meant economy in all things worth expenditure for the benefit for the common people but extravagance in every enterprise for the profit of partisan firms and individuals. The municipal victory is the precursor of a like triumph over the forces of class conservatism and ecclesiastical bigotry, if the signs of the times can possibly be accepted as indicating the prospect before us.

London, England.

The Religious Minded

BY W. O. MOORE

"Ye men of Athens, in all thing I perceive that ye are very religious. For as I passed along, and observed the objects of your worship, I found also an altar with this inscription, To An Unknown God. What ye therefore worship in ignorance, this I set forth unto you." Acts 17:23.

Man is capable of being religious. This can be affirmed of him as well as it can be affirmed that he is capable of seeing, of hearing, of thinking and of determining on a given course of life. Some cannot see. Their eyes are destroyed or in a condition not to receive light. They are blind. One's eyes may be all right, but he may be where there is no light. Night may be upon him or he may be where light does not exist. He may be in some subterranean place or in some dungeon. One's eyes may be impaired so that while he says that he sees, he does not see anything distinctly. Some cannot hear. Their ears do not act. Others can hear, but their hearing is imperfect.

There are many of whom it can be said: Their eyes and ears are in a good condition, but they are not rightly used. They fail to see and hear what they ought to. They purposely withhold their eyes from what they should see and are sure to see what they should not. The same is true of their ears. They are dull of hearing—wanting in eagerness to hear what is for their good, and swift to hear what savors not of holiness and eternal life.

There are many whose religious faculties are void of action. We deplore the condition of those who bow habitually, though reverently, to idols. In their way they are very religious. They have an actual faith, a reverent spirit, a disposition to worship. Their religious faculties, or the God-given powers by which they are constituent beings, capable of being religious, are active but misdirected. The man who directs a ship may not see as he ought. The ship may be surrounded by a fog that is more or less dense. The light of day is obscured. His failure to see clearly the expanse of waters that is before him is not owing to any weakness of his eyes, but to environment. The heathen worships as he does because of conditions of his birth and training. He is in darkness, but capable of receiving the light, if what prevents the light from reaching him could be removed. As we look at the heathen and behold his devotions, we can say: 1. He has his religious faculties and is using them the best he can. 2. He would do better if he could. Many a missionary can testify to the truthfulness of this statement.

In our own country there are many who are religious, but because of surroundings and training are innocently making void the word of God or some very essential portions of it by their traditions. They teach for doctrines the commandments of men. They will not be delivered from this condition until it becomes possible for them to grow in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ and what he demands. It can be said of them that much depends upon circumstances and their own inclinations. We can admire their devotions and earnestly wish that they could become wholly delivered from the powers of darkness.

There are many who live in the midst of religious influences whose religious faculties are dormant. They hear the church bells on Lord's day but are moved by no disposition to gather with the saints, that they, with them, may ascribe praise to God.

They are dull of hearing—not concerned to hear the word of God. They are not religious, though they mingle with those who rejoice in the Lord. The love of Christ does not constrain them. Their conscience is dead. They are worldly minded. They are conformed to the world in spirit, in aims, in actions.

Persons who are recognized as members of churches have said, when urged to steadfastness in the Lord, "I am not religious." What a terrible confession. This confession is rendered in a thoughtless and irreligious manner. The heathen in many instances is very religious. He does the best he can. Think of the many in our own country who are members of churches who reside near the place where the word of God is proclaimed! This to them is a matter of no consequence. They glory not in the cross of Christ. The love of Christ is not in them. Destiny does not concern them. They are capable of knowing and worshipping God. Why should they be dead to Christ, to religion, to holiness and heaven? Why name the name of Christ and then be dominated by a spirit that is not of him?

The heathen, in many instances, can come before God in judgment and testify, "I have done the best I could." Think of what his thoughts will be as he shall stand before God and say: "I never before knew of you, your greatness, your glory." How about those who put the word of God from them? When they shall stand before God in judgment will they not be overwhelmed with a sense of condemnation that will be inexpressible? What will be their chagrin as they will think of wasted advantages for knowing the Lord and of neglected opportunities for abounding in his service?

Those who are very religious under the light of the gospel are religious in the highest and best sense. It cannot be said of them, "Whom ye ignorantly worship declare we unto you." They are not in darkness. They are full of light—knowledge—and walk in the light. They exalt the Lord and his word. Their manner of life is such as to serve to induce others to look with favor on Christ and his teachings and to consecrate themselves to his service.

God has done much for us. Are we profiting as we should by his mercies? Are we very religious? If not, why not? Can we be ignorant of our duties and obligations and expect God to overlook such ignorance? No one who neglects the word of God or puts it from him need to think he can shield himself by pleading ignorance.

It is a source of much joy to know that there are many who know the Lord and what he wants them to be and do, and that they worship him in spirit and in truth. They are the salt of the earth. Great will be their reward in heaven.

Sectism Among the Disciples

By L. W. Spayd

Is it true that sects are as really obtaining among the Disciples as they have obtained among the Baptists, Presbyterians and Methodists? If so, the fact is extremely mortifying when we consider the number of sermons annually delivered by our ministers, defining the basis of Christian unity and instructing how we may constitute ourselves upon said foundation as one body in Christ. For the sake of this unity tens of thousands of us left the denominations. Are we now to be humiliated by the spectacle of the Disciples themselves parting asunder into contentious sects, while still beseeching the denominations, fervently as ever, to forsake their creeds that they may unite with us under the headship of Christ?

Let none infer from these reflections that I, after twenty years' separation from the Baptists, am regretting my church fellowship with the Disciples. I am very far from that. But I was lately cruelly wounded in the house of my brethren. The incident made a startling revelation to me as to the nature and extent of the divisions obtaining among us. Except we find some means of purging out this leaven of divisions from among ourselves, we will as truly consist in "sects" as do the people to whom we apply the reproachful term.

Before leaving America for missionary work in Africa, Evangelist Thomas Haggard, of Fremantle, West Australia, wrote me that we already had two churches in South Africa (a fact unknown to me till then) one at Cape Town, one at Bulawayo. On landing at Cape Town, we found the church there under the care of R. K. Francis, the missionary recently sent them by the Missionary Conference of the Disciples in England. Aware of the differences existing between the English and American Disciples, we agreed to meet to consider the nature and extent of said differences to see whether we could work together in harmony. So far as I could learn, the Disciples in South Africa are all from England and Australia. We met Sunday afternoon, Aug. 16, 1903, nearly all the church being present. In this conference the brethren came out in pronounced opposition: 1. Against our communion with the unimmersed believers of the denominations; 2. Against our American "one man pastor" office; 3. Against our permitting women to speak in church; 4. Against our use of musical instruments in church worship; 5. Against our receiving and even soliciting money from unconverted people toward church enterprises and expenses. Now, I could not conscientiously stand up and preach against all these things practiced by us in America; but for the sake of harmony, I could and did pledge that I would refrain from contrary preaching; even from preaching upon these propositions at all. My attitude did not please them, yet upon parting from them I felt they would tolerate me as a fellow minister in the Disciples' South African work.

Before the English and Boer war, we had a church in Johannesburg. By correspondence Brother Francis had succeeded in getting those scattered Disciples to reorganize the church. As he was soon to visit them and regarded them as under his evangelistic care, as well as the church in Cape Town, ministerial and brotherly courtesy decided me not to go to the Johannesburg field, to which I was destined from America.

On landing at Cape Town, I found a letter awaiting me from Bro. John Sherriff, of Bulawayo, who has in care the church at that place. By reading our American church papers he learned when I would land at Cape Town, and so was forward with his loving, brotherly, Macedonian call to come and help him in his field. I had promised American friends not to venture into that tropical climate, but it was also my prayer for some days before landing that God would soon make clear to me where I should begin my missionary endeavor. Being thus prevented from settling in Johannesburg or Cape Town, and having at had this entreaty to come to Bulawayo, I feared to refuse the call as it seemed providential. So we went to Bulawayo.

Some weeks later, I picked up in Brother Sherriff's home, "The Bible Advocate," the publication of our English brethren. It contained a letter from Evangelist Francis, of Cape Town, dated Aug. 18, showing that he wrote it two days after that meeting in which we canvassed our differences. He appealed to the Missionary Conference for another evangelist to come to Cape Town to care for that church while he went "up country" (to Johannesburg). But he urged, "We want men who know the simple principles and position of the New Testament, and who are prepared to stand by them. We want no progressives here, in the religious sense—some such as are just landing from America, but even these have something to learn." How unbrotherly! Think of it! I was still in Cape Town when he penned this appeal that they should send to his help another missionary from England. What a favor it would have been to me had the church and Brother Francis agreed to place the Cape Town work under my missionary care while he went "up country," or had they sent me to Johannesburg. By inquiry at the governmental offices in Cape Town I found that both Otto and I could have had work at living wages if we had located in that city. And doubtless in the larger city—Johannesburg—we could have had better opportunities for self-sustaining labor. But alas! I was a "progressive", and "we want no progressives here." By this time Brother Francis has his desired colleague, both being maintained by the English Missionary Conference. Had they and the churches favored me as they could have and would have favored one of their own type of men, I would be hard at work with them in that field to this day.

On reading Brother Francis' letter, I wrote to learn whether it was indeed their intention to refuse me their co-operation and fellowship because I could not pronounce against our American customs as they do. In a long reply, magnifying the differences between us, Brother Francis, with the concurrence of the official brethren, assured me that until I should as positively preach against the American usages as they do, I could have no encouragement whatever from them. Yet, they did so far abate in their demands as to finally offer that if I could conscientiously pronounce against "communion with the unbaptized believers of the denominations," and against the "one man pastor system" that even then they would consider me as one with them. But I could not conscientiously promise so much. Therefore, they having determined to make those propositions a tast of my fellowship with them, I was as completely barred from their fellowship, as any man ever was from that of the Presbyterians, because he could not agree to preach the five points of Calvinism, or even two of them.

The brethren at Bulawayo were indeed grieved that I could not preach as they on the propositions in question; but such was their love for me and appreciation of my service that they would have assumed my entire support had that been possible. As it was, Brother Sherriff gave us gratis, boarding in the sum of $150. But Brother Francis gave us notice that he had taken the liberty to send our correspondence to the brethren in England. Of course, that was done to prejudice the Missionary Conference against me and would prevent the appropriation of funds to the Bulawayo field, for which Brother Sherriff stood in expectation. Finally, being unable to secure the self-maintaining labor necessary to a continuance in the work, seeing another English missionary was on the way and that the two were pledged to care for the three little churches, and seeing I was disfellowshipped to so great degree by our brethren, I had no alternative but to cable to America for means to return.

(Continued on page 59.)

Railway Parables.

[About twenty years ago, the editor of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, while traveling on the railroad between appointments, was struck by the fact that our Lord made his parables about the things closest at hand, and wondered whether he might not use the railway as a vehicle for religious truth if he were here to-day: The following parables were written under the impulse of that idea. A reader who has been delving in the old files of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, requests their republication.—EDITOR.]

The kingdom of heaven is like unto a railway train going to a certain city on schedule time, the which, if a man enter and pay his fare, will carry him safely to the city whither it goeth; but if he getteth on the track in front of the train and thinketh within himself he will stop the same, or perchance ditch it, he himself will be ditched, while the train moveth on to its destination.

Or again: The kingdom of heaven is like a railway track which men have laid along a carefully chosen and surveyed route, and whoever would avail himself of its benefit in travel must go to the track and travel along the established line, and not expect it to make a detour from the authorized route in order to come to his cabin door and take him on; otherwise the same shall be left. Even so, the man who would be saved must accept the terms of salvation which infinite wisdom and love have provided for all, and must not rely on an exception to be made in his case.

And this: Whereunto shall we liken the religious denominations of the present day? They are like unto the rival railway companies, which each advertiseth its own road, and maketh a map of the country, showing the unwary how its line is a broad trunk route leading directly to all important cities, while all rival routes are zigzag trails that meander aimlessly through the country. They likewise cut rates sometimes to secure desirable passengers when business is dull, and it is said that they even "dead head" certain prominent ones for their influence.

Once more: To what shall we liken the church that sets aside Christ and his glorious gospel, thinking to make up for the absence of these by splendid architecture, fine pulpit oratory and operatic music? It is like unto a foolish man who, desiring to make a long journey by rail, and seeing an elegant Pullman palace car standing on a side track, with superb upholstery and elegant equipment, howbeit with no locomotive attached, entereth therein and composeth himself on a cushioned seat, thinking the elegance of the coach will dispense with the necessity of an engine. Verily I say unto you, he would have done more wisely had he taken a gravel train with a locomotive thereto, if anxious to reach his destination. He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

Believe in God and Keep the Fires Burning!

By Z. T. Sweeney.

This is Jan. 2, 1904. The New Year has been ushered in by glad greetings, joyful givings and receivings. To-day is for sober reflection and resolution. The storm king is raging in winter carnival. The great flakes are coming down in such profusion as to render vision only possible at short range. Boreas is breathing upon it all so as to create a perfect fury of flurry. The electric wires are groaning and straining. The leafless branches are bending beneath their load of snow and sleet. The streets are deserted except for an occasional foot passenger. The fowls of the air have sought their coverts and the animals are in hiding. Great white coverlets of snow tuck in home and barn and say to man: "Stay at home and rest." Nature, though mutely, is eloquently chanting her great recession. But while I write, I glance out of my window and smile at Nature's fury. I know there is to be a change for better. This old earth which has been inclining away from the sun so many months, has reached the winter solstice and is already turning back to the king of day. The snow mantles shall melt ere long, and the manacles of ice shall fall away and "the time of the singing of birds shall come," and nature shall joyfully sing again her great processional. Then the sleeping life shall hear the voice of the good Father—who has never failed to call and whom it has never failed to obey—and shall open its eyes to the glad spring day of growth, flowers and fruit. There is but one duty for me to-day, viz.: to believe in God and keep the fires burning—so I smile and lay on the fuel.

This old world of ours turned away from the Sun of Righteousness and for four thousand years pursued its wayward course. But winter solstice was reached at the Cross of Calvary, and it has been gradually turning backwards toward the Sun of Righteousness. No matter if there be storm and darkness, —the glad springtime of righteousness is approaching. The day is coming when false religion and false government shall be overthrown and true religion and government shall dominate —"When the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the deep."

As president of the American Christian Missionary Society, I greet its friends and say that the one duty of this winter time is to believe in God and keep the fires burning. Only by so doing shall we be ready for the planting of the spring and reaping of the autumn. America is the blackboard upon which God is solving the problem of true government for all ages to come. And America will be just what such forces as our society and those similar to it shall make it. May first is our spring, and October in St. Louis will be our harvest. If we keep the fires burning now we shall be ready for May, and May determines October. Our society managers have modestly named $200,000 as a high water mark for us to reach. Is it not a reasonable and just amount? Is it not one that can be easily reached? It can be if we believe in God and keep the fires burning. Let the preachers take the above sentence as a motto. Let the churches and Sunday-schools act up to it for the next four months.

The great empires of science and art, commerce and manufacture, are bending every energy to make an exhibit at St. Louis this summer. Kings and princes and his majesty, the American citizen, will be there, in all their glory. Our Christ will also be there. When our convention assemblies in the exposition city, shall it be with songs of gladness over a great work, well and worthily done; or, shall it be with the acknowledgment of defeat? "Let us believe in God and keep the fires burning!"

MINER HIT

A Cold Miner on the Coffee Question.

Many a rugged constitution has broken down by use of coffee:

"I and my son are miners and have been strong coffee drinkers. I will add I followed mining for fifty years. Nearly three years ago my son had palpitation of the heart so bad that after a hard day's work he would be almost unable to get his breath when lying down, and I was a victim of constipation, headache and could not sleep soundly.

"So I pulled up stakes one day and started to see a doctor and curiously enough an old acquaintance I met on the way steered me off. We stopped and talked and told each other all the news and I told him about our troubles. He said it was coffee doing the work and that using Postum in place of coffee cured him of almost exactly the ailments I described.

"So instead of going to the doctor's I sent for some Postum although I did not have much faith in it but to my great joy it turned out all right and after we quit coffee completely we both began to get well, kept it up and are now both of us strong well men with none of the old troubles. A miner is supposed to be able to stand great hardships but we could not stand coffee. It was killing us. Anyone following the directions on the package of Postum will have a far better drink than he can get from the best coffee.

"I think every coffee toper should know Postum will cure him of his ailments, besides it is such a refreshing drink." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Coffee hurts nearly all who drink it and soaks some people very hard. There is a sure way out of the trouble by quitting coffee and using Postum.

And "there's a reason."

Look in each package for a copy of the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

News From Many Fields

Northern California.

We start the new year off in the right way by a number of protracted efforts in soul-saving. In some cases we try to save the souls of those whose names are not on the church record, and sometimes the souls of those whose names are thus recorded.

Sister Clara H. Hazelrigg and daughter began a meeting with the Stockton Church Jan. 3. We look for a great meeting.

Brothers F. L. Platt and D. W. Houn began a meeting at Tulare the same day, and if they hold up the record made at Visalia last month we shall all rejoice.

Brother Gallahorn began a meeting the same date at Paso Robles. There is something of a sacrifice in being a state evangelist, for this sends a man among the very weak or dead churches. He cannot hope to draw any inspiration from such sources, but must, on the other hand, listen to all the most discouraging phases of the work and be ready to counteract it all by hopefulness and a cheerful mood. To do this of course the evangelist must be in close touch with the Source of all hope, the Fountain that never faileth.

Our Berkeley Bible Seminary, together with one of our new mission churches, has succeeded in winning a most important recruit, a minister, graduate of our State University and a young man of great promise. He wrestled long and earnestly as did the Campbells and died game, but he has finally submitted to the authority of Jesus Christ and was the first candidate buried in the new baptistry at the Richmond Church. He had supplied the pulpit there three months very acceptably, and made a most touching plea for others to follow him as he went down into the water. I refer to Bro. H. J. Loken, who is now regularly installed as our missionary pastor at Richmond. God grant us more such men.

We have receipted for $2,468 from northern California brethren for state mission work in five months, as against $2,403 in twelve months preceding; and $1,348 for twelve months preceding that. Yes, thank you, we are progressing. California must be won for Christ.

During 1903 there were 83,932 colonists brought into California. Wonder how many of this number were members of the Christian Church east and will be lost to the cause by getting into our seventeen counties where there is no Christian Church?

A great duty is laid upon us to evangelize this great state. We must start a work some way to concentrate these scattered forces where they may in turn help us take this great country for primitive Christianity.

J. P. DARGITZ, Cor. Sec.

Healdsburg, Cal.

Chicago.

The Chicago churches are very active just now. An evangelistic campaign is being planned in the several churches. The policy of the city mission board toward the mission churches is practically the same this year as last, and that is to make suitable appropriations to sustain these several missions rather than make it a point to look out new mission fields. This plan has worked admirably, and yet new missions come to light, the most notable of the last year being South Chicago, a densely populated district without a Christian Church. Brother Larrabee our faithful corresponding secretary, visited the field and found it ripe indeed unto the harvest. A thriving and most promising mission was soon organized and prospects are for a splendid work to be done.

On last Monday, Jan. 4, a foreign missionary rally was held at the Jackson Boulevard Church, conducted by A. McLean and G. L. Wharton. It was the most successful rally ever enjoyed by our Chicago churches. The attendance was large and the enthusiasm high. Dr. Edwin T. Layton and his wife, missionaries to Africa, were present in their old home church and lent much to the happiness of the day. Brother Wharton is soon to return to India, as is Brother Layton to return to Africa. Stirring addresses were made by Marion Stevenson, C. R. Scoville, Finis Idleman, of Dixon, Ill., E. S. Ames and others. The day was well spent and it may safely be predicted that Chicago churches will take the largest offering in their history for foreign missions first Lord's day in March.

ROBERT L. WILSON.

Topeka, Kansas.

One of the most joyful occasions which come to church workers was celebrated by the First Church, Topeka, Kan., on Thursday evening, Dec. 31. It was not only the annual meeting of the congregation, but the celebration of an event to which the church had looked forward for the past twelve months. This was the full and complete raising of their church debt. This congregation has struggled for years to free itself of a financial incumbrance, which was contracted when the beautiful and commodious building was completed. Charles A. Finch has just closed two years of work as pastor of the congregation. When he began his work, the debt was $3,500. His predecessor, F. W. Emerson, had been instrumental in paying off a portion of the debt during his pastorate. This gave an impetus to the work, and enabled the congregation to discern what might be achieved by a united effort. Early in 1903, Brother Finch started a crusade to raise the entire debt and close the year with all obligations met. A sister in the congregation gave $1,000 on the annuity plan on the condition that the entire debt be raised. The raising of this money was kept before the congregation all the year, Brother Finch doing a large amount of personal work. The highest individual pledge made was $200. The larger portion of the money was raised in small pledges. By Dec. 1, 1903, the money was collected and applied on the indebtedness. On the evening above referred to, every department of the church made a report, showing very gratifying growth, and giving a promise of still greater work during the coming year. The Ladies' Aid Society had raised $600, the Bible-school $100, Christian Endeavor $100, Intermediates $25, and Juniors $10, all of which was applied on the debt. The report of the financial secretary showed that almost $10,000 had been raised for all purposes during the year, which included several hundred dollars for missions.

One very pleasant feature of the meeting was that the Ladies' Aid Society made Brother Finch a present of a check for $50, and the church voted him a handsome increase in salary for the ensuing year.

W. S. LOWE.

Washington State.

The meeting at Dayton is one of the great victories of the year; 104 added at last report. H. T. Morrison is pastor. L. F. Stephens and wife, evangelists. Brother and Sister Stephens go to Davenport next, where O. J. Gist ministers.

Webb and wife, singing evangelists are now assisting A. C. Vail and church at North Yakima, and a great meeting is expected.

B. H. Lingenfelter of the First Church, Seattle, expects a large ingathering in their meeting, beginning Jan. 10, with H. H. Pendleton as evangelist.

The church at Ellensburg has recently purchased a lot in the business center of the town and moved their building onto it. This is a very great stride forward for the church, and the difficulties they have encountered and overcome would read like a romance. There are some faithful souls in the Ellensburg church that have toiled amidst great discouragements. May they enjoy an era of peace and growth.

F. Walden is encouraged in his work with the Fremont church.

N. S. McCallum is now supplying at Elma and Ballard. He recently moved to Tacoma and will make this his home for some years. The entire family united with the First Church at the watch meeting New Year's eve or morning just as the bells and whistles were heralding the advent of 1904.

A. D. Skaggs reports his work at Vancouver in flourishing condition.

R. M. Messick takes the work at Cheney. He will do them good.

The writer receives many letters from parties relative to openings for preachers in this state. Will all such please address their inquiries to Bro. J. M. Morris, Sumner, who is corresponding secretary of the state board.

The success of the missionary societies last year is gratifying to every one interested. Their plans for increased offerings this year should stir the churches to renewed effort. Let "Forward" be the watchword of every lover of the Lord.

MORTON L. ROSE.

Tacoma, Wash.

Nebraska.

The meeting at Brownville was doing well with 19 added at last report. J. W. Sapp, preacher. He will hold at Nemaha next. Brownville is the oldest congregation in the state.

H. S. Gilliam has taken the work at Hastings. A joint reception was given to him and Brother Kirchstein, the retiring preacher. Brother Kirchstein is located at 2008 Ohio St., Omaha, and is now in charge of the Northside congregation in that city. The church has bargained for the fine brick church formerly belonging to the Universalists in Kountze Place, one of the nice residence districts in the city.

The Foreign Society will hold rallies at Omaha and Cotner on Jan. 12, and 13.

Seventeen were added in E. W. Yocum's meeting at Liberty Ridge; 13 by baptism.

H. A. Lemon and Frank McVey are in a meeting at Waco at this writing.

Ray Hunt and E. Gardner, Cotner students, stormed the sinners at Seward during holidays. No report from them. Brother Hunt has been preaching successfully at Bee. The state board met on Dec. 30, and the pulpit supply committee and the officers of the Christian citizens council met on Dec. 31, at the Y. M. C. A. in Lincoln. All the meetings were well attended.

The Minutes have been mailed in limited numbers.

Educational day is the third Lord's day in January. Let it be given a prominent place in the work of the churches. The scarcity of preachers makes the schools among us a positive necessity. We dare not neglect this matter much longer. Our work will be sadly crippled if we do. The young men in Cotner are doing excellent work.

The meeting at Dunning held for the society by Brother Adams resulted in a church organization of 20 members. Several other prominent people promised to go in with them. Joseph Lamm is the regular preacher and they need a church building.

Brother DeForest Austin is in a warm meeting at Humboldt, where Bert Wilson preaches; 13 baptisms and one from the Methodist church is the report to Jan. 4. Brother Austin begins at Irvington on Jan. 17.

Four added at Bluevale in J. E. Wilson's meeting. He will go next to Firth, Hugh Lomax regular preacher.

W. T. Hacker preached on Dec. 27, at Wyomere and again the first Lord's day in January; will continue a few evenings.

W. A. Morrison, of Verdon and Salem has accepted a call to McPherson, Kan., to commence Feb. 1. Brother Morrison has been a good worker in Nebraska, and we are sorry to lose him. This makes four good men given to Kansas this missionary year.

C. W. Nichols has taken the work at Avoca and will move his family there at once.

Melvin Putman held a short meeting at Inavale recently.

The governing board of the N. C. N. S. very pleasantly surprised the corresponding secretary on the evening of Dec. 30, with their wives. A fine supper had been prepared by them, with the help of the secretary's wife, and the evening was spent very happily. Some elegant silverware was left as tokens of good will. This day will be long cherished as a bright spot in my life. The support of these good men makes good work possible.

Briefly let me remind those churches that have not sent in anything on apportionments, that we need their assistance. We have been straining our resources to the utmost to reach the largest possible number of places asking for assistance. The apportionment receipts from Nebraska day are larger than ever before. More churches gave, and fifteen new churches were enlisted. Let us press this work now so that we may be out of the way of other offerings.

W. A. BALDWIN.

Texas.

El Paso is one of our thriving cities and is growing very rapidly. Many persons of the north and east are making inquiries about the Christian Church in that city, and for their information I give below a statement made by our pastor there, Bro. E. M. Waits, which was clipped from one of the El Paso papers. He says:

"Steadily, relentlessly time advances, and we have advanced with it, keeping such step as our surroundings, means and members have made possible. Looking backward with grateful hearts, we raise our Ebenezer, saying: 'Hitherto hath the Lord helped us.' Steady gains are manifest in all departments of the work. Our Sunday-school, under the faithful leadership of Superintendent Bryan, has grown in numbers and efficiency. New blood has entered the veins of the official board. Plans and specifications are under consideration for a handsome, commodious, modern building on Oregon Street, to supplant our humble quarters on Myrtle Avenue, which property we recently sold.

"The Endeavor Society has been reorganized and is in splendid working condition. They have raised and disbursed over $300 for benevolent purposes.

"The Juniors are a factor to be reckoned in the future development of the church. We boast of one of the best in the state. The membership at present is 35. The amount of money raised and disbursed was $36.50.

"Taking all in all, God has been very good to us, and stands pledged to lead us into richer realization in the measure that we are faithful to him and the nearest duty.

"This is the directory: E. M. Waits, pastor, 595 Rio Grande; W. H. Bryan, superintendent Sunday-school, 409 Boulevard; Mrs. H. E. Stevenson, clerk of church, corner Rio Grande and Mesa; Mrs. Terry King, president C. W. B. M., 1220 North Florence; Mrs. Murray, president of the Aid, 608 North Kansas; Millard Patterson, chairman of board and treasurer of church; Ed. Kneeland, president of Endeavor, 409 Franklin; Mrs. Ed. Kneeland, superintendent of Junior Endeavor.

"The church now has 200 members; number of accessions during year, 75; amount of money raised and disbursed, $2,208.65.

"The Ladies' Aid Society makes a splendid showing. The balance on hand Jan. 1, 1903, was $213.15; the amount raised during the year was $341.90, and the amount disbursed for benevolent purposes was $240.95, leaving a balance on hand Jan. 1, 1904, of $324.10.

"The Christian Woman's Board of Missions, at the annual open session in December, rendered the following report: Number of meetings, regular, 12; number of meetings, called, 4; number of meetings, social, 3; number of active members, 32; number of honorary members, 4. Financial report: Dues paid in, $37.55; state development fund, $18.70; Burgess memorial, Calcutta, $50.06; total, $106.25."

Bro. J. M. Martinez, a Mexican minister, who formerly had charge of the Methodist mis-

Itching Skin

Distress by day and night—

That's the complaint of those who are so unfortunate as to be afflicted with Eczema or Salt Rheum—and outward applications do not cure. They can't.

The source of the trouble is in the blood—make that pure and this scaling, burning, itching skin disease will disappear.

"I was taken with an itching on my arms which proved very disagreeable. I concluded it was salt rheum and bought a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla. In two days after I began taking it I felt better and it was not long before I was cured. Have never had any skin disease since." MRS. IDA E. WARD, Cove Point, Md.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills

rid the blood of all impurities and cure all eruptions.

sions at Marfa, Texas, hearing a series of sermons by the writer, as also the preaching of Bro. T. D. Searest, the pastor of the Christian Church at Marfa, has united with us and is now located at El Paso, where he will doubtless build up a church among the Mexicans in that city. He is an educated, Christian gentleman, a preacher of power among his own people, and should receive substantial encouragement from our state and national missionary boards.

Brother T. J. Hains, the pastor of the church at Martindale, who formerly was a Methodist minister, but united with the Christian Church under the preaching of the writer at Lockhart, some three years ago, writes very encouragingly of his work, he says: "Two additions yesterday. A Baptist preacher (Mexican) made application yesterday evening to unite with the church. He is unusually intelligent and well founded in the faith. He is highly recommended by the Baptist Church. Nearly all his flock will come over with him. We will receive and organize them Lord's day week. He states that a preacher of San Marcos will be here and join with them."

This clearly shows the willingness of the Mexican people to receive the simple gospel of Christ, and that among them there are many open doors for our mission workers.

Austin, Tex.

B. B. SANDERS.

Maryland, Delaware and District of Columbia.

During the holiday season there has been a little cessation in evangelistic efforts, but they will soon be resumed.

H. C. Kendrick will begin a meeting at the First Church, Hagerstown, Jan. 10. W. R. D. Winters, of Fulton Avenue Church, Baltimore, will assist him especially in the music.

We begin a meeting, the Lord willing, on Jan. 10., at our mission in Waynesboro, Pa. W. S. Haye, of Beaver Creek, will come to my assistance on the 11th.

Brethren, pray that the word of the Lord may run and be glorified in all this section. The M. E. Church in Waynesboro had a revival for two months, closing near the last of December. They had 100 additions. At the invitation of their pastor, Brother Heck, I preached for them one evening a simple gospel sermon, among other things, telling how men were saved in the days of the apostles. They have a good church and congregation. We meet as yet in a hall, a dozen members, but we hope to make Disciples in Waynesboro.

Our Sunday-school there had their first Christmas exercise. The children brought donations for the poor, and we raised about $5 for American missions in the Boys' and Girls' Rally Day offering. They also gave a neat purse to the minister, and remembered the superintendent and organist.

F. J. Murray Taylor, of Madison, Ind., begins work with the H<sup>1</sup> Street Church in Southwest Washington with 1904.

The Christian Endeavor Society at Beaver Creek had a union service with neighboring societies Jan. 1. Their Sunday-school and all our schools in this vicinity have had their Christmas exercises.

We begin services of the week of prayer at Boonsboro, Jan. 4: Lutheran, Reformed, United Brethren and Christian. May our Savior be answered, that all may be truly one.

Rockville, Md.

J. A. HOPKINS.

C. W. B. M. in Missouri.

Several new auxiliary officers have written to the secretary, asking as to their duties; how to report; what, and to whom to report, and also, some have sent reports apologizing for lateness and incompleteness, saying they were new in office and were not informed as to what is expected of them. If out-going officers, would kindly explain the duties to new ones, the kindness would be appreciated. I am sure, by the new officers and by the secretary. Lack of prompt reports will keep our auxiliary from the state honor roll. Let us be careful of these little things, my dear sisters.

Mrs. J. L. Moore has been very sick, a victim of grippe. She is better, and will leave for southeast Missouri about January 15.

Too many late reports. What can be the matter with our auxiliary officers.

Let me quote one of the recommendations of our ways and means committee, at last state convention, which was adopted.

"5. That our sisters be urged to generosity, knowing that the Lord loves a cheerful and hilarious giver. That we each pay promptly our monthly offering of 15 cents for state and national work, and if we can do so, more and many times that sum, if the Lord has so prospered us."

The January Message says, 2,000 souls were added to the church in Missouri during November and December. Yet our C. W. B. M. work is not keeping pace with this rich increase. On whom rests the responsibility for the lack? I will tell you. It is upon you, as an individual member. No secretary or organizer can go through the state, and win women to this high service. She can organize and enthuse, but the teaching and winning lies in the magic of consecrated personal effort. Remember this, my sister, in your intercourse with your friends.

Columbia reports a gain of twelve members and eight Tidings; Centralia, a gain of four members and three Tidings; Frankford, a gain of two members and five Tidings; Bowling Green, a gain of one member and one Tiding; Moberly, a gain of two members; Richmond has gained five members and three Tidings; Gower has gained one member and one Tiding; Nevada has gained eight members; Warrensburg reports a gain of two; Lamonte, a gain of three Tidings; Webb City, a gain of nine members; Dexter has gained four members; Farmington, three. A fine report comes from Holliday, one of our youngest auxiliaries.

MRS. L. G. BANTZ.

St. Louis.

Look Out Next Week!

Our Great

Anniversary Number

Will appear

Send for free sample copies at once for your friends to the

Christian Publishing Company

1522 Locust Street

St. Louis, Mo.

The Sunday-School.

Jan. 24, 1904.

JESUS REJECTED AT NAZARETH.— Luke 4:16-30.

Memory verses 18:19.

GOLDEN TEXT.—He came unto his own, and His own received him not.—John 1:11.

Early Judean Ministry.

By comparing the narrative in John's Gospel with those of the synoptic Gospels (Matthew, Mark and Luke) it is clear that a considerable period elapsed between the temptation of Jesus, recorded in Luke 4:1-13, and His return to Galilee, which is mentioned in Luke 1:14. It is characteristic of John, that he lays emphasis upon the Judean ministry, while the other evangelists lay stress upon the Galilean ministry. After the temptation, probably there was a brief journey to Galilee, (John 1:43-2:12), on which Jesus was accompanied by his first five disciples, Andrew, Peter, John, Philip and Nathaniel, (John 1:35-45). In the course of this journey, occurred the miracle of the water and wine at Cana of Galilee and the visit to Capernaum in company with His mother and brothers. Then came the return to Jerusalem to the passover (John 2:13), the first cleansing of the Temple (John 2:14-22), a period of successful preaching accompanied by signs and mighty works (John 2:23-25), the conversation with Nicodemus, and the preaching and baptizing tour through Judea (John 3:22). Then starting northward again, they passed through Samaria, where Jesus had the conversation with the woman of Sychar, and gave the first explicit announcement of His Messiahship. All these events probably intervened between the temptation and the episodes recorded in the present lesson. The lapse of time must have been considerable, possibly as much as a year. At any rate, the fame of His mighty works and of His teaching had been greatly spread abroad, both in Galilee and in Judea.

"Glorified of All."

When Jesus and His little company of followers reached Galilee on this second journey, they found that the fame of His works had preceded Him, and it was not simply His miracles of healing that attracted popular interest, it was His teachings and His mission, as the people understood it. Jesus never allowed His miracles to attract attention away from His message, though it was sometimes hard to prevent this result. His popularity was largely due to a general misunderstanding of His mission. There was a large class of Jews who were not only in active expectation of a Messiah, who should be a political deliverer, but who were ready to risk their lives in a revolt against Rome under His leadership. These stalwart but mistaken patriots were quick to rally about one whose power was proved by His miracles, and whose purpose they guessed at by a misinterpretation of His teaching regarding the kingdom. So, as He went through Galilee teaching in the synagogues, His popularity grew greater and greater.

The Word of the Prophet.

Coming to Nazareth, He went into the synagogue as usual on the Sabbath and availed Himself of the opportunity which would naturally be offered to any celebrated visiting teacher, to read and expound the Scriptures. The passage which He chose (Isaiah 61:1-3) contains a remarkably accurate description of the work which Jesus Himself had come to do. The preaching of "good tidings to the poor" was the very sign which Jesus gave to John as evidence that He was truly the one who should come. "To proclaim release to the captives" was precisely the function of the Messiah, Israel was the victim of a captivity far worse than the captivity in Babylon, to which Isaiah referred; worse even than the bondage to Rome, which was bad enough, it was a captivity to their own inadequate views of God, to their own harsh and fruitless interpretation of the law, to the mechanical and unspiritual idea of religion, and to their own sinful impulses. To a people spiritually blind, He was coming to give renewed sight. To those who were not only captives, but were bruised and wounded by their merciless captors, He was to give liberty and healing. In short, to sum it all up, He was "to proclaim an acceptable year of the Lord," to announce the beginning of a new and better order of things.

The Message Rejected.

When He had read the words of the prophet, Jesus began to tell the people that He came as the fulfillment of that announcement. They wondered at the charm of His discourse, but were not ready to believe that such a high mission had been entrusted to one whom they knew as the son of Joseph the carpenter. Doubtless they, like the other Galileans, had their hopes of the coming Messiah, who should deliver Israel, but for them as for us, it was easier to ask great things from God and even to expect them, than to recognize and accept the answers which He gives to our prayers. They were expecting a certain sort of Messiah and would have no other. They looked for one who should come in panoply and state, and they could not bring themselves to accept one who had walked among them for years in the common ways of life. So they cast Him out, and in their anger would have put Him to death, if He had not by the power of His wonderful personality, checked their murderous intent, as a brave man can sometimes do when he confronts single-handed a superior force, and passed through the throng and out of the city.

A Warning for our Times.

At the heart of this incident lie two truths, which are a pertinent message to our own, or to any age. The first is that the refusal of some to accept our teachings or be moved by our influence is no good ground for discouragement. There are always some hard hearts. There is always some stony ground. But these do not justify us in despairing or in ceasing our efforts for any good cause. What if we are rejected in one place? Let us find another. Does Nazareth thrust us out? We can go to Capernaum. Lose no time in bickering or quarrelling with the hard-hearted. Do your best with them and then pass on to find more receptive hearers.

The other truth is this: that the richest treasures of truth and blessing sometimes come in forms which tempt us to reject them for their very familiarity. It was because the men of Nazareth knew Jesus as the Son of Joseph the carpenter, that they could not recognize in Him the Savior. So our eyes are often dull to see the worth of the things that lie about us. Common things are only commonplace to us. It is a gross error. While we are longing and looking for great opportunities and blessings afar off, we are missing the better things that are ours if we would but put forth our hands. Let us seek to enter into the fullest possession of the things which are already ours.

A CHANCE TO MAKE MONEY

I have been selling "Non-Alcoholic-Flavoring-Powders" for the past six months, and have made $815.00. Every family buys three, or four boxes. The flavoring-powders are better in every respect than the liquid extracts, and are lovely to sell. I do not have to canvass. People send to me for the powders. Any intelligent person can do as well as I, and average $30.00 per week. I get my flavoring-powders from the California Fruit & Chemical Company, St. Louis, Mo. Write them, and they will start you in business. E. C.

These trade-mark crisscross lines on every package.

Gluten Grits AND
BARLEY CRYSTALS,
Perfect Breakfast and Desert Health Cereals.
PANSY FLOUR for Biscuits, Cake and Pastry.
Unlike all other foods. Ask Grocers.
For book or sample, write
FARWELL & RHINES, Watertown, N. Y., U.S.A.

Midweek Prayer-Meeting.

Jan. 20, 1904.

PREVAILING PRAYER.

—Genesis 32:24-28.

When we think how universal is the need of prayer, and how many hearts in all ages have found relief and strength in prayer, it is not surprising that this subject occupies so prominent a place in the Scriptures. It is interesting to note that away back in Genesis, we find a striking instance of prevailing prayer. It was in the life of Jacob, one of the great heroes of faith, at a critical point in his history. He was returning from his long sojourn in the house of Laban, his father-in-law, bringing with him, "his oxen and asses and flocks, and men servants and maid servants." He was about to meet his brother Esau, whom he had heard was marching to meet him with 400 men, and whom he had reason to fear.

Human Effort Plus Divine Aid.

Having made the necessary disposition of his flocks and herds and of his retinue of servants, to meet the worst that might happen, he separated himself from all his family, and spent the night alone at the Ford of Jabbok, wrestling with the Lord in prayer. The nature of that mysterious struggle we may not fully understand, but it is clear enough that it was a spiritual crisis in the history of Jacob. There was a mighty conflict between the forces of good and evil within him, but there was an overmastering passion for God's favor and blessing. When the mysterious being who wrestled with him, said: "Let me go, for the day breaketh," Jacob's reply was: "I will not let thee go, except thou bless me."

Two things seem to be apparent from this record: (1.) the obstinacy with which Jacob evidently resisted the divine being, not yielding until he felt the touch of the divine power in some physical sense, and (2.) his persistency in holding on until he had secured the desired blessing. No doubt Jacob could have received the blessing earlier if he could have surrendered himself earlier to the will of God. On the other hand, it is equally clear that he would not have received the blessing at all, if his faith had not persisted in the effort to secure it.

Why Answer to Prayer Is Delayed.

Have we not in this incident, a solution of the question, which often puzzles us, about the delay of God in answering our prayers? God's answer waits upon our preparation to receive the blessing. It is not reluctance on God's part to grant his blessing to man, but lack on our part, perhaps in moral earnestness and depth of desire, or perhaps the lack of a complete submission of our will to the divine will, that delays God's answer to our petitions. Jesus teaches the same lesson of persistency in prayer, in the parable (Luke 18:1-7) of the widow and the unjust judge. He spake this parable to his disciples "to the end that they ought always to pray and not to faint."

Who can tell what mighty issues hinged upon that wonderful experience of Jacob? If his faith had failed him, and he had given up his effort to secure the blessing of God, his name would not always have been Israel, and all that splendid history which followed might have been very different. Jacob prevailed with God and man, but he prevailed with man because he prevailed with God. Prayer is the means by which we can prevail with God, and secure that power by which we may prevail with man.

PRAYER

Oh, God, our Father, we would not resist Thy divine purpose to enter into our hearts and lives, and to mold our characters. We open to Thee the door of our heart, and bid Thee come in and reign, that Thy gracious purposes may be wrought in us and through us! In Christ's name. Amen.

Christian Endeavor.

By H. A. Denton,
Jan. 24, 1904.

WHAT IF CHRIST CAME TO OUR TOWN?

—John 4:27-30; 39-42.

For the Leader.

Our subject is, "What if Christ Came to Our Town?" The town and the city are the favorite abodes of men. We have been hearing much about the crowded city with its temptations. While the last census shows a turn towards the country, the problem of the rush to the city has by no means been solved. In city and town we are thrown together more. There is not the same watch upon our every act. The cover of the crowd and the many minds in consultation seemed to invite the evil thought and the evil act. The Great Physician of the town is Jesus. He came to many cities during his earth ministry. Many were the blessings he brought, and terrible were the denunciations he hurled at the hypocrite, the extortioner and the grafter. Jesus is the great reformer of municipal corruptionists. His coming to the city not only meant blessings, but denunciations and separations. If Jesus should come to our town, what would he find? Would he be cordially received? Would not consternation reign in many quarters? Make the question more personal: If Christ came to my town? If Christ came to me? These remarks will suffice to indicate the drift of thought our meeting may profitably take to-night.

For the Members.

1. Jesus comes to the town to bless. The humble and the penitent had nothing to fear on the day Jesus came to town. Who can estimate the blessings that would follow the coming of Jesus to our town?

2. Jesus would come to our town as a reformer. He would speak upon the corners of the streets. His addresses would not be prepared with the same care to please that the demagogue takes. Thunderbolts of truth would reverberate from wall to wall of the high buildings and wake the sinful slumbers of the festering alley.

3. Jesus would be a man of action. He would not spend his force in speech only. He would do things. See that cord for the cattle with which he drove from the temple inclosure. See that expelling determination upon his face as he drove the money changers out. He would not be afraid of his business. And in that disregard of his business he would pursue the highest business known to men.

4. Jesus would come to our town to do something for those who need it most. He would not neglect that part of the town where the children are too far away to be sent alone to Sunday-school. He would not forget the section where the ragged children with dirty faces and matted hair swarm in the street. He would go this night to that home of the shut-in and say, "Thy sorrows be no more. Rise up from that bed of affliction."

5. But, is he not here now? Has he not come while we have been discussing the probability of the event? He has, at least, meant to come. He has come as far as he has ever planned to come, unless we have prevented that coming. Does he not say in the wonderful 25th of Matthew that his people saw him, visited him, ministered to him, loved him, in doing these to the least of his followers? Then does it not follow that he appears to us in the needy of the world, of our town; and that he appears to the world in us, in his children? Yes, and this is true if we have fully learned and served him.

Quiet Hour Thought.

Let me so live that Christ will come to my town through me.

Questions for the Members.

1. What does Genesis say of the first city?
2. What lessons have we in the experiences of Jerusalem?
3. What lesson does our town get from the charge of Jesus against the cities of the Sea

WEAK KIDNEYS AND BLADDER TROUBLE.

Had to Pass Water Very often Day and Night

Cured by the Great Kidney Remedy, Swamp-Root.

Among the many famous cures of Swamp-Root investigated by the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST the one we publish this week for the benefit of our readers, speaks in the highest terms of the wonderful curative properties of this great kidney remedy.

A. H. NOONEY.

DR. KILMER & CO., Binghamton, N. Y.

About two years ago I had a very severe case of kidney and bladder trouble. The pain in the small of my back was so severe that I could not stand it to stay in one position more than a moment or two, and was obliged to pass water very often day and night. I tried medicines and doctors without getting relief. Noticing an advertisement in the TOPEKA STATE JOURNAL of Swamp-Root, I determined to give it a trial and bought a bottle. By the time I had finished the first bottle the pain had entirely disappeared from my back. The pain and frequent desire to pass water ceased. However, I continued to take the medicine, using about six bottles in all. That was over a year ago and I have had no return of the trouble since.

A. H. Nooney

Chief Engineer, State Capitol Building,
Jan. 2nd, 1902. Topeka, Kan.

Weak and unhealthy kidneys are responsible for more sickness and suffering than any other disease, therefore, when through neglect or other causes, kidney trouble is permitted to continue, fatal results are sure to follow.

We often see a relative, a friend or an acquaintance apparently well, but in a few days we may be grieved to learn of their severe illness, or sudden death, caused by that fatal type of kidney trouble—Bright's Disease.

The mild and extraordinary effect of the world-famous kidney and bladder remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. A trial will convince anyone—and you may have a sample bottle sent free by mail.

Sample Bottle of Swamp Root Free by Mail.

SPECIAL NOTICE—Swamp-Root has been tested in so many ways, and has proven so successful in every case, that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST who have not already tried it may have a sample bottle sent absolutely free by mail. Also a book telling all about Swamp-Root, and containing many of the thousands upon thousands of testimonial letters received from men and women who owe their good health, in fact their very lives, to the wonderful curative properties of Swamp-Root. In writing, be sure and mention reading this generous offer in the St. Louis CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST when sending your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

If you are already convinced that Swamp-Root is what you need, you can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at the drug stores everywhere. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

of Galilee, particularly in his contrast of them with the cities of the plain?

4. What was the apostolic method of church work in the cities?

5. What warning is there for the present day city in the ruins of the great cities of antiquity?

FOR DAILY HOME STUDY.

- |    |                          |                |
|----|--------------------------|----------------|
| M. | As He Came to Bethlehem. | Matt. 2:1-12.  |
| T. | As He Came to Cana.      | John 2:1-11.   |
| W. | As He Came to Jerusalem. | Matt. 21:1-11. |
| T. | As He Came to Capernaum. | Matt. 9:1-8.   |
| F. | As He Came to Bethany.   | John 11:40-44. |
| S. | As He Came to Jericho.   | Luke 19:1-10.  |
| S. | If Christ Should Come.   | John 4:28-42.  |

Re-opening at West Mansfield, O.

With the streets and public-highways blocked by the heavy snows of the past two days, and the mercury at twenty degrees below zero, we have today had a formal re-opening of our remodeled and refurnished church house.

The house was raised three feet, and under it a substantial wall was placed, with a basement containing a kitchen and dining room, a furnace and heater for baptistry. The large auditorium has been refurnished with new pews and divided in two sections by rolling partitions.

The house has been carpeted and papered throughout, repainted and revarnished, making it one of the most convenient and commodious church buildings of the Disciples in this part of Ohio. The entire cost was $2,200. The amount unprovided for was $600.

Bro. P. H. Welshimer, of Canton, Ohio, was called to preach the sermons morning and evening. Brother Welshimer was reared here and sent out from this church to preach the gospel, and he is greatly revered by our people.

Because of the conditions named, the house was not packed, but after a strong appeal was made by Welshimer in less than thirty minutes we secured in cash and pledges $938.

Bro. Walter F. Rounds, who has been pastor of the church here during the past year, is deserving of mention. It was through his urgent appeals that the work was undertaken, and it was largely his personal solicitation and wise superintendency that carried the enterprise forward to completion.

Jan. 3, 1904.

W. L. MORSE.

If You Are Looking

for a perfect condensed milk preserved without sugar, buy Borden's Peerless Brand Evaporated Cream. It is not only a perfect food for infants, but its delicious flavor and richness makes it superior to raw cream for cereals, coffee, tea, chocolate and general household cooking. Prepared by Borden's Condensed Milk Co.

Our Budget

—Next week is our Anniversary Number. You will want a copy for preservation and one to hand to your friend who is not a subscriber. Probably you will want a few extra copies to hand to your religious neighbors.

—Remember our colleges next Lord's day. In pleading their cause and in helping them in their work, you are helping every important interest among us, and insuring the continued progress of our cause. Our colleges have too long been the Cinderellas in our household of interests.

The Subscription Department has to work of nights to keep up with the enrollment of the new subscribers and renewals of old ones, but the force in that department is not complaining, and expect the boom to continue, at least through the first quarter of the year. The world is coming to St. Louis this year, and we shall have much to tell our readers about it. Send for sample copies as you need them.

—In a personal note from our staff correspondent at Washington, F. D. Power, he reports that he has entirely recovered from his recent attack while at Philadelphia, and says that our cause is advancing all along the eastern shore. His able articles, from week to week, show no infirmity of health.

—We call attention to our three celebrated staff correspondents—Power, Tyler and Durban—as the assurance that our readers are to be kept apprised of the important events transpiring at the points of the compass where they are located, both within and without our own movement. They will be supplemented by a host of others who will report with more or less regularity to our columns.

—The Erlanger (Ky.) Christian Church will be dedicated on Sunday, Jan. 10.

—Allen T. Shaw, of Knightstown, Ind., is in a good meeting at Lynn, J. A. Brown, pastor.

—T. R. Hodgkinson closed his work at Eldora, Iowa, Dec. 31, and commenced at Sloan, Iowa, on January 1.

—D. O. Smart, of Kansas City, has left for Southern California and the western coast, to be absent three months.

—G. W. Nutter has accepted a call to Aberdeen, Miss., after a successful ministry of four years at Millersburg, Ky.

—F. E. Udell and wife, of St. Louis, leave Jan. 16 for the Windward Islands in the Caribbean Sea, to be absent over two months.

—We hold the press to say that word has just come from Brother Wilkes at California, Mo., of the death of Dr. S. E. Pearre, at that place on Jan. 9. Fuller notice later.

—W. A. Morrison has resigned at Viridon, Neb., to accept the work at McPherson, Kan., Feb. 1. He writes: "We leave a nice work and a new parsonage for our successor."

—Special dispatch to the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST: Bellefontaine, O., Jan. 11. Forty-four additions Sunday, fifty-seven in eight days. Great crowds and interest growing.

BROOKS AND KENDALL.

—J. Morgan Harris, Rock Rapids, Iowa, writes: "We want a member of the Christian Church to buy and operate a good newspaper, and profitable job printing office in a county seat of 2,000 population."

—D. J. Donaldson, now of Colfax, Washington, who reorganized the church at Nickerson about two years ago, held a meeting at the latter place on Dec. 28, at which time two new members were added to the church.

—C. W. Van Dolah who is pastor of the churches at Langden and Nickerson, reports that both churches are in fine condition. A meeting will be held at Langden by H. James Crockett, of Adel, Iowa, beginning January 17.

—J. K. Shellenberger, pastor of the church at Mankato, Minn., will conduct a meeting at Arlington, S. D., beginning Jan. 13. The pastor, Arthur H. Seymour sends us a splendid report of the past year's work.

—D. O. Cunningham, pastor of the Central Church of Christ, Findlay, Ohio, is getting

The Minutes that make the Days, that make the Years, are truthfully told by the
ELGIN
WATCH

Every Elgin Watch is fully guaranteed. All jewelers have Elgin Watches. "Time-makers and Timekeepers." An illustrated history of the watch, sent free upon request to along finely in his work. Every department of church work is coming up nicely. Pastor has been sick for about a week.

ELGIN NATIONAL WATCH CO.
ELGIN, ILL.

—During December the receipts for foreign missions amounted to $4,211.41, a gain over the corresponding month a year ago of $1,487.04. Last week the foreign society received another gift on the annuity plan.

—T. N. Kincaid, pastor at Hot Springs, Ark., reports 15 additions during the past three months, which are the first quarter of his sixth year at that place. The congregation is making an heroic effort to increase its building fund.

—Wanted by the Mission Church at Everett, Washington, 100 or more hymn books. If any of the churches have as many books on hand in fair condition which they do not need, we would be very glad to arrange to get them. Address G. S. JUDD.

—W. P. Carruthers, of Saunemin, Ill., writes: "Last Lord's day morning our church with all the furniture, was destroyed by fire. A total loss which will make it very hard for us for some time to come." We extend our sympathy to this church in its loss.

—The church at Monroe City, Mo., held an installation service on Jan. 3, at which Elder J. C. Todd was installed as pastor. Dr. W. J. Shamon delivered the charge to the congregation at the morning service. In the evening, Pres. J. B. Jones delivered the charge to the pastor.

—Thad S. Tinsley, of Louisville, has just closed a very successful year's work with the Clifton Church of that city. There have been 254 additions at regular and special services there during the past year. A new church building has also been dedicated and a parsonage completed.

—That splendid and inspiring message from J. Z. Tyler, which we published in our New Year's number, has been printed on a beautifully embroidered card, in large, fine type, and we presume can be had by addressing the author at Cleveland, Ohio. It would be a fine ornament to every pastor's study.

—Lee H. Barnum closes his three years' pastorate at Horton, Kan., Feb. 1, at which time he will be ready to accept work elsewhere as settled pastor or would hold a meeting or two before locating. He reports a pleasant pastorate there, and says they will need a new preacher after Feb. 1.

—F. J. M. Appleman, missionary under the American Christian Missionary Society at Pictou, N. S., reports as follows: "The work here is in prosperous condition. Cannot report confessions, but otherwise doing well. We long for progress in numbers, but that is a difficult matter in this conservative field, but will win out in the end."

—John W. Allen, missionary under the American Christian Missionary Society at Spokane, Wash., reports as follows: "The outlook is exceedingly encouraging. I never saw a brighter outlook. Am sure we will not need your financial assistance after the present missionary year. A splendid band of Disciples here. The making of a noble church."

—The South Bend Christian Church and its two missions held their annual business meeting on New Year's eve. During the year there have been 56 additions to the First Church, of which P. J. Pice is pastor, and 28 at the Indiana Avenue Mission, where R. L. Handley recently succeeded W. D. Van Vorhis. The present total membership is 623, and the receipts last year from all sources amounted to $4,246.82.

—The Trinidad (Colo.) Christian Church reports 93 additional members. The Bible School attendance has doubled, and the church debt of $2,000 has been paid to the Board of Church Extension; all current expenses have been met, and there is a balance in the treasury. This is a splendid record. The pastor of this church, David C. Peters, spent several months last year in Palestine, Egypt, Europe and the British Isles.

—Last week the Board of Church Extension received $4,600 on the annuity plan, $4,000 of this from Mrs. Charity Higgins, of Dinkirk, Ohio, on which 5 per cent is paid, and $600 from a friend in Illinois. This $4,000 gift from Sister Higgins, together with $2,000 which she gave us a year ago on the annuity plan, at 4 per cent makes $6,000 from Sister Charity Higgins. At her death, a memorial loan fund will be established in memory of her liberality.

—On Jan. 1, 1904, the Board of Church Extension had passed the $400,000 mark, there being $400,635 in the fund. The above amount does not include the Sarah A. Holman property at Peoria, Ill., which was reported two weeks ago, and from which the board expects to realize from $3,000 to $10,000. The board also has real estate in Bowling Green, Ohio, worth from $2,500 to $3,000. These items will not be counted in until the sale of the property. It will be remembered that the board is seeking to reach a half million by 1905. The brotherhood will be pleased to know that the $400,000 mark which was to be reached by the close of 1903, was passed by over $500.

—Several of our wide awake preachers have followed the excellent custom of sending printed New Year's greetings to the members of their congregation. T. P. Ullom, of Traverse City, Mich., sends us a handsome little booklet containing some able statements of great truths, and some bright suggestions for the New Year. Russell F. Thrapp, of Jacksonville, Ill., sends us an encouraging and stimulating pastoral letter, calling upon the members of his congregations for increased efforts in 1904. He incorporates in his letter, the New Year's meditation which we published on the cover of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST two years ago. W. P. Hale, of Mountain Grove, Mo., sends us with his New Year's greeting a report of the past year, showing a net increase of 88 in membership.

—The Highland Park Christian Church at Des Moines, Ia., of which Morton Gregory is pastor, has been reopened and dedicated after undergoing extensive reconstruction. The church was dedicated on Dec. 13 by Dr. H. O. Breeden, and all money raised to clear entire indebtedness. Brother and Sister Gregory presented the church with a handsome individual communion set, and the University Place Church presented an elegant communion table.

—F. D. Wharton, missionary under the American Christian Missionary Society at Newkirk, Okla., reports as follows: "I enclose herewith receipt for $30. I ask you to accept the heartfelt thankfulness of myself and the entire congregation for the kindly aid and for your untiring efforts to encourage and cheer during the year that is about to say good-bye. As to my work in Newkirk, I feel that I am just entering into my usefulness. Last Lord's day seven accessions, five baptisms, two from the sects. To-night I took the confession of a man 53 years old."

—Sister Laura Frye, of Swinton, Mo., asks that an appeal be made for the church at that place, to those who are more fortunate in worldly goods. They have begun on a building, and it will take about $250 to complete it; they also owe $100 for material. J. C. Williams, of Leora, Mo., has offered his services as a preacher to this congregation, without compensation, as soon as the church can be completed. This little band of Disciples have made a brave struggle to secure a house of worship. Will not some of our more fortunate churches lend them a helping hand?

—A clipping has been sent us from a Lanark, (Ill.) paper, giving an account of the death of Bro. S. M. Thomas, former pastor at Lanark. His death occurred at Macomb, Ill. He had been in poor health for a year or two, and a cold caused a return of his trouble, kidney disease, resulting in his rather sudden death. He and his wife were graduates of Eureka College and both had received the degree of A. M., from that institution. He had held the pastorates at Chambersburg and Kansas, Ill., prior to his going to Lanark. Resolutions of sorrow and respect were passed by the official board of the church.

—The church at Huntington, Ind., held its annual meeting the first Sunday in the year. Reports from the various departments showed growth along all lines. The church roll shows a membership of over 400, 33 being added during the year, mostly at the regular services. A debt of $1,500 at the beginning of the year has been reduced to $275, this amount being assumed by the ladies' aid society. This society is doing splendid work. The C. W. B. M. has a membership of 53. Their average attendance has been over 40. They make a worthy report for 1903. We thank God and take courage.—CEPHAS SHELburne.

—We are glad to report plans maturing for the exhibit building on the World's Fair ground. The sub committee having this matter in hand, say they will be able to furnish us a cut of the proposed building for our next week's issue, or certainly for the week following, together with an estimate of the cost. It will be necessary, then, to have prompt contributions from the friends of this enterprise to enable us to bring the building and the exhibit to completion in time for the opening of the Fair, May 1. Let the brethren be prepared to act promptly in this matter, as it is a rare opportunity for doing a great service to the cause we plead.

—Referring to the recent publication in one of our contemporaries on the subject of church federation, and the editorial comment thereon, Dr. E. B. Sanford, general secretary of the federation movement in a personal letter to the editor, says, "I do not know that any comment on my part is necessary further than to express the regret that the movement we are seeking to advance should be misunderstood by many, because of this misrepresentation." But this is the fate of every forward movement in the work of the church. It does not seem to us exactly fair to represent Dr. Sanford as holding to a scheme of federation which he has distinctly repudiated, and to represent his views as antagonistic to those which the Disciples hold as they have been voiced in an address on Church Federation now published in pamphlet form, when the Doctor has endorsed this address as expressing the type and kind of federation which he is seeking to bring about.

—"The Messenger" is the name of a local church paper published at Canon City, Colo. Its issue of Dec. 26 is before us, and we notice in parallel columns, the church news from all the local churches in the city, seven in number, together with the report of the Y. M. C. A. This is federation in a small way, and we do not see why it is not practicable for the churches of smaller cities and towns to have such a local paper for their local news. In the column containing news from the Christian church of which Walter Kline is pastor, attention is called to the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST as "the oldest and most influential paper published by our people," and the readers are urged to subscribe directly or through the pastor. We appreciate such favors.

—E. A. Orr, of Sioux Falls, S. D., writes commending the recent appeal in behalf of the Christian Church at Sioux City. He says: "Sioux City is a great missionary field in itself, and is more vitally connected with the evangelism of South Dakota than our own metropolis, Sioux Falls. South Dakota is still to be settled and evangelized. The gospel must follow the tide of immigration, which is through Sioux City. Another thing that deserves our consideration is the heroic faith and self-denying effort of the pastor, W. T. Hilton and the little band of Disciples that constitute the church there, and especially that the task is beyond their strength. A strong church here will be a great evangelizing power for decades to come. The place is so strategic that the appeal is no ordinary one. Do not turn a deaf ear to it."

An Important Mission Field.

I have just resigned the pastorate of the church at Kirksville, Mo., and will go at once into the evangelistic field. This is a great mission field. The State Normal school has 500 students, the American School of Osteopathy has 700 students. These students come from all parts of the United States and Canada. Many of these never heard our plea for New Testament Christianity until they came here. It is a revelation to them, and many of them accept it gladly.

During the four years and a half I have been here we have taken into this church at our regular Sunday services over 800 members. Many of these were students and have gone elsewhere to live. I am very loath to give up the work here, but I have worked very hard and feel that I must rest, or have a change of work. No one man can do the work here that ought to be done. I wish the State Board or the Home Board might see the importance of this work and assist the church in employing an assistant pastor. The church here is not able to do this. The congregation is at perfect peace, all church debts are paid and we have the largest Y. P. S. C. E. in the state. Our audiences will average the year round 600. The work is very hard but very satisfactory. My permanent address will be Kirksville, Mo.

H. A. NORTH CUTT.

January 7, 1904.

Ministerial Exchange.

The church at Bloomfield, Mo., wants a pastor. Address Dr. T. E. Tribble or Mrs. J. B. Buck.

C. M. Howe, after Jan. 21, is open for engagements as soloist and leader of chorus. Address care R. H. Ingram, Creston, Ia.

I. N. Grisso, of Princeton, Ill., has arranged with his church there to obtain leave of absence to hold a series of revival meetings. This is an opportunity for some church to secure a preacher of much experience in evangelistic work.

The church at Golden City, Mo., wishes a pastor for half of the time. Would prefer to have him begin work by Feb. 1. Address Kate Deweese.

A newly organized church at Hammond,

RAPIDLY GROWING

in Popularity and Circulation
the Indispensable Companion of Young Men and Women
Everywhere

Our Young Folks

Begins its Fourteenth Volume with the First Issue for 1904. As an Aid to the Sunday-School and
C. E. Worker
IT IS UNSURPASSED

Subscription Price, 75c. a year
(52 Numbers)

Christian Publishing Co.
St. Louis : : Missouri

An Endeavorer's Working Journey Around the World

By JNO. F. ANDERSON.

Linen Cloth Binding; Inset Illustration on Front Cover; 313 Pages.

$1.50, Postpaid.

A HANDSOME BOOK.

TWENTY-SEVEN FULL-PAGE ILLUSTRATIONS.

A story of an energetic young American, a Christian Endeavorer, who started on a journey around the world, without money, and who succeeded by working his way in accomplishing the task in five years. Living among the people of various lands, he became possessed of a knowledge of their habits of life impossible to the ordinary traveler. The story is told in a simple, unassuming way which is very refreshing to the reader.

Christian Publishing Company
1522 Locust Street St. Louis, Mo.

Ind., wants a young preacher of ability. First year's salary paid by missionary board, at least $500. Address C. J. Sharp, 513 Indiana Ave., Hammond, Ind.

The church at Hammond, Ind., wishes a singing evangelist for meeting during February or March. Address C. J. Sharp, 513 Indiana Ave., Hammond, Ind.

The church at Kingston, Mo., wants a pastor at once. Address A. B. Cox, Clerk.

Evangelist Frederick F. Wyatt, of Texas, is at Booneville, Mo., and is open for one more meeting. He will look after his own money matters.

Bro. Wm. Briscoe, Tucumcari, N. M., writes that there is not a Christian preacher in the county; that they are located eleven miles south and two and one-half west of Tucumcari, where they are just finishing a school house which can be used for meetings. He thinks this would be a good field for work, and asks that some song books or literature be sent them.

Correspondence

A Plea to the Pastors and Brotherhood of an Imperial State.

In behalf of the educational institutions of the Church of Christ in Missouri, we, a committee appointed by the Missouri Christian Missionary Society at its last meeting in Columbia, make the following statements coupled with an appeal:

1. The committee represents the following institutions: Christian College, Columbia, Mo.; William Woods College, Fulton, Mo.; Female Orphan School, Camden Point, Mo.; Christian University, Canton, Mo.; Bible College of Missouri, Columbia, Mo.; Dexter Christian College, Dexter, Mo.

2. We rejoice to say that these institutions are, without a single exception, in good condition as compared with past years; that their students are increasing in numbers; that their chairs are filled with apt and consecrated men and women; that they are laudably ambitious to do a larger work; and that they are planning greater things for the coming years.

3. These institutions, one and all, seek to serve the Christian homes of our great state in the Christly education and training of their sons and daughters, that they may be well fitted for careers of usefulness in the home, in society, in commerce, and in the various professions, among which must be named as of first importance the Christian ministry.

4. Equally important with life is the training for life. It is a most critical day when the son or the daughter leaves home to seek an education. During the college days there is yet the plastic, formative mind and heart. The Christian faith and habits of the home, the instructions of the mother, the admonitions of the father, may hold or they may not. Much depends on the character of the school and of the men and women in its chairs. The college of one's own faith is most likely to send one's child home to him with faith confirmed.

5. We state a fact, but not censoriously, when we say that the colleges of the Christian Church in Missouri have not received the consideration they should at the hands of our numerous brotherhood. They have felt themselves the handmaidens of the homes and churches of the state, but they have not received from these homes and churches as many as they should of their sons and daughters.

6. They have not received such financial sympathy as they richly merited. All of them have struggled through years of enforced financial feebleness, bordering at times on distress, in their heroic efforts to serve the cause and gain their present standing. Not one of these institutions is at present sufficiently endowed. Not one has ample equipments in the way of buildings, libraries, scientific apparatus, and the numberless helps which now-a-days go to make a great and first-class college or university.

7. Educational methods are changing. Demands for thoroughness and a high curriculum are pressing. All around us are institutions of ample means, and splendid equipment, and strong faculties. We must compete with them or fall behind in the educational race. To fall behind is to lose our own children to the cause of primitive Christianity, and to lose also our immense opportunity in the religious world.

8. We believe therefore that there is not before our Missouri brotherhood another problem so pressing as that of Christian education. Every institution above named has demonstrated its right to exist, and grow, and become commanding. Every one has wrought for itself a place in the confidence and affections of large sections, if not the whole of our brotherhood. Every one deserves consideration and prayer and help.

9. Our brotherhood is so large and its means are so abundant, that there is a possibility of moderate gifts from many thousands of sympathizers with the work, plus the thousands of dollars that some can give. It would scarcely entail sacrifice on the part of the Missouri brotherhood to put every institution among us on a basis of power.

10. We gladly remind our Missouri brethren that there has been started among us a national movement in favor of Christian education. We, leading the whole sisterhood of our states numerically, have the basis already laid for an educational leadership. This point of laudable rivalry is not to be despised. But far beyond it rises the plea of noble institutions, well founded but struggling; and back of that, and more impressive still by many fold, rises the plea of thousands of young men and women, looking anxiously forward to their coming years, and knowing that their lives are largely to be made or marred by the schools they attend.

We therefore suggest the following to the pastors and people of the churches of Missouri:

1. That the national educational day, namely the third Lord's day in January, be held sacred so far as possible to the cause of Christian education: that the pastor preach on the subject; and that the offering be taken, the same to be disbursed in favor of such institution or institutions as the church itself may direct.

2. That the matter of individual offerings on the part of people of means be not forgotten by pastors. There are many people to whom it would be a benediction to give handsomely to our institutions. There are those who under proper presentation would rejoice to make legacies to the institutions of their choice. Others can give annuities, and are glad to do so.

3. That the friends of our institutions seize every opportunity to direct inquiring young men and women first of all and emphatically to our own institutions, and that the imperative, the glory, and the duty of the Christian ministry be urged upon young men available for this great work.

We crave a warm place in the hearts of our busy pastors for the cause we represent, and we thank them and their congregations in advance for such interest in the welfare of our institutions as we now bespeak.

W. J. LHAMON,
Chairman Educational Committee.

For Singers and Speakers.

The New Remedy for Catarrh is Very Valuable.

A Grand Rapids gentleman who represents a prominent manufacturing concern and travels through central and southern Michigan, relates the following regarding the new catarrh cure, he says: "After suffering from catarrh of the head, throat and stomach for several years, I heard of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets quite accidentally and like everything else I immediately bought a package and was decidedly surprised at the immediate relief it afforded me, and still more to find a complete cure after several weeks' use.

"I have a little son who sings in a boys' choir in one of our prominent churches, and he is greatly troubled with hoarseness and throat weakness, and on my return home from a trip I gave him a few of the tablets one Sunday morning when he had complained of hoarseness. He was delighted with their effect, removing all huskiness in a few minutes and making the voice clear and strong.

"As the tablets are very pleasant to the taste, I had no difficulty in persuading him to use them regularly.

"Our family physician told us they were an antiseptic preparation of undoubted merit and that he himself had no hesitation in using and recommending Stuart's Catarrh Tablets for any form of catarrh.

"I have since met many public speakers and professional singers who used them constantly. A prominent Detroit lawyer told me that Stuart's Catarrh Tablets kept his throat in fine shape during the most trying weather, and that he had long since discarded the use of cheap lozenges and troches on the advice of his physician that they contained so much tolu, potash and opium as to render their use a danger to health."

Stuart's Catarrh Tablets are large, pleasant tasting lozenges composed of catarrhal antiseptics, like Red Gum, Blood Root, etc., and sold by druggists everywhere at 50 cents for full treatment.

They act upon the blood and mucous membrane and their composition and remarkable success has won the approval of physicians, as well as thousands of sufferers from nasal catarrh, throat troubles and catarrh of stomach.

A little book on treatment of catarrh mailed free by addressing F. A. Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich.

For Over 60 Years

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup

has been used for over SIXTY YEARS by MILLIONS of Mothers for their CHILDREN while TEething, with perfect success. IT SOOTHES the CHILD, SOFTENS the GUMS, ALLAYS all pain, CURES WIND COLIC, and is the best remedy for DIARRHOEA. Sold by Druggists in every part of the world. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup and take no other kind. 25 Cents a Bottle.

An Old and Well-tried Remedy

Individual Communion Outfits. Send for FREE catalogue and list of users. SANITARY COMMUNION OUTFIT CO. Box A ROCHESTER, N. Y.

A TRIO

of devotional books which have aided thousands of readers.

Alone With God The Heavenward Way Half Hour Studies at the Cross

Written by J. H. Garrison,
Editor of THE CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST.

They are similar in size and binding, and being all written for the purpose of comfort and spiritual strength, they constitute what may properly be called

A Devotional Library.

PRICE,

Seventy-Five Cents a Volume, or
Two Dollars for the Set of Three Volumes, Postpaid.

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING CO.,
1522 Locust St., St. Louis, Mo.

A Start on the Road to Riches is always made by saving. One dollar or more will start a savings account with us. We pay 3 per cent per annum, compounded twice a year. Write for leaflet on instructions in regard to depositing by mail.

Capital, Surplus and Profits..... $8,200,000

MISSISSIPPI VALLEY TRUST CO.

FOURTH & PINE STS. ST. LOUIS

Installation of Drake University Pastor.

The installation of Chas. S. Medbury as pastor of the University Place Christian Church was not formal, but it was hearty and beautiful.

With his family he arrived in Des Moines on Dec. 31. Their temporary home is with Dean and Mrs. Haggard on Cottage Grove, where open house was kept on New Year's Day. Here hundreds called. All our churches in the city were represented. Dr. H. O. Breeden and wife brought a delegation from the Central Church to welcome the man from Indiana. It was a most enjoyable occasion, and the most beautiful feature of all was the loving way in which the outgoing pastor, Bro. J. N. McCash, and wife, introduced the callers.

On Sunday, Jan. 3, Brother Medbury preached his first sermon. It was an inspiring message upon the mission of the church. Large audiences greeted him, and the tide of enthusiasm ran high. Few men are able to do what Brother McCash has so splendidly done. After more than ten years with his people, and with such a warm place in their hearts and homes, he has in a few weeks succeeded in putting Brother Medbury into perfect touch with the whole community. His place to-day in the hearts and homes of the University Place Church is ideal, and to Brother McCash belongs no small credit for it. With many churches the continued presence of an outgoing pastor is a hindrance to the work, but in our case it is an untold blessing.

On last Sunday, Pres. Hill M. Bell introduced the new pastor and read a number of letters from prominent brethren at a distance who congratulated us upon our selection of a pastor. As I write far from home, and was not present, I cannot name the writers. But I have one of those letters with me, and will give it as a sample.

ALFRED M. HAGGARD.
Drake University.

DENVER, COLO., Nov. 9, 1903.

DEAR BROTHER HAGGARD: I cannot refrain from saying how wonderfully our Father guides his people in the emergencies of life. After I heard of Brother McCash's resignation, I tried to think of the right man for the place. I said in despair: Who can take this important post left by Dr. McCash? I did not think of C. S. Medbury. As soon as your note came, I said: He is the man. There is no man in the brotherhood so admirably qualified to serve the University Place Church as C. S. Medbury. I send, therefore, this note of heartiest congratulation. He will fit in splendidly to your department in the university, and this is an essential qualification in the pastor of the University Place Church. You may not suspect it, but I am keenly interested in that great church and its work. In some respects it is the most wonderful church among the Disciples. I am happy All is well. Fraternally, 158 So. Penn. Ave. B. B. TYLER.

Missouri Bible-School Notes.

Houstonia school has not failed but one year in its giving to state Bible-school work in 18 years, and when kindly told of it the congregation gave the school such help as enables them to meet that year and this also. Those are the friends for you. Phil Stark's work there moves along nicely and they were doing their uttermost to hold him longer, and if they do he and the superintendent are going to have such a rally as will put the school to the front.

Now that we are to have six months in the Life of Christ, it is just the time to study Hinsdale's "Christ as a Teacher," and Dowlings' "The Christ," both of them pointed and helpful in our work at this time as I have found and am finding.

Eldon began their campaign, Superintendent Hickok writes, with an average of 60, and now it is 150 and the end is not yet. Yet, with some, campaign is no good.

R. B. Havener's meeting, in the midst of the cold spell and just before Christmas, was remarkable. In the midst of it came the dedication, of which you will see more, and now there is one of the nicest houses along the Rock Island in Belle. The meeting resulted in 23 additions and the work in all departments in fine shape and he is now at Bland, another new town on the St. Louis line of the Rock Island, trying to do a similar work.

The campaign at Alexander under the workers was great, and then was wisely followed by a meeting in which just half the additions came from the school, all of which shows the benefit of a properly conducted campaign. The result to our work was the payment of the apportionment for the year in full. Those of us understanding the surroundings at Alexandria rejoice with them in their growth.

Windsor's annual report shows splendidly: first, of officers, three and one half out of four for the year; secondly, of the teachers, with an average of nine and one half out of ten, while pupils average over one hundred and five in money, with an offering to every department of the work and funds on hand. Not in seven years has one bill gone to "protest," and to our work the school has kept paid ahead. One of the best little schools in Missouri is at Windsor.

Hamilton, which many of us know, has had an average this last year of 74, and under Mrs. Julia McLallen an effort will be made for an even hundred during 1904. C. M. Lewellen enters his second year with all departments in good shape and the congregation happily united. Apportionment to our work paid in full.

T. J. Head has worked hard during the holidays at Puxico, a most difficult field, and in which he reports good results as well as additions for our evangelist seeks the betterment of the spiritual side of the congregation.

W. A. Moore is going to push the work in north Missouri from now on, and, best of all, by the goodness of our brethren all debts are paid and we owe no one, for which I wish it were possible to thank all personally.

H. F. DAVIS.

DRAKE'S PALMETTO WINE.

A tonic palmetto medicine that relieves immediately and absolutely cures every case of Indigestion, Flatulency, Constipation and Catarrh of the Mucous Membranes to stay cured. Drake's Palmetto Wine is a specific for Kidney and Liver Congestion and Inflammation of Bladder.

Seventy-five cents at Drug Stores for a large bottle, usual dollar size, but a trial bottle will be sent free and prepaid to every reader of the CHRISTIAN EVANGELIST who writes for it.

Simply send your name and address by letter or postal card to Drake Formula Company, Lake and Dearborn Streets, Chicago, Ill.

LAND FREE! Send stamp for information. J. L. LOVERING, Agt., 118 4th st., St. Paul, Minn.

WHAT SULPHUR DOES

For the Human Body in Health and Disease.

The mention of sulphur will recall to many of us the early days when our mothers and grandmothers gave us our daily dose of sulphur and molasses every spring and fall.

It was the universal spring and fall "blood purifier," tonic and cure-all, and mind you, this old-fashioned remedy was not without merit.

The idea was good, but the remedy was crude and unpalatable, and a large quantity had to be taken to get any effect.

Nowadays we get all the beneficial effects of sulphur in a palatable, concentrated form, so that a single grain is far more effective than a tablespoonful of the crude sulphur.

In recent years, research and experiment have proven that the best sulphur for medicinal use is that obtained from Calcium (Calcium Sulphide) and sold in drug stores under the name of Stuart's Calcium Wafers. They are small chocolate coated pellets and contain the active medicinal principle of sulphur in a highly concentrated, effective form.

Few people are aware of the value of this form of sulphur in restoring and maintaining bodily vigor and health: sulphur acts directly on the liver, the excretory organs and purifies and enriches the blood by the prompt elimination of waste material.

Our grandmothers knew this when they dosed us with sulphur and molasses every spring and fall, but the crudity and impurity of ordinary flowers of sulphur were often worse than the disease, and cannot compare with the modern concentrated preparations of sulphur, of which Stuart's Calcium Wafers is undoubtedly the best and most widely used.

They are the natural antidote for liver and kidney troubles, and cure constipation and purify the blood in a way that often surprises patient and physician alike.

Dr. R. M. Wilkins while experimenting with sulphur remedies soon found that the sulphur from Calcium was superior to any other form. He says: "For liver, kidney and blood troubles, especially when resulting from constipation or malaria, I have been surprised at the results obtained from Stuart's Calcium Wafers. In patients suffering from boils and pimples and even deep seated carbuncles, I have repeatedly seen them dry up and disappear in four or five days, leaving the skin clear and smooth. Although Stuart's Calcium Wafers is a proprietary article, and sold by druggists, and for that reason tabooed by many physicians, yet I know of nothing so safe and reliable for constipation, liver and kidney troubles, and especially in all forms of skin disease, as this remedy."

At any rate, people who are tired of pills, cathartics and so-called blood "purifiers," will find in Stuart's Calcium Wafers a far safer, more palatable and effective preparation.

Four Years and four Months at Warrensburg.

The first Sunday in the new year was a great day in the church at Warrensburg, Mo., where gather from year to year a great number of students in attendance upon the State Normal located there. It was the occasion of the fifth annual report of the pastor, H. A. Denton, and reports from the several departments of the work. It was the best report since J. A. Lord retired from the pastorate some twelve years ago. The congregation is out of debt and in a most prosperous condition.

The following will summarize the work as reported: 475 have been added to the church in four years and four months. Of this number, 400 are members at the present time, the rest having been dismissed by letter. One-half of them came by confession and baptism. This makes an average of one baptism for every Sunday of the time, and an addition for every regular public service, with some to spare. One hundred and ninety were added in 1903. The new members subscribe 40 per cent of the support provided for the church in 1904. The present membership is 805; $550 was raised for missions during the year. Two have volunteered for the foreign mission field. The church has been repaired inside and out at a cost of several hundred dollars, and is now in fine condition. Over 100 came into the church from the Sunday-school, and 23 were baptized from the Junior Endeavor. An Intermediate Endeavor was organized. The spirit of missions and of progress in all departments of work is most gratifying, and the matter of becoming a living link church is being discussed.

School of Christian Workers.

After some weeks of correspondence, the School of Pastoral Helpers has been transferred to Drake University, Des Moines. The school has done a good work in Cincinnati, but we came to a place where it was necessary to employ a first-class man to take charge of it and reorganize it on a larger basis or to transfer it.

The committee voted to transfer it if proper arrangements could be made with one of our colleges. It was offered a very warm welcome in several institutions, but it was thought Drake University had the advantage of the others in its location in a fair-sized city with splendid churches.

They have already arranged their course and begun work. The name will be changed from School of Pastoral Helpers to School of Christian Workers. This is likely what would have been done had it remained in Cincinnati. It means that they expect to train workers beside the pastoral helper. I hope it means missionaries, home and foreign.

I want to say that never was a man supported by a more loyal set of teachers than I have been through the nearly four years we carried on the work in our city. To add to the Master's efficient working force without thought of pay, they wrought faithfully and efficiently with never one complaint.

I know the value of a good helper. It has cost me much time, thought and anxiety that other pastors and churches might enjoy a like blessing. The world will not be brought to Christ, nor the church do its work in the world until we greatly multiply her trained workers.

Now that the school has gone to Des Moines, I shall be ever more interested in Drake University, and my prayers for her shall ascend more often and more earnestly.

A. M. HARVUOT.

What Catarrh Is.

Catarrh, as defined by Webster, is an inflammatory affection of any mucous membrane, any condition in which there are congestion, swelling, morbid action or any alteration in the quantity and quality of mucous secreted. It can be present in any part of the body where is a mucous membrane, the head, nose, throat, stomach, intestines, bowels, bladder or kidneys, and as a clot of dust impairs the workings of the finest watch, so a catarrh of condition of any organ enfeebles its power, prevents the proper functional activity and results is a complication of ills of many names and symptoms, treated in many different ways, but no cure is possible unless the Catarrhal condition, the primary cause, is checked and removed.

To successfully treat catarrh of any part it is necessary to use medicaments which possess the power of allaying inflammation, arresting morbid action and of purifying diseased mucous.

Vita-Ore, the natural mineral remedy which has been frequently offered in the columns of this publication on thirty days' trial, is recommended to cure Catarrh of any part of the body, used for the different conditions in the several ways prescribed. It is a natural astringent, possessing qualities as such which it seems impossible to duplicate in any manufactured or artificial product and immediately allays all inflammation, stops all morbid or irregular action on the membrane, eradicates all catarrhal conditions and places each organ in a natural, healthy condition, so as to faithfully perform its individual function and restores the entire system to a state of total and perfect health.

Read the 30-day trial offer made in this issue by the proprietors, the Theo. Noel Company of Chicago.

Council Grove, Kansas.

I took the work here one year ago and found the work in a very discouraging condition. The church stood on the river bank and was annually flooded and made it very disagreeable to hold services, or approach it, in these times. This condition of things had been standing for more or less than sixteen years. On assuming the work here we concluded to change the location of the same, and after some months and deliberation and planning, it was decided that I raise some of the money by private subscription, while others of the brethren and sisters did the same, and our success was beyond our expectations, with the following results of further work.

The contract was let for the work to begin the moving by the first of May, which was done, and interfered with by intervening rains until the 28th of May the great Kansas flood caught us and very materially crippled us, and the pastor especially, as many of the readers of this paper know. But not to be daunted, one month after the great flood was over it still seemed that we would never raise the money necessary to continue the work in completing what we had begun, we took new life, and with prayers and hopes for the best we started out again and labored with many difficulties to overcome the obstacles in the way. Steadily we relied on God and our own Christian energy in the brethren, until we had our most cherished hopes realized.

On August the second, we had the extreme pleasure and joy of "going up to the dedication" of the most beautiful and best equipped church in our city, which has in it seven churches, besides our own house.

Our house is a building 32x48 feet, and is of the best material. Under the building is a cellar with a dimension of 18x30 feet, and a splendid heating apparatus. The inside of the new building was plastered and entirely repapered and painted. The seats were also painted and the entire floor carpeted, giving it a very quiet, homelike appearance. It is lighted with a dozen incandescent lights, thus furnishing abundance of light. It has a white coat of paint outside, which was put on during the summer, and the surroundings are the most desirable in the city, compared with what they were before the work was done.

The membership has grown during the year from 125 to 145. The work of the membership has been as good as any of the brotherhood. We raised for all purposes of church work the following money: For current expenses, $695; for the building fund, $945; the Ladies' Aid of 32 members for the same purpose, raised, $250; the Sunday-school and Christian Endeavor together, $150; making a total of more than $2,000. A work which seems marvelous in our eyes, on account of the many drawbacks and the difficulties and the floods of the year. I delivered 111 addresses during the year; was drowned out by the flood with a narrow escape of my life, and also my wife, but the Lord has blessed us wonderfully, before the people.

The new year opens very auspiciously. We will enter the new year with every cent of debt provided for, and paid within $50, thus making us absolutely free from debt of any kind, which we consider a matter of great rejoicing, and anticipate great things the coming year.

For the work which I have done in my feeble way, the church has extended to me a unanimous call to remain with them for another year, which I have accepted, and trust that the Lord will bless the work here as never before. We are contemplating a meeting soon for the winning of souls, and the strengthening of the cause. The evangelist has not yet been selected, but will report later the results of the meeting.

As a whole, we have done the cause of Christ a world of good here. A few years ago we were looked upon as a few miserable "Campbellites;" now we are the "strong Christian Church;" so say our denominational brethren now, and congratulate us daily "on our wonderful success." We only represent "one" of the large bodies of Christ in this world, and may we ever be found doing our Master's will, and all will be well.

D. S. DOMER, minister.

A New Weekly for Girls and Boys.

EDITORS: W. W. DOWLING,
METTA A. DOWLING.

This New Paper is issued weekly, and consists of eight pages of three columns each, printed on fine book paper, in the best style of the art, and will not suffer in comparison with any similar paper in the land.

Its Contents.—THE ROUND TABLE is quite distinctly a "Story Paper;" five of its eight pages will usually be occupied with Serial and Shorter Stories, always pure in tone and instructive in character, with fine illustrations. The remaining pages will be filled with Table Talks on a great variety of themes; Odds and Ends of useful information; Outlines of the Sunday-school Lessons and Endeavor Topics; A Puzzle Drawer full of Riddles, Charades and Problems, to exercise the wits of young readers, and in each issue a sufficient amount of Pepper and Spice to keep its readers awake and smooth out any wrinkles that may have a tendency to gather in their faces.

Subscription Price.—One copy, one year, 50 cents; in clubs of five to one address, 40 cents each; in clubs of ten or more to one address, 36 cents each. Quarterly subscriptions at proportional rates.

Address Christian Publishing Company,
1522 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo.

A Trip Across the Ocean

may not be a possibility to you now, but

You Can Go

in fancy and enjoy some of the delights of the journey by reading

WHEELING THROUGH EUROPE

A most interesting book of 263 pages, containing many scenes photographed by the author, W. E. Garrison.

At a Cost of Sixty Cents

you may have this book sent, postpaid, to your address. THIS IS A SPECIAL CHRISTMAS PRICE. THE REGULAR PRICE IS ONE DOLLAR

Good Music is of Supreme Importance

When we say good we mean both in sentiment and melody.

LIVING PRAISE

By CHAS. H. GABRIEL and W. W. DOWLING
Is that kind of a Song Book.

Drop us a postal card request and we will tell you all about this superb collection of 267 pieces of sacred music. Three styles of binding.

Christian Publishing Co., 1522 Locust St., St. Louis, Mo.

$3 a Day Sure
Send us your address and we will show you how to make $3 a day absolutely sure; we furnish the work and teach you free, you work in the locality where you live. Send us your address and we will explain the business fully, remember we guarantee a clear profit of $3 for every day a week, absolutely sure. Write at once. ROYAL MANUFACTURING CO., Box 1125, Detroit, Mich.

SUBSCRIBERS' WANTS.

WANTED.—To hear from brethren wishing to get or dispose of M. Harbinger's. I want 1863 and 1864. Address J. F. Callahan, Noble, Ohio.

LEARN STENOGRAPHY.—Send 10 cents to the Oliver Typewriter Company, 315 North 9th Street, Century Building, St. Louis, Mo., for self-instructor in shorthand and typewriting.

WANTED.—Widow with one child desires position as housekeeper in minister's family with small children. Best of references given and required. Address Z. care Christian-Evangelist, St. Louis, Mo.

Personal to Subscribers

REV. J. H. WRIGHT
Has Used It and Knows What It Will Do.
READ WHAT HE SAYS.

GREENSBURG, Pa.—I have at this writing used two and one-half packages of Vite-Ore, and I must say that it has been a WONDERFUL MEDICINE FOR ME. I feel like a new man. For the last two years I had felt like a rundown clock, on the verge of nervous prostration. My lower limbs began to swell and become heavy, as in dropsical troubles, and I could not walk up a short flight of steps without becoming exhausted and so tired that I would have to stop and rest. I called upon my physician and asked to know my trouble. He assured me it was neither dropsy nor rheumatism, but what in medical parlance is called "Phlebetes," a term used to designate a condition in which the large veins are inflamed, so that it is difficult for the blood to circulate. I asked the danger, and was told "blood poisoning, foot dies by inches, gangrene." He said it was not too late to help me, and by using powerful stimulants caused the heart to more freely. He did all he could for me, and after changing the medicine and treatment six times, succeeded in reducing the enlargement of the limb (left leg), and I was beginning to feel good over it, when the right limb began to swell and enlarge as the left had done. It was at this period that I saw the Vite-Ore advertisement, and sent for a package on trial. After using it for two weeks I felt so much better I was convinced I was on the right way for a renewal of health, and now after using two and one-half packages, I FEEL WELL AND STRONG. It is wonderful food for the brain as well as muscles. I am seventy-one years old, and on the 20th day of April I preached my fiftieth anniversary of ministerial acts and service in the church. Had I not come in touch with Vite-Ore last winter, I hardly think I would have reached that long-looked-for period. I am, indeed, thankful for the HEALTH IT GAVE ME, AND CAN NOT SAY ENOUGH to help others to be benefited as I have been.—REV. J. H. WRIGHT, 416 West Newton Avenue.

WE WILL SEND to every subscriber or reader of THE CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST or worthy person recommended by a subscriber or reader, a full-sized One Dollar package of VITE-ORE, by mail, postpaid, sufficient for one month's treatment to be paid for within one month's time after receipt, if the receiver can truthfully say that its use has done him or her more good than all the drugs and dopes of quacks or good doctors or patent medicines he or she has ever used. Read this over again carefully, and understand that we ask our pay only when it has done you good, and not before. We take all the risk; you have nothing to lose. If it does not benefit you, you pay us nothing. Vite-Ore is a natural, hard, adamant, rock-like substance—mineral—Ore—mined from the ground like gold and silver, and requires about twenty years for oxidation. It contains free iron, free sulphur and magnesium, and one package will equal in medicinal strength and curative value 800 gallons of the most powerful, efficacious mineral water drunk fresh at the springs. It is a geological discovery, to which there is nothing added or taken from. It is the marvel of the century for curing such diseases as Rheumatism, Bright's Disease, Blood Poisoning, Heart Trouble, Dropsy, Catarrh and Throat Affections, Liver, Kidney and Bladder Ailments, Stomach and Female Disorders, La Grippe, Malarial Fever, Nervous Prostration, and General Debility, as thousands testify, and as no one, answering this, writing for a package, will deny after using. Vite-Ore has cured more chronic, obstinate, pronounced incurable cases than any other known medicine and will reach such cases with a more rapid and powerful curative action than any medicine, combination of medicines, or doctor's prescription which it is possible to procure.

Vite-Ore will do the same for you as it has for hundreds of readers of this paper, if you will give it a trial. Send for a $1 package at our risk. You have nothing to lose but the stamp to answer this announcement. We want no one's money whom Vite-Ore cannot benefit. You are to be the judge! Can anything be more fair? What sensible person, no matter how prejudiced he or she may be, who desires a cure and is willing to pay for it, would hesitate to try Vite-Ore on this liberal offer? One package is usually sufficient to cure ordinary cases; two or three for chronic, obstinate cases. We mean just what we say in this announcement, and will do just as we agree. Write to-day for a package at our risk and expense, giving your age and ailments, and mention this paper, so we may know that you are entitled to this liberal offer.

This offer will challenge the attention and consideration, and afterward the gratitude of every living person who desires better health or who suffers pains, ills, and diseases which have defied the medical world and grown worse with age. We care not for your skepticism, but ask only your investigation, and at our expense, regardless of what ills you have, by sending to us for a package.

Address THEO. NOEL COMPANY

Evangelist Dept., Vitae-Ore Bldg., CHICAGO, ILL.

Marriages.

ROARK-HEATER.—Mr. Jos. P. Roark, of Starfield, Mo., and Miss Fona M. Heater, of Gower, Mo., were united in marriage at the bride's home, Dec. 30, 1903, J. A. Heater, officiating.

WILSON-GRIFFITH.—Married, Mr. Henry Wilson, of Plattsburg, Mo., and Miss Lucy Griffith, of Rushville, Mo., Dec. 30, 1903, J. A. Heater officiating.

Obituaries.

Notices of deaths (not more than four lines) inserted free. Obituary memoirs, one cent per word. Send the money with the copy.

MONROE.

Mrs. Mary J. Monroe, of Monroe, Wis., departed this life Sunday morning, Dec. 27, 1903, to be at home with her Savior. She was born Oct. 10, 1822, in Beebe Plain, Vt. For nine long years she had been deprived of her eye sight, but her spiritual vision was not dimmed. She was trustful, happy and patient to the last. She was intensely interested in our missionary work, being a member of the C. W. B. M. since its organization in this state. The husband, Dr. William Monroe, and three children, Will and Mettie J., of Monroe, and Mrs. A. L. Sawyer, of West Salem, Wis., survive her. The writer, assisted by Rev. A. Dixon, of Monroe, conducted the funeral Tuesday afternoon.

D. N. WETZEL.

Footville, Wis.

PINKERTON.

Dr. Thomas M. Pinkerton, so well known to the churches of Southern Ohio, departed this life Dec. 26, 1903, aged 88 years. In early manhood his father lived neighbor to Alexander Campbell. Dr. Pinkerton united with the church when a mere boy, and during his long service for the Master he developed the fruits of the Spirit to a remarkable degree. All who knew him loved him. While his profession was that of a practicing physician, yet he preached much and with great power. He was a man of the deepest convictions. A great student of the Bible and the literature of the Christian Church. He knew the history of the Church from its infancy, and its founders were among his warmest friends. He is now with them in heaven—Glorious victory!

PHILPUTT.

Charles Wynn Philputt departed this life at Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 20, 1903, in the 37th year of his age. Though his years were few, his life was strong in all the elements of a true manhood. He was educated at the Indiana University and Columbia College, New York, where he took high rank as a student of Greek. He taught Greek and Latin for a time in a private school in New York. In 1889 he became tutor and traveling companion to President King's son, of the Erie Railroad. This responsible position he held for twelve years, during which time he traveled all over the world. His duties were so faithfully performed as to win for him the esteem and affection of President King's family. After the death of his friend and pupil he returned to New York and went into business, which failing health soon compelled him to give up. With patience and fortitude he calmly awaited the end which he had foreseen for many months. He was one of the world's most modest, gentle and generous spirits. He was a charter member of the Lenox Avenue Union Church, in New York City, and rendered invaluable service to the cause, giving largely of his means and also of his time and strength. He had a genius for making friends. All who knew him loved him. He brightened life's pathway for many, and the world is richer because of his pure, thoughtful and unselfish life. He was laid to rest in Bloomington, Ind.

J. M. PHILPUTT.

VOGEL.

Daisy M. Vogel, second daughter of Peter Vogel, of Somerset, Pennsylvania, with her mother and sister, Ella King Vogel by her side, died of typhoid fever in Manila, Philippines, September 28, 1903. Miss Vogel was a girl of culture, refinement, rare virtues and many talents. She was deeply religious, without cant, thoroughly devoted to the church, without dogmatism or narrowness. She was of a sunny, happy disposition, and possessed that rare grace of manner called charm, that made and held friends wherever she went. Her life was sweet and pure in every thought, word and action, strong and noble in its purpose, Christian in spirit. She was thoughtful, earnest, sincere, modest, womanly—a dutiful child, a delightful companion, a sincere friend. All who knew her loved her. Miss Vogel was a graduate of the Somerset High School and of the music department of the Bethany College. She was a fine musician and possessed a rich, sweet voice, unusually sympathetic. After her graduation from Bethany, she had charge, for a year, of the music department in the State Normal at Edinboro, Penn. The following year she taught music and English in the public schools of Aguadilla, Porto Rico, and during the past two years has been a government teacher in the Philippines teaching music in a high school near Manila. Her pupils were devoted to her. When she died, they came and expressed their simple faith and appreciation in such phrases as these: "God took Miss Daisy because he wanted to hear her sing." "Our hearts contain no more joy and we cannot sing the songs she taught us." "She was like a white lily without spots." "She has gone to the land that is fairer than day of which she taught us to sing." Her remains were brought to Somerset. There, among the scenes of her childhood, we laid her to rest and left her sleeping under a profusion of flowers, her head pillowed on the promises of God. Here at the gate of the grave sight utterly fails us. Reason staggers, but faith still walks erect. Sometime, somewhere, we will understand.

WILLIAM MULLENDORE.

The Ministerial Bureau.

One year ago the Ministerial Bureau was started. Since then 65 preachers have been located, and with but two exceptions both churches and preachers are delighted. We have learned some things, and one is that we can put but little dependence in recommendations from some church officers. Some will recommend any man. We want to make no mistakes and use every precaution to avoid doing so. No one who cannot and who will not give first-class recommendations as to good character and ability for the work need write to us. Hundreds of earnest appeals have come to us during the past year for preachers, and the number increases. Truly the harvest is great and the laborers few. Let all churches wanting pastors continue to write to us, and all preachers wanting places do the same and we will do our best to bring such together. We hope that the national convention will soon foster this enterprise. It is sadly needed. We go on with it.

H. C. PATTERSON.

32 N. Ritter Ave., Indianapolis, Ind.

SENT FREE AND PREPAID.

To prove the great curative qualities of Vernal Saw Palmetto Berry Wine in all cases of indigestion, or constipation, we will send any reader of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, who needs it, a small trial bottle of this wonderful preparation. It quickly relieves, positively cures all stomach and bowel troubles. We have thousands of testimonials from those who have been relieved, cured, by its use. If you have any stomach trouble; or are bothered with constipation, do not fail to write to the Vernal Remedy Company, 19 Seneca Building, Buffalo, N. Y., for a trial bottle. It is sent Free and Prepaid. For sale by all leading drug stores.

Evangelistic

We invite ministers and others to send reports of meetings, additions and other news of the churches for publication in this department. It is especially requested that additions be reported as "by confession and baptism" or "by letter."

Additions Reported Last Week.

Baptisms.....	1,681
Letters and statements.....	710
Denominations.....	98

Total.....2,489

M. L. BUCKLEY.

Harrison, O., Jan. 3, 1904.

ALABAMA.—Mobile, Jan. 5.—There have been 14 additions to the church in this city since last report; six last Sunday. Our Bible-school now numbers 95 and is still growing. Our chapel is crowded.—CLAUDE E. HILL.

COLORADO.—Paonia, Jan. 5.—We have been here with the church about two months. Our people were about to lose their building. They had but eleven days to raise $1,700. We raised it, and are now safe if we can secure $800 from Church Extension to repay a loan which we could secure only for a short time. We had one confession, a woman past middle age, Sunday night, and several are almost persuaded. We had a faction to overcome when we first came here. This influence hurt us much. But people are gaining confidence in us. Our audiences are good. This is one of the finest fruit districts, and one of the finest climates in the west. Only a few times have we had zero weather this winter, and that always at night.—G. W. COFFMAN.

Colorado Springs, Jan. 7.—The annual roll call and business meeting of the First Christian Church was held Wednesday evening, Jan. 6. Three hundred and fifty of the members gathered at the church at 6 P. M., and ate their suppers together (and what a supper it was). Then at 7:30 the business meeting and roll-call was held in the auditorium. The reports showed that during the past year the church had raised for all purposes $6,050.96, of which $669, was for missions. There was reported 116 additions during the year 36 of which were by baptism; 60 had been dismissed by letter, leaving a resident membership of 553. On the next morning after the supper fifteen baskets of good things to eat was distributed to as many families. The church is full at every preaching service and the entire church is most of the time taxed to its full capacity.—L. E. BROWN, Minister.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.—Washington, Jan. 4.—Closed my three years' ministry at Madison, Ind., on last Lord's day in December, and took up my work here with the Fourth Street Christian Church, on the first Lord's day in January. During our stay at Madison, a new church building was completed and paid for; more than 200 were added to the membership, 100 by baptism. $6,000 were raised in cash, the church given a better place among the denominations of the city, and is more widely and favorably known throughout the brotherhood than ever before. The church was left completely out of debt with money in the treasury. They are a loyal band of people there, and deserve great credit for what they have done. The church is in perfect trim for good work, and we have a right to expect great things from them in the future. S. W. Trawn is their new minister. Large audiences here yesterday despite the icy pavements. Please change address of evangelist to 125 N. Carolina Ave., S. E., Washington, D. C.—J. MURRAY TAYLOR.

ILLINOIS.—Eureka, Jan. 4.—Six additions in a ten days' meeting, at Mt. Zion, near here.—H. H. PETERS.

Eureka.—I am in a meeting at Youngstown, Ill., with the pastor, Bro. G. F. Chandler, who graduates here this year.—ISAAC BEEKELEY-MER.

Cairo, Jan. 4.—Six added to the church since last report, making a total of 32, since I began work here a year ago. Sometime ago I tendered my resignation to take effect Dec. 31, 1903, on account of poor health. I have greatly improved in health since that time and the church refuses to let me go; extending me a unanimous call for another year.—Lew D. HILL, Minister.

Bloomington.—The meeting with J. H. MacNeill at Kokomo, Ind., was remarkable in many ways. The night before the opening, the polo rink was opened with 2,500 in attend-

MOTHER AND CHILD

Scott's Emulsion is cod liver oil made almost as palatable as milk. It is easy and soothing to the weak stomach; it checks the tendencies of children toward thinness.

Scott's Emulsion gives strength to weak mothers because it creates healthy flesh and new blood.

Nursing mothers will find a special value in Scott's Emulsion because it insures a flow of rich, nourishing milk for the baby. More and better than a medicine; Scott's Emulsion is a food.

We'll send you a sample free upon request.

SCOTT & BOWNE, 409 Pearl Street, New York.

ance, and this kept up well, two nights in the week. On the first day of the meeting the first interurban car ran into the town, and more people saw the car than heard the gospel. The Christmas season interested many. But the attendance was good in spite of all this. We closed with 124 in sixteen days. Brother Hackleman did the singing. In the three years ending Dec. 31, I have preached 123 Sundays, and have added to the various churches 4,107 persons. Began here last Sunday with good outlook. Three days and five added. Street car strike on hand, but we have good crowds.—ALLEN WILSON.

Toledo, Jan. 5.—Our meeting here closed last Lord's day, Jan. 3, with 15 added to the Lord and church as follows: Eight by primary obedience, one to be baptized, six by statement and one reclaimed. Of the baptisms two were Methodists, one a United Brethren; of the statements, one a New Light, or Old Christian Church and one from the Baptists. This was a hard pull, but we won by the power of the gospel. The church has been without regular preaching over a year and never did have a pastor located here. Every thing was disorganized and run down. We succeeded in better organizing them by selecting two elders and one deacon to act with the present board and starting a more business-like financial system. They passed a unanimous vote the last service that the church was in the best shape for aggressive work it had ever been. They will call a pastor soon and go on in the work and continue, we believe, to reap the harvest of our sowing. Churches needing a similar work address me at Clinton, Ill., for dates and terms.—F. L. DAVIS, State Evangelist.

Princeton.—This is a church of 126 members and the members are not wealthy, but rich in faith and good works. I. N. Grisso is the pastor. Following is the financial report for 1903: On salary and current expenses.....$1,342.90 For Foreign Missions.....542.82

" Home Missions, Church Extension and N. B. A.....54.47
" State and District Missions.....1,088.70
" S. S., and Sr., and Jr., C. E. work.....125.27
Ladies' Aid Society raised.....130.78
C. W. B. M. auxiliary raised.....90.00
Total amount raised for missions.....1,775.99
Total for all purposes.....$3,388.95
This church has given more for preaching the gospel outside of the local congregation than for all the departments of the home church. The C. W. B. M. auxiliary of the Princeton church is on the honor roll and is one of the best in the state. This auxiliary is older than the national organization. A number of the women banded themselves and contributed their ten cents a month in 1873.—L. A. S.

Alvin, Jan. 4.—I reorganized the church at Prairie Chapel yesterday and started them out with a fine body of officers. The church has very bright prospects before it. I shall preach for them one-fourth time. I commence a meeting at Bismarck this evening and shall report later.—C. F. GAUMER.

INDIANA.—Noblesville.—Three additions recently. Brother Marion Stevenson will spend a week with us early in February, lecturing on Bible subjects.—E. B. BARNES.

La Bend, Jan. 5.—We began a meeting, with Mrs. Princess Long as assistant, on Dec. 31. We had five additions to the church and one at the chapel last Lord's day. Bro. R. L. Handley will begin a meeting at the chapel next Lord's day.—P. J. RICE.

Fort Wayne, Jan. 8.—Report for year 1903. West Jefferson Street Church: Additions, 54; money raised, $3,400; of this amount $740 was for missions and benevolence. The church supports its own missionary, Miss Stella Franklin, Damoh, India. We have two missions: Washington Chapel Sunday-school 60, average collection 65 cents. East End Mission organized three months ago; Sunday-school 125; average attendance 80; average collection $1.14; flourishing Aid Society; money raised in three months by this mission $140. Hope to build a chapel for them this year.—E. W. ALLEN.

INDIAN TERRITORY.—Tahlequah, Jan. 5.—After a silence of some time, I wish to say that circumstances have prevented us in as active pulpit work as usual, but we have preached a few times, and have met with three or four others on each Lord's day for Bible study and the communion service. I now think I shall be able to report some good results from this field in the near future. The EVANGELIST is still our most welcome weekly visitor.—A. M. HARRAL.

IOWA.—Mt. Sterling, Jan. 4.—Closed my third meeting here last night; 31 accessions. Used to be pastor here while a student.—J. M. LOVE.

Corydon, Jan. 6.—Meeting three days' old and six additions. Great interest. Many turned away last evening, unable to gain entrance. F. D. Macy, pastor.—HAMILTON AND WIKINSON, Evangelists.

Webster City, Jan. 4.—Four accessions; two by confession yesterday, first day of our meeting here. We expect J. P. Garmon to-morrow to conduct the music. Pray for us.—J. WILL WALTERS.

Des Moines.—We have just finished remodeling the Highland Park Church. It was dedicated Dec. 13, free from debt. The outlook is very bright for the coming year. We had three additions Sunday.—MORTON GREGORY.

Zealand, Jan. 5.—Five added here within the last few days: three by baptism, one from the Evangelicals and one renewal. The writer has closed his pastorate with this congregation, after two years of service. There have been about 85 accessions to the church in that time. We have just begun a series of meetings north of town in our new country chapel, which was dedicated last Lord's day. We hope to organize a church at the close. The writer has received and accepted a call to become the pastor of the church at Winterset. Will begin there with February.—CHAS. D. HOUGHAM.

Bloomfield.—During the year the pastor has given 178 addresses. Additions by baptism, 87; otherwise, 68.—Total, 155. The pastor preached 18 funerals, dedicated two churches and gave 17 lectures.

Money raised for general expenses.....$1,474.82
For missions.....170.00
Aid Society membership, 26, raised.....286.06
Sunday-school average att. 155, raised.....242.92
Junior C. E. membership, 40, raised.....25.17
Y. P. S. C. E. membership, 20, raised.....20.00

Total.....$2,335.72
Over $7,000 subscribed for a new church.—D. A. WICKIZER, pastor.

KANSAS.—Lyndon, Jan. 7.—One baptism at Melvern on Monday.—J. F. POWERS.

KENTUCKY.—Corbin, Jan. 9.—Bro. Robert Hopkins, the state Sunday-school evangelist and great singer, is with me and we are having great crowds.—T. M. MYERS.

MICHIGAN.—Grand Rapids, Lyon St.—The annual meeting was full of promise. A total of $4,400 was raised for all purposes. This is the best in our history, aside from the year of raising the church debt. Thirty-eight were added and six more were baptized but went elsewhere. Living Link is now the word.—F. P. ARTHUR.

Saginaw.—This work continues to prosper. Audiences steadily increasing. Two more added yesterday. One confession at Chesaning, Mich., last Tuesday. The first ever heard in that town. Were permitted to preach in Baptist Church.—J. S. RAUM.

MISSOURI.—Savannah.—One confession and three baptisms here Sunday, Dec. 27.—A. R. HUNT.

Cartersville, Jan. 5.—Twenty-eight have been added to the church here to date, and more to follow. House packed and people turned away.—D. W. CAMPBELL AND ATHIELE, evangelists.

Kansas City.—Closed meeting at New Hampton, Mo., with 22 additions—15 were converted and seven were by letter. Churches in Missouri needing meetings let me hear from you, as I am making up my spring program.—BRO. T. W. COTTINGHAM, 505 Kensington Ave., Kansas City, Mo.

Rockport, Jan. 4.—Wife and I closed a meeting on Dec. 23 at Quitman, Mo., of twenty-six days' duration, which resulted in sixty-three additions. Forty were by baptism, five from M. E.'s, one from U. B.'s, one from Baptists, and the rest by statement. We reorganized the church, elected a full board of officers, organized a Christian Endeavor of fifty members and started them to raising money for a pastor for half time. If they have not already secured a man this will be a good field for some one without a pastorate. There are other churches near that will co-operate. Write to J. E. Crites or Ben Kelly, Quitman, Mo., and find out about it. Wife and I begin a meeting to-night at Linden, a country church six miles north of Rockport.—C. O. MCFARLAND.

Norborne, Jan. 4.—We had two additions at Hardin yesterday by letter. Brethren are repairing their house they secured from "Loyal Brethren" and moved to a new lot.—C. C. TAYLOR, pastor.

Bowling Green.—One added to the church at this place in December, 1903.—E. J. LAMPSTER.

Grant City, Jan. 4.—The following is a report for 1903 with the Grant City church. Bible-school average attendance, 128; collected $114; Senior Endeavor membership, 90, 25 new members; collected, $165; Junior Endeavor membership, 70, 30 new members; collected, $112; Ladies' Aid collected $600; treasurer collected nearly $4,000; 124 additions, 120 sermons, 20 weddings, 16 funerals, membership, 325. Minister retained for another year.—J. A. MCKENZIE.

Memphis, Jan. 4.—Work at Memphis is moving along nicely. Have had five added since last report—one by obedience, one from the Baptists, three by letter. Was unanimously called yesterday for the second year, at $200 increase in salary. We need one or two more men in this county to man our churches. Must live in county near work; salary about $600. Good churches, good people, good county. Our county evangelist will begin a meeting at Arbela next week. Meeting to be held in Baptist house.—M. J. NICOSON.

Maryville, Jan. 5.—The church here closed a meeting on Dec. 31 which resulted in 65 additions, 41 of whom were by baptism. Among these were several heads of families. One man 72 years of age, who had been all his life an avowed disbeliever, made the confession. Evangelist R. A. Ouer did the preaching, which was strong, scriptural, convincing, wholesome. Besides saving men and women from sin, he made the Bible more precious and interesting, strengthened the pastor with his people, and won for himself the friendship of not only the church, but the city. Bro. L. D. Sprague led the singing and sang a solo at nearly every service. The official board of the church declares that Brother Sprague is the best singing evangelist who has ever come to Maryville. 'Twas a great meeting and every one is rejoiced over results. The church now has a membership of 882. On our annual meeting day, Dec. 31, commemorated each year as the anniversary of the dedication of the church, nearly $600 was raised. The church begins the new year free from debt, the first time for many years in the history of the church.—W. A. FIRE, pastor.

Leara, Jan. 7.—J. Clark Williams has arranged a series of twenty-five lectures on the "Scheme of Human Redemption," which he has been delivering quite effectively to the congregations where he ministers.—W. H. GEORGE.

Warrensburg, Jan. 7.—Have recently resigned my work at Cedar Grove. Have been preaching there for nearly three years. During this time we remodeled the church by painting, papering, re-roofing, etc., and had more than 110 additions, leaving church in good condition. Bro. J. J. Orrison has been called for 1904. He is a splendid preacher, a tireless worker and will no doubt greatly benefit the church.—OLLIE DAVIS.

Mexico, Jan. 8.—The annual meeting of the Christian Church here was held Jan. 6. Membership now 703. There were 71 added in 1903, but only a net increase of 27. Total money raised independent of the building fund, $4,320.70. Every dollar of current expenses, including preacher's salary, paid and a balance in the treasury. We paid $91.80 more for missions than in 1902. We hope to begin work on our new building early in March. The church seems to be in a very prosperous condition. Madison A. Hart, our able young minister at Fulton, is reported dangerously ill.—A. W. KOKENDOFFER.

Bethany, Jan. 5.—We held a splendid church rally Jan. 1. A good representation of the membership was present and responded to their names at roll call with a thank offering. Enough money was raised to pay all old debts. All are happy and prospects are bright for 1904. Three young men baptized recently.—OREN ORAHOOD.

MINNESOTA.—Eagle Lake, Jan. 4.—Spiritual condition of church here excellent. Sunday-school good and attendance to prayer-meeting and all services more than the average. One accession last night by statement. We feel very thankful to God for his great blessings. Christmas entertainment was a grand success. Tree was loaded and a beauty. All carried out by young converts. Thank God.—J. P. CHILDS, pastor.

NEBRASKA.—Greenwood, Jan. 7.—The greatest meeting ever held by the Tabor, Ia., church has just closed. Jas. S. Beem is the evangelist, and H. M. Johnstone is the pastor. Forty-eight were added and the church left in elegant shape.—H. H. UTTERBACK.

Beatrice, Jan. 9.—Four confessions last night. Fourteen added this week. Brother Price is an excellent pastor, a fine man to work with. The church is in good condition. The house is full every night. We expect a good meeting.—LAWRENCE WRIGHT AND L. R. SMITH.

NEW YORK.—Buffalo, Jan. 4.—Two more added yesterday (by relation). The New Year starts out with good prospects for a harvest of souls, and better missionary offerings. A beautiful Morris chair came to the parsonage Christmas eve, the gift of the brotherhood of Andrew and Philip and men of the church.—B. S. FERRALL.

Brooklyn, Jan. 3.—Three confessions at evening service, and one addition by letter at morning service. Two were baptized at evening service First Church of Christ, Sterling Place, Brooklyn, N. Y.—M. E. HARLAN, minister.

OHIO.—Ashtabula, Dec. 28.—Report of Ashtabula Church: Four added yesterday; 94 during the year; 68 by baptism. Meeting in February.—W. F. ROTHENBURGER.

Collinwood, Jan. 9.—Bro. C. A. Freer, with W. E. M. Hackleman, of Indianapolis, Ind., as singing evangelist, began a series of meetings with the church here, of which he is pastor, Jan. 3. The attendance has been good from the first and a growing interest is manifest. One addition to date.—D. R. KING.

OKLAHOMA TERRITORY.—Guthrie, Jan. 8.—We have had 24 additions during December; 11 baptisms, three from denominations and the others by letters. I have recently baptized two parties who had been Methodists for more than 50 years. We have had 159 additions since dedicating our new church eleven months past. The work here was never before so encouraging.—J. T. OGLE.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Wilkinsburg.—We had two accessions on the first Sunday of the year, all adults.—L. N. D. WELLS.

Plymouth, Jan. 9.—Our watch night service was one of the best meetings of the year. Miss Maude Kuschke in a very happy way presented the "Girls' Opportunity in 1904." Miss May Rickard invited us to look backward and exhibited the work of 1903, resulting in 67 additions, and over $400 for missions. The Sunday-school raised over $800 for all purposes. Gradual increase in attendance at all services and Sunday-school is much larger. Miss Flora Ransom gave us an inspiring prophecy for 1904, with visions of large things for the Master. The church and pastor's Bible class remembered us very kindly at Christmas. Jan. 3, one young man confessed Christ, another at prayer-meeting Jan. 7, and also one from the Baptists. The foundation has been erected for the improvements on our building which will cost between $13,000 and $15,000. The outlook is very bright and encouraging.—L. O. KNIPP, Pastor.

SOUTH DAKOTA.—Sioux Falls, Jan. 1.—Our church held its annual business meeting and roll call last evening and watched the old year out. It was an occasion of joyous fellowship. Notwithstanding the many removals during the year, it was one of the best in our history. Reports show less than $10 back on current expenses, over $375 for improvements, over $175 for benevolences. The C. W. B. M. alone gave $57 toward their work. At the suggestion of our pastor, E. A. Orr, all officers were both nominated and elected by ballot. The result was the best possible choices and perfect good feeling. Our people never worked more harmoniously among themselves and with their pastor. Fifteen months ago all there was of the Christian Endeavor was a big debt, now it is well organized and has money in the treasury. But this encouraging report is shadowed by the fact that some of our best workers are planning to move, so that we do not enter upon 1904 with as large

Restores Eyesight.

SPECTACLES A THING OF THE PAST

"Actina," A Marvelous Discovery That Cures All Afflictions of the Eye and Ear Without Cutting or Drugging.

A marvelous discovery has been made by that Scientist and Inventive Genius, Prof. W. C. Wilson. He has invented a restorer known as "Actina," through which all afflictions of the eyes and ear, such as blindness, granulated lids, cataracts, sore eyes, deafness, etc., are cured without cutting or drugging. It is a simple contrivance, known as the Actina Pocket Battery, and through it the patients cure themselves in the privacy of their own homes. It not only abolishes the butcheries and torturous methods practiced by oculists and aurists, but at the same time perfects a positive and lasting cure.

Mr. A. O. T. Pennington, Massachusetts Bld., Kansas City, Mo., writes: "Actina" saved my mother, who is eighty years old, from an operation for cataracts."

Rev. W. C. Goodwin, Moline, Kansas, writes: "My honest opinion of 'Actina' is that it is one of the most marvelous discoveries of the age. It saved my eye from an operation."

Mrs. R. Elkins, Neal, Kansas, writes: "I am pleased with 'Actina.' It cured my granulated sore eyes."

Mr. A. L. Howe, Tully, N. Y., writes: "'Actina' has removed cataracts from both my eyes. I can read well without my glasses; am sixty-five years old."

A party of prominent citizens have organized a company known as the New York and London Electric Association, and they have given this method so thorough a test on hundreds of cases pronounced incurable and hopeless that they now positively assure a cure. "Actina" is sent on trial postpaid. If you will call or send your name and address to the New York and London Electric Association, Dept. 203 B, 929 Walnut St., Kansas City, Mo., you will receive, absolutely free, a valuable book—Prof. Wilson's "Treatise on the Eye and on Diseases in General," and you can rest assured that your eyesight and hearing will be restored, no matter how many doctors have failed.

hope as we would like.—BERTHA C. MILLER, clerk.

TEXAS.—Cleburne, Jan. 4.—We had a good beginning here yesterday. I consider this a splendid field. I succeed Bro. A. J. Bush, one of the best men in the brotherhood. He and his family are universally loved, and they are worthy of it. The citizens of Norman surprised me with a splendid suit of clothes for a Christmas present. This was given without regard to church affiliation. Mrs. Creason received a handsome donation from the same source. We were also the recipients of many valuable presents from the brethren there. At the last service we received a lady from the Dunkards.—J. G. CREASON.

WASHINGTON.—Waitsburg, Jan. 5.—There were three additions here last Sunday. Large and attentive audiences were out both morning and evening. The work here is on the up-grade. There are three other churches in town, but our evening audiences are larger than the audiences of the other three churches combined. We will begin a meeting Jan. 17. My brother may help me the first week or ten days.—W. T. ADAMS.

Spokane, Jan. 4.—We dedicated our new church Dec. 6. We asked for and raised $12,000 which puts us in good shape. Dec. 20, the writer preached the dedicatory sermon for Oaksdale; raised $900, which was all they needed. Had fifteen additions at Central yesterday, six Dec. 27, and ten Dec. 13. This evening, we begin a union meeting with Congregationalists, Baptists, Presbyterians and United Presbyterians. Home forces.—B. E. URZ.

A Thing Worth Knowing.

The Combination Oil Cure for cancer and tumors cures more cases than all other agencies combined. It has the endorsement of doctors, lawyers and ministers who have been cured, as well as hundreds outside the professions. It is soothing and balmy, safe and sure, and the only successful remedy known to medical science. Originated and perfected after twenty-five years of patient, scientific study. Those afflicted or have friends afflicted, should write at once for free books giving particulars and indisputable evidence. Address Dr. D. M. BYE Co., Drawer 505, Indianapolis, Ind.

People's Forum

The Church and the Labor Unions.

Before setting out to face the problems presented by the new year, it would be well if the church understood fully just what are the real problems, and which are only mere trick puzzles and "catch problems," such as seemed to occupy so much of the time of Solomon, who, in view of his reputation for wisdom, performed a multitude of foolish acts. And nowhere can the church find a greater field for work than that presented by the so-called labor situation as it exists in all large industrial centers.

In a recent number of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST Dr. B. B. Tyler, writing from, and of, Denver, said, with a dogmatism that seemed to mean "finis," to the labor union problem, that "the conflict between labor and capital is at an end," and that "the strife is now on between organized and unorganized labor." Dr. Tyler's acquaintance with the labor controversy is slight, indeed, if he believes that "the conflict between labor and capital is now at an end." Men who have made the question of unionism a life study know—as all other men should know—that capital is to-day making the same war on labor that it has made for the last generation, the only difference being in its methods of warfare. Instead of risking itself in the forefront of the struggle, capital is skulking in the rear and pushing forward "unorganized labor" to accomplish what capital has failed to do by intimidation, bribery, injunction and starvation. To the superficial observer it may seem that the strife is between the non-union man and the union man, but to the studious observer the hand of organized capital is very plainly seen.

Dr. Tyler says that "the organized workingmen, under the lead of conscienceless demagogues, are making war on the workingmen who do not belong to labor organizations." Dr. Tyler has not only put the cart before the horse, but has passed judgment on a case where he has no jurisdiction and apparently little knowledge. The reverse of his dogmatic statement is true. He should have said: "Organized capital, under the impetus of conscienceless greed, is using non-union workingmen to batter down the labor organizations."

To whom does Dr. Tyler refer when he speaks of "conscienceless demagogues?" Undoubtedly to labor "leaders" like Sam Parks. But while Dr. Tyler puts himself in the position of judging organized labor by its Sam Parkses, would he willingly submit to having the Christian ministry judged by preachers who have disgraced their high calling, or the church itself judged by the hypocrites and swindlers who have used religion merely as a cloak for their meanness? Surely Dr. Tyler would not class men like John Mitchell, Samuel Compers and Charles Garlick as "conscienceless demagogues." Does he base his assumption upon the fact that in labor troubles riot and bloodshed have too often been the result? Unfortunately for union labor, rioting has been altogether too common; but is the church free from similar stains? If organized labor is to be condemned and its leaders called "conscienceless demagogues" because riot and murder have followed in the wake of strikes, what shall we do with the church and the ministry, in view of the fact that witches were burned in Salem, Roger Williams banished, thousands burned as heretics, the streets of Paris piled high with dead on St. Bartholemew's day—and all in the name of the religion of the meek and lowly Nazarene? If Dr. Tyler denies that the real church had any part or parcel in these brutal and bloody deeds, then I shall deny that real labor unions—organized labor based on the real underlying principles of true organized labor—had any part or parcel in riots, incendiarism or slugging.

In its infancy the church made many mistakes, and men who thought they were wise pointed to those mistakes and denounced the church. Labor unions in this country, are comparatively young, and in youthful exuberance make sad mistakes. But as the church has profited by its mistakes, as countries profit by their mistakes, so will labor unions profit by their mistakes.

A church is, in material things, very little different from a labor union. We organize churches for mutual help, for more concentrated effort in behalf of humanity, and for mutual protection. Labor unions are organized for identically the same purposes. And both organizations have made mistakes. But out of the mistakes of the church have grown wonderful things for the moral uplift of humanity. Who, then, will dogmatically deny that out of labor unions will grow equally wonderful things for the material uplift of humanity?

Is there no field for Christian work, then, in this pressing problem of organized labor? If Dr. Tyler is correct in his statement that the conflict is between union and non-union workingmen, is the church any the less bound to use its influence to stop the conflict? And if it is true—and it requires no special keenness of vision to see its truth—that conscienceless capital is using the non-union men as a battering ram to batter down union labor and secure the increased profits that will necessarily follow a lowering of the wage scale, is it, then, any the less true that the church should use its influence to stop the conflict? Shall the millions wrung from labor's toil and sweat and ostentatiously donated to churches, universities and free libraries sear our consciences and make dumb our lips? Shall we place organized millionaires on a pedestal because they give as the Pharisees gave, and consign organized labor to the compost heap? Shall we forget Homestead, the bull pens at Cour d'Alene and Spring Valley, but remember the primal instincts of the ignorant foreigner imported by arrogant capital to compete with Americans, that same capital all the while keeping up its hypocritical cry for "protection against the pauper made goods of Europe?"

In labor riots and bloodshed organized capital is only reaping what it has sown. While pretending to be deeply concerned for the welfare of the American working man, organized capital has imported ignorant Huns and Finns and Slavs by the hundreds of thousands, and this riff-raff is to-day the great disturbing element in labor circles. It is the element that fomented riot, sheds blood and applies the torch. It is the element that threatens to drag down the American working men to the level of the peasant and industrial slave of the Old World, and it is the element that capital to-day seeks to use to batter down the unions organized by American working men who seek to elevate themselves and their fellows and insure their wives and little ones against want and woe. No conflict between capital and labor? Then there is no war between God and Satan, no war between virtue and vice.

Dr. Tyler assumes to know just what the labor question is, for he says it is this: "Have the 8,000,000 working men who are not organized a right to enter the market places and dispose of their labor as they please?" The answer to that question is easy to find: They have no such right.

They have no right to dispose of their labor in such a manner as to drag down their fellows to the level of pauper wage-workers. They have no right to dispose of their labor in such manner as will deprive their fellows of just wages and add to the unearned dividends of organized capital. They have no right to dispose of their labor in such manner as will result in not only their own degradation, but in the degradation of their fellows. They have no right to dispose of their labor as they please, if they are pleased to make such disposition as will degrade labor, enthrone greed and make a virtue out of industrial slavery.

Organized capital stifles competition, and the voice of the church is not raised in protest. Organized labor seeks to raise the wage level, make better industrial conditions, promote fraternity, wipe out child labor, abolish sweat shops and enable workingmen to earn enough

RHEUMATISM Cured Through the Feet

Thousands are cured at home every month by MAGIC FOOT DRAFTS.
Why not YOU?

Try Them—FREE.

The Drafts cured Mrs. W. D. Harriman, wife of Judge Harriman of Ann Arbor, Mich.

They cured H. C. Van Valkenburg, Providence, R. I., of an intensely painful case of muscular rheumatism.

They cured severe rheumatism of the arms, neck and back for T. C. Pendleton, Jackson, Mich.

Mrs. Caspar Yahrdsdorfer, Jackson, Michigan, 70 years old, was cured in a few weeks, after suffering 30 years.

The Drafts cured James Gilbert, Locomotive Dept., Mich. Cent. R. R., Jackson, Mich., after 27 years of pain.

Dr. Van Vleck, Jackson, Mich., writes that they cured him and he is now using them in his practice.

They have cured hundreds of cases probably just like yours. Isn't the chance worth taking? You try them free. Send us your name. We will send you by return mail a pair of Magic Foot Drafts—prepared: If you are satisfied with the comfort they give you, send us One Dollar. If not, you send us nothing. You decide. Magic Foot drafts are worn without the least inconvenience, and cure rheumatism in every part of the body by stimulating expulsion of acid poisons through the great foot pores. Splendid booklet, illustrated in colors, free with the trial Drafts. Don't suffer, but write to-day to the Magic Foot Draft Co., S. I. 16 Oliver Bldg., Jackson, Mich.

over and above their daily necessities to make comfortable old age or provide for the widows and the orphans—and while union labor is doing these things the church takes no part with them in the work, preferring, too often, to fawn at the feet of organized greed, in the hope of university endowments and missionary fund increases.

Let the church take the part it should take in the work of solving the labor problem. It is not to be solved by dogmatic assertion or assumption of judicial prerogatives—it can be solved only by prayerful and careful Christian work. It is not to be solved by superficial investigation and indifferent observation—it can be solved only by Christian zeal in the work of lifting up oppressed humanity and protecting the weak against the encroachments of the strong. If wage-workers are more interested in their unions than they are in the church, the church, not the union, is to blame. This labor problem is the problem of problems for this country now, and upon its rightful solution depends the safety of the republic. Let the Church of Jesus Christ step to the front and do its part in reaching the solution.

WILL M. MAUPIN.

[We are always pleased to publish an article that throws any light on the labor problem, and especially one that is designed to help the working man, with whom our sympathies are in the conflict between capital and labor. We regret that the author of the preceding article did not tell us who, or what tribunal is to decide, for the unorganized working men, how they are to dispose of their labor so as not to "drag down their fellows," etc. It is assumed that they are not competent to decide this question for themselves. There ought, then, to be some tribunal to decide the question for them. This is a point that seems to need illumination.—EDITOR.]

Sectism Among the Disciples.

(Continued from page 44.)

Since the failure of my effort, which was so expensive to both myself and my friends, I have been much exercised in mind not only as to what I can now do for poor Africa, but also as to how we are to relate ourselves to our alienated brethren. First, I am compelled to bear witness that as regards personal piety and loyalty to Christ as they understand it, those brethren are not inferior to us; indeed, I incline to believe they are superior to us in these respects. They have family prayers, they are diligent students of the Word of God, they keep themselves pure in their contact with the world, and they can all speak or pray in public (except the women) and voluntarily do so. So far from entertaining ill will toward them, I really do love and admire them. They do truly think we American Disciples are apostatizing from apostolic simplicity and steadfastness in Christ. Hence they are on their guard against us. Would we had the wisdom which is from above to reunite ourselves under the headship of Christ. After much deliberation I am constrained to offer a few suggestions:

1. That if we cannot come into unity with our dissenting brethren that we encourage some such federation with them as we have advocated with the denominations for above a year. Seeing they have now made a good beginning in the South African field, why not we "progressives" keep entirely out of it and encourage them to occupy it, even sending them liberal offerings to help them to plant the cause in those splendid cities? Our differences would not be so material if they did not think it their duty to separate themselves from us on account of them, for in all that is essentially the gospel we are one with them. If our Foreign Missionary Society ever does send missionaries into those cities, great strife and bitterness will follow their contact with those brethren.

But it will be asked, Are the English and Australian brethren able to enter and properly occupy that large field? Yes, they are able; moreover, they are planning to do so. Not so long ago they had practically no organizations for missionary evangelism for either the home or the foreign fields. But now the English brethren, numbering 12,000, are organized into their Missionary Conference. The Australian brethren, numbering 15,000, are organized into societies for both home and foreign missions. The "Independents"—Disciples in America numbering 100,000, and of the same views and practices—are now also more or less organized for missionary work, and not only so, but are doing splendid work in Japan and other countries. The first two have enthusiastically entered the South African field. Now, if only their brethren, the Independents in America, will as enthusiastically participate in that work with them, all together can put a missionary in every city and town in ten years. There are enough Disciples in Petermaritzburg and Durban to start a good church in each city. Let the Independents make a note of the fact.

I am the more persuaded that we ought to give over the South African field to these brethren, because of the evolutionary forces at work in their communions. Once they had no organized conferences nor societies for missionary work, but now they have. In more progressive Australia they even have a woman's missionary organization, and they have Christian Endeavor Societies in many of their churches, and musical instruments in evangelistic meetings. At this rate of progress who can foresee whether they will not yet catch up with us "progressives"? As each of the four divisions mentioned perfects its missionary organizations, it will either crystallize into an organic sect, or emerge from its exclusiveness into the unity of the whole. The latter is not improbable.

2. I would suggest that, as soon as possible, we plan to locate missionaries on farms in Rhodesia and Central Africa after the manner of the denominations, for the regeneration of the degraded natives. This is a popular and successful kind of work, and deserves our consideration as a people. Having visited one of such farms, I will gladly, some future day, relate my observations.

May the God of peace prevail over all our hearts to exemplify the unity among ourselves we so ardently commend to others.

As Seen From the Dome.

(Continued from page 41.)

the Potomac there have also been some changes. J. J. Haley has entered upon the work in Richmond and R. L. Cave takes the church in Charlottesville.

Under the dome things are moving again. It is an interesting study always. One of the new things is the new Chaplain of the Senate, Edward Everett Hale. He starts out with a good story. Last week he preached in his Boston Church and in the course of the sermon spoke of three great anniversaries as occurring in the month of December. "At the close of my sermon, a young man from one of our Boston newspapers, came to me and said: 'You mentioned three great anniversaries. One of them was the landing of the pilgrims, the other the shortest day in the year. I have forgotten the other. Will you be kind enough to tell me what it was?'" "It is the day," I replied, "which is regarded as the foundation day of a great religion and of a Christian precept. It is observed over a very great portion of the world. If you think it of enough importance young man, you may include Christmas in the three great anniversaries I mentioned in my sermon."

And this in Boston! Dr. Hale's appearance in the Senate attracted unusual attention. He entered in flowing clerical robes of black silk and prefaced his prayer by reading from Galatians. "Because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father." Then came the prayer as follows, followed by the Lord's Prayer:

"Father of light, Father of love, we come to Thee as children. We come to ask Thee for everything, and to thank Thee for everything. But most of all we ask Thee to lead us in all our way, to teach us to do the work set before us, to be about our Father's business. Comfort us that we may have strength for our weakness. We are very weak, Thou art very strong. We do not pray for ourselves alone. We would pray for those in great sorrow. We pray for the stricken city far from us, in the great calamity which has overtaken so many people. Comfort them in their affliction. Bless, we pray Thee, all sorts and conditions of men."

The Quiet Hour

After the baptism of Jesus, He was tempted of Satan. After every high resolve which we make, Satan is sure to tempt us to lower our ideal. Hear this plain word from James: "Let no man say when he is tempted, I am tempted of God; for God cannot be tempted with evil, and He, Himself, tempteth no man; but each man is tempted, when he is drawn away by his own lust, and enticed. Then the lust, when it hath conceived, beareth sin; and the sin, when it is full grown, bringeth forth death."—James 1:13-15.

It is doubtful if any clearer analysis of the process of sin has ever been given than the above statement from James. It ought to be studied, that we may be aware of the method by which we are drawn away from the path of righteousness. There is the desire created by contemplating the evil, the desire ripening into purpose, the purpose into action, and the action into death. Resist evil in its beginnings is the lesson from this Scripture.

Alone With God.

To close one's eyes to all about
Nor see nor hear the strife and din
Of other hours; of all without Become unconscious while within
We meditate on God, and thus
To open heavenward the soul
And feel that none but God is near,
To let his Spirit take control
While we lay bare each hope and fear
And see ourselves as God sees us,
To then receive an inward thrill
As iron when charged by magnet's touch,
Is real religion, and until
One knows such moments there is much,
His life lacks of perfection.

—C. R. Z. in Cumberland Presbyterian.

Each of us has his own giant to fight, and here, too, it must be in single combat, with no one to help us but him who went forth with the stripping David. With some of us, says Wm. M. Taylor, it is temper; with some avarice; with some appetite; with some ambition; but, whatever it be, let us learn to resist it courageously, relying on the might of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the victory will be ours. The great danger that besets the Christian at such times is that of attempting to fight with the world's weapons. Let him go forth with the cross of Christ in his hand, and by that he will conquer. What David's sling and stone were in the Valley of Elah, that is the cross of Christ in the theological controversies, and social wranglings, and moral antagonisms of our age.

It is not growing like a tree
In bulk, doth make man better be,
Or standing long an oak these hundred year,
To fall a log at last, dry, bald and sear.
A lily of a day
Is fairer far, in May,
Although it fall and die that night,
It was the plant and flower of light!
In small proportions we just beauties see;
And in short measures life may perfect be.

—Ben Jonson.

As Thou hast given us grace, Heavenly Father, to resolve to live this year as free from sin as is possible for those who live in the body, so do Thou also grant us strength by which to resist the evil within and without to the praise of Thy grace, through Christ. Amen!

A Fine Kidney Remedy.

MR. A. S. HITCHCOCK, East Hampton, Conn., (The Clothier), says if any sufferer from Kidney and Bladder Disease will write him he will direct them to the perfect home cure he used. He makes no charge whatever for the favor.

CHURCH FURNITURE

Pews, Pulpits, Etc.

The best that money can buy.

Grand Rapids School Furniture Works

Corner, Wabash and Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

Family Circle

The Breaking-Plow.

I am the plow that turns the sod
That has lain for a thousand years
Where the prairie's wind tossed flowers nod
And the wolf her wild cub rears,
I come, and in my wake, like rain,
Is scattered the golden seed;
I change the leagues of lonely plain
To fruitful gardens and field of grain
For men and their hungry breed.

I greet the earth in its rosy morn,
I am first to stir the soil,
I bring the glory of wheat and corn
For the crowding of those who toil.
I am civilization seal and sign,
Yea, I am the mighty pen
That writes the sod with a pledge divine.
A promise to pay with bread and wine
For the sweat of honest men.

I am the end of things that were,
And the birth of things to be;
My coming makes the earth to stir
With a new and strange decree:
After its slumbers, deep and long,
I waken the drowsy sod,
And sow my furrow with lits of song
To glad the heart of the mighty throng
Slow feeling the way to God.

A thousand summers the prairie rose
Has gladdened the hermit bee;
A thousand winters the drifting snows
Have whitened the grassy sea;
Before me curls the wavering smoke
Of the Indian's smoldering fire,
Behind me rise—was it God who spoke?—
At the toil-enchanted hammer's stroke,
The town and the glittering spire.

I give the soil to the one who does,
For the joy of him and his,
I rouse the slumbering world that was
To the diligent world that is:
Oh, Seer with vision that looks away
A thousand long years from now,
The marvelous nation your eyes survey
Was born of the purpose that here, to-day,
Is guiding the breaking plow!
—Nixon Waterman, in Success.

A

The Drama Of The Human Face.

There is a drama in every face that comes to maturity. The face we may have at ten is the one nature has given us. But the faces we have at fifty are the ones we have furnished for ourselves. "The old man's face is a history; the young man's face is a prophecy."

This being true, is it not strange, through all the centuries men have held themselves aloof from any study of the face as a method of revelation. And yet here we may find one of the most interesting revelations that God has made to man. The heavens no more indicate God's glory than the face the glory of the soul of man. Emerson, in speaking of the wonderful expressiveness of the human body, observes that "if it were made of glass or of air, and the thoughts were written on steel tablets within, it could not publish more truly its meaning." What is of greater interest than to watch the faces of a crowd of people, and read the many life dramas seen therein! "The smile of affection, the glance of sympathy, the expression of surprise, the firm set lips; the look of despair, the mirror of dead hopes, the lines of toil, hardship, dissipation and suffering," they all reveal life, and carry their message quickly to the keen observer.

No doubt the rules of physiognomy, like those of every other science, have their exceptions. Some assert with the witty Moore that

DON'T BUY AN OUT-OF-DATE MACHINE ON A WORN-OUT REPUTATION

NOR A WEAK ATTEMPT AT VISIBLE WRITING WITH
TANGLEFOOT TYPEBARS AND SLOT GUIDES.

The Standard Visible Oliver Writers and Billers with 10 in., 12 in., 15 in. and 18 in. Carriages

Are Rapid
Convenient
Simple Durable
And have
The Best
Touch
Method
Key Board

Enable
The Operator
To do
The Most
Of the Best Work
The Easiest

Write upon any size or shape of paper from a postage stamp or druggists' label to an insurance policy or freight way-bill, lined or unlined

Used by the Government and Largest Corporations

The OLIVER TYPEWRITER COMPANY

Century Building, 315 North Ninth Street,

ST. LOUIS, MO.

"In vain we fondly trace
The soul's reflection in the face;
In vain we dwell on lines and crosses,
Crooked mouth or short proboscis;
Boobies have looked as wise and bright
As Plato or the Stagyrice;
And many a sage and learned skull
Has peeped through windows dark and dull."

Thus, of the ferocious ruffian, Claverhouse, Sir Walter Scott tells us that he had a "beautiful and melancholy visage of the most pathetic dreams of romance;" and Lord Byron says that the cruel Ali Pacha was "the mildest looking gentleman" he ever saw. On the other hand, the heavy brow, coarse, blunt, stone mason face and protruding cheek bones of Michael Angelo utterly belied his genius. But these are exceptions to the general rule. The face is the geography of the soul. The fossiliferous rocks that are uncovered to-day bear the traces of rain drops and foot-prints of birds made long ago, and destined to last to the end of time. More sensitive and susceptible still is the substance of the human soul, upon which every thought, feeling, volition, and action makes an impression, and the sum of these impressions makes character upon the face.

A recent writer says: "Men cannot long act apart, Hypocrisy drops unconsciously its mask. Dickens exhibits Monks as beginning his career as an innocent and beautiful child; but as ending his life as a mass of solid bestiality, a mere chunk of fleshed iniquity. It was thinking upon vice and vulgarity that transformed the angel boy's face into the countenance of a demon, and it could not be concealed. He who thinks of mean and ugly things will soon show mud in the bottom of his eye. Ugliness within soon fouls the facial tissues."

Let the young be warned against the wicked snares which the world lays for their downfall. Let them also remember the deteriorating effects of sin even upon the personal appearance. Take a youth of beauty, and let him little by little be led into wicked practices, and it will not be long before the descent will be written upon his face. The eye once so clear will be marked with suspicion, restlessness; strange lines will begin to about the mouth, and the lips will take upon them a sensual enlargement. All this will not happen in a day. It will take years, but the life's drama is being written, and by and by it will be plainly seen and interpreted. "Then there shall be found on the face some of the lines that belong to the wolf and the hawk, and the swine and the serpent."

Oh, my readers, remember that your faces to-day have possibilities in them. That to-morrow they will be actualities, faces that have been moulded by a thousand thoughts, and the loves and hates and desires of every heart-beat. May they be faces at fifty and beyond, that shall have purities and goodness and peace dramatized within them. And before the years have brought in all their gifts to you, God grant to you that beauty that comes from the immortal soul that has drank deep at the fountain of truth, and found its peace in holy thinking and doing.—Rev. Edwin L. House, D. D., in The Pacific.

A

Bible College at Home.

Thorough courses by mail, leading to diploma and degree. Distance no hindrance. Students in every state and foreign country. Best testimonials. Catalogue free. Write C. J. Burton, President Iowa Christian College, Oskaloosa, Iowa.

GEO. KILGEN & SON
— BUILDERS OF HIGH GRADE —

Pipe Organs

— ST. LOUIS, MO. —
Rest of References. Correspondence Solicited

Trust.

O Love Divine, that stooped to share
Our sharpest pang, our bitterest tear;
On Thee we cast each earth-born care;
We smile at pain, while Thou art near.

Though long the weary way we tread,
And sorrow crown each lingering year,
No path we shun, no darkness dread,
Our hearts still whispering, Thou art near.

When drooping pleasure turns to grief,
And trembling faith is changed to fear,
The murmuring wind, the quivering leaf,
Shall softly tell us Thou art near.

On Thee we fling our burdening woe,
O Love Divine, forever dear;
Content to suffer while we know,
Living or dying, Thou art near!
—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Four Views of Death.

By Hille B. Wallace.

We were seated on the lawn under a spreading magnolia tree, when a sudden clap of thunder caused the young girl of the party to jump from her seat exclaiming, "Oh! my!"

"What is it, dear?" asked the grandmother.

"Oh, that dreadful thunder! I am so afraid of lightning. I expect I shall be killed yet by it. I live in constant dread of a thunderstorm in the summer. Let us hurry into the house."

"No," said the practical woman. "See, the cloud is passing away already. Now, I have a different view of life and death. Why spoil one by always dreading the other? We will none of us go till our time comes. Life is short, at best, and if we are always worrying over death, we cannot enjoy what there is of life. I never think of death. I cannot defer it that way, and I'm not going to spoil my whole life by always dreading its ending."

"I," said the woman with the weary face and drooping shoulders, that had borne life's heavy burdens for half a century, "have still another way of looking at death. I sometimes think the rest it brings would be sweet. I sometimes long for the quiet and forgetfulness of the grave. When I lie down at night, I often think if my bed were only my grave, I would not have to rise again in the morning in pain, and carry my weary body and aching head through another day of toil. Oh rest would be sweet!"

"I have yet another view of the subject," said the sweet-faced, serene old grandmother. "We are placed here by our Creator to stay till our work is done. In his hands are the issues of life and death. When he has fulfilled his will in us, he will call us home. I am just patiently waiting till he is ready to take me. For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain. In fact, 'There is no death; what seems so is transition.' There is change in all things, but death in nothing.

"The drop of dew that trembles on the flowers
Is but exhaled to fall anew,
In summer thunder showers."

If the messenger the Lord sends for me is his lightning, it is a swift one. If it is the slower one of disease, it will still take me to him."

"Dear grandmother," said the young girl, kissing her soft old cheek, "your view is surely the most correct, as well as the most comforting one. I came

TOPIC CARDS FOR 1904

Mid-Week Prayer-Meeting Topics for the year, per hundred	$1.00
Y. P. S. C. E. Prayer-Meeting Topics for the year, per hundred	1.00
Y. P. S. C. E. Prayer-Meeting Topics for three or six months, with list of Officers, Committees and Leaders, per hundred	2.75
The Topical Hand Book, containing Mid-Week Topics, Y. P. S. C. E. Topics and Sunday-School Topics for the year, per hundred	3.00

AND ALL OTHER CHURCH SUPPLIES

Christian Publishing Co., 1522 Locust St. St. Louis, Mo.

Only a Step via B.O.S.W. to Cincinnati & Eastern Cities.

ST. LOUIS — WEST BADEN — FRENCH LICK SPRINGS — LOUISVILLE — CINCINNATI — COLUMBUS — PITTSBURG — WASHINGTON — BALTIMORE — PHILADELPHIA — NEW YORK

Ticket Offices
OLIVE and SIXTH and UNION STATION.

VESTIBULED TRAINS LEAVE ST. LOUIS DAILY
9.30 A. M. 9.08 P. M. 2.05 A. M.

DINING CARS A LA CARTE

F. D. GILDERSLEEVE, Ass't Gen'l Pass. Agent. St. Louis, Mo. H. C. STEVENSON, City Pass. Agent.

across such a pretty verse in one of Scott's poems the other day:

"The towers must share the builder's doom:
Ruin is theirs and his the tomb;
But better boon benignant heaven,
To faith and charity has given,
And bids the Christian's hope sublime
Transcend the bounds of fate and time."

"I must surely strive to overcome my foolish fear of lightning."

Hill City, Kan.

Just As Good.

"Brother," Sheldon, author of "In His Steps," has a sense of humor. He tells this story on himself of a young couple who applied to him to be married:

He performed the ceremony with due solemnity, and congratulated the bride. Then he observed the bridegroom searching through his pockets and looking a bit humiliated and ashamed.

"I am afraid, parson," he said, "that I ain't got any money to pay you with."

Then, after a moment of deep thought, looking up cheerfully, he added:

"But I can tell you how you can fix your gas-meter so it won't register." —
New Voice.

A man should never be ashamed to own that he has been in the wrong, which is but saying in other words, that he is wiser to-day than he was yesterday. —Alexander Pope.

AULT &amp; WIBORG

COMPANY

Manufacturers of Printing Inks.
CINCINNATI, NEW YORK,
CHICAGO, ST. LOUIS.

This Paper Printed with Ault & Wiborg Ink

BIG PAYING BUSINESS FOR MEN, WOMEN.

Write for names of hundreds of delighted customers. Make $30 to $50 weekly. Do business at home or traveling, all or spare time, selling Gray outfits and doing genuine gold, silver, nickel and metal plating on Watches, Jewelry, Tableware, Bicycles, all metal goods, Heavy plate. No experience, quickly learned. Enormous demand. No toys or humbug. Outfits all sizes. Everything guaranteed. Let us start you. We teach you FREE. Write today. H. GRAY & CO., CINCINNATI, O.

WRITE FOR CATALOG

WORLD'S GREATEST BELL FOUNDRY

CHURCH, PEAL and CHIME BELLS ESTABLISHED 1837

Best Copper and Tin Only.

THE E. W. YANDUZEN COMPANY, Buckeye Bell Foundry, Cincinnati, O.

BLMYER CHURCH BELLS.

UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.

Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

FOR SCHOOLS AND CHURCHES BUY

American Bells

Sweet Toned. Far Sounding. Durable.
AMERICAN BELL & FOUNDRY CO.,
FREE CATALOG NORTHVILLE, MICH.
41 Cady Street.

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION 25 CTS.

CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.

The PRAISE HYMNAL

The Ideal Church Music Book. Half leather binding, $70 per 100. Vellum cloth, $50.

THE FILLMORE BROTHERS CO.
CINCINNATI, OHIO.

Music Publishers and Dealers. Also Band and Orchestra Instruments and Music. Catalogues Free, Correspondence Solicited.

The Loving Deed.

BY CHRISTINA G. ROSSETTI.

It is not the deed we do,
Though the deed be never so fair,
But the love that the dear Lord looketh for,
Hidden with lowly care
In the heart of the deed so fair.

The love is the priceless thing.
The treasure our treasures must hold,
Or over the Lord will take the gift,
Or tell the worth of the gold
By the love that can not be told.—Sel.

Morbus Sabbaticus.

Morbus Sabbaticus, or Sunday sickness, a disease peculiar to church members. The attack comes on suddenly every Sunday; no symptoms are felt on Saturday night; the patient sleeps well and wakes feeling well; eats a hearty breakfast, but about church time the attack comes on and continues until services are over for the morning. Then the patient feels easy and eats a hearty dinner. In the afternoon he feels much better and is able to take a walk, talk about politics and read the Sunday papers, he eats a hearty supper, but about church time he has another attack and stays at home. He retires early, sleeps well and wakes up Monday morning refreshed and able to go to work, and does not have any symptoms of the disease until the following Sunday. The peculiar features are as follows:

1. It always attacks members of the church.
2. It never makes its appearance except on the Sabbath.
3. The symptoms vary, but it never interferes with the sleep or appetite.
4. It never lasts more than twenty-four hours.
5. It generally attacks the head of the family.
6. No physician is ever called.
7. It always proves fatal in the end—to the soul.
8. No remedy is known for it except prayer.
9. Religion is the only antidote.
10. It is becoming fearfully prevalent and is sweeping thousands every year prematurely to destruction.—Selected.

[The forgoing appeared first in "The Christian," as our paper was then called, more than a quarter of a century ago. It was written by Dr. E. Younkin.—EDITOR.]

Children Have Their Own Tragedies.

"The child with an imagination is a being apart, and should be treasured and trained and treated accordingly. What tragedies are enacted over and over again in homes because this is not realized! 'A child is a child' seems to be the rule, and must be brought up as a child.' As a matter of fact, a child is not always a child. Sometimes it is a thousand years old, and knows things of which its parents never have dreamed. If only the grown-up people who have the daily say about such a child's affairs could know the holy charge which they have in that child's delicately-strung little mind! But they usually don't know,—and the old tragedy of the child with the artistic temperament born in a home where it is not known is lived through with the old pitiful result.

"Do you remember that wonderful poem of Josiah G. Holland's—the name of which I have forgotten, but the tremendous import of which I never shall forget,—about the little child born in witchcraft times? The baby was filled with this curious intangible spirit that wove for it a little world of its own, where it lived and dreamed and talked with strange, wonderful people, and knew wonderful things. And it would come in from its day in the meadows with its cheeks flushed and its eyes big with the miracles it had seen and heard,—and it would tell its mother and father what had happened to it, out there alone among the flowers. And the Puritan father and mother were horrified. 'Lies, lies!' they cried; 'you have seen nothing, heard nothing!' They could not comprehend the wonder of a child, born into a cold, practical household, and at length it got whispered about that the child was a witch. In the end the child died of a fever, and those righteous parents never knew what they had had, or what they had lost.

"Ah, well,—witchcraft days are not over, so far as many of us are concerned. Here and there is born a little child whose soul is of the essence of which dreams are made,—and it is pitifully seldom that anybody knows it. Instead of encouraging the child to dream, and instead of throwing in his way every possible help to stimulate his fancy,—'lies, lies!' everyone cries, 'you have seen nothing, heard nothing.'"—James Whitcomb Riley, in Success.

The Superiority of Love.

Notice the comparison by which Paul sets forth the superiority of love to eloquence. He says: "If I speak with the tongues of men and angels, but have not love, I am become as sounding brass or a clanging cymbal." The gift without the grace is likened to the sounding of brass, to the clashing of cymbals of bronze. A great many preachers boast themselves of their soundness, the soundness of their theology—and I am not saying anything against soundness in theology. And one is sometimes tempted to say: "Sound, yes, that is what it is, but it is without a ministry and without meaning for a hungry world." A clanging cymbal—noise, confusion, but no ministry; this is never helpful for a weary hungry world. Let us be something more than jangling voices, clanging noises. Let us have reality, genuineness of heart, genuineness of love, genuineness of religion; that is what tells. That is what the world wants. That is what it is looking for. Let love conquer your hearts and the world will make way for your coming, and we shall startle the world by the originality of our unselfishness. "If I speak with the tongues of men and angels, but have not love, I am become as sounding brass or a clanging cymbal." Let us have love.—D. D. McLaurin, D. D.

This Book, "Home Bible Study," FREE if you write and enroll at once. Course covers the whole Bible and leads to diploma and degree. You can take this course at home by mail. Terms easy. Best testimonials. For free catalogue write C. J. BURTON, Pres. Iowa Christian College, Oskaloosa, Ia.

Barnes Business College

BOARD OF EDUCATION BUILDING, ST. LOUIS, MO. Established 22 years. Eight expert teachers. May we tell you what a business course with us means? And we'd be pleased to say something about our shorthand and Touch Typewriting course. We give personal instruction, and can offer advantages not to be obtained elsewhere. Catalogue free.

— JUST ISSUED! —

Devotional Songs

EDITED BY THREE FAMOUS COMPOSERS AND COMPILERS

W. H. DOANE, MUS. DOC.

WM. J. KIRKPATRICK AND HUBERT P. MAIN

It contains a larger variety of songs than any other hymn book of its kind ever published.

256 pages. Full Cloth Bound, 276 hymns.

$25 per 100; 30 cts. per copy, postpaid.

A returnable copy for examination will be sent on request.

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York—Chicago.

WE WILL PAY YOU

Six Per Cent

ON YOUR MONEY, IF PLACED WITH US UPON
THE

Annuity Plan.

IT IS A SAFE INVESTMENT WHILE YOU LIVE,
INTEREST GUARANTEED
BY A BOND

AS GOOD AS GOLD.

IT IS A SAFE INVESTMENT AFTER DEATH.
YOUR MONEY DOES THE LORD'S WORK AFTER
YOU HAVE CEASED TO LABOR.

NO NEED TO WORRY
ABOUT SECURITY, TAXES,
LAPSES OF INTEREST OR LOSSES.

IF YOU DESIRE TO HELP
ON THE LORD'S WORK
IN AMERICA, WRITE FOR OUR BOOKLET ON

THE ANNUITY PLAN.

The American Christian
Missionary Society,

BENJAMIN L. SMITH, Cor. Sec'y.
CINCINNATI, O.

With the Children

By J. Breckenridge Ellis

I have changed some of my plans for this page. I am obliged to withdraw my offer of "Red Box Clew" to the most interesting letter, because the editors of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST have hearkened to the demand of its readers for another story from me. So next week the first chapter of a long book will appear on this page, entitled—the book, I mean, "The Green Witch." It isn't a story written to fill up your time and keep you from reading interesting tales. It has things in it, and mysteries, and a witch; she is green. I hope you are not. Better read about her. So we'll have letters on this page about once a month as we used to do when we were young, and about three weeks straight we'll have "Green Witch." You may not like it so well as "Pete" or "The Runaways," or "Red Box-Clew," and of course if you don't you'll tell me so. It will teach me to do better. But I am going to double my other prize thus; those who send me the best kept four consecutive Av. S. reports during 1904, and up to Jan. 15, 1905, will be sent my story, "Adnah," cloth binding and very fine inside; the second best reporter will receive my historical novel "Shem," which is bound in paper but mighty exciting, for all that. I am now ready to announce the prize winners of 1903. The best letter was decided by three judges, one, a girl of fifteen, one, a man old enough to know what he was about, and the other, a lady; each decided without knowing the other's sentiments, and each voted for Helen Ross, of Independence, Mo. The letter winning the prize was the one telling about the show she and other children gave in her father's barn. She doesn't know she has won the prize, and won't, till she reads these words. It's to be hoped she won't throw away the paper before she opens it! Just as soon as I hear from her, to learn if she still lives in Independence, I'll send her the "Red Box Clew." They already have one in the family, bought for her twin sister a long time ago. I don't know what they will do with so many boxes in the house. The judges want me to say they found other letters almost as good; for instance, Bertha Beesley's, describing mountain-day; Jennie Candless's from California; the story of the newsboy's picnic from Clarence Per Lees, of Grand Rapids; Josie Lineberry's account of the ghost-show at school, etc. Three elements decided the prize for the best kept reports; neatness, regularity and the amount of extra work. You see, where two were just as well kept, and as regular, the extra reading had to be considered. The judges were unanimous, and the prize, "Adnah," goes to May Speece, Bucklin, Mo. I hope she'll be glad when she reads this. Send me your present address, May. I don't want any mistake about this, and I'll send you the book. Those coming nearest to the prize were M. J. O'Dell and Carl Per Lee. Everyone has a chance to win the prize this year. If you haven't joined the Av. S., you have time right now to begin, and still get in all four reports before Jan. 15th. I have already received some reports, and good ones, this year. Join the Av. S., my friends, and those who are members, stay joined!

I have so much to tell you, and so many letters to print, I don't know which way to turn. So I'll not turn at all, but tell you a little about May Speece's reports. I'll give extracts from them. Now remember, in no case do I pick out the quarter in which she read most. I don't want to put her best foot foremost, but to show you how good her other foot is. Here is her bible reading for one twelve weeks; the figures are for chapters, not verses: John 10; Sam. 10; Sam. 15; Sam. 7; Kings 7; Kings 7; Kings 20; Kings 8; Kings 5; Selections 17; Matt. 12; Matt. 5; total chapters for twelve weeks 141. History—number of pages read per week, from Thatcher and Schwill's History of Europe: 15; 16; 30; 48; 44; 16; 18; 32; 32; 17; 50; 48; 7, and also, this last week, 48pp. of Lights of Two Centuries; total pages of history for twelve weeks, 405. As to poetry, the number of lines read per week. Here is one report, not the largest, by weeks: 1. Vision of Sir Launfal, 347; Paradise Lost, 730; Courtship of Miles Standish, 1,018. 2. Snowbound, 759; Childe Harold, 1,062; Hamlet, 400. 3. Lady of the Lake, 878; Shakespeare, 400; Tennyson, 512. 4. Lucile, 7,920. Longfellow, 500. 5. Idylls of the Kings, 1,128. 6. Paradise Regained, 800. 7. Evangeline, 402; Selections from Poe, 500; Whit-tier, 2,500, etc. Total lines of poetry for this quarter, 32,853. She writes out all her quotations. Gold Av. S. pins have recently been ordered by Mary Haymaker, Wichita, Kans.; Bernice Pickett, Denver; Alta Tucker, Malta Bend, Mo. If they have not been received, please notify me.

But you want to hear about our orphan. Don't get impatient when your name isn't printed immediately with the amount of money you sent. It will surely be printed when I can get to it. When you write to ask if I received it, I have to take a stamp to reply, and Little Joe has to pay for that stamp. Last week I reported a total of $50.49 received. I am proud to announce to-day, $60.99! Wish we had just one more penny! You know it only takes $50 to keep Little Joe a whole year, and clothe him. Then what about this extra money? Why, it will go on next year's expenses. I wish we had $100 now. This $10 extra is a nest egg. Besides, if we had a great deal of money, we could keep two orphans. But I wouldn't think of two unless we had our first one firmly secured. Suppose some rich man sent us a hundred-dollar bill. You don't think it would be too much, do you? We'd go to work on it immediately. So when your dimes and quarters come in above the $50-mark, remember they do just as much good as the first penny that was paid in. If we had a thousand dollars, and you sent a ten cent piece, that dime would prove as great a blessing to some helpless child as if it was the only dime in the Av. S. treasury. I think it would be a beautiful thing if you kept on sending in small pieces of money all through the year as you get them and feel you can spare them, so we wouldn't have to wait till near the end of this year and then make a big stir and a big hurrah in order to raise enough for 1905. Anyway, 1904 is safe! And I am going to get Little Joe's picture, if possible, and publish it on this page. And now that you have paid for his Christmas present, don't you think we might get him a birthday gift to the amount, say, of 20 cents? Well, we'll see about that. Before the month is out I hope to be able to tell you about his Christmas present. My! don't things move slowly in weekly papers. By then, Santa Claus will have had time to shave and start a new supply of whiskers!

In telling about my expenses last week, I set all down as postage without explaining. Now I'll enter into detail. A dime went for Little Joe's Christmas present, and 25 cents for the Christian Philanthropist. That paper, which used to be called The Orphan's Cry, has two pages each month devoted to the orphans' home where Little Joe lives; it tells how the children pass the time, what they eat and wear—all about 'em. It costs only 25 cents a years. Better take it. Tell your mother to send a quarter to Mrs. J. K. Hansbrough, 913 Aubert Ave., St. Louis. The reason I took a quarter of your money for this paper was to keep posted on Little Joe, that I might tell you about him from time to time. This Philanthropist has never paid for itself in money, but it carries the news of the orphans and helpless old people throughout the country, and without it, how could people know about their needs? So in taking this paper we are helping the little children just as much as if we spent a quarter to buy them something to eat. Now, I can't publish your letters, you see that yourself. But never mind, they'll appear when possible. Let me hear from you—what did you get Christmas? And now for "The Green Witch!"

Plattsburg, Mo.

$5. A DAY $10

A GREAT SELLER.

Agents can earn from $5.00 to $10.00 a day selling "Churches of Christ." Ten Thousand Dollars' worth of advance orders taken before the book was published. One person took twenty-two orders in one day. Best territory given to those who apply first. Canvass begins in about ten days. Agents must give good references.

Address, JNO. T. BROWN,
313 W. Walnut St.,
Louisville, Ky.

Ministers' Pastoral Record and Memorandum.

It nicely fits into your vest pocket. Will be ready for delivery January 25. This Record and Memorandum was prepared by who understands the needs of busy preachers. Send 50 cents for copy and you will be delighted with your purchase.

G. A. HOFFMANN

Christian Publishing Company
1522 Locust Street St. Louis, Mo.

Christian Publishing Company

1522 Locust Street

J. H. GARRISON, President
W. W. DOWLING, Vice-President
W. D. CREE, Sec'y and Adv. Manager
R. P. CROW, Treas. and Bus. Manager
G. A. HOFFMANN, General Superintendent

Words Which Encourage Ye Editor.

I can't do without the Christian-Evangelist.
MANLY C. RAMEY.

I enjoy the Christian-Evangelist greatly.
MRS. S. E. HAWKINS.

I like to read the Christian-Evangelist very much.
WILLIAM SMERDON.

I just cannot do without the Christian-Evangelist.
MRS. ELLA DONAGHE.

Am much pleased with the Christian-Evangelist.
E. B. BARNES.

Would feel lost without the Christian-Evangelist.
WALLACE BROCKMAN.

I miss the paper so much, just can't do without it.
MRS. SUE MOORE.

The Christian-Evangelist grows better each succeeding year.
PERCY H. WILSON.

Permit my personal thanks for the Christian-Evangelist.
J. N. SCHOLES.

I don't want to miss any number of the Christian-Evangelist.
MARY A. WOODS.

The more I read the Christian-Evangelist the better I like it.
J. A. WHARTON.

I think the Christian-Evangelist grows better all the time. We cannot afford to do without it.
MRS. D. B. WHITE.

Cannot afford to miss a copy of the Christian-Evangelist. Next to the Bible it is my best friend.
F. E. MANTLE.

We have taken the Christian-Evangelist for over thirty years, and think it the best paper in the reformation.
JOHN B. HOWARD.

I am in hearty sympathy with every move the Christian-Evangelist has made, and hope to be equally so in the future.
MORTON GREGORY.

I have been taking the Christian-Evangelist for more than twenty years and could not think of doing without it.
MRS. E. A. KING.

We like the Christian-Evangelist first-rate. Every number is brim full of good, wholesome news for family and church life.
DANIEL CROCKER.

"The letter killeth but the spirit giveth life." That measure of life promised "more abundantly" is signally exemplified in the Christian-Evangelist.
J. W. CARSON.

I like my paper. I read it through every week. I am 68 years old and I do not work all the time, so I spent part of my time in reading the Christian-Evangelist.
SARAH J. BASS.

When the two papers were united in 1882, the Christian-Evangelist was the first paper to come into my home, and it has been here ever since. We couldn't do without it.
MRS. E. D. MCCURDY.

I have been reading the Christian-Evangelist for twenty years. I could not do without it. I look forward to every issue with so much pleasure. It is a great comfort and strength to me.
CARRIE P. EUBANK.

You may count on me to do my utmost to help you reach 10,000 new subscribers for the Christian-Evangelist. It is full of sweetness and light, and I consider I am doing God's service when I help extend its influence.
SUMNER T. MARTIN.

I cannot live happy without the Christian-Evangelist that I have read with pleasure and profit for many years.

In addition, I send names of four more who say, "Could not do without the Christian-Evangelist."
MRS. W. A. COLLINS.

I have taken the Christian-Evangelist ever since it was first published in Oskaloosa Iowa. It had a short way of teaching Bible truth. It made the patriarchal age star-light, Moses and the prophets moonlight, John the Baptist twilight and Jesus Christ the sunlight.
A. W. ALLEN.

I have been reading the Christian-Evangelist for thirty years and would not think of doing without it. I shall always be glad to do what I can to extend its circulation, believing it to be the best paper published by our brethren, and think it ought to be in every Christian home.
W. P. CARRITHERS.

I have taken the Christian-Evangelist for 37 years, and I expect to as long as I am this side of heaven, and I expect to hear of it when I get there. It seems to me to get better and better all the time. I became a subscriber when, as the Evangelist, it was published at Ft. Madison, Ia., by Daniel Bates and D. P. Henderson.
J. C. POWELL.

By request of Sister S. T. Halyard, I write to tell you of her appreciation of the Christian-Evangelist. She began taking the Christian before it was associated with the Evangelist. Paid dear Brother Proctor for it before the first one was issued; is taking it now, and says she expects to do so while she has her reason. She was 95 years old last June, and is able to walk several blocks yet.
MISS L. LEWIS.

I wish to congratulate the editor, Brother Garrison, the management and the brotherhood upon forty years of faithful and effective service rendered the cause of humanity, the cause of Christ. Indeed, I might congratulate the world, for I am sure the broad minded, sweet spirited influence of the Christian Evangelist has been felt throughout the world. The paper grows better and sweeter with age. May the past be but the beginning.
J. H. MOHORTER.

I regard the Christian-Evangelist, which I have read from its incipency as the best family paper known to me. Its spirit of candor and fairness is the need of the hour among our people. Our greatest danger is that we are not able to "federate" our own forces. I regard J. H. Garrison as the safest, soundest and most representative of "our plea" of any of our many great men. I shall do what I can to commend the Christian-Evangelist to our people.
J. C. MASON.

I have now had the Christian-Evangelist eight years, and it is always a welcome visitor, I assure you. It grows in spirituality and in power, and is a great help to growth in grace. It is an educator in many, many ways. May God bless you for the great good you have by your words done me. I feel something of the high spiritual atmosphere in which you live. I catch your beautiful spirit even at this distance, and am quickened in my religious life.
MRS. M. C. NEWTON.

Through Service to Florida.

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad in connection with the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad operates a through buffet drawing room sleeping car daily between St. Louis and Jacksonville, via Montgomery, Alabama. This car leaves from the Union Station, St. Louis, at 8:45 P. M., arriving at Montgomery next evening at 7:45 P. M., and Jacksonville the second morning at 8:30 A. M., and making direct connections with through trains for all points in Florida. No route to Florida offers more attractions for the sight-seer than the route via Montgomery, traversing as it does the most populous and fertile section of the South. For rates, time tables, maps or sleeping car reservations, address J. E. Davenport, Division Passenger Agent, Louisville & Nashville Railroad, 206 N. Broadway, St. Louis, Mo.

Jehovah's War Against False Gods AND OTHER ADDRESSES

By J. M. ATWATER

A Splendid Cloth-bound Volume
of 370 Pages

Compiled and edited by
ANNA ROBISON ATWATER

Price, $1.50, Postpaid

Christian Publishing Company
ST. LOUIS, MO.

THE QUESTION IS

HOW TO UNDERSTAND AND USE THE BIBLE.

And is answered in neat book form in a volume of 116 pages by J. H. Bryan.

Price: 50 cents. Postpaid.

Christian Publishing Co.
1522 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo.

A Combination Offer.

1.—SUCCESS, the great monthly magazine of New York, known everywhere and esteemed for its superior excellence. Price per year, $1.00.

2.—OUR YOUNG FOLKS, which needs no commendation from those who will read this. A sixteen-page weekly. Price per year, 75 cents.

3.—JUNIOR ENDEAVOR WORLD, the best paper of its class in the wide world. A sixteen-page monthly. Price per year, 35 cents.

Regular price for the three, one year, $2.10.

All Three will be sent for $1.50.

Address, CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING CO.,
St. Louis, Mo.

To Strengthen the Believer and Convince the Doubter
Is the mission of

HELPS TO FAITH.

A cloth-bound book of 245 pages,

Price, $1.00.

Written by J. H. GARRISON. Published by
Christian Publishing Company
1522 Locust Street St. Louis, Mo.

Fortieth Anniversary

THE CHRISTIAN- EVANGELIST

A WEEKLY RELIGIOUS NEWSPAPER.

Vol. XLI. No. 3.

January 21, 1904.

$1.50 A Year.

New Building of Christian Publishing Company
(To be erected soon)

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING CO. ST. LOUIS, MO.

...PRICES ARE SACRIFICED...

Because We Must Reduce Our Book Stock

As previously announced, we expect to have our new publishing house ready for occupancy within nine months. We have tons of books on our shelves and are determined to sell them at ridiculously low prices rather than remove them.

A Chance to buy an Extensive Library with the Outlay of Only a Few Dollars. Note the List Below:

- Koinonia . . . . . 10 cents
By JAMES CHILLEN. A treatise on the fellowship, or the weekly contribution to the support of the Gospel. Cloth, 79 pages. Postage 3 cents.
- The Sunday-School Helper . . . 10 cents
By J. H. HARDIN. A "helping hand" to all Sunday-school superintendents and teachers. Cloth, 144 pages. Postage 5 cents.
- Dictionary of Scriptural Names . 15 cents
A pronouncing dictionary of Scriptural names. The book also includes tables of weights, measures, etc. Postage 2 cents.
- Life of Alexander Campbell . . 15 cents
By C. V. SEGAR. An accurate, concise biography of the great religious leader. Paper, 50 pages. Postage 2 cents.
- Grandma's Patience . . . . . 15 cents
A charming little story by the same author as "Riverside." Bound in cloth; 80 pages. Postage 4 cents.
- Duke Christopher . . . . . 15 cents
By FANNIE H. CHRISTOPHER. A true tale of the young hero of Wurttemberg, in the days of Luther's reformation. Cloth, 72 pages. Postage 4 cents.
- Barholet Milon . . . . . 15 cents
A sequel to the above, by the same author. Cloth, 99 pages. Postage 4 cents.
- The Juvenile Revival . . . . . 20 cents
By THOMAS CHALMERS. A study of the beginnings, progress, raison d'être and fruits of the Christian Endeavor movement. Cloth, 125 pages. Postage 5 cents.
- Shem, a Story of the Captivity . 25 cents
By BRECKENRIDGE ELLIS. A most fascinating tale of ancient Israel and the Babylonian captivity. Paper, 300 pages. Postage 7 cents.
- Revelation Read . . . . . 25 cents
By A. M. OVERSTREET. A study of the wonderful message of the "Seer of Patmos." Cloth and gilt, 173 pages. Postage 8 cents.
- Our First Congress . . . . . 25 cents
Addresses by Haley, Briney, Lhamon, Mathews, Calvin, Philpott and Richardson at St. Louis, 1899. A book of permanent value. Cloth, 246 pages. Postage 9 cents.
- My Good Poems . . . . . 25 cents
By ALFRED FAIRHURST. A volume of verse by the author of "Organic Evolution Considered." Handsome cover design. Cloth, 240 pages. Postage 8 cents.
- Paul Darst . . . . . 25 cents
By D. R. LUCAS. The story of a struggle 'twixt love and duty. Cloth, 206 pages. Postage 6 cents.
- Autumn Leaves . . . . . 25 cents
By MRS. M. M. B. GOODWIN. A book of delightful verse by a talented author. Beautifully bound. 172 pages. Cloth, 25 cents; morocco, 35 cents. Postage 6 cents.
- Wondrous Works of Christ . . . 25 cents
This delightful work, by DR. A. A. WILLIAMS, is worthy a place in any home. Profusely illustrated and beautifully bound in cloth and gilt. 266 pages. Postage 9 cents.
- Riverside . . . . . 25 cents
By MARIE BUTLER. The story of a modern prodigal, told so skillfully that the interest never flags. Cloth, 174 pages. Postage 6 cents.
- The Moberly Pulpit . . . . . 25 cents
Twelve sermons, on living themes, delivered by J. C. RENOIDS while he was pastor at Moberly, Mo. Cloth, 159 pages. Postage 7 cents.
- Pedobaptism; of Heaven or of Men? . 25 cents
By J. M. FROST. An able discussion of a much discussed question, by a prominent Baptist. Cloth, 199 pages. Postage 6 cents.
- Communings in the Sanctuary . . 25 cents
By R. RICHARDSON. A devotional work by an intimate of Alex. Campbell, and a member of the first faculty at Bethany College. Cloth, 179 pages. Postage 6 cents.
- Rum, Ruin and the Remedy . . . 30 cents
By D. R. DUNCAN, author of "Prohibition vs. License," and other works. A very thorough and comprehensive study of the liquor problem. The book is full of facts and figures, statistics, scientific reports, etc., and is so well indexed that it is invaluable as a book of reference. Cloth, 207 pages. Postage 8 cents.
- Nehushtan . . . . . 30 cents
By J. R. ROE. A book every American should read. Rome's true character revealed! Cloth, 385 pages. Postage 12 cents.
- The Messiahship . . . . . 35 cents
By WALTER SCOTT. A work of much historical interest, as well as direct value. Cloth, 384 pages. Postage 10 cents.
- Dr. Carl Brown . . . . . 35 cents
By MRS. M. F. MILES. This is a novel of much more than average interest and value. Cloth, 256 pages. Postage 10 cents.
- Prison Life in Dixie . . . . . 25 cents
The author, REV. J. B. VAWTER, was a soldier in Sherman's army, was captured and sent to Andersonville. His true story of his experiences in prison and of the attempts to regain freedom, is as absorbingly interesting as any romance of fiction. Postage 9 cents.
- J. K. Rogers . . . . . 30 cents
This memorial to Christian College and its founder was prepared by O. A. CARR. Mr. Rogers was widely known and greatly loved for his work's sake. Cloth, 60 cents; full Turkey morocco, $1.60. Postage 10 cents.
- Hand-Book of Christian Evidences . 35 cents
By LAURENCE W. SCOTT. An exceedingly able and strong defense of the Christian religion against infidelity. Cloth, 351 pages. Postage 10 cents.
- Life of Knowles Shaw . . . . . 35 cents
By W. M. BAXTER. Mr. Shaw was the first and one of the greatest of our modern evangelists. The story of his life is genuinely interesting. Cloth, 237 pages. Postage 8 cents.
- Rose Carleton's Reward . . . . . 35 cents
By MARGARET FRANCES. A story that will delight the young, and that may safely be placed in their hands. Cloth, 283 pages. Postage 8 cents.
- Missionary Addresses . . . . . 35 cents
Fourteen thrilling addresses by A. McLEAN. The standard missionary volume of our brotherhood. Cloth, 298 pages. Postage 12 cents.
- Elijah . . . . . 50 cents
By M. M. DAVIS. The life of the great prophet and the lessons from his wonderful career told in an attractive style by a close student of the Word of God. Cloth binding. 201 pages. Postage 7 cents.
- The Young Man from Middlefield . 50 cents
By JESSIE BROWN POTNDS. A story of Christian Endeavor. Undoubtedly the best production of the gifted authoress. The price quoted is just one-half price. An unusual bargain. Handsome cloth binding. 257 pages. Postage 5 cents.
- Treasured Thoughts . . . . . 35 cents
A literary gem book. Contains quotations on many subjects by leading authors. An exceedingly handy and useful volume. Cloth binding. 160 pages. Postage 6 cents.
- Patmos . . . . . 40 cents
The History of the Kingdom of Heaven, the True Church of Christ, by REV. E. R. MCGREGOR. This volume is an exegetical interpretation of the Revelation of John. 263 pages. Postage 9 cents.
- Missouri Christian Lectures . . . 40 cents
For many years the preachers of Missouri have maintained a lectureship, meeting annually. A number of volumes of the lectures thus delivered have been published. We have in stock Vols. II, III, and V. These volumes contain much matter of permanent value. Postage 11 cents.
- Life of Garfield . . . . . 40 cents
By F. M. GREEN. This is the standard biography of the martyred President by a life-long associate. 452 pages. Bound in cloth, 40 cents; half morocco, 50 cents; full morocco, 65 cents. full morocco and gilt, 75 cents. Postage 15 cents.
- Walks About Jerusalem . . . . . 40 cents
By ISAAC ERRETT. One of the best and most popular books by this author. A trusty guide to those that seek the "old paths." Cloth, 211 pages. Postage 8 cents.
- Story of an Earnest Life . . . . 40 cents
By MRS. ELIZA DAVIES, being an account of a remarkable life; her work, her travels, trials, etc. Regular price, $2.00. Cloth, 570 pages. Postage 17 cents.
- Problem of Problems . . . . . 50 cents
By CLARK BRADEN. Whence came man, life, light, matter? etc. This is the problem. A book to study—to read and read again. Cloth, 480 pages. Postage 16 cents.
- Hot for the Pastor . . . . . 50 cents
This story is sometimes humorous and sometimes pathetic. It relates some of the experiences, trials, difficulties and joys of the preacher's life. The book was written by W. T. HACKER. Postage 7 cents.
- Queen Esther . . . . . 50 cents
By M. M. DAVIS. The consecrated, heroic and patriotic Queen of King Xerxes is here portrayed by an ardent admirer. The story seems as real and far more fascinating than that of Joan of Arc. Linen cloth binding. 182 pages. Postage 6 cents.

Christian Publishing Company
1522 Locust Street, = = = = St. Louis, Mo.

~~~~~
 J. H. GARRISON,
 Editor Christian-Evangelist.
 W. W. DOWLING,
 Editor Sunday-School Supplies.
 G. A. HOFFMANN,
 General Superintendent
 ~~~~~

OFFICE OF

Christian Publishing Company

1522 LOCUST STREET

St Louis, Jan. 21, 1904.

Dear Brother:

According to the statistical report at our Convention at Omaha in 1902 there were 82,000 baptisms for that year. This year (1903) the report at Detroit shows 83,000. This indicates 165,000 baptisms in two years. Alexander Campbell and his father began their work in 1809, and with all the aid of the followers of B. W. Stone and others, the results were 118,000 in 1850, or forty years. What a marvelous difference in our growth then and now! It took forty years to reach 118,000, now we have 165,000 baptisms in two years.

This immense gain may be either a great blessing or become a danger. This great army needs teaching and assimilating. They are in constant need of our literature in their homes to save them from sectarianism and indifferentism. Wholesome teaching at the fireside fills the heart with faithfulness to God. THE CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST is the great fireside teacher among the churches of Christ. It is a religious paper that will come to bless the family every week and impart an accurate knowledge of the word of God. It must be placed into these many new homes.

THE CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST has just reached its fortieth anniversary. For all these years it served a faithful constituency and pointed the brotherhood to that broad, liberal spirit so abundant in the teaching of the Christ. It has at all times maintained the "unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." It brings to every home that true and apostolic spirit for which our fathers and pioneers so earnestly labored. It elevates and ennoble the members and doubles the power of any church where it enters the homes.

In view of the fact that there are many thousands of homes which need THE CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, and as an appreciation of the great work this periodical has done for the brotherhood during the forty years of its career, and especially as an approval and hearty indorsement of the editorial labors of J. H. Garrison, who for thirty-five years has put his whole life into it, we ask our friends to send us 10,000 new subscribers. This is certainly not asking too much from those who love the cause of Christ and are interested in the circulation of pure literature. Kindly write us without delay. Will you be one of the number to help us add 10,000 new subscribers? We will forward you blanks, premium list, samples and full instruction for this campaign.

Fraternally yours,

G. A. Hoffmann

The Christian-Evangelist.

J. H. GARRISON, Editor

W. E. GARRISON, Assistant Editor

F. D. POWER,

B. B. TYLER, Staff Correspondents.

W. DURBAN,

Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year

For foreign countries add $1.04 for postage.

Remittances should be made by money order, draft or registered letter; not by local cheque, unless 15 cents is added to cover cost of collection.

In Ordering Change of Post-office give both old and new address.

Matter for Publication should be addressed to the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. Subscriptions and remittances should be addressed to the Christian Publishing Company. Unused Manuscripts will be returned only if accompanied by stamps.

News Items, evangelistic and otherwise, are solicited and should be sent on a postal card, if possible.

Entered at St. Louis P. O. as Second Class Matter.

What We Stand For.

For the Christ of Galilee,
For the truth which makes men free,
For the bond of unity
Which makes God's children one.

For the love which shines in deeds,
For the life which this world needs,
For the church whose triumph speeds
The prayer: "Thy will be done."

For the right against the wrong,
For the weak against the strong,
For the poor who've waited long
For the brighter age to be.

For the faith against tradition,
For the truth 'gainst superstition,
For the hope whose glad fruition
Our waiting eyes shall see.

For the city God is rearing,
For the New Earth now appearing,
For the heaven above us clearing
And the song of victory.

CONTENTS

Current Events.....	69
EDITORIAL:

A Personal Talk with Our Readers.....	71
The Evolution of the Christian-Evan- gelist.....	71
The Religious Reformation We Have Advocated.....	73
Longevity of Religious Journalism.....	74
Editor's Easy Chair.....	74
Notes and Comments .....	75

CONTRIBUTED ARTICLES:

As Seen from the Dome. F. D. Power..	76
Auld Acquaintanceship. W. G. Menzies	77
The Christian-Evangelist. A. P. Aten..	77
Helps to Faith. A. B. Jones.....	78
On the Journey to Unity. An Allegory. The Christian-Evangelist and Its Prede- cessors .....	81
Birthday Greetings .....	88, 101
From Our Brother Editors.....	91

FAMILY CIRCLE.....

WITH THE CHILDREN. ....	97
-------------------------	----

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.....	98
------------------------	----

MIDWEEK PRAYER-MEETING .....	99
------------------------------	----

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR. ....	99
--------------------------	----

OUR BUDGET.....	100
-----------------	-----

NEWS FROM MANY FIELDS:

From England .....	102
Los Angeles Letter .....	102
Portland Avenue, Minneapolis .....	102
New Mexico .....	103
Ohio Letter .....	103
Springfield, Ill. ....	103
C. W. B. M. in Missouri.....	103

CORRESPONDENCE

Our Western Letter.....	104
Practical Federation.....	105

CURRENT LITERATURE.....	07
-------------------------	----

EVANGELISTIC.....	108
-------------------	-----

HYMN BOOKS ON TRIAL

To be returned if not satisfactory, and money refunded.
Best Hymns No. 3; 180 songs; three styles of binding.
$1.00, $1.50, $2.00. Write for preparation. Remittance only free.
The Evangelical Publishing Company, Chicago, Ill.

If you live in a smoky city you find that the lustre of your furniture is soon lost in a smutty haze, but a thick suds of Ivory Soap in lukewarm water and a soft cloth will make it bright again with small labor. Ivory Soap is so pure that it is fitted for all such special uses requiring a soap that is known to be harmless.

A WORD OF WARNING.—There are many white soaps, each represented to be "just as good as the 'Ivory';" they ARE NOT, but like all imitations, lack the peculiar and remarkable qualities of the genuine. Ask for "Ivory" Soap and insist upon getting it.

What to Learn.

Learn to laugh. A good laugh is better than medicine.

Learn to attend strictly to your own business—a very important point.

Learn to tell a story. A well-told story is as welcome as a sunbeam in a sick-room.

Learn the art of saying kind and encouraging things, especially to the young.

Learn to avoid all ill-natured remarks and everything calculated to create friction.

Learn to keep your troubles to yourself. The world is too busy to care for your ills and sorrows.

Learn to stop grunting. If you cannot see any good in this world, keep the bad to yourself.

Learn to hide your aches and pains under a pleasant smile. No one cares whether you have the earache, headache or rheumatism.

Learn to greet your friends with a smile. They carry too many frowns in their own hearts to be bothered with any of yours.—Christian Life.

God permits temptation because it does for us what the storms do for the oaks—it roots us; and what the fire does for the painting on porcelain—it makes us permanent. You never know that you have a grip on Christ or that he has a grip on you so well as when the devil is using all his force to attract you from him; then you feel the pull of Christ's right hand.—F. B. Meyer.

THE CHRISTIAN EVANGELIST

"IN FAITH, UNITY, IN OPINION AND METHODS, LIBERTY, IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY."

Vol. XLI.

January 21, 1904

No. 3

Current Events

The expected war between Russia and Japan still hangs fire. From every quarter come reports that "war is inevitable," but war is never inevitable until it has actually begun. The exchange of notes between Russia and Japan during the past week leaves room for further negotiations. Negotiations mean delay, and delay means an increasing possibility of peace. In replying to Japan's peremptory demand for the recognition of her paramount interests in Korea, Russia proposed a compromise, the details of which have not yet been made public, but the chief feature of which is the establishment of a neutral zone which shall include about one-third of Korea. Japan has rejected this proposition and insists on the maintenance of her own prestige in Korea, although willing to concede to Russia similar rights in Manchuria. One effect of these diplomatic exchanges has been to show more clearly than ever that the dispute concerns Korea rather than Manchuria. If Russia should at this point back down completely and concede, for the present, everything that Japan asks, she would at least have succeeded in strengthening her claim upon Manchuria. It is an open question whether Russia has any expectation of doing more than that just now. This whole movement of Russian expansion toward open ports and open seas is the working out of plans which were laid two centuries ago by Peter the Great. Russian diplomacy has a continuity unmatched by that of any other European power, and because it is continuous it can afford to be patient. When one remembers that three years ago Russia was a stranger in Manchuria, justifying the presence of her troops there only on the ground of local disorders, and that to-day the world powers seem almost to have forgotten that Manchuria is not a part of Siberia, it will be seen that Russia's diplomatic achievement will be no mean one, even if, for the sake of peace (that is, for the sake of economy) she gives up all present claim upon Korea. These facts, together with Russia's proved ability to crawl through diplomatic knot-holes and when worse comes to worse, her capacity for backing down with a shamelessness entirely foreign to Anglo-

Saxon idea of honor, afford ample ground, in our judgment, for a belief that Russia will not only compel Japan to take the initiative in any hostilities that may occur, but will exercise all the resources at her command to avert war.

While Russia and Japan have been exchanging notes relative to the status of Korea and Manchuria, our State Department has been pressing for the final ratification of the commercial treaty between the United States and China. The signature of the Emperor to this document a few days ago completed its ratification by China, and it remains only for the ratifications to be exchanged, which will be done in Washington as soon as the papers can be transmitted. One provision of this treaty is that the Manchurian city of Mukden is to be an open port. This proposition was based upon Russia's written agreement to evacuate Mukden on or before Oct. 8, 1903. The evacuation took place, but the city was reoccupied by the same troops on the following day, on the pretext that the civil authorities were unable to preserve order. The retention of Mukden is an essential item of Russia's Manchurian program, but so long as the United States has commercial rights in that city, guaranteed by treaty with China, it will be impossible for Russia to be absolutely master of the situation. The treaty, therefore, constitutes a flaw in Russia's title to Manchuria, which may lead to serious consequences later on. It is barely possible, however, that it may lead to a situation as embarrassing for us as for Russia. In acquiring rights in Manchuria, we have accepted also the responsibility of defending them. If Russia in the course of her aggressive policy should see fit to question these rights, we would have to defend them or back squarely down—and our government is as inexperienced in backing down as Russia is adept in that useful art. In this case we would find ourselves defending rights which would not be worth the trouble and expense which their defense would involve. It is just possible—we do not say probable, but barely possible—that at some future time our new treaty rights in Manchuria, the acquisition of which has been hailed as another of Mr. Hay's brilliant victories, may turn out to be a diplomatic gold brick, worked off upon us by the subtle Chinese, as a means of compelling our alliance in case she should ever feel disposed to combat Russia's claims upon Manchuria.

The unprecedented delay of the Republican National Committee in issuing the call for the nomination convention, has led several of the Democratic papers to assert that Mr. Hanna is postponing the call until he feels that the time is ripe for the announcement of his own candidacy. The states are not supposed to begin to organize their delegations until the call has been issued and it is obviously in the interest of any candidate to be in the field as soon as the convention has been called. Personally, we have seen no very convincing ground for apprehension in regard to Mr. Hanna's nomination, or even of his candidacy for the nomination. Whether or not he would like to be president, is something which perhaps he alone knows. Most of us would like to be if we thought we could, and perhaps Mr. Hanna is not an exception in this regard. But he has twice served as chairman in a national campaign; he knows the country and he knows the game of politics. Knowing these things, he must surely know that the presidency is not within his reach. Since the last campaign, the popular respect for Mr. Hanna's character has greatly increased. His attitude on the labor question, and especially the part which he played in connection with the coal strike, have gone forward toward convincing even his political opponents that there are no dollar marks woven into the fabric of his clothes, and that Homer Davenport's caricatures did not portray Mr. Hanna with photographic accuracy. In fact, like another eminent individual, with whom he was freely classed by a large section of the public during the last two campaigns, he is not so black as he is painted. His re-election to the Senate last week by an overwhelming majority is evidence of his growing popularity. That there is in some quarters—Wall Street and the offices of the New Jersey trusts, and among the directors of the Northern Securities Company—a desire for a President who will lack Mr. Roosevelt's irritating habit of stirring things up, is certainly true. That there are others who would like to have a President more easily guided by the party bit, is also true. These are they who would support Mr. Hanna as against Mr. Roosevelt. In the improbable event that they should secure his nomination, we would look forward with cheerful expectancy to a thorough-going Democratic victory. It is not that Mr. Roosevelt is the only good man in his party, or that Mr. Hanna is essentially a bad man, but such anti-Roosevelt sentiment as there is within Republican ranks, represents, for the most part, those tendencies which are unfriendly to honest government and are disposed to sacrifice the national welfare to the interests of a class or a party machine. Just at present, however, the Hanna boom is being conducted chiefly by a group of Democratic papers. Mr. Hanna, himself, judging from his explicit denials, is no party to it. He says he is holding back the call for the convention only to secure assurance of reasonable hotel rates in Chicago.

That the revision of the tariff will occupy a prominent place among the issues of the approaching presidential campaign, is conceded on all sides. Indeed, it is more than likely that the Democratic party will make it the paramount issue, unless the Panama question develops a degree of political availability of which there is no present promise, or a period of hard times intervenes and the empty dinner pail becomes the dominant force in the political situation. The latter event indeed, would probably help to put the tariff question at the head of the issues. In any event, the increasing pressure for tariff reform cannot be much longer resisted. The party in power knows this, and it will scarcely dare to go into a general election without making some pretty definite promises in this direction. If it were not for the natural fear of disturbing business conditions before an election, the party would be almost compelled to enter upon a course of tariff revision at the present session of Congress. It will be imperative that the matter be taken up immediately after the election. If the Republican party carries the country next November, therefore, it may be looked upon as a practical certainty that there will be some sort of tariff revision, though of course not to the extent that the Democratic tariff reformers desire. But what if the Democratic party wins the election? There will be a Democratic President and a Democratic House of Representatives, but nothing short of a political miracle can wrest the control of the Senate from the Republican party within the next four years. There would, in all probability, be a dead-lock which would prevent any tariff revision whatever. It will not be an altogether inexplicable situation, then, if we find the trust magnates of the east, who are entirely satisfied with the present tariff, giving surreptitious aid to the Democracy in the coming campaign, on the theory that a divided government will be less likely to enact tariff legislation than one wholly in the hands of either party.

About a year ago a new temperance law went into effect in London, containing a complicated and comprehensive system of provisions for the restraint of inebriety. It was provided that a black list of habitual drunkards for each district should be prepared and their names and photographs furnished to all saloon-keepers in the district, who were forbidden to sell liquor to such persons under penalty of forfeiting their licenses. The practical results of this law have not justified the expectations of its friends. The habitual drunkards were too numerous to be listed, yet the lists, incomplete as they were, grew beyond all reasonable proportions. In one case, a saloon-keeper received the names and photographs of 573 persons, to whom he was forbidden to sell liquor. In such cases the system naturally breaks down, for it is scarcely to be expected that a barkeeper can put every applicant for a drink through an examination as elaborate as the identification of a criminal by the Bertillon system. Besides, there is nothing to prevent the most flagrant habitual drunkard from patronizing saloons outside of the district in which he is black-listed. If the districts are small enough to keep the lists down to a workable size, they are so small that anyone may cross their boundaries without serious inconvenience. On the whole, the experiment justifies the comment of a certain weekly paper—whose entire back cover page is occupied by a beer advertisement—that, "to restrain or even regulate drinking by legislation is one of the hardest things there is to do." The failure of every such half-way measure which aims to prevent only the selling of the last drink which makes a man drunk, is an argument in favor of thorough-going legislation which will place the whole business under the ban. In fact, the underlying theory that the last drink is more to blame than any of its predecessors for making a man a drunkard, is itself a vicious fallacy. Of course it is hard to "regulate drinking by legislation" when the legislation involves such hair-splitting as could not be effectively put into practice in connection with any other subject of legislation. If milk inspectors were asked only to see that contaminated milk is not sold to families which have young children, or if the pure food laws provided only that adulterated food should not be sold to invalids, there would be no end of trouble in enforcing such regulations. For practical purposes, the thorough-going law is the one that counts. It may be true that there is many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip, but there is also many a slip in the best-laid plans for checking the cup when it has once started toward the lip. The place for effective interference with the process of making drunkards is not "'twixt the cup and the lip," but 'twixt the rye field and the distillery, and 'twixt the hop-vine and the brewery.

In spite of the tariff wall between the United States and Canada, and in spite of the preferential treatment which Canada accords to Great Britain, our trade with Canada is growing more rapidly than that with Great Britain. Setting aside all foolish talk about political annexation, it is apparent that the two countries are drawing closer together, both commercially and in those respects which have to do with national character and taste. The articles of import and export which foot up the largest totals in the statistical tables, are not always the most significant. That we are sending Canada large amounts of raw material for manufacture, is a commercial and industrial fact, but that we are sending a rapidly increasing quantity of books, periodicals and pictures, while the quantity of such imports from Great Britain is decreasing, is a fact which shows how the intellectual trade winds are blowing. Take the matter of novels for example, novels are not a necessity, but a luxury. People who wear the same kind of clothes may differ from each other in all essential respects, but people who read the same books must be very much alike. Now the figures show that within the past five years, the quantity of novels annually sent from the United States to Canada has almost doubled, while the quantity sent from Great Britain to Canada has been almost cut in two. Taking the larger figures which represent the imports of all sorts of books and periodicals, it is to be observed that Great Britain sent to Canada last year only 25 per cent more of these articles than she did half a decade ago, while the quantity sent from the United States is more than three times as great. In scientific books, and particularly books in relation to the application of science to industry, the growth of our trade with Canada is far more remarkable. These facts can only mean that the similarity of race and environment is working out its natural result in the assimilation of the two groups of people whose common points are fundamental, and whose separation is only accidental. We are not interested in the question of annexation, but we are interested in noting that the two great North American peoples are feeling the same wants, reading the same books, thinking the same thoughts, and becoming in all essential respects, one homogeneous people.

The Republic of Panama has elected its first president in the person of Dr. Manuel Amador.

A Personal Talk With Our Readers.

There are times when an editor is justified in discarding the conventional, impersonal "we" and talking to his readers in a personal heart-to-heart way. This fortieth anniversary of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, and the thirty-fifth anniversary of my editorial connection with it, seems to be such an occasion. I shall try to think of my readers as constituting a larger family circle, gathered about some wide, old-fashioned fire-place, this mid-winter evening, at which I am acting as host, and shall speak to them in confidence as a friend speaks to friend. I trust I am not assuming too much in supposing that this relation exists between myself and the readers of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST.

It is difficult for me to realize that so long a period of time has elapsed since, as a young man, I entered the field of religious journalism. It forces upon me the conclusion that I am growing old, as men count age. I do not conceal from myself the fact that, counted by years, the much larger part of my life on earth has been lived. It does not follow, however, that within the few years of active service that may remain to me, I may not accomplish as much good as in the greater period that lies behind me. That depends upon God's purpose concerning me, and my willingness and fitness to be used by Him in the furtherance of His kingdom in the world.

The deepest feeling I have in looking back over these thirty-five years of editorial work, with all its anxieties, cares and incessant labors, is that of gratitude to God for calling me, in His providential way, into this important field of labor. I did not choose it, of myself, and often I would gladly have laid down the burden if I could have done so conscientiously. But now that I have been led to devote so many years of my life to this work, I can but feel that I have been, in a very imperfect way no doubt, doing the work that He designed me to do. It is this conviction that gives dignity to the humblest calling, and strengthens the heart to endure whatever hardship or sacrifice it may impose. I feel that it is solely through the grace and wisdom, which God has vouchsafed to me, that I have been enabled to fulfill the responsible tasks which have devolved upon me in my editorial calling with any degree of acceptance to Him or to my brethren. The mistakes have been errors in judgment, which, I am sure, He will be gracious enough to forgive. May I not hope for as much from my brethren?

And this leads me to say that, next to the feeling of gratitude to God for His constant mercies, is that of thankfulness to my brethren whose words of advice, approval and sympathy, all along the way, and especially in critical periods, have been a solace and source of strength to me. I do not forget that upon some of the questions with which we have had to deal, some of the brethren have disapproved my policy, and a few have very severely criticised me. Some, indeed, have called in question my soundness in the faith, or my loyalty to the principles of our plea for a return to New Testament Christianity. I have the consolation, however, of knowing that in nearly all such cases the persons either misunderstood me, or the cause they were seeking to champion, as hundreds of them have since had the frankness to confess. If any one supposes that I cherish any resentments because of these criticisms of my editorial policy, he does not know me. I can too readily understand how good men, equally honest, may differ upon certain questions, to harbor for a moment any ill will toward any one who differs from me.

As I am speaking out of my heart in this personal talk with our readers, I may say, what I would not care to say in a more formal editorial, touching the alleged aberrations from the path of safe journalism in respect to questions of historical criticism and our own religious reformation. There has never been an hour in all my editorial career when I doubted the inspiration, the authority, or the supreme excellence of the Holy Scriptures. My attitude towards historical criticism—that it is perfectly legitimate, that it is inevitable, that some of the ablest and most consecrated scholars of the age are engaged in it, that we should have an open mind toward the results of such investigation, but should not be in too great haste to accept them—is not called in question by a single scholar or representative preacher or teacher in our ranks to-day. Not only so, but the Bible is a more precious and more intelligible Book to me now, than when I entered upon my editorial career. My faith in God and in Jesus Christ has grown stronger through all these years, and my religious convictions have taken depth and root which they could not have had in the beginning of my public life. Heaven seems nearer, Christ seems dearer and the way seems clearer, as I journey onward and homeward.

Moreover, my love for this divine plea we make for the restoration of the Christianity of Christ and the union of God's divided people in a holy, united church, according to the prayer of Christ, has increased with the years, and its essential and fundamental truths and principles commend themselves unreservedly to my judgment. I can see our mistakes, and how far short we fall of exemplifying this great plea in our individual and church life—as who of us cannot?—but these deficiencies in our practice I have never allowed to lessen my conviction as to the value and the ultimate success of these principles. But this I do confess, that after the manner which some interpret our plea for New Testament

Christianity, I am not sound. That interpretation is too narrow, too partisan, too unspiritual and altogether too unlovely in its spirit and method, to meet my idea of the great, broad, Christian plea, which I fell in love with in my young manhood, and for the sake of which I left the church of my fathers that I might devote my life to its advocacy. To that ideal I have tried to be true.

The reader will pardon this plain personal word. It has not been easy for me to pursue a course at times which I have known would offend good brethren. But, as God knows my heart, I have loved truth, and I have loved this great cause we plead, better than I have loved present reputation or popular applause. I have no doubt about the future verdict, when those of us who are upon the stage to-day have passed away. I have confidently appealed to that tribunal in my thought, being far more anxious to be approved by that than by the present.

I can not close this talk without thanking my readers through all these years for their patience and forbearance, and their kindly consideration. If I have received some criticism which I cannot but feel was undeserved, I have received much more praise and expressions of esteem that I feel also is undeserved. The past is sealed. Only the future remains to us, and that, so far as the present life is concerned, is growing short with many of us. May God forgive the mistakes that lie along the track of those thirty-five years of history, and cause the good that may have been wrought in that period, through my pen, to be a perpetual force working for truth and righteousness, when my personal work shall have been finished! And may the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, with which so much of my personal history is identified, be a more faithful and efficient messenger of Jesus Christ during the next thirty-five years of its existence than it has been during the same period whose completion is celebrated in this number. I confidently believe it will be.

J. H. GARRISON.

The Evolution of the Christian-Evangelist.

It was in January, 1864, while the war-clouds rested dark and ominous over all the land, that E. L. Craig began at Carrollton, Ill., the publication of the monthly magazine called the Gospel Echo. Previous to that, he had published at Jacksonville, the Bible Advocate, which for some reason, and probably for the usual reason, had been discontinued. We can imagine that he reasoned with himself, when brooding over this second enterprise, that our civil war would terminate soon, and that there would be great need of a religious journal to call the attention of the people away from war and material gain to the more important matters of the kingdom of God.

He was a man of large build physically, of fine mental balance and of catholic spirit. After running the paper four years at Carrollton, he sold it to J. C. Reynolds, of Macomb, Ill., who moved it to the latter place.

Brother Reynolds was a graduate of Bethany College and was associated with Patrick Murphy, a fellow-graduate of Bethany, in the establishment of Abingdon College, where he taught for a number of years. He was living at Macomb, Ill., and filling the pulpit there, and teaching Latin and Greek in Abingdon College, a part of the time during the college life of the present editor of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. When the latter graduated in 1868, he was called to the church at Macomb, Ill., to divide time with Brother Reynolds in the pastorate of that church. This call was, no doubt, secured through the influence of Brother Reynolds, who probably, even then, had designs on the young college graduate that he did not fully divulge. In any event, at the beginning of 1869, he submitted a proposition to his young colleague to become joint proprietor and editor with him in the ownership and editorial management of the Gospel Echo, a position which he accepted. Whatever of good or harm, the present editor of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST has wrought in his editorial career, is due to Brother Reynolds, more than to any other man. Of all the public men we have met, we have known no one purer and more guileless than J. C. Reynolds.

We found him gentle and firm in our editorial apprenticeship, a little more liberal and progressive than his junior was, at that time, but we leaned upon his judgment with greatest confidence. At that period, Brother Reynolds was one of the most widely known and influential of our ministers in Illinois. No one ever questioned his soundness in the faith, his goodness of heart, and, very seldom, the wisdom of his judgment. Even in those early days, he was an earnest advocate of foreign missions, many years before we had any foreign missionary society. It was during the publication of the Gospel Echo at Macomb, that we consolidated with it, "The Christian Herald," then published at Eureka, Ill., and edited by J. W. Karr, assisted, perhaps, by B. J. Radford and Dudley Downs.

Soon after this, the present editor began to feel that if he were to remain in the field of religious journalism, he must seek a larger center, and a stronger financial backing. Our attention was directed to Chicago as a publishing center, and we had secured the subscription of the larger part of the capital stock necessary to start the enterprise in that city, with the assistance of O. A. Burgess, when the great fire of 1871, destroyed a large part of the city, and with it our publishing plans, since our stockholders were among those who were burned out in the fire. Our attention was turned elsewhere. About this time, "The Christian," which had been begun in Kansas City and had failed for lack of financial support, applied for consolidation with the "Gospel Echo." The paper during its brief career, had absorbed the "Christian Pioneer," published by Brother D. T. Wright at Chillicothe, Mo. Having consolidated "The Christian" with the "Gospel Echo," it was decided to remove the paper to Quincy, Ill. This was not designed to be its final home, but was deemed to be the best place for the time being. From the time of the removal of the paper to Quincy, Brother Reynolds ceased to be a joint-owner, but continued his editorial work. Soon after removing to Quincy, the paper dropped the first part of its title, "The Gospel Echo," and took the name of the Missouri paper, "The Christian."

It was at this time that A. F. Smith, a young writer of promise, cast his lot in with us and shared the labors and anxieties with us for several years. As we look back upon it, he seems to have filled an important place in the continuity of the paper and the development of its plans. He proved a true yoke-fellow, with a high sense of honor and as true a friend as one could wish to have. While the paper was still at Quincy, the editor made a trip to Oskaloosa, Iowa, to effect consolidation with "The Evangelist," then published in that city. The arrangement was not effected, however, as we desired to locate the paper in St. Louis, and the owners of the "The Evangelist," preferred then to remain in Oskaloosa. By the aid of J. C. Reynolds, operating in the field, we were enabled to organize the Christian Publishing Co., as a corporation in St. Louis in November, 1873. Its seal is a circle, enclosing an open Bible, with the light streaming therefrom. The Company began the publication of "The Christian," at St. Louis, January, 1874, as is told in other narratives in this number. Brothers McHatton, Smith and Smart have told something of the experience of those early struggles in St. Louis, caused by our destructive fire and other losses, and how, through it all, we came without discounting a dollar of indebtedness, or ever allowing a note to go to protest. Here, again, the coming of Brother J. H. Smart seemed to fill an important place in the life of the paper, for he came at a time when the burden of toil and anxiety was telling on our health, and his capacity for work, conscientious devotion to duty, and careful business management, furnished just the help that was most needed at that time.

Meanwhile "The Evangelist," of Oskaloosa, was improving its financial basis and its literary character. It had been established by Daniel Bates in Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, in 1850, as our historic sketches elsewhere tell, and it had become the beneficiary in a way, of the "Christian Messenger," begun by Barton W. Stone, in 1826, in Georgetown, Ky., and removed by him to Jacksonville, Ill., in 1834. He died in 1844, and D. P. Henderson, who had been associated with him became associated with "The Evangelist," bringing with him the prestige and patronage, as far as possible, of the "Christian Messenger." In 1875, "The Evangelist" reaching out for larger things, purchased and consolidated with it, the "Christian Record," of Bedford, Ind., whose beginning by J. M. Mathes dates back to 1843. Later, its owner purchased the publishing business of Bosworth, Chase & Hall, of Cincinnati. Feeling now the need of a larger center, they moved to Chicago, in 1880, where B. W. Johnson, the editor, associated with him B. J. Radford, of Eureka, in the editorship of the paper. Now that the two publishing companies and the two papers had come within the range of each other's influence, it was felt that union, rather than competition, would be for the best interest both of the brotherhood, and of the companies themselves. The consolidation was effected in 1882, as elsewhere stated. The editors of the two papers were retained for a time on the united paper, or until the removal of Brother Smart to Kansas City to engage in the book and publishing business in 1885. We found in B. W. Johnson, a man of fine ability as a writer, a wide reader, a careful student of past and current history, and an able advocate of our cause. His death in 1894, brought not only profound grief, but added labor and responsibility to us.

From the time of the coming of the paper to St. Louis, we had the closest fellowship and constant assistance of such men as G. W. Longan, Alexander Procter, A. B. Jones and T. P. Haley, a group of as noble men as can be found anywhere on this earth. In the fullness of time, "The Faithful Witness," which had begun its career at Fayetteville, Ark., but had been removed first to Topeka, Kan., and then to Kansas City, Mo., and, later, the "Church Register," which had been removed from Plattsburg to that city, were consolidated with the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST.

From this brief sketch, it may be seen that in the veins of our present paper, runs the blood of more than a dozen journals, and how many noble men have wrought in the building up of the Christian Publishing Co., and the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, and in making them what they are to-day. Such enterprises do not spring into existence full grown, like Minerva from the head of Jupiter, but are the product of generations of men who have watered it with their tears, their prayers and their labors. The history of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST reminds one of a stream, starting from a spring in the mountains and gathering volume from innumerable tributaries, until it becomes a broad current moving onward to its distant destination. May increased life and spiritual blessing mark its course until it has reached its goal—a reunited church and the kingdom of God triumphant!

The Religious Reformation We Have Advocated.

It is altogether likely that this anniversary number of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, marking the completion of its fortieth volume, will fall into the hands of some who would naturally inquire what is the nature and purport of the cause with which the paper has stood identified throughout its history. For this reason, we have deemed it proper to present a very succinct statement of the religious reformation for the advocacy of which the paper came into existence, and to the interest of which it has been devoted through these four decades of its history.

The religious movement now urged by the people known as Disciples of Christ or Christians, and whose local churches are designated as churches of Christ, or Christian churches, had its origin in the great Caneridge revival in Kentucky, under the labors of Barton W. Stone, and in Western Pennsylvania under the labors of Thomas and Alexander Campbell, during the first decade of the past century. This movement had for its definite aim the union of the divided people of God, through the abandonment of human creeds and party names, and a return, both in faith and practice, to the simplicity of the gospel, as it is displayed on the pages of the New Testament. It was believed and urged that the divided condition of the church, with the bitter party spirit which prevailed at that time, was both unnatural and unscriptural, and constituted an insuperable obstacle to the conversion of the world. In proposing that Christians should surrender those things which cause and perpetuate divisions among them, contrary to the will of Christ, it was not expected or required that any one should surrender any fundamental truth or doctrine or honest conviction, but that all should agree to make those things conditions of membership and fellowship in the churches of Jesus Christ which are made such in the New Testament, and that in all other matters there should be liberty of opinion. This principle was formulated in a statement which became a sort of battle-cry with the early reformers: "Where the Scriptures speak, we speak; where the Scriptures are silent, we are silent." This motto was an assertion of the final authority of the Scriptures in all matters on which they give explicit directions, and the assertion of freedom in all matters whereon the Scriptures are silent.

In discarding human creeds and confessions of faith as bonds of union and communion, these reformers did not wish to be understood as denying the truth of many of the doctrines taught therein, but simply as rejecting them as authoritative bases of fellowship. It was denied that any body of men possessed the authority to establish any other conditions of fellowship than those contained in the New Testament, or to lay any other foundation for the Church of Christ than that which had been laid. They revived the cry of the Protestant reformation: "The Bible, and the Bible alone, is the religion of Protestants." But they made a distinction between the Old and the New Testaments, the former being specially designed for God's ancient people, the Jews, while the latter is the rule of faith and practice for Christians. The Old Testament contains much that is instructive and helpful to-day, but we must look to the New Testament to know what is required of us under the reign of Christ. They distinguished also between the Jewish and Christian dispensations; between the law and the gospel; between Moses and Christ; between the Sabbath and the Lord's day; between the Jewish theocracy and the Church of Christ. The failure to make these plain distinctions, it was believed, had led to much confusion of thought and misunderstanding of the Bible.

One other distinction which came a little later in the history of the movement was of supreme importance, and made the plea for Christian union practicable and powerful. What is the essential faith of the Holy Scriptures? This was the vital question which the reformers soon had to face. Must the church exact faith in all the historical narratives, facts and statements of the Bible, as an essential condition of baptism and admission into its membership? This would make the process of evangelization exceedingly slow and difficult. It did not take them long to discover that the Bible was the revelation, first in prophecy and then in history, of the supreme Personality, of whom Simon Peter said, on being questioned concerning Him, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." Concerning this confession, Jesus said: "On this rock, I will build my church." No other confession of faith is required in the New Testament than the confession of Jesus Christ. He is the sun of the Christian system. To believe on Him is to accept all that He teaches, and to obey all that He commands. There are many truths of more or less importance, entering into the system of Christian doctrine, but "other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." Here, then, was the distinction: the faith of the Bible—the faith that saves the soul—is not faith in doctrines, but faith in a Person, even in Jesus Christ the Lord. This distinction between faith, and opinion or interpretation, is vital and fundamental in the work of the reformers, and no other one feature of the movement has done more to give it vitality and power and practicability as a Christian union movement, than this exaltation of Christ to his rightful place in the Christian system, and the subordination of everything else to Him.

It was soon seen that the two ordinances—baptism and the Lord's Supper—stood in direct relation to the personal Christ, and derived their significance and sole value from this fact, the one setting forth, symbolically, Christ's burial and resurrection as well as the believer's death to sin and resurrection to newness of life; and the other, a memorial of His death for our sins. Here was a clear and definite way to Christian union, on the one hand, and to successful evangelism on the other. Jesus Christ was to be the sole object of faith, and Christian union must be upon Him, and not upon any human creed or confession of faith. Obedience to Him, resulting in Christian character, was to be the test of fellowship, and not the acceptance of any human formulation of doctrine. Again, Jesus Christ was to be preached as the Messiah and as the Son of God, whose mission into the world was to seek and save the lost. Men must believe on Him with their whole hearts, that is, sincerely and earnestly enough to desire and purpose to become His disciples; then they were to confess Him with the mouth, repent of and turn away from their sins, and surrender to Christ in baptism, securing by this inward and outward obedience to Christ, the divine assurance of the remission of sins, and the gift of the Holy Spirit. Those thus receiving Christ were to walk in Him, sharing His life and having fellowship with Him and with one another in worship and in Christian service.

To further these ends, the disciples were organized into local congregations, and the elderly and more spiritual brethren were appointed as overseers, or elders, or pastors, or bishops—all of these terms expressing different phases of the same office—to instruct and guide them in their Christian life. Others of blameless life and of personal piety, who came to be designated deacons, were selected to look after the material wants of the congregation and assist the overseers or bishops in the more spiritual service of the church. There was no hierarchy, and no priesthood, except that which was common to all believers, and there were no castes or other social distinctions among the followers of Christ. The rich were humbled, the lowly were exalted, and all stood on a common plane before God in Christ. These local congregations, thus organized, seem to have co-operated with each other for the interests of the common cause. They had but one Master, even Christ, and all they were brethren. Differences of opinion arose as they must ever arise, but they were settled in the spirit of love and of mutual forbearance, without disturbing the unity of the body. The bond of their unity was their personal allegiance to Jesus Christ, and their love for Him and for each other fused the whole heterogeneous mass of believers into a unity of which He was the living head.

That, in a nut-shell, is the plea of the Disciples of Christ to-day, and it is the plea for which the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST has stood, unswervingly, through all its history. It is a broad, Christian, evangelical, scriptural plea. It has accomplished untold good for the world. It is yet in the morning of its history. It has the dew of its youth upon it. Its greatest work lies yet before it. Only a broad-minded, liberal and loyal-hearted people, can live worthy of a plea like that. The constant tendency of men is to narrow it and sectarianize it. The CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST is recognized everywhere, as standing for the plea in all its divine breadth and catholicity, but without the compromise of a single truth, keeping its original aim, the unity of Christians, before the people, and protesting against every tendency orteaching that would prevent it from fulfilling its sublime mission in the world.

Longevity in Religious Journalism.

While the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, numbering its volumes from the beginning of the Gospel Echo, in 1864, has completed its 40th volume, it actually covers, including the papers consolidated with it, a much longer period of time. From the beginning of the Western Evangelist at Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, until the present, is fifty-three years, and if we include the Christian Messenger, which makes very close connection with it, we run back to 1826, when Barton W. Stone began the publication, near the very beginning of the reformation. But whether we measure the period of time which has been covered by the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST from its beginning at Carrollton in 1864, or at Mt. Pleasant in 1850, or at Georgetown in 1826, we have a religious journal that has attained a remarkable age, when compared with the average longevity of religious newspapers.

It is pertinent, therefore, to inquire what are some of the elements of vitality which make long-lived newspapers. If one had a list of the religious newspapers which have been started to meet "a long felt want," and have gone down in the struggle, it would represent a long list of early deaths, and of short graves in the great cemetery of newspaperdom. It is only now and then that one persists in surviving all its childhood ailments and attaining to the maturity of manhood. If we understood the causes which have produced mortality in one case and longevity in another, it might serve to prevent many a newspaper from being born, and help others to live to greater age and usefulness.

It is safe to say, we think, that in every single instance where a religious paper has reached the years of manhood, it has been born of a religious purpose, and has been nurtured by some one who has had an ideal before him, for the sake of which he was willing to give unstinted labor, and to render unselfish and sacrificial service. There may be many such, there must be one, in every successful enterprise of this kind. There will be times when those who control the destiny of the paper must walk by faith, and not be discouraged.

Then again, a newspaper must have a field—the soil in which to grow—if it is to live a long life. As a rule, to which there are rare exceptions, the paper must have a great center in which it will feel the world's pulse-beats, and from which its influence can radiate in every direction. People still ask, "Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?" A great paper, like a great tree, requires good soil and space.

But above all, the paper that lives must deserve to live. It must serve the wants of the people of its time. If it be a religious journal, it must serve the religious needs of the people. It must have a vital message for its age. It must not be oblivious to the changes through which the world is passing. It must keep in touch with the thought of the time, and adapt its message—the old-time message of the gospel—to the people who live upon the earth at the present time. It must itself feed upon the Bread of Heaven, if it is to minister to the world's hunger.

Another essential condition of longevity in a religious journal, is that it must have a pole-star by which to guide its course, and it must never lose sight of that. The religious newspaper that is constantly seeking for some popular hobby to ride; that appeals to popular prejudice; that is looking about for some cause to espouse that will give it popularity; that weighs great questions that arise, not to determine which side is the right side, but which is the popular side, may flourish for a season, but it lacks the essential element of vitality—devotion to truth and to righteousness for their own sake, and in the sublime faith that the true and the right must ultimately prevail.

It goes without saying that there must be sufficient capital and wise business management, but having these, the other conditions mentioned seem to us essential to permanent success.

It is gratifying to note the continued progress of the plans for uniting the Cumberland Presbyterian Church with the Presbyterian Church of the United States. The sub-committee appointed to arrange the details we understand has agreed upon a plan, and it only remains for the churches and presbyteries to endorse its recommendation, for the union to be consummated. This action following so closely the recent movement for the union of the Congregationalists, the United Brethren and the Protestant Methodists, shows a decided trend in the direction of the unification of our divided forces.

Editor's Easy Chair.

The Easy Chair must be in the fashion this week and reminisce also. This department, under its present name, is not as old as the paper by several years, but something of the same general character has been more or less present in the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST during the present editor's connection with it. In the Easy Chair we have ordinarily avoided controversial themes, and have aimed to talk from the heart about those matters, which, though not so frequently discussed, touch all our lives. It has brought us into sympathetic relation with a large circle of readers who feel they have been helped in their struggles by it. A letter just opened expresses very accurately the dominant feature of this department. The writer says: "Your optimistic views of life and your broad sympathy for those whose lives have fallen in crooked places, have, no doubt, made you a martyr to many a tale of woe." No, not a martyr, but a recipient of many a story of sorrow and of anguish from hearts which are overburdened, and which have brought us into closer sympathy with those whose lots have been cast "in crooked places," and have made us feel a deeper charity for our fellowmen. The human heart is richer, we believe, for sharing as it may, the burdens and sorrows of others, and by seeking to lighten the load under which many a weary one is ready to faint.

It is strange that, in looking back over one's history, the spots which seemed darkest when we were passing through them, seem the most luminous when seen in the retrospect, shining as they do in the perspective of history with the marks of God's mercy and loving kindness. We recall some of the crises in the history of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, which has been more than once "tried as by fire." When the great Chicago fire laid waste so large a part of that city and destroyed our plans looking to the removal of the paper there in 1871, it seemed as if God's providence was against us. And yet, in the light of subsequent history, it was probably the very best thing which could have happened for the future of the enterprise. St. Louis is, no doubt, the best center in the United States for our brotherhood and for our publishing interests. Again, when a destructive fire destroyed our large printing-office in this city in 1875, it seemed a great calamity that a young enterprise, just beginning its course in a great city, should meet with such a loss; but it became perfectly clear, in the light of subsequent events, that the fire was a blessing in disguise, in spite of all the loss and hardships which it entailed. Years of ill health seemed a serious drawback to our aims and plans, but the illness involved travel at home and abroad, giving us a larger acquaintance with the world, and opportunity for cultivating patience and resignation to the will of God. And there have been other crises in the history of the paper, which we will not mention, in which the days seemed dark, and we have been tempted to say, with Jacob of old, "All these things are against me!" And yet, we have lived to see that God's hand was in all these crises, not for evil, but for good, and we thank Him for the very shadows which have often made the way dark.

We have been reading a number of the congratulatory messages which have been sent in, and which appear elsewhere, and we must confess to a feeling of unworthiness, in view of these tributes of praise and confidence. We know something of our own limitations and failures, and we can not but feel that much that is said herein, by kind friends, is to be attributed to the partiality of their friendship and to their own generous nature. It was not our purpose in this Anniversary Number to draw out from our readers any personal compliments, but rather to secure an expression of congratulation or appreciation for the paper whose fortieth anniversary is being celebrated; but so long has the present editor been identified with the paper that we can readily see how easily these expressions of appreciation have taken a personal turn. To those who have pointed out what they believe to be faults in the paper we are indebted no less than to those whose kindness of heart has led them, on this anniversary occasion, to speak only of those features which they can approve. One thing is sure, and that is, that we shall spare no efforts in the future to be worthy of the good and kind things which have been said of the paper by its readers. People and papers generally try to live up to what their friends believe them to be. We do not claim to have realized the ideal which we have had for the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, and we shall perhaps never realize it, but we hope, by the grace of God and the help of its friends, to approximate that ideal more and more as the years go by.

What a splendid symphony of congratulatory messages that is that comes from the religious press! Will our readers stop to think how impossible such a manifestation of fraternity and good will from the leading papers of the different religious bodies would have been a quarter of a century ago? We doubt if, in the whole history of religious journalism, there has been such an expression of unity and of brotherliness among the leaders and molders of religious thought, as is to be found in this Anniversary Number of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. We are proud of our editorial brethren. They are, as a rule, large-hearted, liberal-minded men, who have vision broad enough to see all around the horizon. We thank them, one and all, for their expressions of good will and appreciation. We count it no small honor to have won a place, if ever so humble, in so brilliant a constellation of great religious journals. May their power and patronage increase just in proportion as they serve to advance God's kingdom on earth.

The next anniversary of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST to be celebrated will probably be its semi-centennial—ten years hence. How many of those who have written for this number will be here then to join in that celebration, only God knows. It is certain, however, that many of us will have passed on, by that time, to join in the celebration of celestial glories. But whether we be here or there, may the dear old CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST abide, then, as now, seeking to know and to speak the will of God—a messenger of good news, a guide to those seeking the way of life, and a comforter to weary, burdened hearts!

Notes and Comments.

In an address before the St. Louis Methodist Club last week, Bishop Galloway said: "The wonderful growth of Methodism has heretofore been a cavalry dash for new outposts. These conquered fields must now be garrisoned. We must devise wiser and broader plans for solving the pressing and perplexing problems of our great cities." In that statement Bishop Galloway has described very accurately the kind of work that lies before the Disciples of Christ. We do not need to dispense, yet, with the "cavalry dash for new outposts," but we must give much greater attention to holding the fields that we have conquered and to building up the converts gained in Christian life and culture, that they may be panoplied and equipped for the battle with the forces of evil.

Referring to the divisions in the Methodist body, Bishop Galloway said: "Not austere isolation, but closest federation should mark our policy for the future. If President McKinley, himself a soldier, patriot and statesman, could recommend that the Federal Government should care for the graves of the Confederate dead, surely we, as ministers and brethren, ought to be ashamed to stir up the embers of strife." Surely the time has come when churches which divided on the Mason and Dixon line can afford to ignore such political lines and unite, even as the States of the Union are united, under a common banner and for a common work.

The United Presbyterian, referring to this growing union movement, says: "Some bodies are so nearly related to each other in doctrines, order, worship and spirit, that they should be united; they should come together on the basis of their common faith, as rivulets from the same hillside flow together. But in general, there are well defined lines of separation between the body of the evangelical churches. Each one stands for some truth, some work, some phase of the Christian life, and thus has a place in the great field of Christian thought, experience and activity." But if each of these great bodies stands for "some truth, some work, some phase of the Christian life," why should not they all be comprehended in one united church of Christ? There ought to be room in the church of Christ for every truth, every good work and every phase of the Christian life, and the man or the organization standing for such truths ought not thereby to be barred from Christian fellowship and co-operation with their brethren who also are standing for truths and principles which they deem important. Would it not be a distinct help to each one of these separate bodies to be brought into closer contact with the truths and phases of Christian life which they do not emphasize, but which others do? In this way union works for individual enlargement, as well as for organic efficiency. There is, however, a work of elimination and of addition to be done by all bodies before they become so adjusted to a common standard as to make union with each effective and permanent.

Few of our statesmen are equal to Mr. Bryan when it comes to the moral phase of politics. President Roosevelt is very much of the same type, as to the strength of his moral convictions. Speaking at the banquet at New Haven, Conn., since his return from Europe, on the topic, "A Conscience Campaign," Mr. Bryan said:

"If I were to-night to prepare a prayer for my party, it would be: 'O God, give us faith in the wisdom of doing right,' and if that is the faith of those who fight, their differences will not be bitter, nor their separation long. How easy it will be to bear defeat, whether it be for a day or a year, or longer, if buoyed up by the faith that if we have erred in the search for truth the defeat was a blessing in disguise, and if we are right the defeat was but for a time."

It would be difficult to improve on the prayer he makes for his party: "Oh God, give us faith in the wisdom of doing right!" That is not only a good prayer for political parties, but for religious bodies, for individual statesmen, for editors, for preachers, and for every person who is seeking to make this a better world. If we were to add anything to the form of the prayer suggested, it would be the phrase: "And give us a clear vision of what is right, that we may do it in hope and courage." The party, the church, the religious paper, the man, that allies itself or himself, with God, in doing right and in bringing to pass right measures and policies, has a grip on the future and the promise of ultimate success.

As Seen From the Dome

By F. D. Power

A noteworthy incident occurred January 4th at Washington which the man in the dome viewed with unusual satisfaction. The Clericus, an association of forty of the Episcopal clergymen of the city, gave a luncheon at the Ebbitt House to the ministers of the other churches. All bodies, save the Roman Catholics, were represented, and they were invited but declined. The purpose was to bring together the leaders of all denominations in the city for Christian fellowship, and, if possible, for the furtherance of Christian union; and coming as it did from the brethren who are supposed to be more exclusive than others, it had a special significance. Addresses were made, full of the spirit of fraternity and of hopefulness, for closer ties among the different churches, if not for an early elimination of all denominational lines. The meeting emphasized the real harmony of belief which already exists and promises to lead to a closer alliance in Christian work. It was one of the best things which has taken place during my pastorate here. A few years ago it would not have been possible. It is wonderful what the function of dining has to do, in our day, toward the settlement of grave problems in church and state. One thing is sure, the preachers of the capital are much nearer together since they stretched their legs under the mahogany of The Clericus. Oldest of all covenants is the covenant of salt, and the preacher is bigoted indeed who can not drop his sectarianism at the festive board. The world, in sight of the dome, is moving.

Forty years have witnessed great changes in the realm of religious thought, and everywhere these signs of a closer unity among the Lord's people may be seen. The year 1864 was an important one in the world's history. Grant and Lee were facing each other in the wilderness, and Sherman was on his march to the sea. The struggle of the giants was drawing to a close. Mr. Lincoln was elected to his second term. It was not a favorable time for the cause of religion. Among us there was no division on account of the fearful passions of the hour, but the activities of the church were at a low ebb. The "Millennial Harbinger" was our principal religious journal, and Mr. Campbell was in the closing year of his editorial service. In November, 1865, his last essay appeared, but in January of that year he had relinquished the editorship to W. K. Pendleton. The "American Christian Review," edited by Benjamin Franklin, was at this time a vigorous weekly, the "old reliable" of the Reformation. The question of instrumental music was on, and the guns, big and little, smooth-bore and rifled, were rattling away with a fierce din, if not great execution, and the "Review" led in the thick of battle to save the Church, as Grant to save the Republic. Isaac Errett was writing his "Sketches from a Pastor's Portfolio" in the "Harbinger," and "Linsey Woolsey," and planning for the "Christian Standard" which took shape in 1866. It was a crisis in the religious fortunes of the Disciples, when the whole movement was apparently swinging into the worst possible ruts of narrowness and sectarianism. Fortunately wise men came to the front at the call of God, and under their leadership the true spirit of the reformatory effort of Mr. Campbell and his co-workers was made prominent. The current turned in the right direction, received a new impetus, and has gone forward on its blessed mission with far-reaching results.

Within this period the churches have had rest and have been edified, and walking in the fear of the Lord and comfort of the Holy Spirit, have multiplied. The principles we have sought to impress upon the religious world have commanded attention, and the members accepting these teachings have increased with much greater rapidity than in the earlier time. The scope and apostolicity of the position have become better understood by our religious neighbors, and from a small, misrepresented, and unpopular body we have grown to be a recognized force, at least in our American Christendom. We have not sought to be a sect. Our purpose has been, from the beginning, to break down sectarianism. We can never accomplish this by cultivating a sectarian spirit among ourselves. We have sought to promote Christian union. How far we have realized this in our own Zion, and how far we may have furthered this among the people of God about us, would be difficult to determine. Certain it is, since this plea was introduced great changes have been wrought. Old doctrines have shifted. Strongholds of error have surrendered to the onward sweep of Christian thought. Creed authority is no longer paramount. Assent to a human system of opinion is not essential, as once, to admittance to the churches. Men and women who believe on Jesus Christ and obey him are received on their faith, repentance and submission to his authority. In many churches sinners are invited to come forward and confess Christ simply. The Bible is the great book. The gospel is the power of God unto salvation. Dreams, visions, sensations are not relied upon, but the Word of God. Evils of sectarianism are deplored, the union sentiment is to the front, and movements like the Y. M. C. A., W. C. T. U., Y. P. S. C. E., the international Sunday-school lessons, alliances, federation, and missionary conferences have cultivated the spirit of mutual forbearance and co-operation. The clergy have no longer the exclusive right of interpretation, but laymen, and even laywomen—blessed be God!—are welcomed to active Christian service and even to the preaching of the glorious gospel of the blessed God. The great central truth of Christianity, the divinity and Christhood of Jesus—faith in him as a divine Person over against faith in creeds, obedience to him as King and Lord instead of obedience to human authority, trust in him, and love toward him, and loyalty to him as the great bond of fellowship among all the people of God—we see recognized more and more in all lands. There has been a mighty advance.

To say that the churches pleading for original Christianity and union upon the original foundation have contributed toward these ends is simple justice to the truth of history. It is the Lord's work. If the Disciples have helped in it they are glad. So the work is done, it matters not through whom it is done. "Asia," said Guizot, "is the continent of origination; Europe, the continent of differentiations; America, the continent of reunions." Why should not this be so in a larger sense than in a political one? And why should not a religious body, distinctively American in its origin and in its spirit, lead the way in its accomplishment?

We have great reason for encouragement. Our greatest achievements have been in the last four decades. From nothing our missionary work has gone forward by leaps and bounds. Our people have an increasing spirit of benevolence and appreciation of the great obligations of stewardship that promises much for the work of future years. We would not speak boastingly. We might have done far more. We are just beginning to rise to the great height of our responsibility before the world. We are humbled at the thought of our unworthiness. We are hushed at the vision of what is yet to be done. In two respects where we should be strongest we are lamentably weak—in our educational institutions and in our literature. Our schools, which have yielded magnificent returns for the meager support we have given them, have never received the attention they merit. Cardinal Gibbons directs that an offering be made in every Catholic Church in America once every year for ten years to come, and that of Nov. 29th yields $100,000. This for a single institution. We must awake to the claims of education or else yield our ground. Our literature also must go into the hands of the reading public and the thoughtful scholar outside our own ranks, before we can make the progress worthy of the divine plea we are urging. The CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST has stood and stands to-day for these things.

Auld Acquaintanceship—A SCOTCH SERMON

By W. G. Menzies

The wise man Solomon has said, "Yer ain freen and yer faither's freen forsake not," and weil may we wi profit look into the wise man's words. The deeing oot o' the auld year and the coming in o' the new is a grand time tae look back into the past wi a' its failures, trials and difficulties, and tae look ayont tae the new wi a' its privileges and opportunities. It's a time when we are wont tae ask the question expressed in Scottish words:

"Should auld acquaintance be forgot
And never brouc'ht tae mind,
Should auld acquaintance be forgot
For the days o' auld lang syne."

It's a time when we mak' up oor best resolves wi a keen determination tae carry them oot. Whatever be yer resolves and purposes fa the new year, there are a few things ye canna we'el dae tae forget in the renewing o' yer auld acquaintances. Ye mun'na forget "yer ain freen's and yer faither's freen's." Ye canna get along vera we'el without them, and I trust ye'll no forsake them.

The new year can only be a guid new year tae ye as the dear Lord is taken into yer freen'ship. It was he whaled oor faithers up oot o' Egypt, shielding them frae a' until the Caanan land was reached. It was he, blest be his name, that gied his Son in life, in death, that we might live, and noo we are nae mair foreigners nor strangers, but fellow-citizens wi the saints," his ain bairns, the objects o' his love and care. Ye canna dae without his freen'ship. Ye mun'na try it. Dinna be afraid o' him. Mak' him yer freen and accept o' the discipline that comes frae him as frae a loving faither's haun. Throughout the year seek tae preserve the honour o' that divine freenship that ye have made wi him.

"There is a freen wha' sticketh closer than a brither," and it'll no be safe tae enter the new year without him. Think o' a' that Jesus has dune for ye, is daeing, and will dae. Meditate on his sacrifice, think o' his sufferings for ye, look up into his face as he hangs on Calvary, and tell me, "Can ye despise his freenship?" We dinna ken a' the reasons why it behooved Jesus to suffer such things, but he died to redeem us. His sufferings and deith on Calvary are the most touching appeals that God makes in seeking yer freenship.

Ye'll need the close freenship o' Jesus throughout the year in helping ye tae be faithful in yer Christian life. Nae Christian gangs tae heaven on flowery beds o' ease, but the Maister is aye ready tae help his ain. "I'll never leave thee nor forsake thee." "Lo, I am with thee," are words which can never fail. Temptations and trials and difficulties may come, but the constant freenship o' Jesus insures us the victory over every enemy to the soul. It's a new year, and no twa o' them are alike. We will enter in on untried paths and new ways, and what shall the ootcome be? Oh, that daily we may sit doon at the Maister's feet and learn frae him. "O lead us in the paths o' righteousness for thy name's sake." "The best freen tae have is Jesus." So dinna despise him or forsake him.

Another freen ye cannot afford tae forsake is "the hoose o' God." He wha' dwells in the heaven o' heavens, condescends tae meet wi his ain bairns in that place whar' twa or three are gathered taegither in the Maister's name. Ye canna neglect it. It's the hoose whar' in yer faithers sat and heard the word o' life expounded. They loved tae meet there and tae enjoy its sweet privileges. It has been yer ain freen, and to forsake it is closing the door o' yer heart tae a' that's guid and pure and true.

It's here that God spreads before us his banqueting table. It's here that the spiritual man tastes something that satisfies his soul. It's here we meet for the gran' purpose of learning o' the excellency of the knowledge o' Jesus Christ. Here "the word o' God," which is sharper than a twa-edged sword, is brought tae bear upon oor lives and quickens us in a' the spiritual graces which build up oor characters for eternity.

"Forsake not the assembling o' yer-selves taegither." Everything about the service is shair tae dae ye guid. The table with its snowy white covering, on which are spread the bread and wine, the emblems o' Christ's sufferin' and deith for us. Tae every one o' Christ's disciples that meet aroon' the Lord's table on the first day o' the week to partake o' the sacred emblems, whit joy and satisfaction and blessing tae ken that ye dae it a' "in remembrance o' him." May we a' possess mair o' the spirit o' David wha' said, "I wis gied when they said tae me, Let us gang up intae the hoose o' the Lord."

These, yer ain and yer Faither's freens, ye mun'na forsake. Let us pray.

Rath, India.

THE WAY OUT

What to Do When Food Don't Agree.

When food don't agree sensible folks make a change.

Where all others fail Grape-Nuts, being predigested and all nourishment, succeeds, usually from the first trial.

A lady of Washington says: "My baby 19 months old had never seen a well day in her life. She had suffered from indigestion from the time of her birth and it seemed impossible to find any food to agree with her. She could keep almost nothing on her stomach and her bowels were in such a constipated condition she suffered a great deal.

"It was then that I tried Grape-Nuts for her steeping it thoroughly and straining it, putting a small portion in each feeding and it worked like a charm. She began to improve immediately and gained half a pound the first week.

"Baby got her indigestion from me for my digestive organs have always been weak. I rely on Grape-Nuts for most of my food for there are times when I can eat nothing else at all but Grape-Nuts. I am steadily improving and know it will entirely cure me in time. I never have 'that tired feeling' anymore. I eat Grape-Nuts and I feel its effects in improved mental strength very forcibly." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Look in each package for a copy of the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

The Christian-Evangelist.

In Honor of Its Fortieth Anniversary.

By Aaron Prince Aten.

Like some great river with its flowing tide

Majestic sweeping onward to the sea,

Resistless in its impulse to be free,
Great union of the waters far and wide

Upon whose bosom might all navies ride,

So, toward the ocean of eternity
Glides grandly onward with its forceful plea

The C.-E. with the world's great hope allied.

Through four decades we see its gathering force;

Through passing years its victories for the right;

For truth determined in its onward course;

Its stalwart strokes on fiercest foes in sight.

May courage be from out eternal Source

To overcome all enemies of Right!

Roseville, Ill.

Helps to Faith By A. B. Jones

Every age is an age of doubt—of doubt upon the part of some; and every age is an age of faith—of faith upon the part of some. To contribute something toward the dissipation of that doubt, and something toward the further growth and development of faith in the verities of our holy religion should be the pleasing task and the willing service of every man of God. This volume by the editor of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST is an effort in that direction. Nor was he ever more completely in possession of himself and of his theme than when he wrote this book. His intellectual and spiritual vitality were both at high tide in the execution of this task. We can only indicate his drift of thought.

The author contends, and we think justly, that man's nature is instinctively religious; that God created man with this nature that he might be responsive to the revelations which the divine Being should make of himself; that the carnal and spiritual nature, often at variance with each other, within and of themselves, indicate the divine purpose that the spiritual should become the dominant force of life resulting in characters. In this struggle man reaches out for help, and God answers by revealing himself in his works, in his Word, and more fully in the life of Jesus our Lord. The incarnate Christ, the author thinks, is "the most remarkable phenomenon of history;" and holds that "the moral necessity for the incarnation affords the highest grounds of its reasonableness and credibility as an historic fact."

Christ is then introduced as a unique personality and a fact in history to be accounted for; which the author, by a splendid course of reasoning, maintains can be done only by conceding the claims of Jesus to be the Son of God and the Savior of men. This being done, Christianity and the Church of Christ are easily and logically explained in their miraculous origin and marvelous development. But, the author continues, if Christ be Deity what will you do with him? And he adds: "No man can come into touch with Jesus Christ, through faith in him, without feeling the pressure of moral obligation to obey his teaching and conform this life, as far as possible, to the divine ideal which is presented in him."

In answer to the objection that the incarnation is incompatible with the dignity and majesty of the God of the universe, the author reasons very skillfully, "Man's character can only be transformed through moral and spiritual power; the highest expression of moral power is love, and the supreme manifestation of love is seen in the humiliation and suffering of Christ."

With the incarnate Christ set before the reader, he becomes a willing listener to his authoritative utterances. His teachings concerning the "Fatherhood of God," "the recoverability of man from the dominion of evil," and his "capabilities of infinite spiritual progress" are then shown to be corrective of many false theological notions in the world. Also that "Jesus is something more than a Revealer of God, and the divine ideal of manhood. He is the Regenerator of mankind. He is the Power by which his own divine ideals are to be realized"—all this is firmly put by a process of cogent reasoning and scriptural confirmation.

The author then proceeds to discuss "the meaning of Christ's death" which he styles "the greatest tragedy of all history, and the deepest problem of religion." After unfolding his theme through several inspiring pages he concludes, "It would be rash to deny that there is any further meaning in Christ's death than the power it possesses to bring men to God in penitance and faith; but that much we are sure it does mean."

The next chapter on "The Nature of Faith and its Relation to Salvation," attracted my attention especially. That this subject needs to be studied by our people more thoroughly is evident; and that the author has given it careful thought is apparent. We can only note capital points briefly. After treating of the "faith-faculty," or man's capacity to believe and his duty to use it on vital matters like Christianity; and showing that there are degrees of faith, the author considers the question of faith and repentance as related to each other. He argues that there is a measure of faith that necessarily precedes Christian faith. Hear him: "There is another aspect of faith which is further on, and which consists of trust in a Person. This final and matured aspect of faith in which the soul commits itself to Jesus Christ, is not reached except by repentance. But that repentance which puts the soul in an attitude for committing itself to Christ, is the product of the soul's perception of right and truth and duty, which may be called our degree or aspect of faith." In this position the author is unquestionably right.

The question is then raised in the next chapter, "What must we believe?" In answering this he raises and answers this further question: "But are we not required to believe in faith, repentance, baptism, the Lord's Supper, prayer and a holy life? No, none of these things are objects of faith. They are commands to be obeyed, or duties to be performed, or privileges to be enjoyed, because we believe in Christ." That is, having accepted

Christ as our Savior, having surrendered to him and trusting him, we naturally and willingly follow him in all his injunctions.

The substance of the teaching of this book concerning the Holy Spirit is contained in the following sentences:

"In speaking of the Holy Spirit, we are not to be understood as speaking of some impersonal influence, but of God himself, working in man for man's salvation. . . . We need not make any restrictions as to the method of the free spirit of God in bringing truth to bear upon the minds and hearts of men. . . . The Holy Spirit is not less active to-day than it was in the days of the apostles."

No chapter in the book is more profitable than the one on "Christian Experience or God in Us." The first sentence opens up a vista—"It is much to be feared that the abuse to which the phrase 'Christian experience' has been subjected, has caused many of us to overlook the value and significance of our individual experiences, as proof of the reality of God and his life, giving power as manifested in Christ." Further on he says, "The end and aim of Christ's mission, as we have seen, is the reproduction in men of the life that was in him." This chapter is pure gold.

The next chapter concerning "The Church," is a forcible though brief presentation of the views generally held by the Disciples. The author says, "There is but one church. . . . This church is composed of all true believers in Christ. . . . The Christians that are within the various fenced-up parties, are Christians, not by virtue of their membership in these parties, but because of their faith in Jesus Christ and the possession of his life and spirit." He contends, too, that these temporary divisions will ultimately disappear by blending into the "essential unity" of the body of Christ which will "go forth to accomplish its sublime mission in the world."

The further we read into this book the higher we prize its worth. Its fine discriminations in the sixteenth chapter between revelation and inspiration and literature will prove instructive and helpful to many readers.

The closing chapter of Part I, "Christianity Vindicated by History" enquires, "Have the claims made by Christ been refuted or confirmed by the testimony of history?" The claims are then given, "I am the light of the world," "I am the bread of life," "I am come that they might have it more abundantly," "I am the resurrection and the life." And by a few easy, graceful, forceful and well-rounded references to each claim in the light of history the author concludes:

"Surely history has vindicated the claims of Jesus Christ, and its pages of Christian heroism and of Christian progress furnish the highest proofs that the religion which he taught was made for man, is adapted to man, and should be accepted by all men as God's highest gift to the race."

In Part II the obstacles to faith are considered, which are twofold in their nature, "First, those which consist of objections made by unbelievers, through their misconception of scriptural teaching, and, second, those false or partial views of the Bible which believers have put forth as matters of faith and as necessary for one to believe." The author discusses such subjects as the following: "Origin of Moral Evil," "Election," "Sin, Salvation, Retribution," "Science and Revelation," "Revelation Progressive," "Abuse of Authority in Religion," "Conversion—the Old Doctrine and the New Light," "A Divided Church," "Moral Delinquencies," "The Slow Progress of the Kingdom of God," "The Creed of Unbelief."

In the writing of this book the author was at his best. The discussions necessarily cover a very broad field. Yet he always appears to be on familiar ground and at his ease. This book, true to its title, will help the faith of every Christian who reads it, and will help the honest enquirer after truth into the light and joy of a living trust in Christianity.

On the Journey to Unity

AN ALLEGORY

It was a clear, bright morning in the autumn of 19—when a party of us en route to the City of Unity had paused a while for refreshments, and were admiring the beautiful autumnal landscape, and delighting our souls with the glimpses of the far-away city whither we were going, which sat upon a mountain, and whose fair outlines we were able to make out through the clear atmosphere of that autumn day. Glancing backward, we noticed a company of people approaching, traveling in the same direction and having the air and manner of pilgrims on a journey. As they came nearer, we accosted them, as follows:

Christians. Good morning, kind friends, and may we ask your names and destination, for we too are pilgrims?

Pilgrims. Good morning, dear friends; we are a company of evangelical Protestants bearing the names of Presbyterians, Methodists, Congregationalists, Baptists, etc., and our destination is the town of Federation, which lies along this way out in the distance. We would be glad to have you join us if you are traveling in that direction. And may we ask your names?

Christians. We are Christians only, having given up other names, and we are indeed traveling in that direction, but our destination is the city that lieth next beyond that of Federation, even the City of Unity, but the road that leadeth thither goes by way of the town whither you are traveling. We should be glad not only to enjoy your company as far as Federation, but we would rejoice to have you go with us to the goodly City of Unity. Our Master, whom we serve, bade us go thither and dwell, among the last words he uttered when on earth.

Protestant Pilgrims. We have also heard that it is a beautiful city, but we learn, also, that it is on a high mountain and that there are many difficult streams to cross before reaching there, and we thought it safer to make our destination the City of Federation, which we are convinced is far better than the City of Division, where we have been dwelling, with its rivalries, competition and strife. While we do not see our way at present to go so far as the City of Unity, we shall be glad to have your company as far as we can go in that direction.

Christians. Your proposition is fraternal and reasonable. We cannot ask you to pledge yourselves to go further than you see to be practicable and wise. We shall be glad to have you as fellow pilgrims, and we will help each other on our journey, as far as we can go together, and we shall hope and pray that when you reach your destination, the way leading to Unity will not seem to present so many insuperable obstacles as it does now. Our purpose is immovable to not cease our journey until we reach the fair City of Unity, where we learn there are no walls of division, no strife between brethren, but where all serve one common Master and all are brethren.

Protestant Pilgrims. Very good, brethren, we will then journey together, for there are many perils along the way and dangerous foes to be overcome. What matters it if we do not see alike in everything? We have much in common, and have the same ultimate destination, and we can afford to have charity one toward another while we admonish each other, and each try to teach the other the way of the Lord more perfectly.

Christians. We cannot do otherwise and be true to the mission on which our King has sent us, than to walk together and work together, and make war against common foes together, with all who love our common Lord and Master, in so far as we may do so without surrendering our own conscience or being false to the work which has been committed to us. Let us be on our journey, for see! there are foes lying in wait along the way, and we must marshal our forces to overcome them.

And so the united company advanced together, singing as they marched,

"Blest be the tie that binds,
Our hearts in Christian love."

On reaching the brow of a distant hill and looking back, a small group of pilgrims, it was noticed, was left behind. A deputation was sent back to learn why they were not marching with their brethren. Some said they would not keep company with any people who were not going as far as they were; that it would compromise their position. Others said that they had all they could do in looking after their denominational interests and that they had no time and strength left for such a Utopian scheme as federation; besides, they did not like to be keeping company with that class of Christians who were bent on going so far as Christian Unity, which they believed to be wholly impracticable. After expostulating with them, the deputation returned to their friends, and the halting pilgrims went back each to his own party.

Your correspondent has joined the pilgrim hosts marching to the City of Unity by way of the City of Federation, and if permitted I will be glad to report, from time to time, any experiences of interest which we may have along the way.

TRAVELER.

Worry

A Sure Starter for Ill Health.

Useless worry (a form of nervousness) is indirectly the result (through the nerves) of improper feeding. A furniture man of Memphis says:

"About a year ago I was afflicted with nervous spells, would worry so over trivial things.

"I went to consult one of the best physicians in Memphis and he asked among many questions if I drank coffee.

"His advice was: 'Go to some provision store and get a box of Postum, drink it in place of coffee and as you are confined to your desk to a great extent try and get out in the open air as much as possible.' I followed his instructions regarding the Postum.

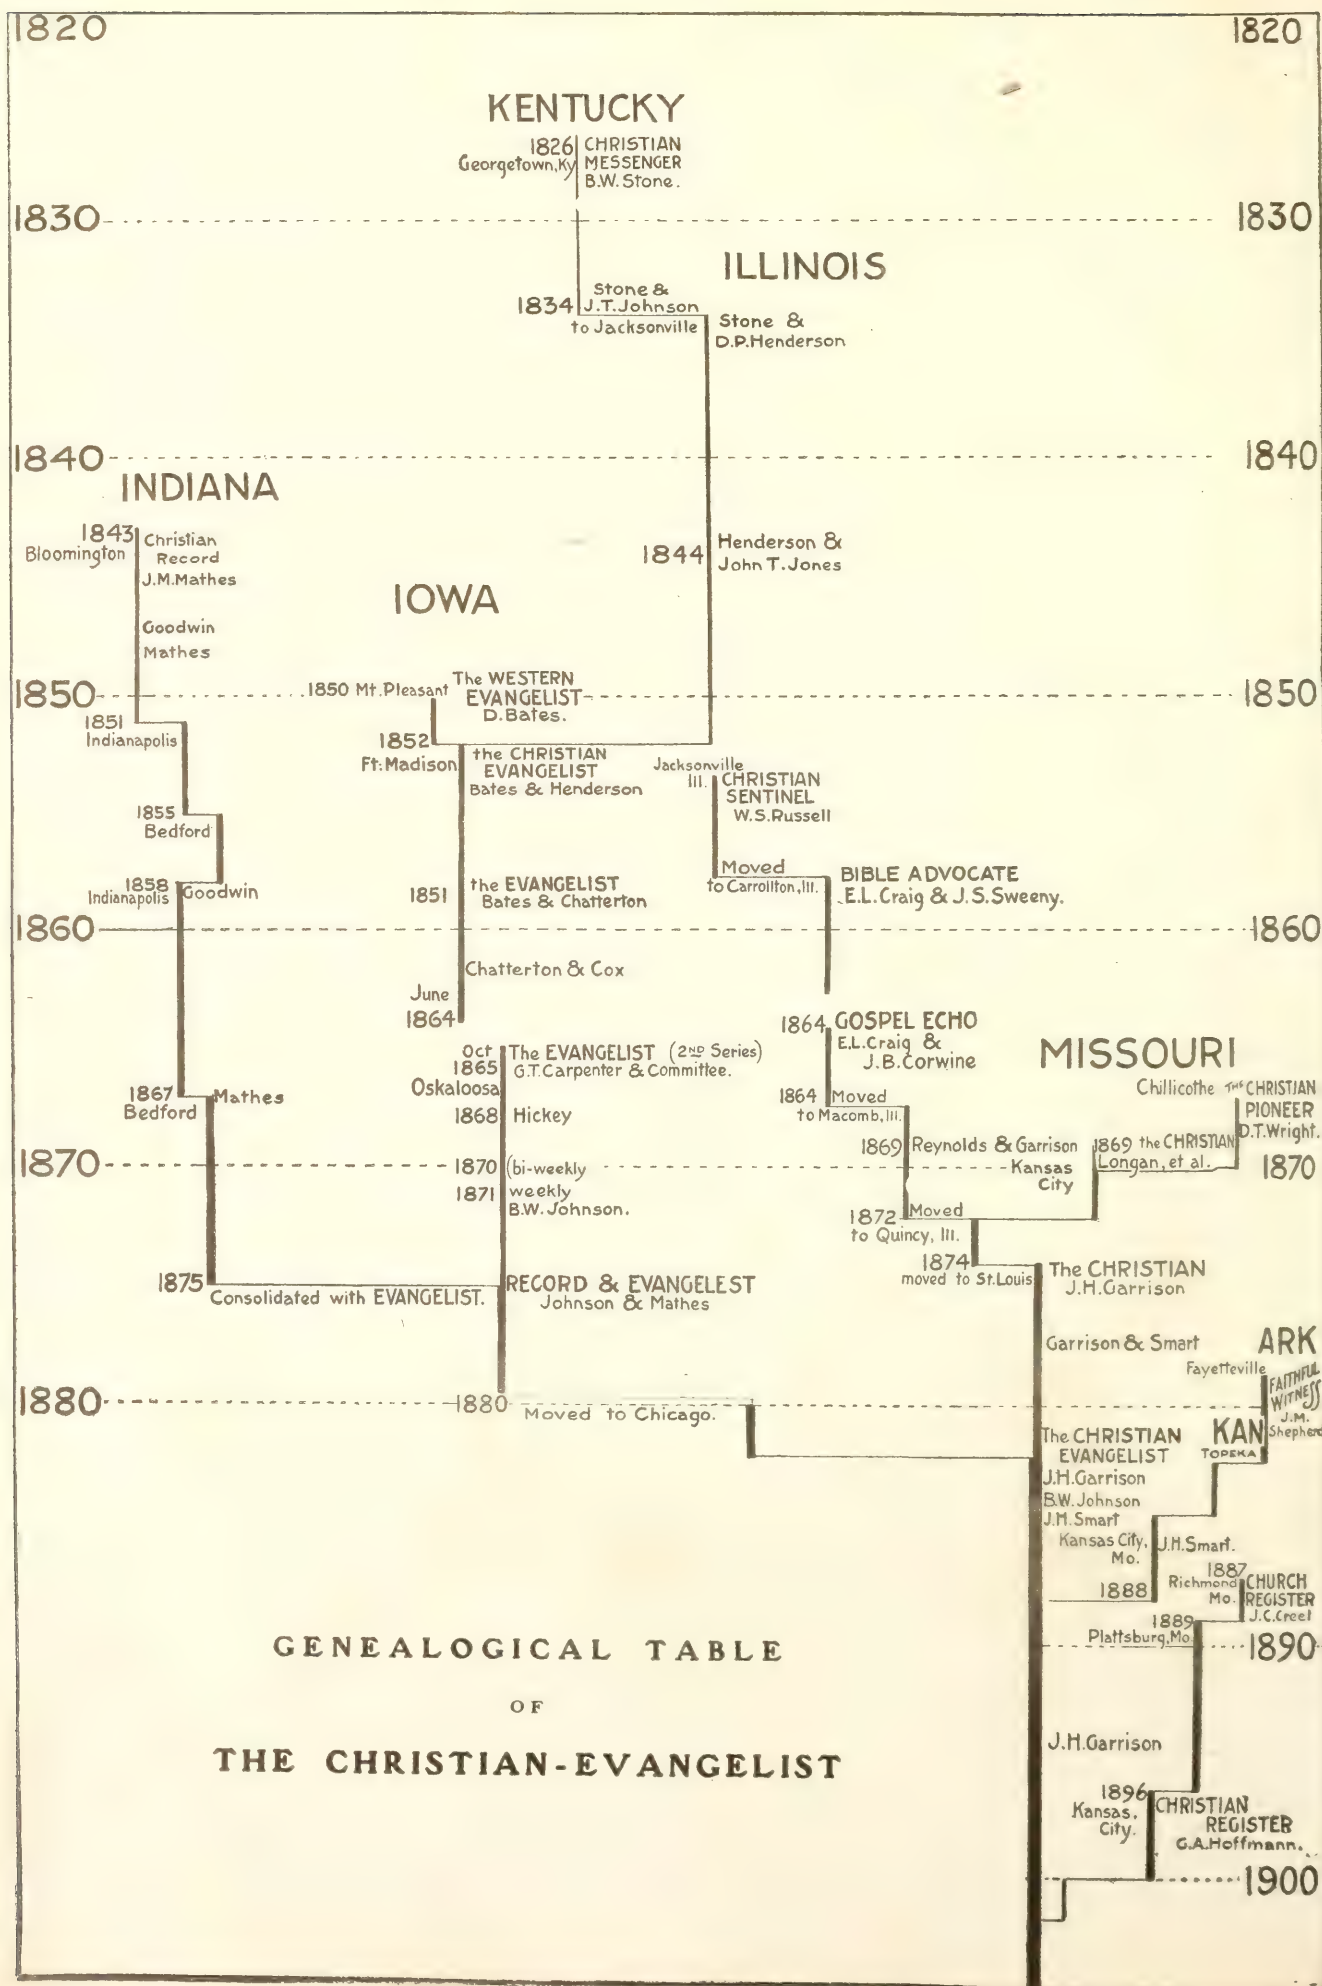

"At that time my weight was 142 and I was taking all kinds of drugs and medicines to brace me up but all failed; to-day I weigh 165 and all of my old troubles are gone, and all the credit is due to having followed this wise physician's advice and cut off the coffee and using Postum in its place.

"I now consider my health perfect. I am willing to go before a notary public and testify that it was all due to my having used Postum in place of coffee." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason for quitting the drug-drink coffee, and there's a reason for drinking Postum. Trial 10 days proves them all.

Look in each package for a copy of the famous little book, "The road to Wellville."

The Christian-Evangelist and Its Predecessors

CHRISTIAN MESSENGER.

In the year 1826, only three years after the Christian Baptist was started among the hills of West Virginia, a monthly was issued at Georgetown, Ky., under the name of the Christian Messenger. Its first editor was B. W. Stone, the leader of the reformatory movement in the west. He continued to conduct it alone until 1832, and then John T. Johnson became an associate editor. Two years later, in 1834, Stone moved to Jacksonville, Ill., and the Messenger was henceforth published from that place. Shortly after, D. P. Henderson was associated with him in the enterprise. Ten years later, in 1844, B. W. Stone went to his rest, and the Christian Messenger was continued under the editorial charge of Brother Henderson and John T. Jones. It was the Christian Messenger's influence, good will and assets that were carried to the Evangelist by D. P. Henderson published it as a monthly at Bedford, from that time until 1875, when it was consolidated with The Evangelist of Oskaloosa, Iowa. Then for a time it was published simultaneously from Oskaloosa and Bedford, under the title of Record and Evangelist, J. M. Mathes and G. T. Carpenter, as editors. It then became swallowed up in the changes that followed, and the original name and title was lost in the consolidation of the Christian and Evangelist.

D. P. HENDERSON.

Such, in the briefest form possible, is the story of the origin, the migrations, the changes that took place in the editing and publishing of the Christian Record for more than thirty years. As will be seen two names are inseparably linked with that history, the names of James M. Mathes and Elijah Goodwin. They were able, devoted, true and above all else, good men. They were among the pioneer preachers of the Disciples in Indiana and left an impress that will abide for generations to come. In many aspects of their lives they then enlarged to thirty-six pages. It was at first published at Bloomington, Ind. In July, 1847, when the paper was four years old, with a circulation of 3,500 copies, Elijah Goodwin became a joint-editor and proprietor with Mr. Mathes in the paper. This relation continued until December, 1848, when it was found that the paper could not support two families and Goodwin retired. In May, 1851, the place of publication was changed to Indianapolis and Mr. Mathes moved to that city. The paper was issued from Indianapolis until November, 1855, when it was moved to Bedford, though part of the work was done at Indianapolis. In 1858, Mathes sold out to Goodwin, who edited and published the paper in Indianapolis from January, 1859, to January, 1863, four years as a monthly; in 1864 it was published in a monthly and weekly form, and in 1865 in a weekly form only. The inauguration of The Standard at Cincinnati did not seem to leave any place for a weekly paper in Indiana, so in 1857, Mr. Mathes again secured control and when he was associated with Daniel Bates (in 1852) and the joint paper took the name of the Christian Evangelist. (Editorial, CHRISTIAN EVANGELIST, Jan. 1, 1885).

B. W. STONE.

JOHN T. JOHNSON.

THE CHRISTIAN RECORD.

By D. R. Lucas.

In an old copy of the Christian Record for January, 1855, James M. Mathes, the editor, writes:

"This is our thirteenth annual salutation. In the year 1843, we commenced the publication of the Christian Record, because we thought such a work was needed by the brethren in Indiana. . . . The Record, at present, has, we suppose, the largest circulation of any periodical among us except the Millennial Harbinger."

These are the words of the man who started the Record on its career in July, 1843. It was a monthly pamphlet of twenty-four pages for four years, and was were alike. They were neither of them polished writers, but possessed the faculty of expressing in plain and clearly understood words, the ideas they wished to convey. As I write this, a dozen volumes of the Record, published from 1850, to 1862, lie before me, and it is only necessary to open and read them to see how much of their lives went into the work committed to their hands. The man who edits and directs the policy of a religious paper has a great and continually abiding responsibility, and these men were tried and not found wanting.

JOHN T. JONES.

In the dark days when the life of the country was hanging in the balance, the Record gave forth no uncertain sound. At that time, Elijah Goodwin was the editor and he said, "The government has been assailed, the flag has been dishonored and trampled in the dust, and duty requires us to sustain the government, peaceably if we can, forcibly, if we must." Looking back at it now, they seem as if they were the words to say, but those who lived then, know that they were only possible to a man of convictions with the courage to express them.

James M. Mathes was born July 8, 1808, in Jefferson county, Kentucky, but came to Owen county, Indiana, with his parents when but a youth, and the state was ever afterward his home until his death, which occurred at Bedford, in June, 1892, at the ripe age of 84 years. In addition to his labors as an editor, he was an efficient evangelist, and being one of the first to be baptized in 1827, on a confession of his faith, without being required to relate an experience as to the workings of his mind, he was enabled to lead thousands into the true light of the gospel plan of salvation as one that was "freeborn" into the kingdom of God.

Elijah Goodwin was born Jan. 16, 1807, in Champaign Co., Ohio, but came to Daviess Co., Indiana, with his parents, and Indiana was his home and the scene of his labors until near the close of his life. His death occurred Oct. 7, 1879. He was a good evangelist, an excellent pastor, having served at Madison, Bloomington, Indianapolis, and other points. He wrote and published a book of sermons called "The Family Companion," which had a large circulation.

J. M. MATHES.

To enumerate the names of the men whose pens graced the pages of the Record, would be to name every prominent preacher and writer among the Disciples, especially in Indiana. For some time, while the paper was published at Indianapolis, Joseph M. Tilford was the manager and financial agent. As an illustration, take the volume for 1854; there are articles from the pens of Elijah Martindale, Samuel K. Hoshour, Robert Milligan, Corbly Martin, Butler K. Smith, John Mavity, Michael Combs, George Campbell, Aaron Walker, William Dowling, T. J. Edmunson, B. M. Blount, James Lilly, J. B. Wilmoth, Orid Butler, Perry Hall, L. H. Jameson, and others, several letters from J. T. Barclay, missionary to Jerusalem, sermon and addresses by Dr. John Young, Dr. S. E. Shepherd, and Jacob Wright, beside the editorials, news from the churches, answers to queries, obituaries and miscellaneous items.

ELIJAH GOODWIN.

In 1855 we find the additional names of John F. Rowe, Charles D. Hurlbutt, James L. Thornberry, J. R. Frame and A. S. Hayden, with sermons or addresses by Dr. L. L. Pinkerton, B. W. Stone, (delivered in 1821) Benjamin Franklin and S. S. Church.

In 1856 and 1857 we find the additional names of A. R. Burton, J. R. Challin, C. L. Loos, A. Chatterton, Joseph Pagin, W. B. F. Treat, B. F. Hall, Isaac Eriett, F. W. Eamons and Elisha Scott, with addresses by A. Campbell, James Challen, D. S. Burnet, A. R. Burton, and Mrs. N. E. Burus, now Mrs. N. E. Atkinson, president of the Christian Woman's Board of Missions.

The Record had, in the nature of things in the progress of the times, to give up its field to other papers and its name no longer adorns the page as a representative periodical, yet we can ask no higher good for those that survive, for the CHRISTIAN EVANGELIST, than to be conducted by men of so earnest a purpose and so kindly a spirit as the men whose names are linked with the fame of the Christian Record.

DANIEL BATES.

THE EVANGELIST.

The First Twenty-two Years.

By Allen Hickey.

The first volume of The Evangelist was published at Mount Pleasant, Iowa, in 1850, Daniel Bates editor and Arthur Miller and Aaron Chatterton assistant editors. We have not found the first three volumes. On the title page of 1853 volumes we read, "The Christian Evangelist, Daniel Bates and D. Pat. Henderson editors and proprietors, Vol. IV, 1853, Fort Madison, Iowa, and Canton, Mo." It was a neat 32 page monthly. "Vol. IV, 1853" shows that "Vol. I" was printed in 1850. Bates and Henderson were editors and proprietors until 1859, when we find the word "Christian" dropped from the name. It was "The Evangelist, edited and published by Daniel Bates and A. Chatterton." In 1860 it was "The Evangelist, conducted by A. Chatterton, assisted by D. Bates." In 1861 it was "conducted by A. Chatterton, co-editor J. W. Cox." It was "conducted by A. Chatterton" through 1862, 1863 and until the

ALLEN HICKEY.

June number 1864, Vol. XV, No. 6, which contains Brother Chatterton's "valedictory." After nearly fifteen years as contributor, assistant editor and editor-in-chief, "his work well done, his race well run, his crown well won," he entered into rest.

When Chatterton died, The Evangelist died, and there was an interval of more than a year before it was revived. It appeared as "The Evangelist, Second Series, Vol. I, No. 1, Oskaloosa, Iowa, October, 1866, edited and published by G. T. Carpenter, James Brown, W. J. Carpenter, N. A. McConnell, J. E. Gaston, Jonas Hartzel, committee." The "committee" had been appointed by the State Meeting, held that year at Oskaloosa. G. T. Carpenter was editor and practically the proprietor. On the title page of the January number, 1868, we read, "The Evangelist, edited and published by G. T. Carpenter and Allen Hickey." With the July number Hickey assumed the financial management. The funds on hand were easily managed—there wasn't a dollar. Carpenter continued as co-editor. In the October number, 1868, was printed his "card" withdrawing from editorial connection with the paper, and Hickey was left as editor and proprietor of The Evangelist.

In October, 1868, the circulation of The Evangelist was less than 600. In the days of Bates and Chatterton, the circulation was about equal in each of the three states of Illinois, Iowa and Missouri, perhaps the largest in Missouri. When it was suspended by the death of Chatterton it lost, and did not regain its circulation in Illinois and Missouri. It regained its Iowa subscribers very slowly—they had lost a half year's subscription when Chatterton died. The new editor, with the help of his girls, did the folding, stitching and mailing. The bookkeeping was not a very heavy job. The money he received for preaching paid the printer, and The Evangelist lived and gained a few subscribers. At the close of the year 1869, there were about a thousand all of whom were educated in my father's high school and academy, from which institution graduated the late General Sherman, and his brother, the Hon. John Sherman, senator from Ohio and secretary of state, and many other eminent Americans. My father, the late Professor Samuel L. Howe, conducted his academy in Ohio and Iowa, nearly seventy years, and the entire Bates family were trained and instructed by him. Associated with Brother Bates, as co-editors, were Arthur Miller, J. W. Kane and A. Chatterton, all strong, able and eloquent advocates of the restoration of primitive Christianity. Arthur Miller was the poet of this trenchant editorial combination, and for several years his poems adorned the pages of this really able and remarkable exponent of the faith of the Christian Church. For two years at least, and perhaps longer, the paper was called the Western Evangelist, and was finally removed to Ft. Madison. [The volume of 1853, published at Ft. Madison by Bates and Henderson was called 'The Christian Evangelist.'—A. H.] How well I personally remember its first editor and founder, although nearly fifty-four years have passed away since I last looked upon the venerable and Christ-like features of Daniel Bates! He was one of the purest, one of the most upright men I ever knew. He was a grave, silent, dignified man, yet the very personification of kindness. As he was quite deaf, he used an ear-trumpet, which, to us boys, was a never-ending subject of wonderment and surprise.

B. W. JOHNSON.

Page after page of his editorial articles was put into type by my own hand, and column after column of "proof," read and revised by him, were corrected by my own hand, over half a century ago.

He did not use tobacco in any form, and was a pronounced enemy of every form of intemperance. He discouraged the use of alcohol even as a medicine. Many strong and eloquent articles on temperance were penned by the hand of this devoted and consecrated minister of our faith. He died at the residence of his son, Horatio Bates, in Memphis, Tenn., in 1877, almost ninety years of age, a golden sheaf, fully ripened for the harvest, and ready for his glorious reward.

PROF. W. P. HOWE.

names on the mailing list. The December number appeared in newspaper form, four large pages. It was published biweekly during 1870; at the end of that year there were 1,700 subscribers. During 1871 it was published weekly and reached a circulation of 2,700. Hickey quit at the end of 1871.

From Professor W. P. Howe.

[The following is copied from a letter written from Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, Dec. 26, 1903, by Prof. W. P. Howe, late member faculty Mt. Pleasant High School and Female Seminary, Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, to Allen Hickey.]

The Christian Evangelist was started in Mt. Pleasant in January, 1850, fifty-four years ago. I was a compositor and proof-reader on the paper. It was edited and owned by Daniel Bates, one of the pioneer ministers of our people, and a great, grand and good man in every sense of the word. He had an exceedingly bright and interesting family of boys and girls,

B. J. RADFORD.

D. T. WRIGHT.

The Weekly Evangelist.

[The following brief account of the Evangelist from 1871 until its consolidation with the Christian in 1882 was written by G. T. Carpenter and published in the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, Jan. 1, 1885.]

About 1871 the paper which Allen Hickey had published one year as a bi-weekly was converted into an eight-page weekly. During the summer B. W. Johnson was associated as one of the editors. At the end of the first volume [of the weekly] Brother Hickey retired and B. W. Johnson became sole editor, which position he filled for nearly two years. During this period the paper ran up to 4,000 circulation. At this time the latter sold out to G. T. Carpenter, who became editor. A little later a stock company was formed under the name of the Central Book Concern, which became the publisher.

The Christian Record, a monthly, published at Bedford, Ind., by J. M. Mathes, was united with the Evangelist, Brother Mathes became an editor and the paper took the name of Record and Evangelist.

In the spring of 1877 the stock company, which was in an embarrassed condition, sold out to Carpenter, Call and Johnson, who formed a partnership and continued the book and publishing business, using the old name of Central Book Concern as a style, though forming a new and distinct firm. A year or so later, G. T. Carpenter sold out, that he might accept the presidency of Oskaloosa College. The facilities demanded by the growing business, especially the large book publishing business that had grown up, not being provided at Oskaloosa, in 1880 the place of publication was transferred to Chicago, and the paper was issued under the name of The Evangelist, with B. W. Johnson and B. J. Radford as editors. In 1882 a combination was effected with the Christian, of St. Louis, the publishing interests were united under the name of the Christian Publishing Company, and the united paper called the CHRISTIAN EVANGELIST.

G. W. LONGAN.

THE CHRISTIAN. (KANSAS CITY.)

The Genesis.

By T. P. Haley.

In the summer of 1869 I returned to Missouri after a five years' sojourn in Louisville, Ky. The first grand meeting of the brotherhood of Missouri which I attended after my return, was the "State Meeting," held, I think, in September of that year in Mason City. This was, I think, the second "State Meeting" held after the war, one having been held the year previous at Columbia.

The celebrated "Louisville Plan" of church co-operation for missionary work was about to be inaugurated. The meeting employed A. B. Jones as corresponding secretary, or rather as agent of the convention, to submit the matter to the churches, organize and inaugurate district and state co-operation, the preachers and the brethren present pledging his salary.

It was felt that the peculiar condition of the churches in the state demanded a weekly paper, which should be a medium of rapid communication between the brethren and the organ of these new enterprises, as well as an advocate of New Testament faith and order among the churches. It is true that we had the Christian Pioneer, which I believe was a monthly, published at Chillicothe, Mo., by D. T. Wright, but it was not thought to meet the demands of the times. The American Christian Review, The Apostolic Times, The Christian Standard, each had some readers in the churches. These were not agreed with one another, and their readers were much divided in sentiment, on many questions of great practical moment.

ALEXANDER PROCTER.

It was felt to be an impossibility to carry forward any great work to completion or success with our working forces so divided.

With a desire for a paper on which the Missouri brotherhood could unite, especially with the hope of uniting our preachers, and to have an organ for our new enterprise, the movement for inaugurating "The Christian" was made.

When the matter was thus under discussion at Macon City, Bros. Longan, Procter, Jones, H. H. Haley and others, who had thought it over and talked it over before my return to the state, invited me into the conference. When their reasons were laid before me, I agreed with them fully as to the necessity of such a movement, but knowing something of the labor and sacrifice of Bro. D. T. Wright, the editor of the Pioneer, and believing that the establishment of a new paper would be fatal to his paper, I declined to have anything to do with the new paper unless his interests were regarded. The brethren agreed that this was right, and made him a proposition to take a place on the new paper, which it was thought would secure him a competency. It was not until this offer was declined that final steps were taken to start the new paper. Sometime afterward, Alexander Procter, A. B. Jones, G. W. Longan, H. H. Haley and the writer met at Warrensburg, and, under the shade of the trees in Brother Longan's yard, discussed the matter over and over, and agreed upon a prospectus, and selected the editorial staff. I remember that the question of name occupied considerable time, and, after many suggestions and very full discussion, the name "The Christian" was chosen without a dissenting vote.

A. B. JONES.

T. P. HALEY.

Another question was whether it should be devoted to "the restoration of the ancient order of things," "primitive Christianity," or "New Testament Christianity." After much discussion it was unanimously voted that it should be devoted to the advocacy of "New Testament Christianity." I have not the prospectus before me, and write wholly from memory, but I remember that we had a long talk over the question of "tests of fellowship." My recollection is that the substance of the declaration on that subject was that "The Christian" will insist on "no tests of Christian fellowship, but such as are clearly stated in the New Testament Scriptures," and, strange to say, this was about the only statement in the document which was severely criticised. We all see the wisdom of this statement in the light of subsequent developments.

Following the example, perhaps, of the Apostolic Times, the prospectus announced a formidable array of names as editors: Geo. W. Longan, Alexander Procter, A. B. Jones, Ben H. Smith, Geo. W. Plattenburg, and T. P. Haley. Some of these rethren had some experience as writers or contributors, but not one had any editorial experience, unless indeed we count the experience of B. H. Smith as editor of a weekly political paper in his boyhood days, and that of the writer as editor of a Sunday-school paper called The Children's Friend. Bro. G. W. Longan was selected as the office editor and general manager, against his protest, not because of any special fitness for this work, but because he was the only one of the editors so situated that he could remove to Kansas City, at which place it was determined to publish the paper.

GEORGE PLATTENBURG.

A. B. Jones, of Liberty, Mo., the only man who, at that time was supposed to have any "financial sense" (Brother Smith had not then become a bank president), was to aid Brother Longan in the management of the paper as far as practicable.

The subscriptions to the paper came in encouragingly, and the first issue in due time made its appearance. It is not vanity to say that it was well received, and its editors were reasonably proud of its appearance and right well satisfied with its contents. The editors having no "press" of their own were compelled to have the printing done "out," that is by one of the secular papers of the city. And here the first trouble began. The work was not always well done, not always on time. The mailing had to be entrusted to the publishers for want of sufficient office force. Complaints began to come in of failure to receive the paper and agents grew discouraged.

The starting of "The Christian" had the effect on the Pioneer that was anticipated. Representatives of the paper came to Kansas City and turned over the subscription list and good will of the paper, on condition, I believe, that "The Christian" fill out the time of the subscribers. This increased the expenses of the paper, without increasing its revenue. The difficulties with the publishers, and in regard to the mailing continued, until finally Brothers Jones, Longan and Proctor, who were most familiar with the condition and prospects of the paper and who did the greater part of the labor, concluded it to be best to dispose of it, and an arrangement was made by which "The Christian" was consolidated with The Gospel Echo, then published at Macomb, Ill., by J. C. Reynolds and J. H. Garrison. The consolidated paper, under the title of Gospel Echo and Christian was removed to Quincy, Ill., where, after awhile, it assumed the name of "The Christian" again, and was finally removed to St. Louis.

Whatever may have been the success or failures of "The Christian" in the hands of the original founders, its establishment marks a new era in the progress of our cause in Missouri, and no one of the editors had ever had any just cause to regret his connection with it.

A Supplementary Word.

[Many years ago, G. W. Longan in writing of the founding of The Christian, the prospectus of which was signed by Longan, Procter, T. P. Haley and A. B. Jones (in the other given), and of his own lack of special fitness for the office of editor, wrote as follows:]

The fact is, as I now believe, that a more delectable company of innocents never embarked in such an enterprise. Perhaps it may be thought that I ought to except Brother Jones, but, upon the whole, I think not. I am pretty sure he is willing to stand or fall, in this case, with the rest of us. Anyway, I am not inclined to make an exception in his favor. I could defend myself, if pushed to the wall, but have no desire to be pushed. We had a large faith, and that was our whole stock-in-trade. . . . It was in the nature of things that our enterprise should scarcely succeed. It is easy to see it now. The permanent establishment of a first-class religious paper is impossible without an ample money foundation. In our inexperience we did not understand this. But no one of the four, or the six, will ever be caught napping in that way again. We have had, at least, sense enough to learn in the school of experience, and not every one has even so much as that. Take my word for it, not one of these burned innocents will again put his hand in that particular fire.—(CHRISTIAN EVANGELIST, Jan. 15, 1885)

J. B. CORWINE.

J. C. REYNOLDS.

THE GOSPEL ECHO.

The Earliest Days.

By J. B. Corwine.

It has occurred to me to remind you of a branch—really, a very small twig as compared with the metropolitan character and influence of the current paper—that came forth from Carrollton, Ill., in the early 60's, and owned and edited by E. L. Craig. Brother Craig was a man of lovable spirit, and, while true to the plea of our people, and brave in its defense, was not in any sense a sectarian. For those days of hot battle with constantly and defiantly arranged denominationalism, he was a prince for his fine carriage and conduct in the midst of the greatest strife.

I must be permitted to say, at the risk of whatever show of egotism goes with it, that I had a most honorable connection with the enterprise—that of "co-editor." But it was more a matter of encouragement to a young man of modest purpose, on the part of the considerate "editor and proprietor," than the recognition of any merit. Located as I was within a few hours, by private conveyance, of the good man, with a daily mail, which for those days and in that region was unusual, the exchanges, religious and secular, were my portion. And of these facts and in those days "Watch Notes, by Julian," was born.

As a contribution to the great paper of the present, it was without pretensions, but devoted unselfishly to the interests of a people then young, weak and unpopular, but brave and inspired with a most holy purpose. To change the figure, while it simply twinkled as a "little star" in the then distant western sky, its circuit distinct but humble, it "shed its little light" constantly if not brilliantly.

[The founding of this little paper by E. L. Craig at Carrollton, Ill., in 1864, is the point from which THE CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST counts its forty years of continuous publication.—EDITOR.]

A. F. SMITH.

Statement From J. C. Reynolds.

Bro. J. C. Reynolds, through whose influence and at whose solicitation the editor of this paper, on leaving college, entered the field of religious journalism in connection with him—being now convalescent from a recent serious illness, is able to write only a few lines. In a letter to the editor of this paper, he says: "The Gospel Echo never had any predecessors, only in this sense, that Bro. E. L. Craig who began the Gospel Echo at Carrollton in January, 1834, from which the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST dates its beginning, had before that time, while he lived in Jacksonville, about 1860, published a magazine called the Bible Advocate. Had the Gospel Echo been a continuation of the Bible Advocate, it would have numbered its volumes accordingly, as the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST has from the Gospel Echo. John Sweeney was associated with Brother Craig in the Advocate. The Gospel Echo had no more connection with any paper published in Illinois or elsewhere, than it had with the Harbinger, up to the time I took it to Macomb, January, 1868. You know all about the changes since that time. Several attempts had been made to publish a Christian paper, but they all died in infancy or early childhood. I wish you great success in getting out your historical issue. The CHRISTIAN EVANGELIST is our best paper now. I wish it and its editors great success."

THE CHRISTIAN. (ST. LOUIS.)

"As It Was in the Beginning."

By A. F. Smith.

My connection with the enterprise of establishing a religious journal in St. Louis, was apparently accidental. Brother Garrison and I first met at the Missouri state convention held at Sedalia. Before that time, I suppose, he had never heard my name. For some unexplained reason, however, he requested me to take service with him in the office of the "Gospel Echo and Christian," then published from Quincy, Ill. In the verdancy of my inexperience, I accepted this offer.

Soon after this engagement was made, it was my good fortune to be of personal service to Brother Garrison. As I felt then, so I feel now, that his requital of that favor was kindly and generous. On his own volition, and without speaking to me of his purpose, he made me associate editor of the paper. In this position I served during the closing days of the "Gospel Echo and Christian," at Quincy.

In this way I was led to take part in the organization of a company to publish "The Christian" from St. Louis. I count this one of the joys of my life. There is always a quiet gratulation that no changed condition can take this pleasure from me. To the readers of the present day, I am a stranger; but in the youth of this paper, in the day that it was sore distraught, I was the second of two men who looked heart-breaking disaster in the face—and won. At this time, however, looking across the silence of so many years, I am moved to speak of only two experiences that were the heritage of those busy weeks.

MR. AND MRS. J. H. SMART.

After the company was organized, the first serious duty was to move the paper from Quincy to St. Louis. We were ambitious to make this change of base without missing the publication of a single number. Brother Garrison chose to remain in Quincy to issue the last "Gospel Echo;" I went to St. Louis to make all preparations for bringing out the first number of "The Christian." I reached the city at night. How it appealed to my imaginations! The flickering lights as far as the eye could reach, the narrow sea of drifting faces, a desolate feeling of utter loneliness—all conspired to bewilder and subdue me. How did I escape from this great hungry city, green country boy that I was?

When morning came, the serious difficulties of my task absorbed me. Strange as it may seem, everything that belonged to the mechanical part of the paper had to be created. Our plan of paper appeared to depart from all ordinary sizes of material carried in stock by the largest houses. I was told that everything must be made,

Then came days of deferred promises. I had a feeling that the psalmist had been in the newspaper business when he said in haste that all men are liars. In irritation and suspense on my part, the days went by.

At the close of the week Brother Garrison came, pale and tired through the stress of work. There was no magic in his word or touch to quicken the slow process of filling orders for our material. It was midnight of Friday, one week late, when the last papers of the issue were ready to mail. The expressmen had finished their day's work and were gone. We faced the inevitable, and carried the mail bags to the post office on our shoulders, after running the gauntlet of the police, who at first questioned our business.

The other incident to which I shall refer, is our experience during the panic. These days were burned into my very soul. It was here, too, that I learned some salutary lessons. It was evident, during these dark hours, that the ordinary man has just enough religion to find fault. On the other hand, there were conspicuous exceptions to this statement. These exceptions make life beautiful, and create the necessity of faith in the race's immortality. No earthly life is long enough to give these splendid spirits a compensating reward.

There were two causes that led almost to our undoing: we bought a large printing office; and the panic came. We expected to pay for this office by a five per cent assessment on our stockholders. At that time only a small part of the capital stock had been called in. The panic was the unexpected condition. It furnished a sound excuse for many of the stockholders not to pay their assessments. It was during our struggle to meet this sudden emergency that the specter of ruin sat in our office through one endless week. To this day I can see his grim face. To this day I believe that anguish has a tremendous power to isolate. The two occupants of that forlorn office were one group against the whole world for the other.

Our darkest day was Saturday. If we could get through this day, if we could meet our obligations in bank before three o'clock, the battle would be won. It was the last minute of the last hour when I took up our notes. It was a race with ruin, but we were the swifter.

J. M. TRIPLE.

When I returned to the office and told Brother Garrison that we were successful, his haggard face hardly changed, and he only said, "I must go to my wife." This was truly right, for, in those dark hours of absence, his second son was born. I went to my room and threw myself on the bed without undressing. The tension of a sleepless week was broken, and I did not awake until the Lord's day's sun was shining in my face. To my great astonishment, I found my head sprinkled with grey hairs. These I have cherished as moments of the panic.

In conclusion, I wish to say one thing personal. There are no words of praise and love of which I would stint Brother Garrison. He has from me everything good and affectionate that I can say. I have read some criticisms of him in other papers, but I know the writer was not his workmate through the panic. The fires of that experience have burned from me all censure, and have left me to him loyal and loving. In this new year I wish this Christian gentleman and loyal friend all happiness and all health. May God bless him!

The First St. Louis Issue.

By Robt. L. McHatton.

J. H. Garrison and J. C. Reynolds moved "The Christian" from Quincy, Ill., to St. Louis, Mo., with but little encouragement from the latter place. Our cause was weak in the city. There was anything but friendly feeling among the three small churches. There was no interest in the general work of the brotherhood. In fact, a certain element was very indifferent—even to a wish that the paper remain away from "the future great." It required men of faith and courage to venture on such a cold prospect. Only for the backing of the country churches in Illinois and Missouri was this move possible. The forming of The Christian Publishing Company was a wise act. A few men in the Central Church subscribed for stock in limited shares. Brother Reynolds was in the field securing subscribers and selling stock, and I know of no man who could have succeeded better. The great burden of responsibility fell on the shoulders of young Brother Garrison. And it was a burden—a heavy burden. Many a time he had to carry the burden alone as far as human hand was lifted. No man, save by the presence of God, could endure the anxiety and worry of those dawning days.

Though a boy in my teens, I was engaged as clerk of the new company. The first place we transacted business was in the back parlor of a house in a long row of dwellings on Chestnut Street between Eleventh and Twelfth. In this rear room I made out the certificates of stock. This was the bedroom of the editor and another brother whom I do not call to mind. We worked here about two days. I think the election of directors occurred in the hall of the Central Church. The officers chosen were: Enos Campbell, president; C. G. McHatton, vice president; A. F. Smith,

W. W. HOPKINS.

Dick mailer on left arm tabbing papers.

It was a hard job, but at last we tabbed or wrote all the names. Into the United States sacks we piled the packages. It was too late to get a wagon, but these papers must go on the morning train. So we made the sacks one-half empty and I shouldered them and carried them to the post office, Third and Olive. This was no burden to me, for was I not helping to send the dear old gospel news to the brethren? After all these years, I count it an honor to have done this service. I believed in the Christian churches then, and I do so now, and there is no service too hard nor a gift too sacred for our cause.

So bending under the weight of good news, I trudged down the narrow stairway and made good speed on the level until I came to climb the hill at Second Street. Here a new hindrance arose in a uniformed guardian of the law.

"Hey, young feller, what you got in that sack?"

"The first issue of 'The Christian.'"

"What is that ye say? That won't do at this time of night. Ye can't fool me about being a Christian."

"I have here a newspaper, 'The Christian,' which I am taking to the post office."

"Down wid that sack. Open it."

The noble Roman from the Emerald Isle went with me to the old stone post office, where we entered by the alley, and soon the clerks were distributing the first number of "The Christian." It was not much to do that night, but now, I trow, the mail men are glad when the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST is in the pouches, for it is a task to throw each bundle for a weekly whose circulation is limited only by the extent of the world's mail facilities. I am not sure but that Brother A. F. Smith helped to mail this paper. It has been many a day since the editors have dignified the mailing department, but even now, if necessity required, I am sure they could descend from the sanctum, stamp the names, wrap the papers and load them into the wagons.

Those early days were trying on the office men, for the expenses were great and secretary. A fine office was rented in the St. Louis Life Building, Sixth and Locust. This was the finest office block in the city. From our window we could look across the Mississippi into Illinois. It was a glorious picture we had one day at the closing of a storm, with rainbow spanning East St. Louis and the beautiful fields beyond. There was but little furniture in this room—four chairs, two desks and a table, and a good carpet covering one-half the floor.

(Continued on page 110.)

B. J. PINKERTON.

The first issue of "The Christian" was printed on the third floor of the building on the northeast corner of Main and Olive, seven blocks from the office. Copy and proof had to be carried both ways, and the men were new and we were late in getting it out. Then the mailing was a contract—a big contract, and it carried us far into the night. The mail list had been printed on paper that absorbed the paste, and every time we cut a name, it stuck to the cutter rather than to the paper. I worked that machine the greater part of the time. Then Brother Garrison tried his hand. It was a picture to see the dignified, porty young editor on the high stool with the

J. J. HALEY.

BIRTHDAY GREETINGS

From the Mayor of St. Louis.

REV. J. H. GARRISON, EDITOR CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, Dear Sir: I take pleasure in saying that I feel the citizens of St. Louis are deserving of sincere congratulation, outgrowing from the fact that a paper of the sterling quality evidenced in the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, has been in existence in their midst for thirty years past. Let me express the hope that its future may be as successful and as satisfactory as its past.

Very truly,

ROLLA WELLS,
Mayor of St. Louis.

The University of Missouri.

From my heart I congratulate the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST upon the completion of its fortieth volume and the filling out of its thirtieth year in St. Louis. Who can calculate the good that this journal has done in forty years? May its days be greatly prolonged and may its usefulness ever increase! I hope that, with all journals in Missouri, religious and secular, it may give some of its time and attention to the problem of how our schools, state, municipal, and private, may become strongholds of righteousness as well as strongholds of intellectuality.

R. H. JESSE, President University of Missouri.

Columbia, Mo.

A Voice From Congress.

DR. J. H. GARRISON, DEAR BROTHER: I congratulate you and the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST upon the completion of its fortieth volume. I hailed the consolidation of The Christian and The Evangelist at the time as a most fortunate event for our people. It is a great paper. I have taken it and, what's more, read it, for years, and have been much benefited and enlightened thereby. Wishing both you and the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST many happy returns, I am,

Your friend,

CHAMP CLARK.

House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C.

An Honest Conviction.

It gives me very great pleasure to extend my hearty congratulation to the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST on an anniversary which has back of it so much splendid history and so many memories inspiring and thrilling. I have personally known of the work of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST since the days of my college experiences in Canton, Mo., as far back as 1881. It has seemed to me that the paper has made noticeably few mistakes, and that the general policy of the journal has been at all times worthy of commendation. I have said before that I regard the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST as the very best paper published among us. This is the expression of an honest conviction, based upon a rather careful study of the religious press as represented by the Disciples. I wish you continued success and prosperity.

Louisville, Ky.

E. L. POWELL.

Leader of the Chorus.

DEAR BROTHER GARRISON: I suppose that neither you nor your readers would miss my feeble voice if it should be absent from the grand chorus of congratulations which will make the glad music of your joyful anniversary number; but, my dear brother, I should miss it, and if you can give me a little corner, I want you to see that I am singing, even if nobody hears me. Whenever the great brotherhood unites in swelling "Happy Day" with the refrain of "Blessed be the Tie that Binds," I wish it to be understood that as long as I can whisper, I am in it. Indeed, you will be surprised to learn that, when properly supported, I am all sorts of a singer. Give me, as on this occasion, a few thousand Princess Songs and as many more good strong male voices, all in tune and time with me, and if I don't make "Well done, good and faithful servant," echo and re-echo around the world, I will never try to lead the grand chorus again!

Yes, dear Brother Garrison, that is the song we sing to-day; and the reason we sing it so well is because our hearts are in it. On subordinate and temporary issues, some of us have not agreed with you, but all of us have been helped by you, and all of us are grateful to you for your strengthening lessons from the Word and your deep insight into things spiritual and eternal. In times the most perilous, in temptations the most alluring, and under circumstances often the most trying, you have stood fast and been true, and have given us a paper worthy in dignity, in ability and in spirit, to represent a great people who are devoted, above all things, to a sacred cause committed to them by a divine Master. As one of the feeblest of these, I send you my grateful "well done" with a hearty God speed you.

Warrenton, Ga.

J. S. LAMAR.

"A Sweet Voice Amid Jarring Notes."

DEAR BROTHER GARRISON: I wish to heartily congratulate you on the completion of the fortieth volume of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. A paper that has lived forty years deserves immortality, and it will live forever even though you should not issue another number; the good it has already done will never die. Through all its fortunes I have followed it, and I have probably read something in every issue. It has frequently changed its form, but its pure, generous, Christ-like spirit has always remained the same. It has done more than any other agency known to me to cultivate a high spirit among the brethren. It has been a sweet voice among the jarring notes which I suppose must always accompany a movement which stands for freedom of thought, freedom of the press and the right of individual interpretation. Your own personal association with the paper has really made it what it has been. May you and it continue many years to plead for the spirit of truth as well as for the truth itself.

W. T. MOORE.

Columbia, Mo.

Manly and Spiritual Teaching.

It gives me pleasure to join your many thousands of friends in extending my heartiest congratulations to you on the completion of your forty years' work with the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. The first religious paper I ever read was the Gospel Echo, edited, as I now recall, by Bro. Elijah Craig assisted by my brother, John S. Sweeney, at Jacksonville, Ill. I followed it from Jacksonville to Carrollton, thence to Macomb, Quincy and St. Louis, where it is now the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. I feel that I owe much of my religious education to its manly and scriptural teachings. Forty years is a long period to serve in any useful life, but an especially long one to stand on the heights of a progressive movement and beckon a lagging world onward and upward to nobler and better things.

May the good Father of all continue his blessing and guidance through many years of usefulness in this world, and finally, through the gates into the everlasting city, is my sincere prayer.

Z. T. SWEENEY.

Columbus, Ind.

Source of Spiritual Food.

I have been a close reader of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST for a long time—ever since I began to take an interest in Christianity, and its weekly visits are looked forward to still with great interest and expectation. It has been a source of spiritual food to my heart and soul all these years. I love the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST.

Cincinnati, O.

J. H. FILLMORE.

A Distinct Individuality.

The CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST has had a long and honorable history and has filled a unique and important place in the literature of the Disciples of Christ. Every great paper has a distinct individuality, and this rule is conspicuously illustrated in the case of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. It has a spirit and temper peculiarly its own. In fact, its character has been largely molded by its one great editor, J. H. Garrison. His peculiar intellectual and spiritual qualities are noticeable in every number. It is broad, generous, philanthropic and magnanimous, and holds a warm place in the hearts of a large constituency among the Disciples. While it has pursued a very lenient course toward those among us who have been guilty of aberrancies from orthodox standards, yet it has ever been true to the cardinal principles of the great plea for which we plead.

E. V. ZOLLARS,
President Texas Christian University.

Christian Spirit.

I appreciate the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. I know that it has done and is doing great good. The paper has always had an admirable Christian spirit. I see much in all our papers that I do not endorse, but we all have a right to our opinion, and you always let both sides be heard.

St. Louis.

J. H. ALLEN.

A True Exponent.

The CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST is considered one of the great religious journals of this country. It is a prime favorite with the brotherhood of the Church of Christ, because during all the forty years of its existence it has been a true exponent of the best thought of the church. Dr. J. H. Garrison's work as editor has always been of the highest order of merit. It is great good fortune for the Church of Christ that he has been at the helm for thirty-five years, and I am sure that a grateful people will unite in the prayer that he may be spared to us many years more that the readers of this splendid organ of the church may continue to benefit by his wise and loving counsel. HILL M. BELL,
President of Drake University.

Aggressive and Progressive.

No doubt a host of friends all over the Union and abroad will hail with pleasure the fortieth anniversary of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. This paper has long been in the lead with our people, and its influence has never made for anything but aggressive, progressive and united Christianity. Its time-honored statement, set forth in the little poem which always heads the editorial page, has burned itself into the consciousness of our people, and its kindly spirit toward all, both those of the same ideas and those of differing opinions, has had its effect upon everybody who has come under its gentle, yet strong, influence.

The fact that this anniversary also marks the thirty-fifth year of J. H. Garrison's connection with the paper, gives only added pleasure to the commemoration of this anniversary day. He has been a father to so many of our young men, a brother to so many of our older ones, and from his "Easy Chair" has talked so gently and so kindly, so wisely and so strongly, to all alike, that the hearts of us all go out to him at this time of the glad new year.

May the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, with its fatherly editor, so ably seconded by his scholarly and brilliant son, go forward for many years to come, continuing its brave, bold stand for the truth and right, its powerful attack against error and wrong is, I am sure, the sincere wish of thousands of its readers.

BARRIS A. JENKINS.

President Kentucky University.
Lexington, Ky.

A Helper of Home Missions.

I desire to be enrolled among the many thousand brethren in Christ, and congratulate the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST on attaining its fortieth year. While these years have been full of toil, and I doubt not of much weariness to flesh and spirit, yet as we look back over them, they have been years of great fruitfulness to the paper, and to the cause with which it is identified.

Speaking for the American Christian Missionary Society, I wish to thank you for your earnest, consistent advocacy of the work of missions among the Disciples of Christ. While in doing this you have only done that which is your plain duty, yet you have done it so well, so earnestly that it is worthy of acknowledgement before the whole church. We have never asked the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST for any favor for our missionary work, but what it has been granted. Its space has been given free to the interests of this great cause, and the work of home missions shows the result in the enlargement that has come to it through the great help given to us by the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST.

I thank you, I congratulate you, I wish you many returns of the anniversary.

BENJ. L. SMITH, Cor. Sec.,
American Christian Missionary Society.
Cincinnati, O.

A Friend of Foreign Missions.

The CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST has been a steadfast friend and champion of foreign missions from the first. It has kept the claims of this cause before its host of readers in season and out of season. In its columns there is line upon line, precept upon precept, here a little, and there a great deal. Each year one issue is devoted almost entirely to the advocacy of this divine enterprise. The editors have ever been most generous in placing their space at the disposal of the representatives of the foreign society. No one can estimate the value of such a publication to our organized missionary work. Outside the area in which our religious papers are circulated little, if any, money need be expected for any form of Christian work. Our religious papers create a missionary atmosphere in the churches and in the homes of the people. They reinforce the appeals of the missionary agents. They go where no missionary agent has gone, or can go. They break down opposition and generate interest and enthusiasm. Long may the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST and its editors live to help our Lord bless and redeem the whole wide world. May the circle of their influence be widened with the process of the suns.

A. McLEAN.

Cincinnati, O.

Not Sound Enough.

I have watched your career as an editor with pleasure and pride, as I have seen a most unpromising little "folder" grow into a great religious weekly. The good you have accomplished during these years, eternity alone can tell. But as many of your friends will tell you this, let me, in love, touch another key. Of late, as I see things, this good might have been greater if you had given more attention to the exposition of the Scriptures. What the Book says is better than anything we can say about the Book. The newspaper, like the sermon, that it may be at its best, must "open to us the Scriptures." (Luke 24:27-32.) Neither literary excellence, nor any other virtue, can atone for a defect at this point. I also think you would have been more useful had you given greater emphasis to our plea. Born and reared in denominationalism, and having been led into Christian liberty by this great plea, I would be an ingrate, indeed, if I did not love it next to my Bible.

Heaven bless you and make your last years your best, is my prayer.

Dallas, Tex.

M. M. DAVIS.

Sound Enough for Him.

A better paper than the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST does not exist. A wiser guidance, upon the whole, is not to be found in the lists of human leadership. It is sound enough for me, and my manner of life, from my youth, which was at the first among mine own nation in Missouri, know all the Disciples, which knew me from the beginning, if they would testify, that after the most straitest sect of our religion, I lived a so-called "Campbellite."

I have not always agreed with it in all things, but then, come to think of it, even my wife and I have had our differences; and yet "she's all right." Our historic trinity, unity, liberty, charity, has no abler exponent, no more persistent, yet consistent advocate. I take pride in endorsing the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST before my people. May it have a successful new year, and prosper so long as it travels in its present virtuous paths.

GEORGE WALKER BUCKNER.

Macomb, Ill.

On Common-Sense Lines.

DEAR BROTHER GARRISON: I have been a reader of your valued paper for several years, and have often said the "Editor's Easy Chair" alone made it well worth one's while to take the paper. Besides, I am a great admirer of your paper as a whole, as it seems to be edited on good, plain, common-sense lines, devoid of extreme ideas on any subject, and is of a character to make one feel stronger and better after having read it. I usually make it a portion of my Sunday's reading. My judgment is that no abler paper is edited within the brotherhood. I note you have been connected with its editorial staff for a period of thirty-five years. May your life be spared to add many more years to this valued work.

R. A. LONG.

Kansas City, Mo.

A Powerful Lever.

May the Lord still cause his face to shine upon thee and do thee good. The long expected day has come when the Disciples of Christ begin to see visions. I frankly acknowledge that my greatest burden in a service, now of over twenty-five years, has been the small plans, the small range of vision and the small results because of the small effort put forth by our brethren. Thank the Lord, the day of larger visions is here, and we have reason to take fresh courage. In this day of broader vision and larger service, the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST has been a powerful lever. I have read it with profit and inspiration for many years, and promise for it also a larger place in the future.

F. P. ARTHUR.

Grand Rapids, Mich.

Keeps Abreast of the Times.

To any great religious movement the periodical journal is a necessity. It quietly enters into widely scattered homes and informs, inspires and brings them into potential unity. Our brotherhood owes a deep debt to the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. For more than a generation it has led sanely and safely. It has been "courteous in manner, but firm in the thing." It has kept abreast of the times and yet has not drifted with the current. It has character.

It gains by not being impersonal. The editor cannot overestimate the degree to which he holds the confidence and love of his brethren. May that which hath been, be that which shall be—only more!

In deep love, your brother,
E. B. WAKEFIELD,
President Hiram College.

Free From Contention.

MY DEAR BRO. GARRISON: It is with the greatest delight that I congratulate you upon the completion of the fortieth volume of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. Permit me to extend to you my heartiest congratulations personally, and to express my high appreciation of your services as editor of the paper for the past thirty-five years. During almost the life of a generation you have, with marked ability, advocated the cause of primitive apostolic Christianity.

I am pleased to express my approval of the spirit, aims and general policy of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST from its commencement. The one faith, one Lord and one baptism have been kept before the eyes and minds of your readers. Home and Foreign Missions, Church Extension, Ministerial Relief, as well as all other of our church enterprises, have been wisely advocated in the columns of your paper. Its pages have been free from contention and strife, but at all times open to a proper and wise consideration of questions vital to the cause of Christ. Certainly the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST should be appreciated by all lovers of the truth and pure journalism. A paper controlled by high views of right thinking and living. The CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST should be strongly supported by our brotherhood.

W. S. DICKINSON,
Cincinnati, O.

Sweetness and Light.

DEAR BROTHER GARRISON: In a movement like ours and beginning as it did, there would be an inevitable movement forward from slavery to the letter to the freedom of the spirit; from narrowness and clamorous dogmatism to breadth of view with consequent sweetness and light; from an over-valuation of the machinery of Christianity to a discernment that forms and ceremonies are but a means to an end, and that the end is Christlikeness of character, Christlikeness in faith, in hope, in love. That in all the years of its history the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST has been in the lead in this forward movement must be an exceeding great reward to you, Brother Garrison, that your friends recognize this virtue in the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST is surely sufficient praise. Cordially,

BAYARD CRAIG,
Pastor Central Christian Church,
Denver, Col.

Later Years Its Best Years.

DEAR BROTHER GARRISON: Let me join your many friends in hearty congratulations upon the successful completion of the fortieth volume of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. For twenty years it has made its weekly visits to my home. I have always enjoyed it, but its later years have been its best years. I always open it expecting to find something in it worth reading and am not disappointed. It is sweet-spirited, broad-minded and helpful. May God give you length of days and strength of mind and body to edit it for years to come. It deserves it and may the brotherhood give it a larger circulation.

A. M. HARVUOT,
Pastor Central Christian Church,
Cincinnati, O.

An Incalculable Influence.

For thirty years I have been a constant reader of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, and its predecessor, The Christian. During these formative years in the life and growth of this reformation, I believe the influence of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST upon our literature in the way of elevating and spiritualizing it, has been incalculable. The editorials and the leading articles by correspondents have been of a high order of excellence, always breathing the sweet spirit of the Master. Where such a paper goes, week after week, into our homes, it cannot fail to mold character and to be reflected in the general life and literature of the brotherhood. Your paper has been a constant, stimulating influence to Christian men and women, lifting up ideals and generating enthusiasm in carrying forward the work of the church.

St. Louis. F. E. UDELL.

A Reader Since Childhood.

DEAR BROTHER GARRISON: It is my pleasure to congratulate you upon the close of your thirty-five years as editor of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. For a whole generation you have held an important position in a great religious movement. That at the close of so long a period of public service you have the confidence and affectionate esteem of your brethren, should be a supreme satisfaction and reward.

I have been a reader of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST since childhood. It came into our home in the dark days of a struggle for an unpopular cause, to instruct and encourage and to preserve from that narrowness and provincialism which are ever the menace of reformations. It is to-day a welcome visitor to my home.

I think we may agree that the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST has ever stood for an intelligent and kindly interpretation of the meaning and mission of our movement, and that it has sought, by a wise moderation, to maintain that unity and harmony so essential to the restoration of apostolic Christianity.

St. Joseph, Mo. C. M. CHILTON.

For Primitive Christianity.

The CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, like many other papers, has had a varied history. I have had knowledge of it all its life. D. Bates, D. P. Henderson, Arthur Miller, Aaron Chatterton, Allen Hickey, Carpenter, Johnson, Carpenter and Johnson again, from Mt. Pleasant, Keokuk, Davenport, and Oskaloosa, Iowa. Moved after many years to Chicago, and afterwards united with The Christian at St. Louis, Mo. I have received two-thirds of all the copies in all its migratory history. The editors have been among our best men, and all the time the paper has stood for primitive Christianity, piety, virtuous homes, civic righteousness and all that will make a people blessed. It has comforted many thousand saints and converted many sinners. Since it has had a habitation in St. Louis, especially, with J. H. Garrison as its senior editor, it has shown itself worthy of a place among our best literary publications.

D. R. DUNGAN.

Much Truth, Little Error.

I congratulate you on the completion of the fortieth volume of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. I remember the beginning of your publication in its various predecessors, and when I compare them with the very handsome paper which comes to me weekly now, I see a growth that is very greatly to your credit. No periodical comes to my desk more elegantly printed, or with its matter more skillfully distributed and displayed. Though I have often, as you are aware, taken exceptions to your editorial utterances, the amount of writing you have done to which no exceptions could be taken, represents a vast amount of labor on your part, and a vast amount of intelligence spread abroad among your readers. It is a great thing to be the editor of a periodical which guides the minds of a great multitude of intelligent men and women, and that gives valuable information to a still greater number. Like the old-fashioned preachers whom I sometimes heard in my boyhood, you have good reason to thank the Lord for the large amount of truth that you have preached while you pray him to forgive the small amount of error. You and I are both approaching the end of our earthly labors, and will soon give an account of all that our pens have written. I trust that the mercy of the Lord will be abundant for the frailties of us both; and I trust that after you are gone, some worthy man or men shall be raised up to continue the existence of your paper, and to make it, if possible, still more useful.

Fraternally yours,
Lexington, Ky. J. W. MCGARVEY.

"A General Pastor."

During my thirty-eight years of Christian life, I count myself blessed in that I have been shepherded by eight such pastors as these: Proctor, Longan, Haley, (H. H.) Mountjoy, Taylor (J. Z.), Haley (T. P.), Brooks and Combs. The relation of pastor and flock is close and exists under divine approval; and yet in each individual case, how narrow and circumscribed as compared with the universal operation of the Church of Christ! I believe the local church not only needs its pastor continually for efficient local advancement, but that the Church general is blessed beyond computation by what I choose to call a general pastor—a religious newspaper—wise in counsel, and guided by the spirit of the Master. I have been blessed in my weekly communions with all the brethren through the columns of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST for about thirty years. The

Continued on Page 111

FROM OUR BROTHER EDITORS

The Christian Union.

It gives me great pleasure to know that, after thirty-five years in the editorial chair (nicknamed "Easy"), the editor of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST is able to improve with the passing years. When I first met him at Abingdon College, nearly thirty-five years ago, I considered him then one of our rising young men. I took one share in his company, believing it to be one of the best enterprises in the brotherhood. I am still of the opinion that he is a rising young man, growing gracefully, growing in usefulness, but never growing old. He will recall the fact that for several years I sent weekly letters under the heading, "Iowa Notes and News." I believed then in using press-power to propagate the truth. I have started on my ninth year as editor of the Christian Union, and know something of that fellowship that is referred to when he addresses me as "a brother editor." I am proud of the work he has done for the cause of Christ, and hope that he may have strength and wisdom to so guide the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST as to make it a blessing to every home it enters. We have not always agreed, but, when we understood each other, the things in which we have been in harmony have been many, and our differences have been few; may they become "beautifully less." Count on me for full fellowship in all that goes to make a Christian paper. May heaven's richest blessing rest upon you, brother editor, and upon all that are associated with you in conducting one of the best papers ever printed, and in sending out thousands of pages of printed matter, books, tracts, etc., to help all who read. And when your hand is no longer able to push the pen, may others, strong and wise and true to truth and duty, rise up to continue with multiplied power the good work you are doing.

G. L. BROKAW.

Editor The Christian Union.

Des Moines, Iowa.

✱

The Pacific Christian.

The writer was not far out of his teens when J. H. Garrison, fresh from a course in college, visited a country church in Illinois and delivered a series of sermons. At the close of the protracted meeting he was taken to his home in Macomb by a farmer, who afterward put much of his own thought and had it into a remark like this: "I like that young man because as soon as he reached home he put on his old clothes and went to work."

That was where Brother Garrison began his editorial career, and the object upon which he practiced was the Gospel Echo. But it is now evident that even at that time he had a vision of the future, and an ambition which was not to be satisfied by a mere echo.

It was not long after this small beginning at Macomb till the young editor was heard of at Quincy, and the monthly pamphlet had been changed to a weekly and to the form common to weeklies of those times. I think it was there called The Christian, which name was retained until after the second or third consolidation had been made, which brought The Evangelist down from Iowa to St. Louis, whither The Christian had long since gone, to grow up with the brotherhood.

But how could a young man just out of college know that the brotherhood was going to "grow up?" Ah! that was the substance of the vision—a vision of faith in a great plea which is the principal thing in the whole business that renders the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST worth talking about. Nor was the selection of a location accidental or arbitrary. There was something in the vision that suggested the productiveness of the field of which St. Louis was to be the center—something which offered the largest opportunity to a young man who was willing to don his old clothes and go to work.

Another thing must be mentioned as reason for this note of congratulation: Rather early in his editorial career, if not at its very beginning, Brother Garrison seemed to be impressed with the thought that our plea for restoration and reunion ought to be more than a cause of internal discussion, and even more than a challenge to the sects. And it is not too much to say that the CHRISTIAN EVANGELIST has been a great power in the promotion of a higher type of spiritual life and a wider, profounder interest in the dissemination of a pure and simple gospel among all the tribes and nations of the earth.

We are all impressed by great institutions, but often more by the men by whom they are built. The institution is a means to an end, and generally an aggregation of money and talent which is apt to defy accurate comparison of the men who have contributed to its success. But it is always interesting to study the life of a man which has been put into corporate form to remain when he is gone.

I last saw J. H. Garrison well preserved but gray as a grandfather—which in point of fact he is—at Detroit about two months ago. Between the time I saw him at the country church and this last meeting at Detroit, the story of a successful life has been continued through thirty-five volumes; and I sincerely hope it may be continued through many more.

W. B. BERRY,

Editor Pacific Christian.

San Francisco.

✱

The Independent.

MY DEAR DR. GARRISON: You and I are contemporaries. You have been thirty-five years in editorial connection with the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, and I have been thirty-five years with The Independent!

It has been an advantage to The Independent to exchange with the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, and I have read its utterances—always fraternal and Christian, and often courageous—with great interest. Those that read your paper cannot fail to recognize that it looks forward and outward to a larger fellowship of all those who claim the name of Christian, while it has been heartily loyal to the churches which it especially represents.

I trust that there may be not a few more years of service for you in this good work, and that the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST may long be a leading and useful representative of the Christian churches of the country.

Very sincerely yours,
WILLIAM HAYES WARD,
Editor The Independent.

New York.

✱

Christian Worker.

DEAR BROTHER GARRISON: Your anniversary affords me a happy opportunity to say what has long been in my mind. You have demonstrated that a man may advance in years and wisdom and remain young in spirit; that a full mind may remain an open mind. To the genuine humility that comes of constant communion with God, may also be ascribed the fine appreciation of other men's talents that has always kept the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST freighted with matter of the highest value; vital rather than controversial; positive rather than negative. To the courage that has never waited to inquire which way the crowd would go, and to the son, who is perhaps your chief gift to Christianity and journalism, we look for the greater future that the splendid past of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST justifies us in expecting.

Heartily, W. R. WARREN,
Editor Christian Worker.

Pittsburg, Pa.

✱

The Christian Leader.

J. H. GARRISON, EDITOR CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, My Dear Brother: The present editor of the Christian Leader has now, as for many past years, a sincere liking for you, as a disciple of our Lord Jesus. For over thirty years I have been a regular reader of your paper, and now heartily congratulate you on the fortieth anniversary of your paper, hoping that for yet several years, it may prosper and do good service in the cause of human redemption.

Your old brother-editor and disciple,
JAMES S. BELL, Editor of Christian Leader.

✱

West Virginia Christian.

West Virginia sends greetings. I welcome the opportunity to congratulate you on the successful completion of the fortieth volume of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST and of your thirty-five years of editorial labors. I regard the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST as one of the ablest exponents of "our plea," and I look to you as a leader and an example for us younger men. I could wish nothing better for the little paper with which I am connected than to have it dominated by the same spirit and filled with the same literary excellence as is your journal. For the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST my highest desire is, that you may be spared at least another thirty-five years, to strongly fortify (Garrison) it in its battles for loyalty to Christ and liberty in Christ.

Fraternally,
J. W. YOHIO,
Managing Editor, W. Va. Christian.

The Interior.

The Interior heartily congratulates the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST upon the completion of its fortieth volume. Among the papers that have stood for a sound Christianity with the note of progress in it, the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST has been long known to us as one of the most forceful and useful. That it should have gone on in its career thus long with increasing prosperity, seems to us to be a most optimistic thought, for we believe that its spirit is the spirit of conquering Christianity. We trust that its further progress may be as prosperous and efficient as its former history has been.

Very faithfully,
Chicago, Ill. THE INTERIOR.

Christian Endeavor World.

DEAR DR. GARRISON: I'd rather join in celebrating the anniversary of a Christian journal than any other anniversary I can think of. The churches are in it, the pastors are in it, the men and women who are doing things for Christ are in it, the kingdom of God is in it. Forty years of a religious paper!—that means more than many a king's reign; and thirty-five years as a religious editor!—that means more good done than many a lauded hero has to his credit. Hard work has gone into those thirty-five years, hard work and lots of it; but what innumerable lives, down here and up yonder, have been strengthened and cheered and comforted by your labors! The CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST has always been one of my most valued exchanges. It is staunch and true, bright and wholesome, brotherly and Christ-like. The Christian Endeavor World has much in common with you in spirit and purpose, and we hail you as a brother beloved and heartily congratulate you on attaining this anniversary, and pray that God will grant you and your noble paper all blessings and ever-growing prosperity in the anniversaries to come.

Very cordially yours,
AMOS R. WELLS, Managing Editor Christian Endeavor World.
Boston, Mass.

The Religious Herald.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST: As the Religious Herald has passed successfully and prosperously its 75th birthday and is just concluding its 76th year of continuous publication, we are in fine mood to congratulate you on the completion of your fortieth volume. The editor's lot is not always a happy one in these strenuous days, but his career has compensation. We earnestly trust that your excellent paper may be a continual and faithful witness for the truth as it is in Jesus.

R. H. PITT,
Editor the Religious Herald.
Richmond, Va.

The Congregationalist.

REV. J. H. GARRISON, Dear Brother: Your weekly visits to our sanctuary through the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST are always welcome. You come in with honest step, candid words, a trustful, confident expression unshadowed by temporary disturbances in church and state, and a forward look toward the completed kingdom of God. One who has survived the changes of thirty five years as editor of a religious newspaper, such years as those you have passed through, and continues to be a trusted interpreter of revealed truth in the light of passing events and of eternity, deserves honor from his brethren of our arduous calling. I offer it gladly. No teacher or counselor is more influential, more isolated, more in need of divine support and human sympathy than the editor of a religious newspaper. May you continue to show the faith in God, courage, insight, and confidence in your fellowmen which has characterized your long and honorable service.

Fraternally yours,
A. E. DUNNING,
Editor The Congregationalist.
Boston, Mass.

The Standard.

DR. J. H. GARRISON, DEAR BROTHER EDITOR: The Standard has just passed its fiftieth milepost. Some of its editors have been connected with the paper for more than one-half this time. They know something of the struggles through which denominational journalism has passed during the last forty years. That the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST has been successfully issued during these decades, and always with growing power and increasing usefulness, is something for which to be devoutly thankful. And furthermore, we cannot but congratulate you and your confreres that, during this long period, representing as it does a period of tremendous expansion in every branch of human effort, and especially of great literary advancement, there is abundant evidence of your appreciation of the true functions of a denominational newspaper, evidence which appears in the steady growth of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST.

The Standard congratulates you upon the splendid manner in which you have fulfilled your important mission, and wishes your enterprise the prosperity and success which its worth and long-time service well merit.

J. S. DICKERSON, Pres.
Chicago.

The Advance.

MY DEAR DR. GARRISON: Any man who can stand the racket of editorial work for thirty-five years shows what kind of stuff he has in him. He has muscle and nerve, grit and grip. You are to be greatly congratulated for having come safely through the storms of all these years, the kicks and cuffs of cranky subscribers and still more cranky reformers, who rule out all opinions but their own. No doubt you have received enough contradictory advice to send an ordinary man to an insane asylum. That you have kept so level a head on your shoulders through it all, is quite an achievement. That you have had so large and long continued an opportunity for usefulness is a matter for profound gratitude. You have made the CHRISTIAN EVANGELIST a most valuable and helpful factor in the work of your people and in the lives of your many readers. We wish the CHRIS-TIAN-EVANGELIST many years of continued success.

Chicago, Ill. J. A. ADAMS,
Editor Advance.

The Religious Telescope.

EDITOR THE CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, DEAR SIR AND BROTHER: A live, thoroughly orthodox religious journal is, next to the Bible, the most valuable of publications. The completion of forty years' existence by such a paper is an epoch meriting special recognition.

The rounding up of thirty five years' continuous service as editor-in-chief on the columns of such a journal, is a consummation upon which the fortunate veteran of the quill may most appropriately receive hearty congratulations.

Inasmuch as both yourself and your very excellent paper—esteemed as one of our best exchanges—come now within the per-view of the above named conditions, the writer of these lines takes great pleasure in extending to you and your publication most cordial greetings and most hearty congratulations.

Wishing for you many more years of health and successful service in the great realm of religious journalism, and for your valuable paper continued prosperity, I am, Yours in the bonds of Christian fraternity and brotherly cordiality,

I. L. KEPHART, Editor,
Religious Telescope.
Dayton, Ohio.

St. Louis Christian Advocate.

In these days of literary weaklings and ephemeral periodicals, it is strengthening to contemplate a religious journal which from modest infancy has grown steadily with the years into a splendid maturity. The CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST stands to-day, after forty years of history, an eloquent comment upon the logic of Christian endeavor, and as the exponent of all that is pure and good. But we cannot consider the paper apart from the editor, for it is the editor, in his highest, strongest expression!

To have lived a half century in this wonderful age is much, and to have lived in the exercise of a ministry untouched by suspicion and glorified by success is more. But to have lived, unscathed, in the white light of a necessary publicity and in the exercise of an editorial ministry which sends out its great voice over all the land, making its journal breathe the virile utterances of human genius and flame with the mighty deliverances of the Holy Spirit to do this is more—much more—than is possible to ordinary humanity. In this view of the matter we greet and congratulate our brother, REV. J. H. GARRISON, editor of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, most sincerely.

C. C. WOOD,
Asst Editor St. Louis Christian Advocate.

Western Christian Advocate.

The Western Christian Advocate, now approaching its seventieth anniversary celebration, sends greetings to the CHRISTIAN EVANGELIST, with most fraternal congratulations upon the completion of its fortieth volume.

The Western does not believe in the "doom of denominational journalism," concerning which considerable has lately been written. A thousand denominational papers in the field, with a circulation of five million, and a reading constituency of twenty-five million—this does not particularly indicate a decadence. The larger movements among the churches toward federation and unity in sentiment and policy are cordially welcomed by us; but we believe that to serve one's denomination loyally, without sectarianism or bigotry, is to serve best the entire Church of Christ and God's kingdom. The aim, therefore, of any religious paper ought to be to produce a paper—fraternal yet denominational, liberal without laxity, rational but not rationalistic, practical and spiritual rather than theoretical and controversial—which shall be true to the traditions of its church, maintain and promote its evangelical spirit, uphold its established causes, and forward its new enterprises. In a time when, in our secular dailies, serious editorial treatment, from the ethical standpoint, of public events and tendencies is so grossly neglected, there is all the more necessity for such consideration in a weekly journal under religious auspices.

We are happy in our confidence that the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST is thoroughly committed to such a great work as it has had in hand for forty years, and send it our God-speed for the future.

You must be one of the veterans in the editorial profession, and as such I greet you, sending you my heartiest congratulations and good wishes for your continued success and widening influence in your great work.

LEVI GILBERT,

Editor Western Christian Advocate.
Cincinnati, O.

✽

Herald of Gospel Liberty.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST: I hear you are soon to complete the fortieth volume of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, of which you have been editor for thirty-five years. Allow me to take your time to congratulate you. Somehow, your paper looks new every week. One would not think (to see its clean, fresh face) that it was forty years old. And to read its bright, breezy editorial pages, one would think its editor was getting younger, instead of older. If there are any gray hairs or wrinkles, they must be—well, theological, not editorial or fraternal. We rejoice at your broad spirit, and trust you will continue to grow younger and younger, in the sweet faith and charity now evident in your columns.

J. J. SUMMERBELL,

Editor of the Herald of Gospel Liberty.
Dayton, O.

✽

Central Baptist

REV. J. H. GARRISON, EDITOR CHRISTIAN EVANGELIST, Dear Brother: Your announcement that the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST is just completing its fortieth volume, and that you have been its editor for thirty-five years prompts me to write you these lines.

First of all, I want to congratulate you on having been spared and strengthened

Pains in the Back

Are symptoms of a weak, torpid or stagnant condition of the kidneys or liver, and are a warning it is extremely hazardous to neglect, so important is a healthy action of these organs.

They are commonly attended by loss of energy, lack of courage, and sometimes by gloomy foreboding and despondency.

"I had pains in my back, could not sleep and when I got up in the morning felt worse than the night before. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and now I can sleep and get up feeling rested and able to do my work. I attribute my cure entirely to Hood's Sarsaparilla." Mrs. J. N. PERRY, care H. S. Copeland, Pike Road, Ala.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills

Cure kidney and liver troubles, relieve the back, and build up the whole system.

to preside over the columns of your paper through so many eventful years. Permit me also to express my personal appreciation of your acquaintance through a considerable portion of this time. It would have been a pleasure to me to have seen more of you and to have bartered with you in those little tales of woe and hardship, for which an editor finds no market except when he meets a brother burdened with similar trials. I have greatly admired the pacific tone of your columns and the brotherly spirit of all your utterances.

Your announcement throws me into a reminiscent mood. Twenty-six years ago I came to the city and became one of the editors of the Central Baptist. At that time there were seven evangelical weeklies published here, and most of them were able to support two or more editors each. Where are the seven? Only three remain. As the income declined, or as the demands upon religious journalism developed, one after another of the editorial brethren felt called to other and fatter fields, until now there are not enough of us left to form a line. Four of the papers have gone, some to a place of rest and some elsewhere. I recall an occasional luncheon, where we all sat down together, where we talked over mutual interests and common experiences. Now we are too few to secure rates at a restaurant—even a cheap one.

You will readily recall the names of some of our associates—Dr. R. P. Farris, Dr. Fry, Dr. McAnally, Dr. W. H. Williams, Dr. Harris and others who have passed to rest after noble work. Several who were faithful in our ranks are engaged now in work of another kind, or resting on their well deserved honors and comfortable in their accumulated competency.

To your gray hairs, to your long service, to your brotherly kindness and to your conspicuous ability, the rest of us, few in numbers and younger in years, take off our hats on the occasion of this important date.

With best wishes for your personal health and for your editorial prosperity, I am Yours truly,

St. Louis.

J. C. ARMSTRONG,
Editor Central Baptist.

✽

International Sunday-School Evangel.

DEAR DOCTOR GARRISON: I note with genuine pleasure the approaching completion of the fortieth volume of the CHRISTIAN EVANGELIST, and also the completion of your thirty-five years of editorial service upon the paper. Allow me, as a fellow-editor in the World's Fair-City, to express my sincere appreciation of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST and of your own distinguished services, as well as of your fellowship. We youngsters certainly are impressed by thirty-five years of effort on the part of an editor in making hosts of people think as he thinks.

I take it that an editor differs quite materially from an author, and have sometimes thought a proper definition to be that an editor is a policeman to arrest thought and detain him for others to take in hand, and that is not our province, as it is that of the author, to dress thought up in finished apparel. You can no doubt recall having many times had the delightful experience of arresting thought and holding him for inspection by the doctors or by the authors, more often than not self-constituted critics; and you have also had the delightful exercise of defending thought while you held him for a time; and if you have more times than not been successful, you may take to yourself, on this anniversary day, no small satisfaction in realizing that you have been successful as an editor.

May you and your associates and the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST go on with increasing prosperity and increasing blessing to others, is the sincere wish of

Your fellow editor,

W. J. SEMELROTH,

Editor International S. S. Evangel.
St. Louis.

✽

The Herald and Presbyterian.

J. H. GARRISON, Dear Brother: I congratulate you on your approaching thirty-fifth anniversary. Is it possible that it is only the thirty-fifth? I thought you had been it a long time when I began, but it seems you had not. I have looked on you as a contemporary of Dr. J. G. Monfort, our senior editor, who bought and edited the Presbyterian Standard in 1834, or at least of Dr. C. E. Babb, who began in 1852. Of course this was a foolish mistake for in reading the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST I see no evidence of great age, but only the maturity which marks a man in his prime.

I wish you were straight on doctrine and polity. If only you could adopt the confession of faith and the Presbyterian form of government, what a power for good you might be!

However, I am congratulating you on what you are and have done, rather than on what you might be, and so will only say, that I hope you may live, and keep in the editorial harness, and do good as long as our senior editor has done.

"Has any year of your thirty five,
Been fuller of good than all the rest.
Let it be a type of years to come,
And may every year be of all the best."

Fraternally,

Cincinnati, O.

F. C. MONFORT.

Family Circle

Hands of Toil.

By Arthur Peirce Vaughn.

In the shop of Nazareth
Pungent cedar haunts the breath.
'Tis a low Eastern room,
Windowless, touched with gloom.
Workman's bench and simple tools
Line the walls. Chests and stools,
Yoke of ox, and shaft of plow,
Finished by the Carpenter,
Lie about the pavement now.

In the room the Craftsman stands,
Stands and reaches out His hands.

Let the shadows veil His face
If you must, and dimly trace
His workman's tunic, girt with bands,
At His waist. But His Hands—
Let the light play on them;
Marks of toil lay on them.
Paint with passion and with care
Every old scar showing there
Where a tool slipped and hurt;
Show each callous; be alert
For each deep line of toil.
Show the soil
Of the pitch; and the strength
Grip of helve gives at length.

When night comes, and I turn
From my shop where I earn
Daily bread, let me see
Those hard hands; know that He Shared my lot, every bit:
Was a man, every whit.

Could I fear such a hand
Stretched toward me? Misunderstand
Or mistrust? Doubt that He Meets me full in sympathy?
"Carpenter! hard like Thine
Is this hand—this of mine:
I reach out, gripping Thee,
Son of Man, close to me,
Close and fast fearlessly."

—From The Outlook.

A Cadet and His Uniform.

A number of years ago a superintendent of a Sunday-school in Dublin, Ireland, offered to any boy of that city who did not belong to a Sunday-school a new suit of clothes if he would join his school.

He did not desire to draw from any other school, but to any boy who did not belong to any other Sunday-school the offer held good.

A number of his teachers went out in the byways and hedges, or in other words, in the dirty, unkept streets and close, unwholesome alleys, in search of the wandering ones.

One teacher brought in three to reinforce her class—three rough, unkempt, untaught boys.

One of these three, a lad named Robert, who kept no law but his own will, was particularly troublesome; he not only would not pay any attention to the lesson himself, but he took care that no other boy in the vicinity did so. He seemed to be literally full of pins. If any boy within reach of him took his eyes from him a moment, he was pretty certain to come in contact with one of these pins. This went on for three or four Sundays, when Robert dropped out of Sunday-school. His teacher sought to bring him back in vain, and then took his case to the superintendent.

The superintendent replied, "Give him another suit of clothes."

The teacher again sought the boy with the offer of a suit of clothes, and Robert came back, and brought the pins with him, and behaved, if possible, worse than before. His teacher was almost in despair when a second time he left the school. After repeated visits and appeals to the boy the teacher again reported her failure to the superintendent.

"Give him another suit of clothes," responded the superintendent.

"But," protested the teacher, "we have already given two suits of clothes."

"We'll give him one more suit, but make him understand that this is the very last one he is going to get."

After Sunday-school the teacher sought and found the boy in the gutter of the obscure alley where he lived, playing marbles with some boon companions.

"Robert," said the teacher, "you were absent from Sunday-school again to-day."

"Naw, I ain't going there any more."

"But, Robert, you promised," protested his teacher.

"Well, I ain't going to; ain't no fun there."

"Robert," continued his teacher, "if you will come back to Sunday-school, we will give you another suit of clothes."

The boy looked up incredulously.

"D'ye mean that?"

"Yes, Robert, I mean it, but this is the very last suit of clothes we are going to give you, and I can only promise you this suit if you will pledge me your word of honor to come faithfully to Sunday-school every Sunday unless you have a good excuse for staying away."

The boy pondered the matter for a few moments and said, "I'll come."

"Now, Robert," said the teacher, "I am going to trust you. I am going to leave it to your honor to come every Sunday that you are able. And, Robert," continued she, "I am going to ask you to be my helper. You know that I have a very mischievous class of boys. Sometimes they behave so badly that I can scarcely teach the lesson at all, and I am going to ask you to come every Sunday and keep order while I teach."

The boy studied her face for a moment with the keen shrewdness born of a street education, and finding what he saw there satisfactory, replied, "I'll do it," and he did. There was no more trouble about order, he was the bully of the neighborhood. If any boy near him dared to misbehave or in any way create a disturbance, he shook his grimy fists at him and said, "I'll give it to you after Sunday-school," and the boys didn't dare to be disorderly.

The same energy and fertility that he had used to create mischief was utilized to maintain good order, and it succeeded.

The boy was Robert Morrison, who translated the Bible into the Chinese language, gave twenty-five years of his life to foreign work, and baptized the first Chinese convert to Protestant Christianity.

—The Brotherhood Star.

Wife: You don't seem to enjoy the dinner, dear. What's the matter?

Husband: 'I was wondering if there weren't some typographical errors in that cook-book of yours.

Under the Stars and Stripes.

Five-year-old Harold is of the blood of patriots. His grandfather was in the Mexican as well as in the Civil War, and his father is a Spanish War veteran; consequently, says the Washington Star, he has heard much talk of the flag in his short life, and has most exalted ideas of its protective qualities.

Not long ago, when the new baby was born, Harold was put to sleep in a room adjoining his mother's, and as he had never slept alone before, his baby soul was filled with nameless fears which he was too proud to tell in full.

"It's awful lonesome in here, mamma!" he called.

"Just remember that the angels are near you and are caring for you," answered his mother, from the next room.

"But, mamma," he objected, "I don't know any angels in particular, and I'd be scared if any strange angels came round."

"Now, Harold, you must go to sleep. Nothing will hurt you."

"Can't I have the gas lighted in here?"

"No, dear, I don't think it necessary."

There was silence for some time, then the small voice piped up again: "O mamma!"

"Yes, dear."

"May I have grandpapa's flag?"

"Why, what for? I want you to go right to sleep."

"Please, mamma!" and a small, night-gowned figure appeared at the door. "I want to stick the flag up at the head of the bed. You know the other night grandpa said that any one protected by the American flag would be safe, no matter how weak he was. I feel awful weak, mamma, truly I do."

An hour later, when his mother looked in, he was sound asleep, with a fat little fist holding fast the end of the "protecting" flag.

An Interesting Story in a
Handsome Volume

Altar Stairs

by

CHAS. J. SCOFIELD

Author of "A Subtle Adversary."

Contains
320 pages
on fine book paper.
Illuminated cloth binding.
Seven illustrations.
New type.
Price

$1.50, Postpaid

—Order from—

Christian Publishing Co.,

1522 Locust St.,
ST. LOUIS, MO.

If I Can Live.

If I can live
To make some pale face brighter, and to give
A second luster to some tear-dimmed eye,
Or e'en impart
One throb of comfort to an aching heart,
Or cheer some wayworn soul in passing
by;

If I can lend
A strong hand to the fallen, or defend
The right against a single envious strain,
My life, though bare
Perhaps of much that seemeth dear and fair
To us on earth, will not have been in vain.

The purest joy
Most near to heaven, far from earth's alloy,
Is bidding clouds give way to sun and shine,
And 't will be well
If on that day of days the angels tell
Of me: "She did her best for one of Thine."

—Helen Hunt Jackson.

The Bank of England.

When the Bank of England commenced business in 1694, with a staff of fifty-four clerks, all of whom worked in a single room and the directors with them, no one imagined that it would develop into the great national institution it is to-day. And its career, extending over two centuries, has brought it in touch with a wealth of romance, relics of which may be found in that department of the bank with which the public is least familiar—namely, its museum.

How many people know that the bank once issued a note for a penny?—although it should be explained that this was entirely due to an error. But the penny note went into circulation all the same, and only by offering a reward of five pounds was the bank able to get it back again before it passed into the hands of the curio collector. This note is still preserved in one of the albums, and in another are some of the curious notes which saved the bank in 1745. In that year a great run on the funds took place—so great, in fact, that it was thought that the bank would be unable to meet it; but the directors in the nick of time sent a number of their clerks into the crowd to present notes which were paid in sixpences, thus giving the officials time to prepare for the demand for specie.

Another curiosity is a note for 1,000,000 pounds, which is the only one of that value ever printed; while there is also a note which was in circulation for nearly 150 years before it was presented.

Specimens of all the forged notes which have been uttered from time to time by the unscrupulous are kept, and their value aggregates several million pounds, while notes brought from the wreck of the Eurydice and one taken from the stomach of an enormous codfish captured off the coast of Greenland are among the bank's most valued treasures.

There are hundreds of specimens of curious coins which have been returned to the bank from all parts of the world, or found in the testing machine. This machine, by the way, tests 35,000 sovereigns a day, and automatically rejects any which have become light.

The museum library contains all the old ledgers which have been used by the bank since it was first opened, and they number 70,000, while another set of volumes gives a record of every member of the staff who has ever served at the bank. There are also 20,000 volumes of all kinds for the use of the staff, some of which are so rare that the same number of sovereigns would not purchase the collection.

The bank has its own churchyard adjoining, and here many of the officials have in former times been buried. In one corner is the grave of a man who stood eight feet two inches in his socks.—Tit-Bits.

Spasmodic Enthusiasm.

Young people are often subject to acute attacks of enthusiasm. They are completely swept off their feet by new ideas, and think that they will accomplish wonders with them. For days they think and dream of nothing else. It may be the making of a cart or some toy, the taking up of a special study, a plan to improve the home or the farm, or to work out some pet theory, or determination to engage in some particular kind of work. But in most cases the enthusiasm cools, the zeal evaporates, the fire dies out, and nothing is left but embers and ashes.

I have known more than one youth to be so fired by listening to some great orator at the bar that he then and there made up his mind that he would be a lawyer. He would bend all his energy to the study of law for perhaps a few weeks. At the end of that time he would throw his law books down in disgust and decide that the writings of Coke and Blackstone are dry pickings for a boy who delights in action. His enthusiasm for the law had received a deathblow. His mind was ready for some other diversion. He saw a successful physician hurrying about in his carriage, and thought that medicine is the ideal profession, so he decided at once to become a doctor. But a very short experience with the dry bones of anatomy was sufficient to dampen his ardor, and he quickly followed some other will-o'-the-wisp which danced before his fanciful imagination.

Young people who are completely unbalanced by new ideas, and who do not stop to consider whether they are feasible or practicable, rarely have the persistence to follow one to a conclusion. Victims of transitory enthusiasm, they change about from pillar to post until youth and opportunity lie behind them. They work as clerks for a while, teach school a term or two, work in factories, half-learn this trade or that, waste a year, perhaps, in the study of medicine, another in that of law, or a few months in attempting to master the foundation principles of architecture, or in studying some art or science that strikes their fancy for the moment, and, almost before they realize it, they are no longer eligible for success. Their lives are made up of fragments which do not belong together, and which no ingenuity could make into a complete pattern.

If erratic people of this kind would stick to even the humblest thing they attempt, they would accomplish something; their lives would make some sort of finished pat-

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains the linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it, or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

WHAT TO DO.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney and bladder remedy, fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.

You may have a sample bottle of Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, and a book that tells all about it, both sent absolutely free by mail. Address, Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing be sure to mention that you read this generous offer in the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

tern, however homely, instead of a mass of disconnected fragments. Nothing can be made out of fragments of different kinds. A beautiful mosaic is made up of tiny bits, but they are of the same kind.

If all the knowledge and unbalanced enthusiasm which so many young men and women waste in trying scores of things could be put into one worthy endeavor; if every day's work were made to help out that of the previous day; if every bit of experience were made to count upon the one great object of their lives, their power of achievement, their possibilities of increased usefulness and of weaving a beautiful life-pattern would be increased a thousandfold.—O. S. Marden, in "Success."

The Muse of the Service of Alcohol.

The Literary Digest has translated an article from the Deutsche Monatsschrift in which the author, Otto von Teixner, deplores the exaltation by German writers of drink and drinking. He says:

"It is deeply to be deplored that such gifted writers of poetry as Scheffel, Julius Wolff, Rudolf Baumbach, Meyer, and others, have given their talents and their time to the exaggerated laudations of wine and beer-drinking. They have idealized the drinking student and street bum, and in the beautiful forms of verse have made them attractive to the average reader. Not the evils of the habit, but the grotesque and mirth-provoking sides of wine-bibber and beer-toper they picture in verse and song. It does not take long for these drinking-songs to find their way into the song books of the students and constitute their intellectual pabulum when they meet in their Kneipes. In these songs the abuse of alcoholic beverages is not only not com-demned, but is even lauded, and the drunken man is a hero. How sentiments of this sort, coming from the pens of men who stand high in the literary annals of the country, will influence the immature mind of the pupils of the secondary schools and of the universities is only too apparent. What good will the warnings of the physicians and the preachings and moral teachings of the theologians do when the academic youth of the country is taught to regard drinking as the acme of student glory by the songs of the leading poets? It can be unhesitatingly declared that the terrible abuse of alcoholic drinks and the increase in drunkenness, particularly in university and school circles, and among the younger generation in general, are largely the result of the service which the Muse is now rendering at the altar of alcohol. Poetry and song should have higher ideas and ideals."

The Saloon Convicted; the Boys Hanged.

In pronouncing the death sentence on two boy murderers at Owatonna, Minn., Judge Buckman delivered this Phillippic against the saloon:

"Every community can well ask if it is not equally guilty with its sister city in not making a vigorous effort to remove the snares which lie in waiting for the young in almost every town in the Union. These boys cannot have been brought to perpetrate such a crime through the influence of heredity. There is nothing to show it. It must be charged, if it be true that they are guilty, to their environment. Without any ill-feeling toward the people of this community, I must say that they are particeps criminis in this tragedy, if the boys are guilty. The people have allowed the conditions which have brought these boys to such a pass. It is because the boys could procure of newsdealers such literature as debased their moral natures; because the police, knowing of the conditions existing in the rooms of these, permitted them to go on; because the saloon-keepers of the city were allowed to place on the lips of the young, that which fires the brain and sears the soul. By imposing the death sentence, the court will be striking at the effect, not the cause, and if the cause remains undisturbed, the result will be another such case as a righteous retribution upon those responsible."—Exchange.

Unlovable Women.

Beware of three women—the one who does not love children, the one who does not love flowers, and she who openly declares she does not like other women. There is something wanting in such, and, in all probability, its place is supplied by some unlovely trait. Men may smile and jest a little over the tenderness lavished on a baby, but, after all, the prattle every womanly woman involuntarily breaks into at sight of the tiny beings is very sweet to masculine ears. It is the first language they ever knew, and, in spite of jest or smile, the sweetest on wife's or sweetheart's lips. They laugh, too, at little garden tools, which seem like playthings to their strength; but in their hearts they associate, and rightly, refinement of character and life with the pursuit of gardening. And as for the woman who does not care for her own sex, and boldly avows it, she creates only an unfavorable impression against her own self, for a sweeping condemnation of a sex which contains innumerable examples of all that is beautiful and worthy in human character.—Washington Magazine.

Ready for Expansion.

A little girl on Madison Street, Memphis, had just finished a new house dress and called in one of her friends to admire it, as is customary even among girls of a larger growth.

By way of explanation to her friends, she pointed out that the waistband had three buttonholes at intervals of about an inch, so that the skirt could be let out or taken up at pleasure.

"What on earth is that for?" asked her friend.

"The first hole is to be used in the morning, the second after dinner, and the third after watermelons," promptly replied the owner of the dress.—Exchange.

SCRAPS FOR THE CURIOUS.

If a tallow candle be placed in a gun and shot at a door it will go through without sustaining any injury; and if a musket ball be fired into water it will not only rebound, but be flattened, as if fired against a solid substance.

A musket ball may be fired through a pane of glass, making the hole the size of the ball, without cracking the glass; if the glass is suspended by a thread it will make no difference, and the thread will not even vibrate.

In the Arctic regions, when the thermometer is below zero, persons can converse more than a mile distant. Dr. Jamieson said that he heard every word of a sermon at the distance of two miles.—Boston Journal.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL SUPPLIES.

Quarterly Helps.

The Beginner's Quarterly.

A Lesson Magazine for the Very Youngest Learners.

TERMS.—Single copy per quarter, 10 cents. In clubs of ten or more 5 cents per copy per quarter; 20 cents per year.

The Primary Quarterly.

A Lesson Magazine for the Youngest Classes. It contains Lesson Stories, Lesson Questions, Lesson Thoughts and Lessons, Pictures, and never fails to interest the little ones.

TERMS.—Single copy, per quarter, 5 cents. 10 copies, per quarter, $ .20; per year, $ .75
25 copies, " .40; " 1.50
50 " " .75; " 3.00

The Youth's Quarterly.

A Lesson Magazine for the Junior Classes. The Scripture Text is printed in full, but an interesting Lesson Story takes the place of the usual explanatory notes.

TERMS.—Single copy, per quarter, 5 cents; ten copies or more to one address, 21-2 cents each per quarter.

The Scholar's Quarterly.

A Lesson Magazine for the Senior Classes. This Quarterly contains every help needed by the senior classes. Its popularity is shown by its immense circulation.

TERMS.—Single copy, per quarter, $ .10; per year, $ .30
10 copies, " .40; " 1.25
25 " " .90; " 3.00
50 " " 1.60; " 6.00
100 " " 3.00; " 12.00

The Bible Student.

A Lesson Magazine for the Advanced Classes, containing the Scripture Text in both the Common and Revised Versions, with Explanatory Notes, Helpful Readings, Practical Lessons. Maps, etc.

TERMS.—Single copy, per quarter, $ .10; per year, $ .40
10 copies, " .70; " 2.50
25 " " 1.60; " 6.00
50 " " 3.00; " 10.50
100 " " 5.50; " 20.00

Bible Lesson Picture Roll.

Printed in 8 colors. Each leaf, 26 by 37 inches, contains a picture illustrating one lesson. 13 leaves in a set. Price per Roll—one quarter—reduced to 75 cents.

Christian Picture Lesson Cards.

A reduced fac-simile of the large Bible Lesson Picture Roll. Put up in sets, containing one card for each Sunday in quarter. One set will be required for each child in the class. Price reduced to 21-2 cents per set.

Monthly.

Christian Bible Lesson Leaves.

These Lesson Leaves are especially for the use of Sunday-schools that may not be able to fully supply themselves with the Lesson Books or Quarterlies.

TERMS.
10 copies, 1 mo., $ .15; 3 mos., $ .30; 1 yr., $1.00
25 " " .25; " .60; " 2.40
50 " " .45; " 1.20; " 4.60
100 " " .75; " 2.10; " 8.00

Weekly.

The Little Ones.

Printed in Colors.

This is a Weekly for the Primary Department in the Sunday-school and the Little Ones at Home, full of Charming Little Stories, Sweet Poems, Merry Rhymes and Jingles, Beautiful Pictures and Simple Lesson Talks. The prettiest and best of all papers for the very little people.

TERMS.—Weekly, in clubs of not less than five copies to one address, 25 cents a copy per year. Single copy, 50 cents per year.

The Young Evangelist.

This is a Weekly for the Sunday-school and Family, of varied and attractive contents, embracing Serial and Shorter Stories; Sketches; Incidents of Travel; Poetry; Field Notes; Lesson Talks, and Letters from the Children. Printed from clear type, on fine calendered paper, and profusely illustrated.

TERMS.—Weekly, in clubs of not less than ten copies to one address, 30 cents a copy per year, or 8 cents per quarter. Single copy, 50 cents per year.

The Round Table.

An 8-page Paper for the Boys and Girls, filled with Entertaining Stories.

TERMS.—Single copy, 50 cents per year; in clubs of ten or more, 36 cents a copy per year.

Our Young Folks.

A Large Illustrated Weekly Magazine, devoted to the welfare and work of Our Young People, giving special attention to the Sunday-school and Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor. It contains wood-cuts and biographical sketches of prominent workers, Notes on the Sunday-school Lessons, and Endeavor Prayer-meeting Topics for each week, Outlines of Work, etc. This Magazine has called forth more commendatory notices than any other periodical ever issued by our people. The Sunday-school pupil or teacher who has this publication will need no other lesson help, and will be able to keep fully "abreast of the times" in the Sunday-school and Y. P. S. C. E. work.

TERMS.—One copy, per year, 75 cents; in clubs of ten, 60 cents each; in packages of ten or more to one name and address, only 50 cents each. Send for Sample.

MODEL SUNDAY-SCHOOL RECORD.

Each book contains blanks for two years' records. Cloth.....$1.00.

MODEL SUNDAY-SCHOOL TREASURER'S BOOK.

Good for three years. Fine paper. Pocket size, cloth, 25 cents. Morocco.....$ .50.

MODEL SUNDAY-SCHOOL CLASS BOOK.

Good for one year. Single copy, five cents. Per dozen.....$ .50.

Christian Publishing Co., 1522 Locust St., St. Louis.

With the Children

By J. Breckenridge Ellis

The Green Witch.—I.

"There comes the 'bus!" exclaimed George Clayton, as a rattle and rush and crash sounded near the corner.

Mr. Clayton, who had been sitting upon the piazza of the Tomb boarding house, rose feebly, steadying himself upon his son's shoulder. "Good-by, my son, good-by," he said, squeezing George's hand. "It adds greatly to my sorrows that I must leave you here alone. But Mr. Stoner will be almost like a father to you."

"Don't trouble about me," said George, turning away to hide the tears which had come without warning. "I'll think of you out in Florida eating bananas and oranges, and getting well and strong—and that will give me an appetite for my own dinner."

"You know how often I have spoken of Stoner," said Mr. Clayton. "He was my old college chum. I've hardly had a chance to become acquainted with him over again, since he came to town; but I'm sure he's the same old kind-hearted fellow. You'll get along with him famously."

The omnibus reached the walk before the front-gate, wheeled about, backed against the curbing, and the driver shouted fiercely, "'Board!" Mr. Tomb and his callboy hurried out to help Mr. Clayton into the vehicle, and to lift up his baggage. Presently the omnibus was bounding and bumping upon its way to the station, while George watched through tears the last wave of his father's hand.

"Well, George," said Mr. Tomb, "he's gone shore enough, and it'll be a merry whet before you ever see his face agin. I've knowd many a man to go Floridy an' Californy fur their health an' find somethin' they wasn't lookin' fur!"

"The doctor is sure Florida will bring him out all right," said, George, looking wistfully at the landlord.

"Yas, an' doctors is shore of lots of things," returned the other, shaking his head. "I guess God must of made doctors purty soon after He made the worl,' seein' as natur' can't git along without 'um!"

"Well, Mr. Tomb, I'll tell you good-by," said George. "Our room is empty, and here's the key. The year father and I have lived in it has been a happy one—except for seeing him get weaker all the time—and you've been good to us, and—" His voice was broken by a sob.

"Why! whatever I've done fur you an' yore pa, has been a double pleasure," said the other; "you're a good boy, my lad, an' I feel sorry fur you, goin' to board with Stoner. I'm afred he'll feed you low—mighty low. An' he's goin' to work you hard, or my name ain't Tomb. But it's Tomb. He ain't ran the grocery-store but three weeks, yet I've classified him. I don't haf to see a man many times before I kin analyze him. Good-by, George, an' when you're feelin' particular light, come aroun' an' I'll weight you down with victuals that you know are in you when they are in you." From this description George recognized Mr. Tomb's beefsteak, which was always surprisingly tough and unyielding. They shook hands, and George Clayton left the boarding-house, feeling strange and lonely. He was not to go to work for Mr. Stoner till the next morning, and he felt a deep reluctance to approach the home of his employer. There was still an hour until dark and he decided to walk about the town, and try to acustom his mind to his new condition. As he did not want to meet friends, or acquaintances, he sought the outskirts of Burr City in a district unfamiliar to his feet.

One may live all his life in a town of three thousand inhabitants, and be a stranger to parts of it. So it was in George's case. He soon found himself treading the narrow, crooked streets of "Hobb's Addition," while cottages showed at doors and windows faces as unfamiliar as the streets. Most of them were care-worn, soiled faces, crowned by ill-kept hair. The voices that sounded ceaselessly, were in a high key, impatient or abrupt. Some looked at George as if wondering why he was there; and George began to wonder, too. He felt out of keeping with the scene. Nobody was dressed as he. "To-morrow it will be different," thought George with a sad smile.

His father was a newspaper man who had made much money—and spent more. On the loss of his wife, Mr. Clayton found his debts pressing heavily upon him. At the same time, ill-health added its burden to his back. He had built a beautiful house in Burr City, but he was obliged to mortgage it. Not long since, he had sold it to pay off the mortgage and to obtain enough to support him at his sister's in Florida. He did not feel able to take George with him, nor did his sister insist upon the coming of the nephew whom she had never seen. His house had been mortgaged to his old college friend, Mr. Stoner. It was Mr. Stoner who had bought the house, and who for three weeks had been living in it. He had come to Burr City to engage in the grocery business, and George had been employed as "delivery boy." He would receive three dollars-and-a-half a week, besides his board in Mr. Stoner's home. George had seen none of the family except Mr. Stoner, and whenever he thought of going to live with strangers in what used to be his father's house, his heart swelled with sadness.

"Hobb's Addition" was but a small part of Burr City, and it was not long before George reached the last dwelling, near the edge of an extensive wood. It was a tent, gray with dust and streaked from rain. He stared at the closed entrance, remembering day-dreams he had entertained of living in the open air. The grimy condition of the canvas, and the frowzy weeds which grew up to its edge, robbed the dream of its romance. A few dispirited posts, and some planks which seemed to have been blown against sagging wires, where they had been caught and held half-postrate, mourned the absence of a fence. Upon a line, stretched between two of the trees which stood as the advance guard of the forest, was fastened an aggressive family-washing, which seemed to con-

"Natural" Dyspepsia Cure

Not Sold in Stores.

Your Money Back If You Ask It.

We offer the best medicine for all forms of stomach trouble or indigestion, with consequent ailments. Absolutely harmless. Try it. You run no risk. Price $1.00. Order by mail of

The Natural Body Brace Co.,

Howard C. Rash, Mgr.

Box 125.

Salina, Kansas.

sist, for the most part, of arms and legs. George had paused some time before the silent tent, trying to imagine the life passed behind its protection, when suddenly he heard a sharp cry, and the flap at the front was thrust quickly to one side.

A form, closely followed by another, darted out of the tent toward George. The first was a girl in a ragged dress which scarcely came below the bare knees. She was pursued by a man who carried a stick with which he struck at the other. The girl, who was about sixteen years old, tall and thin, showed practiced agility in evading the vicious onslaught. She darted to right and left, her thin legs, gray from the thick summer dust, turning in and out with unconscious grace. She had nearly reached George, who stood, pale from sympathy, upon the single narrow plank which did duty as pavement in "Hobbs's Addition," when the man succeeded in landing a savage blow upon the girl's back. She uttered a pathetic cry and sank upon her knees, her arms grasping for something to which she might cling. Then for the first time she saw the youth staring at the brutal man.

"What do you want here?" cried the girl sharply. "Go back where you belong. You've got nothing to do with us, and we've got nothing to do with you!"

The man's attention was attracted toward the stranger, and, leaving the girl, over whom he had stood with up-raised stick, he strode toward the sidewalk. George backed away cautiously, but the man did not cross the imaginary line of his fence. He had been drinking deeply, and his red eyes and bloated face spoke their warning to the world.

"What have you got to say about it?" demanded the ruffian in a thick voice.

George turned away.

"You're George Clayton," called the man in an uneven tone, waving his stick, while his daughter, taking advantage of the diversion, leaped away and vanished in the wood. "You've got my job, you have. You've stolen the bread out of my family's mouths, you have. If they starve, you'll be to blame. I call you a murderer! But I'll get even with you, I will! I'll trim you, I will!"

George hurried away, feeling it was no use to talk to a man in such condition. The scene had been witnessed by several, for street disturbances have a magical power of attraction. One of the spectators, a man who had been hauling dirt to grade up Mr. Tomb's yard, walked beside George, and said, "Young feller, you'd better look out for Tuck; he's layin' fur you. This ain't the first time I've heerd him say so."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

The Sunday-School.

Jan. 31, 1904.

JESUS CALLS FOUR DISCIPLES.—
Luke 5:1-11.

Memory Verses 4 to 6.

GOLDEN TEXT.—If ye continue in my word then are ye my disciples.—John 8:31.

It was shortly after the removal of headquarters from Nazareth to Capernaum, following the rejection at the former place, that the episode occurred which forms the subject of the present lesson. Jesus had now fairly begun his Galilean ministry which continued almost without interruption for nearly two years. For the record of the events of this entire period we must look to the synoptic Gospels, for the Gospel of John scarcely touches upon any part of this matter.

The First Followers.

At the very beginning of his ministry, Jesus had called certain men to himself to become, in a sense, his disciples. Some of these had already been disciples of John the Baptist. In John 1:35-51, we are told Jesus attached to his cause and to himself, five men—Peter, Andrew, John, Philip and Nathaniel. Some, if not all of these, had evidently clung to him, for immediately after this calling of the five it is said that Jesus and his disciples were invited to the marriage at Cana. It is clear, however, that this earliest discipleship was of a more or less vague and unsettled sort, and not the complete commitment which later characterized the twelve in their attitude toward the Lord. Doubtless they had spent some time with him, and had then gone back to their homes to attend to their own affairs.

Preaching in Galilee.

Jesus was now preaching through Galilee in the synagogues, and very likely elsewhere when opportunity offered. There was no difficulty in getting an audience. The "multitude pressed upon him," in their eagerness to hear his glad tidings. The very fact of his increasing popularity, based as it was upon a failure to understand the spiritual character of his mission, made it evident that he must choose a little group of followers, and get closer to them and give them a more intimate knowledge of his plans and purposes than the multitude was capable of receiving.

The Need of Human Help.

He was preaching one day on the shore of the sea of Galilee and the crowd thronged about him as usual. Partly to get standing ground and breathing room, and perhaps partly also to make Peter feel that he was helping, he stepped into Peter's fishing-boat, which was at hand, and made it a pulpit from which to address the throng on the shore. It was the beginning of the policy, which he used during his earthly ministry, and which he has been employing still more throughout subsequent ages. The precious treasure of divine truth is committed to the frail little barques of his disciples, and the talents and possessions of even the weakest of us become vehicles which the Lord not only can use, but actually needs in carrying on his work. Peter's status at this time was that of a believer in the Messiahship of Jesus and a disciple, who had, perhaps, attended him on his return journey from Judea to Galilee, and had then gone back to the pursuit of his calling as a fisherman. He believed, but he had not committed his life to the service of his faith. Obedience and Faith.

The reward for Peter's first act of service came promptly. He had served as a fisherman by lending his boat; he was rewarded as a fisherman by a wonderful draft of fishes. His slight hesitation when told to let down his nets, and his hint that it was scarcely worth while since they had fished all night without catching anything, indicate that his faith was not yet of a robust order. But the fact that he did obey, even half-heartedly, and that the result was supremely convincing, illustrates the truth that the best way to increase one's faith is to use the faith one has. Action is usually more convincing than argu-

DON'T BUY AN OUT-OF-DATE MACHINE ON A WORN-OUT REPUTATION

NOR A WEAK ATTEMPT AT VISIBLE WRITING WITH
TANGLEFOOT TYPEBARS AND SLOT GUIDES.

The Standard Visible Oliver Writers and Billers with 10 in., 12 in., 15 in. and 18 in. Carriages

Are Rapid
Convenient
Simple
Durable
And have
The Best
Touch
Method
Key Board

Enable
The Operator
To do
The Most
Of the Best Work
The Easiest

Write upon any size or shape of paper from a postage stamp or druggists' label to an insurance policy or freight way-bill, lined or unlined

Used by the Government and Largest Corporations

The OLIVER TYPEWRITER COMPANY

Century Building, 315 North Ninth Street,

ST. LOUIS, MO.

ment, and the person who can be induced to act up to the full measure of his present beliefs can usually be brought to believe all that it is necessary for him to believe.

The Call of the Four.

Peter's first thought, when he came face to face with the miraculous evidence of the divine power of Jesus, was of his own unworthiness. Like Isaiah when he saw the vision of God's holiness, he cried out, "I am a sinful man." And this recognition of his own unworthiness was a step toward making him the more worthy and more fit for the high office to which he was about to be called. The thoughts and emotions of Peter's comrades, James and John and (Matthew 4:18) Andrew, are not recorded in detail. But it is said that they, like Peter, were amazed, and doubtless they were all filled with such apprehension and self-abasement as would naturally result from finding themselves in the presence of so wonderful a person.

The multitude on shore has now been forgotten. What they thought and how they were impressed is treated as a matter of little consequence, but it was a matter of much consequence that Jesus found here in these four fishermen, men to whom he could commit so momentous a mission as that of being "fishers of men." From the hour when they received this commission, their nets and boats became matters of minor concern, and the great object of their lives was to be used of God in capturing and saving the souls of men. This call of the four, therefore, was not simply a call to faith, not simply a call to personal salvation, it was a call to fellowship through service.

DRAKE'S PALMETTO WINE.

A complete medicine and tonic for immediate relief and absolute cure of Chronic Stomach Troubles, Flatulency, Constipation, Liver and Kidney Congestion, Inflammation of Bladder and Catarrh of Mucous Membranes. When used for the cure of Bright's Disease, Diabetes and female troubles, it cures to stay cured and promotes health and vigor. One tablespoonful, once a day, establishes a perfect cure and is a wonderful tonic for the appetite and nerves and purifies and enriches the blood. Seventy-five cents at Drug Stores for a large bottle, usual dollar size, but a trial bottle will be sent free and prepared to every reader of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST who writes for it to Drake Formula Company, Lake and Dearborn Streets, Chicago, Ill. Simply send your name and address, with request for one bottle of Drake's Palmetto Wine prepaid, free of charge.

CHURCH FURNITURE

Pews, Pulpits, Etc.

The best that money can buy.
Grand Rapids School Furniture Works
Corner Wabash and Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

Low Rates Southwest

Twice a month the Cotton Belt sells homeseekers' tickets to points in Southeast Missouri, Arkansas, Louisiana and Texas.

Dates are Jan. 5 and 19, Feb. 2 and 16, Mar. 1 and 15.

The rate is about half fare, stop overs allowed going, 21 days' return limit.

This is a country of mild climate, of diversified crops, of cheap homes.

Write for descriptive literature, maps, etc.

E. W. LaBEAUME, G. P. & T. A.,
Cotton Belt, ST. LOUIS MO.

Midweek Prayer-Meeting.

Jan. 27, 1904.

CONVERSION.

—Psalm 51:13.

The importance of the subject which we are to study now, grows out of the fact that conversion is a universal human need. The universality of its need is based on the fact that all men have sinned and have come short of the glory of God.

What is conversion? It is the act of the individual soul in turning away from its sins and turning to God. It is the sinner's right-about, by which, instead of continuing in the downward way, he faces Christward and heavenward, and enters upon a new life. It is man's act not God's. In conversion man is active not passive. The phrase "be converted" in the common version, is rendered, "turn again" in the revised version, and this is its meaning throughout the New Testament. It is the decisive act in the history of the human soul.

How effected. While conversion is man's act, it is always accomplished under divine influence. Left to himself, man does not turn. It is only as the divine voice is heard, speaking to the human conscience, to human reason, to human judgment, and to the human will, that the individual yields and turns to God. This voice of God is heard, ordinarily, in the gospel of His grace, which is the power of God unto salvation unto every one that believeth. The gospel is the power of God, and Christ is the power of the gospel. It is the love of God, manifested in Christ Jesus living and dying and rising again for us, that wins the human heart to righteousness, and brings it to repentance and to conversion. But this truth and love of Christ may be mediated to us in many ways,—through our own experience, through the Christian lives of others, particularly of parents and others near to us, and in ways we know not of. Children who are trained from infancy in the knowledge and love of Jesus Christ, come so naturally into the kingdom of God, that they do not experience that sudden change, or radical experience which comes to the willful and hardened sinner, who is brought to the knowledge of his sins and to conversion. This difference should always be borne in mind by parents and Christian teachers.

Signs of Conversion. Love for God and for all our fellow men; the willingness to do God's will as we understand it; the spirit of forgiveness toward all who have wronged us; hungering and thirsting after righteousness; the relish for reading God's word, and for attending upon public worship, and the habit of private personal prayer,—these are among the evidences that we have "passed from death into life."

How may we be instrumental in the conversion of others? Let us hear the Psalmist:

"Restore unto me the joy of Thy salvation,
And uphold me with a free spirit:
Then will I teach transgressors Thy ways;
And sinners shall be converted unto Thee."

Not until we are right ourselves, can we lead others into the right way.

Prayer: Gracious Father we thank Thee, that when we were like lost sheep, going astray, Thou didst send Thy Son, the Good Shepherd, to seek us and to gather us into His fold. May we continue to hear His voice, and to follow Him until He shall gather us at last into the heavenly fold! For His Name's sake, Amen.

Read the advertisement of The Natural Body Brace Co. in another column. Their Braces have no equal for the purposes for which they are intended. During the twelve years of their dealing with the general public this company has established an enviable reputation for truthfulness, fair dealing and courteous personal attention to every customer. Every family should have the book and general information, which they send free to all who write for it.

Christian Endeavor.

By H. A. Denton.

Jan. 31, 1904.

EVERY CHRISTIAN CALLED TO BE A MISSIONARY.—Luke 24:44-49.

For the Leader.

As has been said, missionary work is personal work, and one sent to do a work for his fellow men, be it far or near, is a missionary. He is doing the works of Him that sent him. But we want to consider the claims of Christ upon every Disciple to be a missionary in a farther region than right at home. There is a near-sighted view of the claims of Christ upon us that reads everything into a duty near home; that makes it as easy as possible. We need the farther view. It would be better to say we need the normal sight; the sight that sees both far and near in proper proportion without the help of glasses. This sight sees the whole world. Every Christian is called to be a missionary. And while we study this topic to-night let us have some facts from the mission fields of our own church

For the Members.

1. Have you ever heard one say, "I am a Christian, but I am not a missionary?" It would be more logically stated if such person would say, "I am not missionary, and therefore I am not a Christian." That is, not a Christian in the fuller sense; not such a Christian as Christ would have me to be.

2. Have you ever heard one say, "I am missionary, but I believe in missions at home?" This is a case of self-deception. There are not, in the true sense, any missionary Christians who reject the Christian doctrine of preaching the gospel to every creature. Every Christian will not only be a missionary at heart, but he will be a missionary in life. He can preach far and near through his money, if it is not so he can go himself.

3. Have you ever heard one say, "We have heathen right here at home?" This cannot be. What does it mean to be a heathen? Stop and think a moment about what a real heathen is. A heathen is one who not only has never heard the gospel, but one who lives in a land where there is no gospel of Jesus Christ. If there is a genuine heathen in America he has been imported, and his present environment places him in another class from the heathen in the home of the heathen.

4. Every Christian is called to be a missionary Christian. Remember, "missionary" does not express a grace that may be added as a very desirable thing, a sort of second degree, but that it expresses a fundamental change of heart, without which one simply falls short of his model. Let the issue be clearly stated. Let the lines be drawn. The time for temporizing has passed by. The fact is that it is the Master's plan for every follower he has, to be, like himself, a missionary.

Damoh, India and Porto Rico, U. S.

1. The Endeavor Societies of our church supported last year in the orphanage of our Foreign Missionary Society, at Damoh, India, 350 orphan boys. It costs $18 to keep a boy a year. Write F. M. Rains, Box 884, Cincinnati, O., that you will support a boy this year.

2. Our Endeavorers have been helping our Home Missionary Society support the work of evangelizing our new possession, Porto Rico. E. M. Pardee and wife are our missionaries there. Make a pledge to that work and notify B. L. Smith, Y. M. C. A. building, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Quiet Hour Thoughts.

Does the Master want me to give my life for His sake to the foreign field?

DAILY READINGS.

M. Withholding the Truth.	Jonah 1:1-3.
T. Constrained by Love.	2 Cor. 5:13-21.
W. Weakness no Excuse.	1 Cor. 2:1-5.
T. Liberal Giving.	Mk. 12:41-44.
F. Inviting Others.	Ps. 34:1-8.
S. Praying for Others.	Col. 4:2-4.
S. Every Christian a Missionary.	Lu. 24:44-53.

A Start on the Road to Riches is always made by saving. One dollar or more will start a savings account with us. We pay 3 per cent per annum, compounded twice a year. Write for leaflet on instructions in regard to depositing by mail.

Capital, Surplus and Profits..... $8,200,000

MISSISSIPPI VALLEY TRUST CO

FOURTH & PINE STS. ST. LOUIS

One of the World's Vexed Problems

Solved by
Mina Thomas' splendid work:

"The Reality and Evil of Spiritualism."

This great book, the result of years of labor and research, with its wealth of information, will prove invaluable to the student, while it furnishes the church the most powerful weapon with which to assail Spiritualism, the most dangerous foe to Christianity. An extensive reading of the book is highly recommended by the following distinguished clergymen of St. Louis:

Rev. Dr. John Mathews, Rev. Dr. W. W. Boyd, Rev. Dr. W. F. McMurray, Rev. Dr. F. W. Luce, Rev. Dr. Michael Burnham, Rev. M. Rhodes, Rev. Dr. J. H. Garrison, Editor Christian-Evangelist.

Retail price, silk cloth, $2.00
Buckram, $2.50 Half Morocco, $3.00
Agents wanted. Liberal discounts given.

Thomas Library Company,
1013 Grattan St., St. Louis, Mo.

See review in this issue.

Barnes Business College

BOARD OF EDUCATION BUILDING., ST. LOUIS, MO.

Established 22 years. Eight expert teachers. May we tell you what a business course with us means? And we'd be pleased to say something about our shorthand and Touch Typewriting course. We give personal instruction, and can offer advantages not to be obtained elsewhere. Catalogue free.

GEO. KILGEN & SON

BUILDERS OF HIGH-GRADE

Pipe Organs

ST. LOUIS, MO.

Best of References. Correspondence Solicited.

INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION SERVICE

Made of several materials and in many designs, including self-collecting tray. Send for full particulars and Catalogue No. 27. Give the number of communicants.

GEO. H. SPRINGER, Manager,
256-258 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

LAND FREE! Send stamp for information.
J. L. LOVERING, Agt., 118 4th st., St. Paul, Minn.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION

CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup, Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.

25 CTS.

Our Budget

—The CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST greets its readers with its fortieth anniversary number.

—Herein will be found many hearty congratulations and expressions of good will and confidence from readers and contemporaries, far and near, which are more highly appreciated than we can tell.

—It is compensation for all these years of conflict and toil to receive such generous recognition of honest and earnest efforts to promote the kingdom of God, from our own brotherhood and from many of the great leaders of religious thought in other religious bodies.

—Nothing could be more gratifying to us than this manifestation of the spirit of fraternity from the religious press generally, as a response to, and a recognition of, the same spirit which this paper has sought to manifest throughout its history.

—So large and general have been the responses from the brotherhood to our announcement of this anniversary number, we will be compelled to omit many which have come in too late for a place in this issue. Nor do we forget that there are thousands of no less appreciative readers who will not be heard from, but in whose hearts there is a grateful appreciation of all that the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST has done, and is doing, and may yet do, for the promotion of a purer Christianity and the unity of the people of God.

—If some of our departments are a little scant this week, it will be because the anniversary feature has been allowed to control our space very largely, as such anniversaries do not come very often in the history of a paper. But a number of articles received must wait for later issues.

—W. C. German closed his work at Atwood, Colo., Jan. 12, and will take charge of the church at McCook, Neb., at once.

—G. A. Ragan, evangelist, assisted by W. A. Wallace, soloist, is in a revival at Marietta, O., with prospects for a good meeting.

—Marion Stevenson, of Irving Park, Chicago, is giving a series of lecture studies on the Pentateuch at Thompson, Ill., Jan. 17-22.

—Milo Atkinson, of Petersburg, Ky., will take charge of the church at Covington, Ky., while its pastor, George A. Miller, is absent in Palestine.

—A competent music teacher, a member of the Christian Church, can find an opening in Kingman, Kan. Address R. S. Robertson, pastor Christian Church.

—O. D. Maple, of Lawton, Okla., requests members of the Christian Church everywhere to send the names and addresses of friends who have moved into the Territory.

—J. H. Hardin has engaged the Y. M. C. A. hall at Portland, Maine, and began preaching there Sunday night, Jan. 17. Portland is the largest city in Maine, and one of the most important cities in New England. We have no church there.

—I will put churches within a hundred miles of St. Louis, who write me, in correspondence with one of our strongest evangelistic pastors, who will hold meetings or preach regularly for one or more churches.—H. WARNER NEWBY, Guthrie, Okla.

—The church at Bellaire, O., of which Sumner T. Martin is pastor, will hold a great missionary rally on Jan. 26. A. McLean, G. L. Wharton, W. P. Bentley and Miss Kelly will be there. All the preachers and church workers of the adjacent region are invited.

—Among the 1904 calendars which we have received, is one from N. W. Ayer & Son. They have adhered to their usual plan of making it a business man's calendar, with big legible dates. The blank spaces are filled with terse maxims on business, and particularly on advertising. Requests for the calendar addressed to their Philadelphia office, 300 Chestnut Street, accompanied by 25 cents, will receive attention.

—W. A. Meloan has accepted a call from the church at Elsberry, Mo., and will labor for them the second and fourth Sundays in each month. He would be glad to place the balance of his time with any church or churches in 50 to 100 miles of Elsberry. Write him for terms, etc.

—R. A. Burriss, of Port Arthur, Ont., is about to begin the publication of a monthly paper called the "New Ontario Independent." The primary object to be accomplished he says, is the erection of a church building at Port Arthur. We wish him success in his journalistic enterprise.

—Harry D. Smith, pastor of the church at Hopkinsville, Ky., has been confined to his room and bed a part of the time during the past two weeks on account of neuralgia, which chiefly affected his right eye. Brother Smith is probably a victim of overwork, and his church should send him on a vacation.

—We regret that the late arrival of some of the greetings for this anniversary number, has compelled us to stow them away in corners wherever we could find room for them. They deserve a more prominent position than we were able to give them at the time they arrived. But, depend upon it, they will be found and read.

—Claude E. Hill has been elected president of the Ministerial Alliance of Mobile, Ala. The honor to Brother Hill and to the church which he represents is the more appreciated because our cause is almost unknown in that city. Brother Hill preached to a large audience in the largest church in the city one evening during the week of prayer.

—I commenced to read the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST with your first connection with the Gospel Echo, and have read it continuously since then. My wife commenced reading it in her early childhood, and my children began to read it as soon as they learned to read. We would be lost without it in our household.—J. W. HOPWOOD, Pond Creek, Okla.

—Claris Yeuell has recently located at Columbia, Mo., and will preach and lecture from that centre. He has lectures on "Jaunts About Jamaica," "Some Lights and Shadows of London," "On the Summits of the Sunny South," "Spurgeon, Prince of Preachers," and others. He is also a good preacher and can be secured by churches accessible from Columbia.

—"The churches at Lincoln and Carneiro, Kan., desire to correspond with a young minister who would like to take the work in a Kansas field. The two churches intend to cooperate in employing a pastor for full time. Will pay about $650 per year. Good houses and congregations at each place. Write to A. Artman, Lincoln, Kan., and to A. W. Sheridan, Carneiro, Kan."

—If the CHRISTIAN EVANGELIST had followed the practice of some women, who, on remarrying carry forward their original names, the name of the paper would be: "The Christian Messenger-Western Evangelist-Gospel Echo-Christian Herald-Christian-Christian Pioneer-Christian Record-Faithful Witness-Church Register-Christian-Evangelist!" Who would ever subscribe to a paper with so much name as that? Our present hyphenated name includes all there is in all the preceding names, the one part being expressive of character and the other of work. To be a

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL.

Few People Know How Useful It Is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly every body knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but, simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says: "I advise Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefitted by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I got more and better charcoal in Stuart's absorbent Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

Christian is the highest position anyone can attain in this life, and to be an Evangelist is to spread the good news, that others may share in the blessing of such position.

—I congratulate you on the current number, Jan. 7, of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. The editorial on "A Timely Funeral" is a gem. Your sense of humor is something profound. You are doing a great service for our brotherhood by upholding the liberty of the gospel with intelligence and remarkable poise. Long live the CHRISTIAN EVANGELIST.

New York City. J. P. LICHTENBERGER.

—All sorts of theories have been promulgated in explanation and interpretation of the Iroquois theater disaster. Some have called it a warning against theater-going, while others have characterized it simply as an inscrutable dispensation of Providence. L. E. Sellers, of Terre Haute, preached a sermon on the subject, in which he took the position that such accidents are not traceable to the will of God, but to the violation of some natural law, which is also God's law.

—The Kansas City Times of the 11th inst., contains a series of resolutions by the Hyde Park Church, expressing the highest appreciation of the services of its pastor, R. F. Fife, and extending to him a call for an indefinite time, with a pledge of increase of salary. We are glad to note this appreciation of the unselfish service of Brother Fife and his family in the erection of the new church which was recently dedicated, and we welcome it as an exception to what is a too general rule, that the pastor whose labors have resulted in the building of a new church, must give place to his successor on its completion. Brother Fife reports 51 additions to the church during the year, being a net gain of 48. The amount of money raised for a new building and other expenses, $15,849 20. This is a fine record for a building year.

Have You Read A Christian or a Church- Member—Which?

By JNO. G. M. LUTTENBERGER, D. O.

*The Book
which should be in every home.*

Don't fail to get a copy at once.

Price, 50 Cents, Postpaid.

Address Author, 5104 Morgan St., or
Christian Publishing Co., St. Louis, Mo.

—Last week the Board of Church Extension received $1,000 on the annuity plan from three different friends in Missouri. Two of these were gifts of $300 each and one of $400. The last of these is the 103rd gift to the Church Extension fund on the annuity plan. These three gifts mean that three new churches will be built at once in our new mission fields. The board has received $7,800 on the annuity plan since Oct. 1. Write to G. W. Muckley, Cor. Sec., Kansas City, Mo., concerning the annuity plan.

—In reply to many inquiries in regard to the Christian Endeavor Hotel to be erected in connection with the World's Fair at St. Louis, we will state that the construction of this hotel is now a certainty. The directorate of the company includes some of the most substantial business men of St. Louis, and Bro. John L. Brandt, pastor of the First Christian Church is secretary of the company. All persons desiring information about the enterprise may secure it by addressing Brother Brandt.

—We received, among other historical sketches, accounts of the origin of the "Faithful Witness" at Fayetteville, Ark., by J. M. Shepherd, and of the Church Register at Plattsburg, Mo., by J. C. Creel, but they in some way were mislaid, and we have not been able to get them duplicated in time for this issue. A fuller account of the beginning of the Christian Pioneer, by D. T. Wright, in 1861, has been furnished by T. P. Haley, but it reached us too late for this number, which we have had to close up early because of the large edition demanded. These, with other messages relating to the anniversary number, which have been crowded out of this, will appear in later issues. We are grateful to all who have aided us, in any way, in preparing this number.

—The cut on our first page this week is prepared from the completed plans of the new building for the Christian Publishing Co., to be erected soon on our new and elegant lot at 2712 Pine Street. The architect is Mr. Guy Crandall Mariner, and the building is especially designed for our publishing business, and will be wholly adapted to it. It is modern in all its appointments. This building would have been in process of construction now, but for the excessive high price of labor and material caused by the extraordinary demands of the World's Fair. The work will begin as soon as this extra pressure is removed. Meanwhile we will be compelled to do business and to receive our World's Fair visitors in the old quarters at 1522 Locust Street.

BIRTHDAY GREETINGS.

Hard to Measure Our Debt to It.

I am glad to join with your thousands of well-wishers in hearty congratulations to the Christian Evangelist on attaining its fortieth birthday, and in congratulations equally hearty to its genial editor on his thirty-five years of association with it. It has been a most happy combination, and what our great cause owes to it would be hard to measure. May the combination long continue! May the paper and the man both grow—I was about to say old, but that clearly wouldn't do—young together, and may the smile of God continue to rest upon them both. GEORGE DARSIE.

Frankfort, Ky.

The Gospel Messenger.

J. H. GARRISON, DEAR FRIEND:—Permit me to congratulate you on rounding out a thirty five years' course of editorial work. For twelve years I have been a careful reader of your well conducted journal, and I need hardly tell you that I have enjoyed the work of your pen. I have also been a close reader of your books. They have proven helpful to me in more ways than one. Your people should be proud of the efforts which you have made to give them a good journal and to stand in defense of the principles which your people have espoused.

Elgin, Ill.

J. H. MOORE,

Editor Gospel Messenger.

"No Detective, No Growler, No Hater."

The Christian-Evangelist has been a weekly visitor to my desk from the beginning of its career in St. Louis to the present. It is a helpful religious journal—strong, sound, progressive, aggressive, conservative, dignified, charitable. The editor, J. H. Garrison, has grown up among his brethren, and knows them as they were, as they are, and as they should be. His editorials are always wisely conceived, and wisely expressed, optimistic and inspiring. The Christian-Evangelist is no detective, it is no growler, it is no hater. "Peace on earth, good will among men," has been the dominant sentiment with the Christian-Evangelist during the past. May it so continue.

A. B. JONES.

Liberty, Mo.

Christian Companion.

DEAR BROTHER GARRISON:—I congratulate you and the Christian-Evangelist upon the arrival of another anniversary in the long and useful history of your journal. The duties of an editor of a great religious paper are onerous and exacting, and the mission of such a periodical is a serious and important one; and when by dint of hard labor, such an enterprise survives the wrecks and failures of forty years, and enters upon its forty-first year full of vigor and hope, it deserves the admiration and respect of public opinion. Wishing you yet many years of life, prosperity and usefulness, both personally and in your paper, I take great pleasure in subscribing myself most fraternally yours,

Louisville, Ky.

J. B. BRINEY.

In the Early Days.

MY DEAR BRO. GARRISON:—During the early '70's when you were publishing the Gospel Echo in Quincy, Ill., I, a young chap of twenty, was keeping books for Mr. T. M. Rogers, publisher of the daily Journal and Tribune, who printed your paper for you. My desk was but a few steps distant from your sanctum, which was vastly more simple than the present ample quarters of the Christian-Evangelist. I well remember the incredulity with which my employer, himself not a member of the church, viewed your efforts to establish a religious journal, and how often he expressed to me, in your absence, his regret that "so nice a man as you were should squander what little means he had in an enterprise which was doomed to certain failure." It was my pleasure to serve in many humble ways the modest paper that issued weekly from

Help!

An accident in the house? Run quick for The Old Family Doctor, POND'S EXTRACT. A bottle in the house is a capable doctor always within reach.

60 years answering "hurry calls" in the home.

60 years experience giving "first aid" to the injured.

60 years success curing inflammation, bruises, cuts, sprains, soreness. Invaluable in winter for frost-bite, nipped ears, chilblains, chapped hands, sore throat, rheumatic pains.

Witch hazel is not the same as Pond's Extract. Do not be deceived. Pond's Extract is sold only in sealed bottles with buff wrapper, and there is no substitute.

your office. I served as mailing clerk much of the time, and in other ways became acquainted with the inner tribulations of the editor of a Christian paper. Better than a long list of rich stockholders was the implicit trust in God, the absolute consecration to the cause of Christ, and the sworn allegiance to truth which I ever found the dominant factors in your enterprise. Pardon me if I say, my dear friend and brother, that the loving friendship with which you then honored your young acquaintance and servant, has been an inspiration to him during all the subsequent years. May the Lord continue to enrich your mind and heart with his unfailing truth and grace, and may you long survive in strength of both mind and body, to direct the thought and life of multitudes through your splendid CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST.

Fraternally and affectionately,

Kansas City, Mo. W. F. RICHARDSON.

"Steady Progress."

DEAR BROTHER GARRISON:—You have certainly made a praiseworthy success of the Christian-Evangelist. I have observed a steady progress in its editorial management for years. Every number shows intelligence, diligent labor, and good taste, that reveals an evident purpose to give the Christian-Evangelist a high character as a religious journal. You deserve great credit for all this.

CHAS. LOUIS LOOS.

MY DEAR BROTHER GARRISON:—With all my heart I congratulate you and the brotherhood on the thirty-five years of stalwart service for the Master through your splendid medium, the Christian-Evangelist. The wholesome, sane and strong editorials which have appeared weekly in the Christian Evangelist constitute the "highest water mark" of editorial activity among the Disciples of Christ. The whole brotherhood is proud of your achievement.

May the happy union of editor and paper, now unbroken through thirty-five years, be broken only by death, long postponed.

Des Moines, Ia.

H. O. BREEDEN.

GIVES A LIGHT
THAT RIVALS ELECTRICITY
IN BRILLIANCY

STUDEBAKER ARC
PRESSURE LAMP
(700 Candle Power)

THE BEST AND CHEAPEST
LIGHT KNOWN

This Lamp has been approved
by the National Board of Fire
Underwriters, and its use is permitted by all Insurance Companies without increased
rate

It is simple, safe and strong, produces a perfect white light, cannot clog up, is easily cleaned, and can be hung anywhere or used as a standing lamp. With one-half gallon of gasoline burns 10 to 12 hours, at a cost of one-half cent per hour. Agents wanted in every city and town. Active men may obtain exclusive territory. Write for catalogue and prices. Address

STUDEBAKER GAS LIGHTING CO.
1101-1103 E. 9th St. Dept G Kansas City, Mo.

$3 a Day Sure

Send us your address and we will show you how to make $3 a day absolutely sure; we furnish the work and teach you free, you work in the locality where you live. Send us your address and we will explain the business fully, remember we guarantee a clear profit of $3 every day a work, absolutely sure. Write at once

ATLANTIC PACIFIC TRADING CO., Box 125, Detroit, Mich.

News From Many Fields

From England.

The new year opens full of promise at Chester. The work here is in its twenty-seventh year, and though we are still a struggling congregation we are glad that the leaven of Christian union is at work here. The past twenty-seven years have seen a great change in the religious world of Chester and other cities. It has witnessed the development of The Evangelical Free Church Council and Christian Endeavor Union, both of which are powerful agencies for the creation and development of the fraternal spirit, that must precede that closer union for which we plead. Yet there is still but little spirit of toleration between the Anglican and non-conformist bodies, and daily the bitter feeling is growing more intense, due to the Education Act. England certainly needs a united church freed from sectarian creeds. It will take all the energies of a united church to overthrow the strongly entrenched evils in her social life.

As I read of the grand meeting at Joplin, Mo., I wished we could accomplish something like that here. But the people are so conservative and have such prejudice the work progresses very slowly. After four months here I feel I am just beginning to grasp the situation, to know the people and the problems that confront us.

Christmas I spent at Southport with Bro. J. Coop, where the editor of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST spent some time. They have a nice building, well located, but the work there is slow, but they are very hopeful for the new year. Brother Fowler, the new minister from Ohio, is on the ground and ready for a good work.

Our work at Liverpool, under the leadership of Benj. Mitchell, is making the best showing at present. They have added something over one hundred in a little over a year. The next annual conference of our English churches will be held at Chester.

Chester, Eng.

ROBERT H. NEWTON.

Los Angeles Letter.

The first Lord's day in January, 1904, was a red letter day in the history of the work of the First Church, Los Angeles. For some time our church has been needing a pipe organ. An appeal was made by the pastor for cash and pledges last Sunday, and in a short while nearly $2,000 was pledged. This means an instrument in the next few months. At the conclusion of the money raising and without a sermon an invitation hymn was sung and three persons responded to confess their faith in Jesus Christ and three others by letters and statement to affiliate themselves with our church.

At 3 P. M. of the same day our church inaugurated its mission in the southwestern part of the city in Longherd Hall. Most of the pastors of our churches in the city were present and made congratulatory speeches. Money has been raised and it is expected that a pastor will be employed for this field before these words appear in print. There will be a charter membership of at least fifty persons. The First Church owns a nice corner lot upon which a church house will be erected in the near future for the use of this child of their work. A strong and vigorous work is expected in this most important field. This is now the eighth place in Los Angeles where preaching is done and the Lord's supper is observed every week.

The day's work of the First Church was concluded at the evening service at which a large audience gathered to hear a prelude to the evening service by Mrs. Smither upon "A Visit to St. Peter's and the Vatican" and a sermon by the pastor upon the "Biblical Teaching About Punishment Reasonable," which was the thirteenth of a series of Sunday evening sermons on "Christianity a Reasonable Religion." At this service five more were added to the membership of our congregation thus finishing one of the greatest days in the history of my long pastorate with this splendid church.

Los Angeles these days is putting on cosmopolitan airs. Her postal receipts for December, 1903, were 27 per cent greater than in December, 1902. Not the least of her metropolitan airs is in her pulpit. Two squares from the First Church is being erected a $75,000 church for Rev. George Thomas Dowling, rector of Christ Episcopal Church and a man of wide fame all over the country. Three blocks from our church stands the Immanuel Presbyterian Church with a membership of nearly 2,000, the strongest Protestant Church on the Pacific coast and the fifth strongest Presbyterian Church in the United States. Dr. Hugh K. Walker is the popular pastor of this congregation. A few blocks south of us, Frank DeWitt Talmage, the son of his father is indulging in rhetorical gymnastics for the entertainment of large crowds. A few blocks north and east, Robt. J. Burdette, the celebrated humorist entertains the Temple Baptist Church with his wit and drollery while just across the street from him the famous Robert McIntyre preaches to great throngs at the First Methodist Church. Only a few squares further up town the only original Francis Murphy packs a big hall every Sunday evening with interested listeners. What other city of the country can boast of so many celebrities? If there is any one who thinks it easy to compete with such attractions, he needs to come to Los Angeles and try his skill. Notwithstanding these big guns the writer goes on in the fourteenth year of his pastorate in this city, preaching to larger audiences than at any time in the history of the church. Our baptistry is wet nearly every week. Our missionary offerings in the past year will approximate $2,000.

E. S. Conner, well known in Indiana, has been for two years doing a good work in Pomona. He has resigned there to accept the pastorate of the Eighth Street Church, of this city, to succeed H. E. Ward, who resigned there some months since. Brother Conner's ministry starts off most auspiciously. We give him a cordial welcome to our growing city.

Los Angeles, Cal.

Portland Avenue, Minneapolis.

As the largest church we have in Minnesota, the standing of this congregation is of interest to all our friends in this state. Pastor Abberley reported 401 resident members, at peace, in harmony and distinguished by a will to work, efficiency in service and missionary zeal. In the six months since he came to the church there had been added, by baptism 18, by letter 29, by statement nine. The church treasurer reported the amount raised for current expenses, including pastor's salary $3,321.52, with a deficit of $135. For missions, home and foreign, by all departments of the church, including women's and children's societies, $1,100.26, as follows: Church offerings, $658.46; auxiliary to C. W. B. M., $287.25; aid society, $10; Y. P. S. C. E., $20; mission band, $30; Sunday-school, $94.55.

The Christian Endeavor reported regular meetings at the county jail, city mission, and hospitals. Aid society reported much clothing given to the poor, the buying of a set of individual communion service for the church, and a promise to raise $750 toward a new church organ to cost not over $3,000.

An innovation in the annual election of officers was the work of nominations. This was done by a nominating committee composed as follows: Thirty days previous to the meeting one person was chosen by each adult society in the church to be a member of the nominating committee; that is, one from the board of elders, one from the deacons, one from the Christian Endeavor, one from the aid society, one from the auxiliary to the C. W. B. M. and the pastor. The committee had to do good work, and had a month in which to make their selections. They could be approached by any member of the church with suggestions, and thus every department had a voice in choosing officers through its own representative, though the committee meetings were in private. The plan worked well, and the work of the committee met with the approval of the church.

The annual meeting was held on the evening of Dec. 29, and preceding the meeting, supper was served to all who wished, by Mrs. Herthum's Sunday-school class of young girls, to raise money toward supporting an orphan in India. They only charged 20 cents, and cleared $22.50. After supper, Dr. D. O. Thomas presented to the church the nicely framed pictures of J. C. Hay, one of our earlier pastors, and our present pastor. We now have in our lecture room the pictures of J. C. Hay, Enos Campbell, W. J. Lhamon, Carey E. Morgan, C. J. Tannar, and R. W. Abberley, angels of the Portland Ave. Church. All the pictures were given by Dr. Thomas.

A. M. CHOATE.

FERRY'S

Seeds

cost more—yield more—save all experimenting—save disappointments. 48 years the Standard Seeds.
Sold by all dealers. 1904.
Seed Annual postpaid free, to all applicants.

D. M. FERRY & CO.,
Detroit, Mich.

If you purchase a
PIANO OR ORGAN
with the name

upon it, you will have the VERY BEST MUSICAL INSTRUMENT that money can buy. Prices and terms most reasonable. Catalogues free to any address.

THE ESTEY CO.,

1116 Olive St., St. Louis, Mo.

Mention this paper.

OIL-GAS—WONDERFUL NEW FUEL.
$125 to $250 a Month and Expenses

Men and women. Salesmen, managers, general agents for wonderful new invention—Harrison's Blue Flame Wickless Oil-Gas Stoves, for cooking, baking, heating. Wonderful seller. Big profits. Generates oil-gas fuel from kerosene oil. Hottest blue flame gas fire. No wick. Cheapest fuel. Absolutely safe. Gasoline is dangerous. Catalogue FREE. Write for special offer and new plan.

WORLD MFG. CO.,
5577 World Bldg., Cincinnati, O.

WORLD'S GREATEST BELL FOUNDRY

CHURCH, PEAL AND CHIME BELLS ESTABLISHED 1837.
Best Copper and Tin Only.
THE E. W. YANDUZEN COMPANY.
BERRYER BELL FOUNDRY, CINCINNATI, O.

OLYMER BELL CHURCH BELLS.

UNLIKE OTHER BELLS
SWIFTER, MORE DURABLE,
LOWER PRICE.
OUR FREE CATALOGUE
TELLS WHY.

Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

FOR SCHOOLS AND CHURCHES BUY
American Bells
 Sweet Toned. Far Sounding. Durable.
AMERICAN BELL & FOUNDRY CO.,
 FREE CATALOGUE NORTHVILLE, MICH.
 41 Cady Street.

New Mexico.

I have just returned from a visit to northern and western New Mexico, and have to report the organization of a very hopeful work in Albuquerque, the metropolis of the territory and seat of the territorial university. A number of most choice spirits and wise workers were found among the Disciples in this important town. A majority of them came from the country contiguous to Kansas City, which fact fortunately gives a very progressive and missionary spirit to this first organization of Disciples in all that vast region. The A. C. M. S. stands behind the work in northern New Mexico.

There are other points in this territory which I hope to visit soon. Among these are Raton, Tucumcari and Mesilla Park. The fields are ripe. To show the relative importance in which this field is held by other religious bodies, it is only necessary to mention that the Presbyterian Church last year spent $270,000 of mission money in this territory. I hope to hear that many strong churches request that their May offering be spent in this field.

D. B. Titus and the church at Carlsbad are doing good work. They build soon.

We have called C. C. Hill to the Roswell pastorate. This is a strong church, lacking only breadth of vision as to its mission. The government is soon to build an irrigation reservoir near the town, and railroads are projecting new lines this way. Hence we may expect a continuation of the growth of the past few years, and may look forward to educational and Christian progress.

Roswell.

JESSE B. HASTON.

Ohio Letter.

Did you read thoroughly the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST of Jan. 7? It was one of the best issues ever put out. Aylsworth spoke volumes in sentences. Power was above the average, which speaks a volume. The editor was at his best. Read it all again.

Rallies in the interest of foreign missions are on. Cleveland and vicinity will rally at Franklin Circle, Thursday, Jan. 28. A good program will be given. The sessions will be in the forenoon and afternoon only. There ought to be a large gathering.

A. J. Sever, bishop at Mentor, is in a meeting at Beverley, where J. H. McGirr preaches. J. Walter Wilson is singing for J. P. Meyers at Painesville. Geo. Darsie, Jr., is with the church at Shreve in a meeting. J. H. Bristol has accepted a call from the church at Shelby and is already there.

J. H. Gouldner, of the Euclid Ave. Church, Cleveland, will go with H. L. Willett's party to the Holy Land. Professor Snoddy, of Hiram, will edify the Euclid Ave. saints in Brother Gouldner's absence.

The dedication of the Second Church at Dayton was postponed because of pews. It will be a few weeks before it can take place.

Edgar D. Jones, of the Franklin Circle Church, Cleveland, had an attack of appendicitis that kept him from the pulpit a week or two. His physicians think an operation can be avoided.

The City Minister's Association of Cleveland gave its thought to the subject of divorce, Jan. 11. Some things were said of general interest. It is a sad fact that Cuyhoga Co., in which Cleveland is located, is the rottenest county in the world in the matter of divorce. For every five marriage licenses granted, there is one divorce granted. One year recently, one in five was granted and one in three pending. None of these come from the Catholic Church. Very few comparatively from the Protestant churches. It is non-religious people who get most of the divorces. In 30 years the population of Ohio increased 56 per cent. Divorces increased 300 per cent. Much stress was laid upon ministers adhering to the laws of the church as regards marrying people who have been divorced. Comparison was made between churches that have ecclesiastical laws on the subject and those that do not. A Presbyterian man thought much laxness was indulged in by those who had no ecclesiastical law on the subject. Among these people the Disciples of Christ were named. But be it said to their credit that the Disciples of Christ have the best church law on divorce that was ever codified. It is found in Matt. 5:31-32. Every preacher is bound by this law. The man who disregards it is as guilty of heresy as the man who receives the pious un-immersed into the church, and possibly more so. Let us be sure that our orthodoxy has a broad horizon.

The church at Steubenville is in a revival with Percy Leach, of Iowa, as evangelist. Have you arranged for a meeting yet? Let every church get on the firing line. Cry aloud and spare not. Sound out the word of truth. When you have held your meeting tell the brethren through the papers of your success.

Collinwood, Ohio.

Springfield, Ill.

The West Side Christian Church (Springfield, Ill.,) was the scene of a pleasant event on the evening of Jan. 5, the date that marks the founding of the church two years ago.

The members of the official board and their wives of the West Side Church tended as a part of the program of anniversary week a bouquet to the official board of the First Christian Church and their wives.

Covers were laid for seventy persons. The company was seated at 7 o'clock and the dinner and program of toasts and music occupied the evening. The toasts responded to showed to a marked degree the feeling of good fellowship and unity of purpose that exists between the congregations. The sentiment, "Two congregations but one church," found an echo in every heart.

The presence of A. McLean, of Cincinnati, president of the Foreign Christian Missionary Society, added not a little to the enjoyment of the occasion.

The second annual report of the West Side congregation shows a good year's work. The total amount of money contributed through the various treasuries was $5,295 01. Of this $482.12 was for missions and $99.91 for benevolences.

The report of the pastor, J. E. Lynn, showed a gain of 101 members during the year and a loss of 10, making the net gain 90. Present membership 391.

C. W. B. M. in Missouri.

Letters concerning our special work are to be sent in a few days. The delay has been caused by the appointment of a man to fill the place of our dear Brother Alderman. The man is J. E. McDaniel, of Kansas. We gladly accept the choice of our board as one of "our" missionaries.

We have issued a leaflet, called the Missouri leaflet. It refers entirely to our special work. We hope others than auxiliary members will write for a copy, that they may become acquainted with our special work and the workers we have promised to support. The picture of Sister Alderman, who bravely stands by the work undertaken by herself and husband in great hope, surrounded by her four fatherless little ones, is enough to open the purse of even a selfish person. We expect money to come freely, lovingly for the Mexico work. If any auxiliary can exceed the apportionment for special work, given by the state board, we will most gladly increase it. If any are asked for too much, we will reduce it.

A "progressive missionary social," planned by Mrs. J. H. Garrison, was given at Central Auxiliary after the regular January meeting. Five tables, each representing one of our fields, were arranged around the large parlors. Upon each was placed a little dish of confections and a good supply of literature, pictures, etc., on the field represented. A woman was chosen for each table to tell, in seven minutes, the most important facts concerning her field, the company having previously been evenly distributed among the tables. At the tap of the bell, after seven minutes, the listeners progressed one table, the sister in charge keeping her place. This was repeated, until the company had visited, in turn, each of the five

For the Children.

To Keep Their Digestion Perfect Nothing is so Safe and Pleasant as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Thousands of men and women have found Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets the safest and most reliable preparation for any form of indigestion or stomach trouble.

Thousands of people who are not sick, but are well and wish to keep well take Stuart's

Tablets after every meal to insure perfect digestion and avoid trouble.

But it is not generally known that the Tablets are just as good and wholesome for little folks as for their elders.

Little children who are pale, thin and have no appetite, or do not grow or thrive, should use the tablets after eating and will derive great benefit from them.

Mrs. G. H. Crotley, 538 Washington St., Hoboken, New Jersey, writes "Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets just fill the bill for children as well as for older folks. I've had the best of luck with them. My three-year old girl takes them as readily as candy. I have only to say 'tablets' and she drops everything else and runs for them."

A Buffalo mother, a short time ago, who despaired of the life of her babe, was so delighted with the results from giving the child these tablets that she went before the notary public of Erie, Co., N. Y., and made the following affidavit:

Gentlemen:—Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets were recommended to me for my two-months-old baby, which was sick and puny and the doctors said was suffering from indigestion. I took the child to the hospital, but there found no relief. A friend mentioned the Stuart Tablets and I procured a box from my druggist and used only the large sweet lozenges in the box and was delighted to find they were just the thing for my baby. I feel justified in saying that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets saved my child's life.

MRS. W. T. DETHLOPE,

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 12th day of April, 1897. HENRY KARIS, Notary Public in and for Erie Co., N. Y.

For babies, no matter how young or delicate, the tablets will accomplish wonders in increasing flesh, appetite and growth. Use only the large sweet tablets in every box. Full sized boxes are sold by all druggists for 50 cents, and no parent should neglect the use of this safe remedy for all stomach and bowel troubles if the child is ailing in any way regarding its food or assimilation.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have been known for years as the best preparation for all stomach troubles whether in adults or infants.

tables and heard in brief facts about the field it represented, and the five sisters in charge had each repeated her story five times. At the close, chocolate, wafers and greetings melted away all reserve even of the strangers. It was a success and a vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Garrison for the novel entertainment. Five new members were added.

St. Louis.

MRS. L. G. BANTZ.

Correspondence

Our Western Letter.

The Mormon octopus has its tentacles more or less securely fixed on Colorado, Idaho, Nevada, Arizona, Utah and New Mexico. "The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints," as the Mormons prefer to be called, is to be feared, if it is to be feared at all, as a political power. As a church along side of the Protestant denominations, it is an insignificant, almost contemptible, farce. It claims are arrogant. Here are specimens:

"The Priesthood . . . holds the keys of revelation of the Oracles of God to man upon the earth, the power and the right to give laws and commandments to individuals, churches, rulers, nations and the world; to appoint, ordain and establish constitutions and kings; to appoint kings, presidents, governors and judges; and to ordain and anoint these to their several holy callings, also to instruct, warn or reprove them by the Word of the Lord." (See "Key to Theology," 4th edition, page 70.)

By the "Priesthood," in this quotation, is not meant, of course, the Priesthood in the Roman Catholic or Protestant Episcopal Churches. By the "Priesthood" is not meant what the New Testament means by the word "priest." Simon Peter said: "Ye are an elect race, a royal priesthood." All Christians are "priests" "to offer up spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God through Jesus Christ." This is the New Testament doctrine. The "Key to Theology," from which the foregoing quotation is made, does not refer to such a "priesthood." The "priesthood" that "holds the keys of revelation;" the "priesthood" that possesses "the power and the right to give laws and commandments to individuals, churches, rulers, nations and the world;" the "priesthood" that has the right "to appoint kings, presidents, governors and judges," is the "priesthood" of "the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints." What do you think of Mormon arrogance?

"Apostle" John Taylor affirmed, see "Journal of Discourses," Vol. V., page 186, that the "Priesthood is the legitimate rule of God, whether in the heavens or on the earth, and it is the only legitimate power that has a right to rule on the earth."

Edward VII, then, is not a legitimate king. William IV is not then a legitimate emperor. Theodore Roosevelt is not a legitimate President. These men are, according to the Mormon doctrine, interlopers, usurpers, and ought to be put out of office. There are no legitimate officers in church or state other than those of the Mormon hierarchy.

The following quotation is from the "Journal of Discourses," Vol. III., page 71:

"The day will come when the United States Government, and all others, will be uprooted, and the kingdoms of this world will be united in one, and the kingdom of our God will govern the whole earth, and bear universal sway."

"The kingdom of God," in Mormon literature, means "the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints."

It is also said, by what seems to be good authority, that the "priests" and "apostles" of the Mormon church take an oath, of which the following is a part:

"I swear that I will hold eternal enmity toward the Government of the United States, and will avenge the death of Joseph Smith, the prophet."

Do you think that Reed Smoot ought to be permitted to occupy a seat in the Senate of the United States?

The danger from Mormonism is, therefore, I repeat, a political one. Mormonism is not increasing in numbers as rapidly as some timid and ill-informed persons vainly imagine. Forty or fifty years ago there were more Mormons in the United States than there are at the present time. They claimed then, and well-informed persons conceded the claim, to number a half million. "The World Almanac" for 1904 puts the number of Mormons in the United States at the present time at 340,000. But 40,000 of these constitute "The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints," whose headquarters are at Lamoni, Ia. These are the "Josephite Mormons." They claim to constitute the church founded by "Joseph Smith the Martyr." A son of that Smith is at the head of this organization. "The Reorganized Church" has no fellowship with the Brigham Young Mormons. This leaves only about 300,000 Mormons of the Utah kind in different parts of the United States—chiefly, almost wholly—in the states and territories named in the beginning of this letter.

Nor is the zeal of the rank and file equal to the zeal of the same class at that time. Those in authority, it is true, are pushing the work of making converts with great energy. This, however, is an indication of weakness rather than of strength. It is an effort born of desperation. So, at least, it seems to me.

Then why fear Mormonism as a political power?

Because of the compactness of its organization, because of its evil spirit, and because of its sworn enmity to the United States Government. From almost the beginning of its existence "the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints" has been the enemy, open and avowed, of the United States. Brigham Young, in his day, cursed and defied the government at Washington. Of course he did this, according to the Mormon claim, by inspiration of Almighty God. The Mormon spirit, in its official representatives, is the same to-day.

Subjects of this hierarchy stand together politically when there is an issue that affects the church, or when, by standing together, something can be gained for "the Saints." With the Mormon the church and its interests are pre-eminent. This would not be so objectionable were it not that their attitude toward the government is treasonable, and their teaching and practice, as to society, are distinctly and unmistakably immoral. To resist the aggressions of Mormonism is to withstand the spread of treason. To oppose the progress of Mormonism is to oppose immorality of the lowest, grossest and coarsest character.

The states and territories named above are entitled to twelve United States Senators. It is only a question of a little time when Arizona and New Mexico will be admitted into the sisterhood of the states. Each state in our republic is entitled to two representatives in the Senate, regardless of population. Nevada, for instance, with its population of 42,335 is entitled to the same representation in the Senate as New York, with a population of 7,268,894, or Pennsylvania, with a population of 6,302,115, or Illinois, with 4,821,550, or Ohio, with 4,157,545. It is an easy matter to control an election in a state with a small population. A handful of determined men can do it. Place the same man in New York, Pennsylvania, Il-

Lamp-chimneys that break are not MACBETH'S.

If you use a wrong chimney, you lose a good deal of both light and comfort, and waste a dollar or two a year a lamp on chimneys.

Do you want the Index? Write me.

MACBETH, Pittsburgh.

PILES

Piles Can Be Cured Quickly and Without Pain by Using Pyramid Pile Cure.

A Trial Package Mailed Free for the Asking.

We want every pile sufferer to try Pyramid Pile Cure at our expense.

The treatment which we send will bring immediate relief from the awful torture of itching, bleeding, burning, tantalizing piles. If they are followed up as directed we guarantee an entire cure.

The Discoverer of the World's Greatest Remedy for Piles.

We send the free treatment in a plain sealed package with nothing to indicate the contents, and all our envelopes are plain.

Pyramid Pile Cure is put up in the form of suppositories which are applied directly to the affected part. Their action is immediate and certain. They are sold at 50 cents the box by druggists everywhere and one box will frequently effect a permanent cure.

By the use of Pyramid Pile Cure you will avoid an unnecessary, trying and expensive examination by a physician and will rid yourself of your trouble in the privacy of your own home at trifling expense.

After using the free treatment, which we mail in a perfectly plain wrapper, you can secure regular full-size packages from druggists at 50 cents each, or we will mail direct in plain package upon receipt of price. Pyramid Drug Co., 114 Main Street, Marshall, Mich.

linos or Ohio, and they would be impotent. The Mormons are wise in distributing their people in Colorado, Idaho, Nevada, Arizona, New Mexico and Utah. Colorado has a population of, say, 600,000, Idaho 200,000, Nevada 45,000, Arizona 125,000, New Mexico 200,000, and Utah has in the neighborhood of 300,000, an aggregate of only 1,470,000. Utah has elected Reed Smoot. The other states and territories can elect senators when the time comes to do so. A dozen Mormon senators can almost control the supreme legislative body of this great country. Think of their character and purpose, as set forth in this letter, in their own language, as you contemplate this possibility.

What then? Let every American citizen read up on Mormonism. It behooves us to become intelligent on this subject, as on every subject, affecting the life and prosperity of our nation. Of late books have been written, in the spirit of scientific research, on the Mormons and Mormonism. I can only name in this connection, "The Story of Mormons," by William Alexander Linn, and published by the Macmillan Co., New York; "The Founder of Mormonism," by L. Woodbridge Riley, a psychological study of Joseph Smith, published by Dodd, Mead and Company, New York; and "The Mormons and Their Bible," by the Rev. M. T. Lamb, published by the Griffith and Rowland Press, Philadelphia. The last named book appeared in 1886 under the title of "The Golden Bible." Two works of fiction may be named in this connection, viz., "The Lions of the Lord," by Harry Leon Wilson, and "By Order of the Prophet," by Alfred H. Henry. While these are novels, their narratives are true to the facts of history. "The League for Social Service," 105 E. 22nd Street, New York City, has some good tracts. One of the most telling documents is "The Inside of Mormonism," published by the Utah Americans, being a judicial examination of the endowment oaths administered in all the Mormon temples, by the United States District Court for the third judicial district of Utah. This pamphlet can be obtained from "The Interdenominational Council of Women for Christian and Patriotic Service," No. 156 Fifth Avenue, Room 725, New York City.

Do not meet the Mormons in public oral discussions. There is a more excellent way. Post yourself, thoroughly, on Mormon history, doctrine and practice, and if they invade your neighborhood meet them privately and treat them as you would treat any other sneaks and scoundrels. I speak out of experience. Since I met two Mormon missionaries in that way I have not heard of them entering a home in my part of town. I requested my people to say to any emissary of the blasphemous and treasonable Mormon establishment who might call, that it would a pleasure to me to meet them in the way indicated. I am not overwhelmed with invitations!

Denver, Colo

B. B. TYLER.

WE WILL PAY YOU

Six Per Cent

ON YOUR MONEY, IF PLACED WITH US UPON
THE

Annuity Plan.

IT IS A SAFE INVEST-
MENT WHILE YOU LIVE,
INTEREST GUARANTEED
BY A BOND

AS GOOD AS GOLD.

IT IS A SAFE INVEST-
MENT AFTER DEATH.
YOUR MONEY DOES THE LORD'S WORK AFTER
YOU HAVE CEASED TO LABOR.

NO NEED TO WORRY
ABOUT SECURITY, TAXES,
LAPSES OF INTEREST OR LOSSES.

IF YOU DESIRE TO HELP
ON THE LORD'S WORK
IN AMERICA, WRITE FOR OUR BOOKLET ON

THE ANNUITY PLAN.

The American Christian
Missionary Society,

BENJAMIN L. SMITH, Cor. Sec'y.

CINCINNATI, O.

Practical Federation.

While we have had much discussion of "church federation," as presented at Omaha and Des Moines, and a formidable array of red flags posted at every angle by our scribes, and finally an announcement that the question is "closed," L. F. McCray and his worthy wife, at Valley Junction, a suburb of Des Moines, have been quietly demonstrating that something can be accomplished in that line by intelligent, patient, brotherly treatment of our religious neighbors.

In June, 1901, Brother McCray took charge of a weak mission with about 60 members, discouraged and in serious difficulty among themselves, in the irreligious atmosphere of a railroad town, with a very small house of worship, flanked on either side by much more pretentious Congregational and M. E. churches, and anything but good feeling among the three. Our churches in the city had little faith in it, and have extended very meager and reluctant assistance. It was well nigh a forlorn hope.

With the weak support of only part of their own flock, Brother and Sister McCray entered heartily into two union meetings in the other churches, to try to waken some religious interest in the town, while several of our wise men were denouncing such efforts in general, and Brother McCray's methods in particular, in the papers. They gathered in the lion's share of the results and kept everybody sweet, while laying broad plans for the first for a better building than the town had thought of. The other church people took a lively interest in the building from the first, and the exercises of laying the corner stone were held in the M. E. church, all the ministers participating.

The ladies of the three churches joined in a bazaar in the basement of the new church before dedication, dividing the net proceeds of $300 equally, and all parties declare it was more profitable than either could have made it alone.

The new church would be a credit to any city. It is worth $15,000, and, with $2,000 from the Extension Fund, the cost is practically provided for. Our Des Moines churches have had very little hand in it. The dedication was very sadly postponed on account of the death of Bro. McCray's daughter, Lila B., twelve years of age, and their only child. Here, again, the spirit of fraternity was manifested. Although our city pastors were present, it was recognized as proper to put the local ministers in charge, and they paid very loving and tender tributes, while all business was suspended and everybody attended the funeral in the new church.

Dec. 20, G. W. Muckley assisted in the dedication. The other churches suspended all services, and their ministers and members seemed to vie with our own people in interest and pledges.

A union choir assembled from all the churches and made a pledge of $100. Both the other ministers subscribed and then united with Brother McCray in a $100 pledge. Not satisfied with that, they both got out on the floor and worked as actively as any one else for pledges, and each presided at times. One of them remarked that "this new church would be to Valley Junction what the Louisiana purchase had been to the United States." In a few days, a union meeting will begin in the new church, the preaching to be done by the three local ministers alternately.

Brother McCray says the people are remarking, on all hands, how pleasant and profitable it is to work together, and that the M. E. preacher has used the new baptistry more than he has.

Much might be said about the new church and the dedication; about recent improvements in the Highland Park Church; also in the University Church and the arrival of the new pastor, C. S. Medbury, the new parsonage and substantial growth of the Park Avenue Church; the very auspicious opening of the winter term at Drake University, and many things of interest in Des Moines, but space forbids. Valley Junction stands at the head just now, and will be watched with much interest.

S. C. SLAYTON.

RHEUMATISM

Cured

Through the Feet

The success of Magic Foot Drafts has been so great that the makers have decided to send them

FREE—On Approval

We want everyone who has rheumatism to send us his or her name. We will send by return mail a pair of Magic Foot Drafts, the wonderful external cure which has brought more comfort into the United States than any internal remedy ever made. If they give relief, send us One Dollar; if not, send nothing.

Magic Foot Drafts are worn on the soles of the feet and cure by absorbing the poisonous acids in the blood through the large pores. They cure rheumatism in every part of the body. It must be evident to you that we couldn't afford to send the drafts on approval if they didn't cure. Write today to the Magic Foot Draft Co., S. I. 23 Oliver Bldg., Jackson, Mich., for a trial pair of drafts on approval. We send also a valuable illustrated book on Rheumatism.

TRUST COMPANY'S

SPLENDID SHOWING

Report of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co.
For 1903 Shows a Prosperous Year.

Nothing so forcibly illustrates the solidity, financial resources and conservative management of St. Louis banking institutions as does the annual statement of conditions just issued by the Mississippi Valley Trust Company. This report covers the operations of the calendar year 1903, and its perusal cannot fail to impart the liveliest gratification, not only to the fortunate stockholders of the company, but to its depositors as well. A recapitulation of its leading features at this time will prove both interesting and instructive. The resources of the company are placed at the magnificent total of $25,728,922.57. The capital stock paid in, $3,000,000, and the surplus fund, $3,500,000, remain at the same figure as for the calendar year 1902, but the item of undivided profits on hand has increased to $1,745,098.72, an increase during the last year of $270,695.53. During the year 1903, dividends were paid to stockholders at the rate of 16 per cent, as compared with a 12 per cent disbursement during 1902, the total amount thus paid being $480,000 in 1903, as against $360,000 in 1902. The actual cash in its vaults December 31, 1903, was $1,034,304.31, while the item of cash, checks, sight drafts, and due from other trust companies and banks stands at $5,842,480.80. Its total times, savings and checking deposits amount to $16,219,533.80.

The Mississippi Valley Trust Company now ranks among the world's great financial institutions, and the ability and conservatism of its management have gained it an enviable position and standing abroad as well as in the United States. A striking evidence of this fact was shown in its selection by the British Government as the Fiscal Agent of the Royal British Commission to the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. This is in effect a compliment of the highest nature from the most powerful and financially conservative nation of Europe.

SUBSCRIBERS' WANTS.

LEARN STENOGRAPHY—Send 50 cents to the Oliver Typewriter Company, 315 North 9th Street, Century Building, St. Louis, Mo., for self-instructor in shorthand and typewriting.

Church Helps
MAGIC LANTERNS, STEREOPTICONS
for illustrating sermons, giving entertainments, illustrating hymns. Finest collection of slides. Large catalogue FREE.
MFG. OPTICIAN.
McALLISTER 49 Nassau St., New York.

—REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF THE—

MISSISSIPPI VALLEY TRUST CO.

ST. LOUIS, U. S. A.

AT THE CLOSE OF BUSINESS DECEMBER 31st, 1903.

RESOURCES

Loans Undoubtedly Good:
On Collateral Security—
Time.....	$2,171,805.49
Demand.....	5,202,475.43
On Real Estate Security.....	508,621.44
Other Negotiable and Non-Negotiable Paper:
Time.....	580,769.40
Demand.....	706,310.36
Overdrafts by Solvent Customers.....	372.67	$9,170,354.79
Bonds and Stocks at Present Cash Market Value:
County and City Bonds and Territorial War-rants.....	$2,037,450.86
Bonds of Steam and Electric Railroads in the United States.....	6,705,283.63
Bonds of Commercial and Industrial Corpora-tions (Local, $324,135.10; Other, $119,500.00).....	643,635.10
Stocks of Railroads.....	11,115.00
Other Stocks.....	680,087.50	10,077,572.09
Real Estate at Present Cash Market Value.....	554,459.57
Safety Deposit Vaults.....	72,000.00
Due from Other Trust Companies and Banks, Good on Sight Draft.....	$3,908,784.83
Checks and other Cash Items.....	889,391.66
Cash on Hand (Currency, Silver and Other Coin).....	1,034,304.31	5,842,480.80
All Other Resources:
Individual Debits on General Books.....	$2,347.12
Accrued Interest on Demand Loans.....	9,708.20	12,055.32
		$25,728,922.57

LIABILITIES

Capital Stock Paid In.....	$3,000,000.00
Surplus.....	3,500,000.00
Undivided Profits.....	1,745,098.72	$8,245,098.72
Deposits Subject to Draft at Sight by Trust Com-panies, Banks and Bankers.....	$1,773,778.96
Deposits Subject to Drafts at Sight by Individuals and Others, including Demand Certificates of Deposit.....	7,798,121.80
Time Certificates of Deposit.....	2,524,992.74
Savings Deposits.....	4,122,640.30	16,219,533.80
Bills Rediscounted.....		500,000.00
All Other Liabilities:
Reserve for Reinsurance of Liability as Surety on Outstanding Bonds.....	$ 42,529.39
Reserve for Interest on Savings Deposits (pay-able June 10, 1904).....	11,000.00
Individual Credits on General Books.....	710,760.66	764,290.05
		$25,728,922.57

Dividends amounting to $480,000.00 have been paid out of the Profits of the year.

To the President and Board of Directors of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company:

Your Committee of Stockholders, neither of whom is a Director, having been appointed in accordance with the by-laws of the Company to make the Annual Examination of all the books, accounts and securities (a similar examination having been made under the by-laws in July last) hereby respectfully reports that it has carefully gone into the details of each item as represented in resources and liabilities, and has found the attached statement of condition, at the close of business December 31, 1903, to be correct.

The bonds and stocks owned by the Company in no instance are carried at above the respective market values. The collaterals hypothecated to secure the various loans, and to protect the Company as surety on outstanding bonds, are high grade, with ample margin at current quotations.

We found each and every department of the company well managed and equipped for the transaction of all business entrusted to it.

There was produced to us and we found in proper place all the securities held in trust by the Company. The securities of each trust are kept separate and apart from those of every other trust, and entirely apart from the assets of the Company.

We desire to express our thanks to the officers and employees for facilitating our examination by the admirable manner in which all accounts are kept and in the systematic manner in which all the business of the Company is conducted.

We congratulate the Stockholders on the splendid condition of the Company.

St. Louis, January 9, 1904.

Respectfully submitted,

DAVID P. RANKEN,
LOUIS BRINCKWIRTH, } Committee.
THEO. BENOIST,

St. Louis, January 11, 1904.

We have examined the books of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company, and we certify that the attached Statement is properly drawn up therefrom and, in our opinion, exhibits a true and correct view of the Company's financial position at December 31st, 1903.

We have verified all the securities held by the Company for its own account and as collateral for loans, and have satisfied ourselves that the loans are fully secured, and the Bonds and Stocks owned by the Company valued at prices not in excess of market values.

We counted the cash on hand, and verified the balances due from other Banks and Trust Companies.

We have also examined the securities held in trust, which are kept entirely apart from the general assets, and in which the Company has no interest, with the books of the Trust Department, and found the same in order.

JONES, CAESAR & CO., Chartered Accountants.

OFFICERS

BRECKINRIDGE JONES, 1st Vice President and Counsel.
JOHN D. DAVIS, 2d Vice President.
SAMUEL E. HOFFMAN, 3d Vice President.
JAMES E. BROCK, Secretary.
HUGH R. LYLE, Assistant Secretary.
HENRY C. IBBOTSON, Second Assistant Secretary.

JULIUS S. WALSH, President.

W. DAVIESS PITTMAN, Bond Officer.
FREDRICK VIERLING, Trust Officer.
HENRY SEMPLE AMES, Assistant Trust Officer.
WILLIAM G. LACKEY, Assistant Trust Officer.
EUGENE H. BENOIST, Real Estate Officer.
WILBUR B. PRICE, Safe Deposit Officer.

DIRECTORS

Elmer B. Adams, U. S. District Judge.
Williamson Bacon.
Murray Carleton, President Carleton Dry Goods Co.
Charles Clark, Retired.
John D. Davis, 2d Vice President.
Harrison I. Drummond, President Drummond Realty and Investment Co.
Auguste B. Ewing, Retired.
David R. Francis, President D. R. Francis & Bro. Commission Co.
August Gehner, President German American Bank.
Geo. H. Goddard, Retired.

S. E. Hoffman, Third Vice President.
Chas. H. Huttig, President Third National Bank.
Breckenridge Jones, 1st Vice President and Counsel.
Wm. F. Nolker, Treasurer St. Louis Brewing Ass'n.
Wm. D. Orthwein, President Wm. D. Orthwein Grain Co.
H. Clay Pierce, President Waters-Pierce Oil Co.
Joseph Ramsey, Jr., President Wabash R. R. Co.
Moses Rumsey, President L. M. Rumsey Mfg. Co.
Julius S. Walsh, President.
Rolla Wells, Mayor of City of St. Louis.

Canton, Mo., Items.

The University building will soon be ready to enter. There will be fifteen graduates this year. There are now nearly one hundred students in attendance.

E. M. Carr has accepted a call to preach at Lima, Ill; Daniel Dungan at Woodland, Mari-on county, Mo., and C. A. Baird at Mt. Zion, Mo., for half time.

Thomas Wallace is recalled to Hunnewell,

Mo., and for the present will preach for the church at Winchester, Mo.

H. D. Thomas will continue with the church at Mt. Hebron, Ill. T. WALLACE.

BIBLE STUDY COURSE

At home by mail. This book "Home Bible Study" free if you enroll now. Terms easy. For free catalog write C. J. BURTON, President Iowa Christian College, Osaka, Iowa.

The Best Book Ever Written

on the subject, is

The Verdict of Thousands
who have read

Moral and Spiritual Aspects of Baptism

By N. J. AYLSWORTH
Cloth, 471 pages. $1.50

Christian Publishing Company
1522 Locust Street St. Louis, Mo.

Current Literature.

Any book reviewed in these columns (except "net" books) will be sent postpaid by the Christian Publishing Company, St. Louis, on receipt of the published price. For "net" books, add ten per cent for postage.

Control in Evolution: A Discussion of the Fundamental Principles of Social Order and Progress. By George F. Wilkin, Ph. D. (A. Armstrong & Son. $1.25.)

The author assumes the evolutionary hypothesis as affording the most tenable theory for the explanation of both cosmic and social processes, but he broadens the interpretation of the evolutionary formula to include a pastor which is too often neglected—the rational free will of man. In different periods different forces have dominated the process of development. In the age of star-dust, when undifferentiated matter was diffused through unlimited space, the controlling principle was the force of gravitation operating to draw the scattered particles together. Then the force of chemical affinity comes into play, when the particles are near enough together to be within reach of each other's chemical influences. In this period gravitation continues but chemical affinity controls. In the third period, the two preceding forces continue to operate, but the dominant power is in the vital forces which have now appeared. In the last period, man as a being with a practical reason, a rational free will, becomes the controlling force in the further evolution of the world. In thus making man the controller of evolution instead of its object or its victim, the author lays the basis for a wholesome emphasis upon duty and responsibility. With this principle in view, he proceeds to an interpretation of the main facts of man's moral and social life in terms of evolution. It is a book very well worth reading. The introduction is written by Pres. A. H. Strong, of Rochester Theological Seminary.

Idle Thoughts in Idle Hours. By Mrs. M. E. Smith, Sedalia, Mo., 1903.

We have known the author of this book for many years, but was wholly unaware that she possessed the poetic ability which is manifest on every page of this handsome little volume. The collection contains 37 poems written through a period of many years, and on a great variety of topics, varying from gay to grave, all of which are marked by poetic insight and feeling, as well as with a good knowledge of the technique of poetry. Some of the themes are: "Garfield's Struggle for Life;" "Sixtieth Birthday Reflections;" "Invalid Reveries;" "Reminiscence;" "B. B. T., (which we take to mean B. B. Tyler) on His Fiftieth Birthday;" "Rhapsody;" "Threnody;" "Passing of the Century." The author has printed this little volume for her friends, but as many of the edition as have been left over have been donated to the Christian Woman's Board of Missions, of Sedalia, and are for sale for 50 cents each for the benefit of that organization. The little volume is dedicated to the author's sister, Mrs. S. E. Cotton, who also has a very sweet poem in the collection. The author's many friends will be glad to have this keepsake both for its own intrinsic merit and because of their friendship for the author.

The Reality and Evil of Spiritualism: or, The Identity of Spirit and Mind, and the Distinction between Spirit and Soul. By Mina Thomas (Thomas Library Co., St. Louis. —)

The author has aimed to produce "a work in which spiritualism is discussed in the light of the Scriptures, the sciences and profane history." She summarizes the teachings of spiritualism and asserts the genuineness of the phenomena which spiritualists adduce to prove the reality of the spirit-world and its close connection with the material world. But while recognizing the reality of the spiritualistic manifestations, she pronounces it an illegitimate and baleful practice which destroyed the ancient civilizations and will destroy ours unless it is promptly combatted. The book represents an immense amount of careful and painstaking work in the history and phenomena of spiritualism. (See advertisement elsewhere.)

Character: A Moral Text-Book for the Use of Parents and Teachers in Training Youth in the Principles of Conduct and an Aid to Self-Culture. By Henry Varnum. (Hinds & Noble. $1.50.)

The comprehensiveness of this treatise may be judged from the fact that the volume of 400 pages is divided into 18 books, each book (except the first three) into 12 parts, and each part into 25 verses, more or less. Every conceivable subject connects either directly or remotely with morals or manners. The author does not claim that the book contains anything original, and his performance is well within his promise. The aphoristic style, with the verses numbered, suggests comparison with the book of Proverbs. Solomon does not suffer from the comparison.

Princely Men in the Heavenly Kingdom. By Harlan P. Beach, M. A., F. R. G. S. (United Society of Christian Endeavor. 50 cents.)

This volume is intended for use in the Forward Mission Study Courses. It contains biographical sketches of some of the leading Protestant missionaries who have lived and worked in China. There is both interest and inspiration in these hero tales of modern missions. Mr. Beach is both a recognized authority on missions and a writer of forcible and pleasing English.

Some January Magazines.

The Atlantic Monthly opens with one of the editors annual discourses on some of the things pertaining to magazine-editing and the relation of the editor to the readers. Mr. Perry shows in this article that he knows a good deal about editing, but he shows it even more convincingly in his admirable editorial management of the magazine. It requires a large man not to rattle around in the editorial chair that has been occupied by Lowell and Howells. Robert Herrick's Chicago novel, entitled, "The Common Lot," opens none too cheerfully but strongly. Judging from the number of finely differentiated feelings described in connection with the funeral which forms the opening scene, we apprehend that it is going to be subtle. It affects one with a shock of surprise to see the old Atlantic beginning a series of articles on advertising.

The World's Work prints in its January number the most complete, we believe, and certainly the most accurate and lucid account that has yet appeared of the new employers' association which, in various parts of the country, is beginning to block what it considers the unreasonable demands of union

THE NATURAL BODY BRACE

Patented 1895-1900-1902.

It cures all forms of Female Weakness after all other remedies and the best physicians have failed. No case is of too long standing for it to benefit. If your case is old or if you are just starting down grade physically, you had better get this Brace now and save yourself years of health and happiness.

Its unrivalled success has caused it to have many imitators, but it has no equal. No other body brace is "just as good"—although the wonderful success of the Natural has caused a sprouting up of many cheap and worthless imitations. Be sure of the name—NATURAL. Some imitators copy our pictures, copy our advertising and do many things to make people believe they are selling our Brace when they are not. Get the Natural; take nothing with any other name. Order direct of us.

30 Days Free Trial.

It is folly for you to refuse to try it if you need improved health or improved figure.

We make a variety of Body Appliances. Write today for our illustrated book, testimonials, references and Free Trial Offer. Address labor by the resistance of a union of employers. There is a well illustrated article on the development of domestic architecture in the United States. This magazine publishes every month an article on some important theme in the financial world. In the present issue the subject is "The Monopoly of Natural Products."

Howard C. Rash, Manager.

THE NATURAL BODY BRACE CO., Box 125, Salina, Kas

The North American Review, having brought Mr. Henry James's "The Ambassadors" to its long-desired conclusion, begins a novel by Mr. Howells entitled, "The Son of Royal Langbrith." The change is a great relief. The new story opens exceedingly well. Thomas Nelson Page contributes an article on the cause and prevention of lynching of negroes. His remedy is in brief that the negroes themselves be taught to condemn and prevent the crime which too often furnishes the provocation, while the whites develop a public sentiment which will condemn and prevent the crime of lynching.

The American Review of Reviews for January is distinctly a New Year's number. There is a group of articles discussing the financial and industrial outlook, besides some editorial retrospects of the past year. Sketches of Elihu Root, the retiring Secretary of War, of Joseph L. Bristow who has been investigating the postal scandals, and of Herbert Spencer, are among the most interesting of the signal articles.

A Homely Illustration.

When you get a sliver in your finger, the sensation is anything but pleasant. Allow it to remain long enough and it will fester and give you a lot of trouble. Remove the cause and the pain will stop.

It's the same way with the whole body. When your head aches, it is nature's message sent from the stomach to the brain. Every throb is but a click in the message whose letters spell "danger—send relief." Some people, when they get a headache, rush to the drug store and swallow some powerful tablet or powder which sets the heart to thumping and the blood racing around the body at a terrific rate. Do you? Other people take strong purgatives which rip and tear through the stomach and bowels, leaving them irritated and sore. Do you? Still other people take Vernal Palmettona (formerly known as Vernal Saw Palmetto Berry Wine.) It is a sensible remedy to use. It removes the cause of the trouble. It helps the stomach and bowels to get rid of poisonous waste matter, by stimulating their natural muscular action. It tones up and strengthens the nerves; it enriches the blood and builds up hard, healthy tissues. Only one small dose a day is required to permanently cure ailments of stomach, liver, bowels, heart, kidneys and blood. Try it before you buy. Write us for a free sample bottle. It will do you good. Promptly sent postpaid. Formula sent in every package. Address, Vernal Remedy Co., 506 Seneca Building, Buffalo, N. Y. Sold at all druggists.

Evangelistic

We invite ministers and others to send reports of meetings, additions and other news of the churches for publication in this department. It is especially requested that additions be reported as "by confession and baptism" or "by letter."

Additions Reported Last Week.

Baptisms.....	1,897
Letters and statements.....	712
Denominations.....	119
Total.....	2,728

M. L. BUCKLEY.

Harrison, O., Jan. 13, 1904.

CALIFORNIA.—Santa Rosa, Jan. 11.—I preached a few nights in Maxwell with the church opened again. Seven confessions, one other added. Sunday-school started and arrangement for preaching by H. Shadle.—R. L. McHATTON.

COLORADO.—Paonia, Jan. 13.—We are now in meeting with Brother R. H. Lampkin, of La Junta. We had five additions last night, four by letter and statement and one by confession. This is six additions since we began. Others are almost persuaded. Brother Lampkin is preaching the gospel clearly and strongly.—G. W. COFFMAN.

FLORIDA.—Eustis, Jan. 12.—One young man made the confession last Sunday night. Others, I think, will follow soon.—J. E. MOYER.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.—Washington, Jan. 11.—There were three additions to the H Street Church yesterday—two by letter and one confession. Large audiences at both services. Friday evening, the 8th, we were given a nice reception in the church. Speeches were made by F. D. Power, G. B. Bagby, W. L. Harris, Congressman Griffith and the writer. There were also beautiful solos, recitations and congregational singing, after which refreshments were served. The work starts off well, and prospects for a successful year's work are indeed bright.—J. MURRAY TAYLOR.

IDAHO.—Boise, Jan. 7.—We had six conversions at our regular services in December, and the Boise Church is growing in every way.—A. K. WRIGHT.

ILLINOIS.—Armington, Jan. 12.—Seven confessions in the first week of the meeting here. W. D. Deweese is the pastor. Andrew Scott, of Normal, the evangelist. We lead the music.—GUY B. WILLIAMSON AND WIFE.

Nebo, Jan. 4.—Meeting a little over a week old here to-day. Two additions this afternoon, six to-night; 14 to date. Eleven by confession, one reclaimed, two by statement. No time set to close. This church is a part of my regular work one-fourth time.—O. C. BOLMAN, Minister, Roodhouse, Ill.

Carmi, Jan. 11.—One added by letter last Lord's day.—FRANK B. THOMAS.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

is for babies and children who are thin and pale when they ought to be fat and ruddy; for men and women who are weak and delicate when they ought to be strong and hearty—for all who are not getting proper nourishment from their food.

Poor blood, thin body, open the door for disease. Scott's Emulsion bars the way. Makes the blood richer, produces healthy flesh and above all provides nourishment.

We'll send you a sample free upon request.

SCOTT & BOWNE, 409 Pearl Street, New York.

Latham.—I am engaged in a meeting at this place. Meeting is one week old and everything points to a grand meeting, with audiences increasing every night; the writer expects to continue the work here for a year after the meeting closes.—Z. M. BRUHECH.

La Harpe, Jan. 4.—Annual report of the Christian Church here, for the year ending Dec. 31, 1903: Regular sermons delivered in the church, 113. Special addresses, lectures and out of town sermons, 17. Funeral sermons, 17. Total sermons, addresses and funeral sermons 147. Additions to the church here, 30. Calls—every member of the church, so far as can be determined, has been called upon one or more times. A special effort has been made to visit all the sick. Money raised for debts, preaching and incidental, $2,281.90. For missions and charity, $71.55. Total, $2,353.45. The church is out of debt, in perfect unity and oneness of purpose, with the most gratifying prospect for the future. We began a meeting yesterday, with Mrs. Millie Mason, the Australian Evangelist, as our preacher. She is one of our greatest women evangelists. Since last report we have had seven additions not previously reported.—W. H. WILLYARD.

Chicago, Jan. 12.—J. V. Updike has taken charge of the Garfield Boulevard Church of Christ at this place, and began his work Jan. 1, and Sunday, with a protracted meeting. First week has passed with increasing audiences and good interest. H. A. Easton is associated with him, having charge of the music. We have a good chorus and are well organized for permanent work. If parties outside of the city, having friends in the community, will notify J. V. Updike, 6430 Parnell Ave., or W. R. Love, 1201 Aberdeen St., giving their address, it will enable them to help build up the church; Jan. 17, has been announced as roll call day; friends have been invited to bring basket dinner and stay all day. Other ministers of Churches of Christ, in the city have been invited to make short talks in the afternoon.—MRS. H. A. EASTON.

INDIANA.—Martinsville, Jan. 11.—Our work opens very nicely here. Large audiences yesterday, notwithstanding the stormy condition of weather. One addition at the evening service from the Methodists. We are united and happy.—M. W. YOCOM.

Flora, Jan. 12.—I closed a meeting with the church at Fayette, Ohio, Dec. 20, with 38 confessions and five by letter, and after a few days' rest at home, began a meeting here Jan. 10. The outlook is favorable for a good meeting. I go from here to Carbondale, Ill., for a meeting in February. Prof. Chas. E. McVay will sing for the meeting there. Have an open date for meeting in March. Churches desiring a meeting at that time should write me at Angola, Ind.—W. F. SHEAM.

INDIAN TERRITORY.—Tishamingo, Jan. 12.—There were two added by letter last Lord's day at Roff. Both excellent additions to the working force.—E. S. ALLHANDS.

IOWA.—Red Oak, Jan. 11.—We are just beginning a meeting. Three Disciples placed their letters with us yesterday. This makes 11 additions to the church since I began the work here Nov. 1—five by baptism, one by statement, and five by letter. We are expecting a great victory in our meeting.—HERBERT W. CIES.

Pleasantville, Jan. 9.—We closed a meeting here just before holidays with 13 additions. At the close we held a rally to pay off the mortgage on the church. I made a call for $700 and raised $1,100—nearly $600 cash on the table. This will enable us to pay off all indebtedness and furnish means to fresco the church and complete the basement. When done we will have one of the finest and best buildings in the state. We met on New Year's day and burned the mortgage. It was a great day of rejoicing. The church is in a better condition than for years.—J. W. BABCOCK, pastor.

Clarion, Jan. 6.—The work of the church during the past year has been good; over $200 raised for missions, a good, substantial and convenient parsonage costing $2,500 has been erected and 15 names added to the church roll. We look for better work in the new year.—C. W. MATTOX.

Corydon, Jan. 12.—Meeting continues with unceasing interest. House packed last night, and at the close one noble young girl walked down the aisles and made the good confession. This makes 20 additions thus far in the meeting.—HAMILTON & WILKINSON, evangelists. F. D. MACY, pastor.

KANSAS.—Wichita, Jan. 11.—One from the Methodists to the South Lawrence and Christian Church yesterday.—W. T. McLAINE.

Lyon, Jan. 11.—Geo. E. Lyon, minister here, has organized a home department of 85 members for the study of the Sunday-school les-

—WE ARE GOING TO THE— CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HOTEL, WORLD'S FAIR : : ST. LOUIS.

Because, it is the approved headquarters during the Exposition for Christian Endeavorers, Baptist Young People, Sunday-Schools, Educators, and all friends of morality. Directly opposite the Fair Grounds, with street cars direct from Union Station to hotel. Built for perfect safety, and sanitary conditions. Capacity, 3,000 daily. Auditorium, 3,000. Backed by men of highest standing. Endorsed by St. Louis Clergy. Charter Certificates, series A, issued on receipt of $1.00 entitle holders to reduced rate of $1.00 per day for lodging, or $2.00 per day for lodging and board.

For full particulars address, at once,

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HOTEL and AUDITORIUM COMPANY, 1512 Chemical Building, St. Louis.

son. Such efforts will prove helpful to the main school, and a blessing to the entire congregation.—L.

Council Grove, Jan. 11.—Brother Covert, of Leroy, gave the church here a lecture on "A. Campbell and His Times." It was enjoyed by all and well attended, Sunday evening, Jan. 10. In preparation for foreign missions I will preach three special sermons, one on India, one on China and one on Japan. We will take the offering on March 6. There are six thriving churches in Morris Co., Kan. All are supporting a minister for full or half time, and active. Council Grove is the largest congregation, and at the county-seat of Morris Co.—D. S. DOMER.

Arkansas City, Jan. 15.—Our meeting with Shaffer and Barnett is twelve days old, with 17 additions, nine by confession and baptism, one from the Methodists by baptism, five reclaimed and two by statement.—M. LEE SOREY.

KENTUCKY.—Vanceburg, Jan. 13.—My year's work at Butler, Ky., closed Dec. 29, 1903. Following is the report for same: Sermons preached, 110; addresses delivered, 5; funerals conducted, 8; marriages officiated at, 9; visits made, 600; amount raised for missions, $248.16; additions, 57; confessions, 27, including one Methodist and one Lutheran; from the Baptists, six; by letter and statement, 24. The Butler church, where I preached half time, raised $193.35 for missions. The year before they raised $23.

J. D. Williams, of Tecumseh, O. T., did not accept the call to Butler, Ky. He goes to Belleflower, Ill. J. J. Cole, of Campbellsville, Ky., will visit Butler, Jan. 17.

The Butler church presented their minister, Ray Linton Porter, $10 for a Christmas gift. I began work here Jan. 1, 1904. Observed C. W. B. M. day Jan. 3. Offering $20; largest for this work in the history of the church. We observe Endeavor day for the Foreign Society first Lord's day in February.

The minister and wife had a number of members of the church to call on the evening of Jan. 12. They brought with them many provisions, articles of furniture and apparel—all of which were greatly appreciated and enjoyed.—ROY LINTON PORTER.

MISSISSIPPI.—Jackson.—The church at this place begins the new year under more favorable conditions than it has probably known since anti bellum days. The building is comparatively new, nice and modern in all its appointments; is on the same square as the magnificent new state capitol, and, thanks to the untiring efforts of the Ladies' Aid Society, paid off, with the old year, the last dollar of its indebtedness. M. D. Harman entered upon his labors as pastor Jan. 1. He has served the congregation before, and has the love and confidence of the whole church, and a good report of them that are without. Seven added Jan. 10 by letter and otherwise.—MRS. W. H. SMITH.

MISSOURI.—Carterville, Jan. 12.—Just closed a meeting here last night with 47 additions to the church, 32 by confession, six from the Baptists, nine by letter and statement. Closed with great interest. They will employ a pastor all the time. I can hold one or two more meetings in Missouri. Write me at Delphos, Iowa, where I will be in a meeting for the next four weeks.—D. W. CAMPBELL.

Grant City, Jan. 11.—Bro. H. H. Hubbell, of

Music Music Music Music

THE FILLMORE BROTHERS COMPANY

Publish music for Churches, Sunday Schools, Choirs, Singing Schools, Day Schools, Prohibition and the Home.

The Praise Hymnal is the best all purpose church music book ever published. Its Scripture Readings, stately hymns and tunes and gospel songs make it complete for all church work. It is a handsome and durable book. The majority of our best churches are using it. Half leather binding, $70 per 100. Vellum cloth binding, $50 per 100. Everything considered, the cheapest book on the market!

Gospel Songs No. 2. An ideal book for Evangelistic services, young people's meetings, prayer-meetings and Sunday-schools. Contains the greatest variety of songs and subjects of any book of its class; more solid and lasting hymns than any book of its kind. It is a book that wears, and gives strong and helpful service. 256 pages. Vellum cloth, $25 per 100. Limp muslin, $20 per 100.

Sunday-School Songs, Nos. 1 and 2 Combined. A book designed for the use of Sunday-schools. Cheery, bright songs that children sing with enthusiasm. $15 per 100.

The Choir, a monthly journal of anthems for volunteer choirs. Edited by Chas. M. and J. H. Fillmore. Beautiful anthems fresh every month from the pens of the most popular writers; not difficult. Every choir leader should send for a sample copy. Liberal terms to choirs.

Catalogs free. Correspondence solicited. Prompt and courteous treatment guaranteed.

THE FILLMORE BROTHERS CO., Cincinnati, O.

Leon, Ia., is conducting the revival service here. Eight additions here the first week. Brother Hubbell is a strong man; his sermons are fine and true to the gospel plan.—J. A. MCKENZIE.

St. Joseph, Jan. 15.—I closed my work at Antioch, Andrew county, the fourth Sunday in December, with two baptisms. There have been two additions at King Hill since my last report.—N. ROLLO DAVIS.

California, Jan. 14.—Elder T. J. Thompson, of Carthage, Ill., the former pastor of the Christian Church of California, Mo., dropped in on us last evening at our prayer-meeting service and preached us a very able and instructive sermon on the subject, "In Christ," to a very appreciative audience of above a hundred people. Brother Thompson is a strong man in the pulpit and an able defender of the Word. May he live long to preach the everlasting gospel of the blessed Son of God. He was my successor at Girard, Kan., about eight years ago, and I have waited patiently until this present time to cancel the obligation. The church here is starting out nicely in the new year.—S. J. VANCE.

OHIO.—Lyons.—The close of 1903 closes my first year with the church here, which has been a prosperous one. Forty were added by letter, baptism and reclaimed; 33 were baptized. The Bible-school, young people's society, missionary society and aid society all made reports of progress at the end of the year that was encouraging. A unanimous call from the church to remain with them another year has been accepted, and we start out with bright prospects. A good congregation with a poor minister, when both are satisfied, is no bad combination, if the Lord be with them.—O. O. OLNEY.

Cincinnati.—The annual meeting of the Central Christian Church here was held Jan. 6, with large attendance, to hear the reports of the year's work. There were 91 added at the regular services, over $2,200 given to missions, $1,000 to benevolent work and the support of a mission Sunday-school. There was raised for all purposes $9,300.—A. M. HARVOT.

Martins Ferry, Jan. 11.—Quite a revival broke out yesterday at our regular services. One confession in the morning; 13 accessions to our Christian Endeavor Society in the evening, and four confessions (all young men) at night. Shall begin soon a series of special services, God willing.—G. F. ASSITER.

Alliance.—Fifty-one added in 1903; $4,600 raised during the year. Work in much better shape than when I began.—A. B. MOORE.

Cleveland, Miles Avenue.—Jan. 3, nine by confession and one by letter. Jan. 10, 16 by confession. Five otherwise since last report, making 30 recently. The work is prospering in all departments. We are going to improve our building in the spring.—T. ALFRED FLEMING.

OKLAHOMA TERRITORY.—Oklahoma City, Jan. 8.—There were four additions last Sunday.—S. D. DUTCHER.

Mutual, Jan. 11.—Work unreported: Mutual, 13 additions—four by baptism, four from the sects, five reclaimed, and a new house of worship enclosed. Will dedicate about March 1.

Seiling, organized with 22; added 16 afterwards—six by baptism, four from sects, six reclaimed, and a new house nearly completed. Chester, 14 additions, eight by baptism, four from sects, two reclaimed; Brother Payne employed for half time, who added two of the above by baptism.

Prosser, organized with 11; added 29 afterwards; 18 by baptism, four from the sects, one Catholic, seven by relation. Ground secured for building and cemetery, and funds partly raised for house of worship. My address is changed from Abilene, Kan., to Mutual, Okla.—B. MATCHETT.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Plymouth, Jan. 12.—Three young men and two young women made the good confession last Lord's day evening. Bro. E. T. Bennett, representing the National Benevolent Association, spoke for us in the morning. Bro. H. W. Talmage, of the Church Herald, will be with us Thursday evening, Jan. 14.—L. O. KNIPP, pastor.

Scranton, Jan. 13.—Two confessions Sunday evening. At the morning service the church unanimously voted for me to stay with them. Thus begins my sixth year with the First Church of this city under most favorable auspices.—ROBT. W. CLYMER.

SOUTH AUSTRALIA.—Adelaide.—Nov. 18, 1903, was the first anniversary of the assumption of the work at Grote Street Church at this place, by Wren J. Grinstead. Brother Grinstead went out for that purpose, just after his graduation from the College of the Bible at Lexington, Ky. During the year there has been a net gain of 41 members, the Sheet Music. We publish some of the best sacred solos that are to be found. The Prince Immortal, for sopranos or tenors is new. Mailed for 25 cents. From Thy Lowest Depths, O Sea, a fine base or baritone sacred solo, by Geibel. Mailed for 25 cents. Tell Mother I'll be There, 25 cents; Has Mother's Prayer Been Answered? 10 cents. The most popular evangelistic solos of the day. And others.

We are the publishers of VASHTI, by the young writer, Henry Fillmore, the newest popular "hit" in piano sheet music. It is a characteristic two-step march that wins applause every time it is played. Not difficult. The colored title page is a work of art. Send 30 cents for a copy, and if it does not more than meet your expectations, we will return the money.

Band and Orchestra Music. We are now issuing a number of new band and orchestra pieces by the new writer, Henry Fillmore, and other popular authors. If leaders will send us their addresses we will send samples free.

Musical Instruments. We handle every kind of band and orchestra instruments—cornets, trombones, tubas, clarionets, violins, drums, etc. All instruction books, strings and musical merchandise. We are the Sole Agents for the United States of the HIGHAM brass instruments—the best in the world.

present number on the roll being 430. These are mainly wage earners and their families. The church has raised for local expenses during the twelve months, $2,240; for home missions, $210; for foreign missions, $178. The church celebrated the anniversary by a special meeting and an offering to apply on the church debt, which realized $1,022, of which $100 was in pledges. The total giving of the church as a church was $3,650.

TEXAS.—Waco, Jan. 10.—On Dec. 19 we began a revival meeting at Antioch, near Morocco, Ind., a town about 70 miles southeast of Chicago. We had preached for this congregation while completing a course of study in Latin and Greek in the University of Chicago. We closed on Monday evening, Jan. 4, with 26 additions to the church: 16 by confession and baptism, two from the Baptists, one from the Methodists, one from the United Brethren, and six by re-consecration. The weather was severe all the time, and we were snowed out on Christmas night, yet our audience increased to the last and the interest was splendid. This is one of the very best churches of my acquaintance, and the treatment given me was very beautiful indeed. In no particular did they forget what was their duty.—J. B. ESKRIDGE, professor classical language, Texas Christian University, Waco, Texas.

Hillsboro, Jan. 11.—F. O. Fannon just closed a meeting of three weeks with this congregation. You know what this means. He is a power for righteousness. The people heard him gladly. Under all the circumstances I feel sure no other man could have done as much for us. There were 25 additions, most of them men of influence. He is now with Brother Myers at Fort Worth in a great meeting.—G. W. FERRELL.

WASHINGTON.—Dayton.—Our great meeting here continues, with 138 added to date.—L. F. STEPHENS AND WIFE, evangelists.

Dayton, Jan. 8.—Our meeting still continues with unabated interest. We are now in the sixth week. We have had 144 additions up to date. This is the greatest meeting held on the coast for some time.—H. T. MORRISON.

Prosser, Jan. 1.—I have just closed the first six months of my pastorate in the two new fields of Prosser and Zillah, Wash. Twenty added at the former and fourteen at the latter place. A new house of worship is soon to be built at Prosser.—M. A. THOMPSON.

The Christian-Evangelist and Its Predecessors.

(Continued from page 87.)

the receipts small. I have seen Brother Garrison bending under the yoke. Saturday was pay day, and O how we watched for the letter carrier, and how we were disappointed when it was "only copy." The summer months were just fearful, but the editors stood by their work and anxiety. This strain was on these noble men for years, and the brotherhood should not forget them.

They made but one great mistake—the purchase of a great printing house with no money to pay for it. It was irons on the feet of the young company, and when I stood in the ruins wrought by water and fire, I felt that the disaster was a blessing in disguise. The leasing of the paper was better than to carry the load that would soon break the wagon. There was more comfort and ease of mind and heart in the Eighth and Olive office. Bro. J. H. Smart was in this room and was wise in financial matters which fell largely to his duty. He could write editorials and was a good hand at mailing. All of us did gladly everything we could, and all rejoiced to behold a steady growth. My chief work was to see to the subscriptions, correct the mail list, answer letters, read proof, copy the Bible Reading for the Christian Standard, mail the paper, sweep the floor and talk about the old gospel. I could call the names of subscribers and preachers in far more than one-half of our offices. I knew the penmanship of many of our grandest men. The best copy was from Jesse H. Berry, who originated "Our Budget." But O how we suffered with the manuscript of Clark Braden! No printer could read it. It was good thought, but needed a Daniel for interpretation.

How memory recalls the men at the cases, but I must take space to mention the venerable Elijah Goodwin, who was book-keeper a short time. He is before my eyes to-day; slender of body, bowing shoulders and gray curling hair; a tender voice and gentle face. I liked him.

The Stormy Period.

By J. H. Smart.

My active connection with the Christian Publishing Company and "The Christian" began Dec. 29, 1875. I was pastor of the Christian Church at Macomb, Ill., when I was elected business manager of the Company and associate editor of "The Christian" at St. Louis. Beginning as stated above, I filled both these positions till the union of "The Christian" with "The Evangelist" of Chicago. After the union I was retained as one of the editors of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST till the spring of 1885, when I went to Kansas City and was connected with the Faithful Witness till my return to St. Louis in 1888.

When I entered upon the work of business manager of the Christian Publishing Company the company was laboring under the burden of a debt which was the heritage, in part, of running a printing plant. To add to this burden a fire had recently swept away every visible asset of the company. So debts were more visible and abundant than cash. This was truly the stormy period, the perilous, trying days for the company. The larger part of the old stockholders had lost confidence in the ability of the company to continue the work, and refused to give it further financial support. This made the problem more difficult for those of us who decided to stand by the enterprise and pull it through.

Having now no printing plant and no books to sell, we had to rely on the subscriptions to "The Christian" to meet the running expense of the company. It was seen in a very short time that our income on subscriptions would not meet the expense of getting out the paper and pay any salary to editor and business manager. Both myself and Brother Garrison had to make preaching engagements with churches so as to live and keep the paper going. This was unfortunate, for the pressure of double service caused the health of Brother Garrison to fail, which added another burden to our already large accumulation of difficulties. As I write these lines, I am made to wonder why we consented to hold on to such a burdensome enterprise. The Lord only knows the labors and heartaches we endured to make a success of this work.

But the lowering clouds began to scatter and the day brightened as our subscription list increased, and then we added some books, the sale of which increased our bank account. As a visible evidence of our prosperity I remember that about the third year I received on salary as manager and editor the sum of nearly $300. So the financial tide was evidently rising! This was the sure promise of the better day for which we had prayed, labored and waited.

When we again commenced to do our own printing, all hands in our infant establishment worked ten hours a day, commencing at 7 A. M. and closing at 6 P. M. But the editor and manager, after the ten hours of work, carried their work home with them, and often worked till midnight and later, in writing editorials and reading proof. During this period Brother

SUPREME ELECTRIC BELT FREE

IT IS YOURS

for the asking without one cent of cost. This is no deposit scheme; no 30 days trial scheme. You simply send us your name and address and we send you the Belt. It is yours to keep forever and we under no circumstances ask for or accept any money for it either now or in the future. This is a plain, simple, positive statement of facts. We guarantee it THE BEST ELECTRIC BELT MADE. Five minutes' trial will prove to you its power, a week's wearing of it will restore to you all lost vigor, giving to you the strength and manhood which is your birthright. Many forms of such as Impotency, Varicocele, Spermatorrhea, etc., yield at once to its magic influence. We give it away free to all who can be cured by the one great curative agent, Electricity. After you are cured your friends will each want one and from these sales we will make our profit. Be a strong, vigorous man among men. This generous offer may be withdrawn at any time, so you should write today for the "Free Supreme Electric Belt."

NERVOUS, RHEUMATIC, KIDNEY AND LIVER DISEASES

IT WILL CURE YOU!

Address: PHYSICIANS' INSTITUTE,
2147 Unity Building,
Chicago, Illinois.

Garrison found it necessary to get out of the office and city frequently. He was in Colorado, Texas and England seeking health, and the business manager, with the help of his wife, had to carry all the work during these times.

But the better day came in reality after about five years of heavy burdens and anxious waiting. I have no doubt now, as I look back over that stormy period, that the Lord led us and gave us the victory.

Waukegan, Ill.

THE CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST.

Soon after the time when Brother Smart's narrative ends, and following immediately the return of J. H. Garrison from England in 1882, the consolidation of the Central Book Concern—as the company publishing The Evangelist was then known—with the Christian Publishing Company was effected at St. Louis, retaining the name of the latter company. As both these companies at that time were quite self-sustaining the combination made a strong company, and the business grew in all its departments. The business manager from the consolidation in 1882 until the reorganization in 1899, was F. M. Call, who was also the largest stockholder. Since the reorganization R. P. Crow has been business manager, and the volume of business has steadily increased, showing a gain of 11 per cent in 1903 over that of 1899. From the consolidation of the two papers, "The Christian" and "The Evangelist," the united paper has been called THE CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, the hyphen standing as the symbol of that union. The editors, after Brother Smart's retirement, were J. H. Garrison and B. W. Johnson, until the latter's death in 1894. The assistant editors from the consolidation to the present were T. W. Grafton, J. M. Tribble, J. J. Haley, G. A. Hoffmann, B. J. Pinkerton, W. W. Hopkins and the present incumbent, W. E. Garrison.

Bible College at Home.

Thorough courses by mail, leading to diploma and degree. Distance no hindrance. Students in every state and foreign country. Best testimonials. Catalogue free. Write C. J. Burton, President Iowa Christian College, Oskaloosa, Iowa.

Birthday Greetings.

(Continued from page 90.)

pastor himself usually determines his tenure. That of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST has been long, but deservedly earned. I congratulate it on its record, and now move to make the "call" indefinite, praying that the hands at the helm may guide it for many years, and that its influence may increase with the days.

Truly your friend and brother,
D. O. SMART.

Kansas City, Mo.

His Wife Likes It.

DEAR CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST: Greetings, health, and many a forty to you. Growth in grace you do not need. I covet years for you. Your method is admirable. You seek ever to lead and never to drive; to teach rather than dictate; to inspire rather than to repress. I love you because you take pains to reason where there are chances to rage; because you know how to adjust the ancient faith to modern life; because you are Ch "stological rather than theological; because you plead for the reunion of God and his world as both he and it lie in the light of Christ's crucifixion and resurrection.

There is one other great, good reason why I like you: my wife likes you. Again, many a forty to you. W. J. LHAMON, Dean of Bible College of Missouri.

Columbia, Mo.

Increasing Success.

I take great pleasure in extending my most hearty congratulations to the editor of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST and rejoice with him in celebrating the completion of its fortieth volume. To him, more than any other, is due the great success which the paper has attained, and to the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST great credit must be given for the high opinion in which our people are held by the editors and publishers of the organs of other religious bodies.

May the success of the paper and all connected with it, grow increasingly greater as the years go by in my sincere wish.

St. Louis. W. H. MCCLAIN.

A Friend to All.

J. H. GARRISON, Dear Friend: Surely you may be happy in looking over your thirty-five years of editorial life and work. Your ideals have been high and you have kept them in view. You have given to the young, strong, kindly sympathy. To mature men and women you have been a friend and inspiring companion. To the old you have given thoughtful appreciation and deference. Above all, those who know you well, feel that you have followed the mind of the Master, seeking to know and to clearly express his will in your writings and life. It is difficult to separate the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST from you in thought or you from it. One wonders that it had five years the start of you and that it is to be congratulated upon having attained its fortieth, instead of its thirty-fifth anniversary. However, it was doubtless preparing for you during those five years, and

Only a Step
Via
B. & O. S. W.
to Cincinnati & Eastern Cies.

ST. LOUIS      WEST BADEN.      LOUISVILLE      CINCINNATI      PITTSBURG
FRENCH LICK SPRINGS      COLUMBUS      WASHINGTON      BALTIMORE      PHILADELPHIA      NEW YORK

Ticket Offices
OLIVE and SIXTH
and
UNION STATION.

VESTIBULED TRAINS LEAVE ST. LOUIS DAILY
9.30 A. M.      9.08 P. M.      2.05 A. M.

DINING CARS A LA CARTE

F. D. GILDERSLEEVE, Ass't Gen'l Pass. Agent.      St. Louis, Mo.      H. C. STEVENSON, City Pass. Agent.

you were also preparing for it through the discipline of life. I wish you might have another thirty-five years together, and that each one might bring to you and to the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST ever-enlarging stores of usefulness, vision, strength, joy, hope and peace from our God.

HELEN E. MOSES.

Indianapolis, Ind.

Firmer Grasp of Our Plea.

Permit me to congratulate you on reaching this anniversary. I may say, without flattery, that every year of your history as editor of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST has shown increased knowledge and a firmer grasp of the "great plea" for which it stands. You have reached an eminence at which all true friends of our Lord may rejoice. May your precious life long be spared.

T. P. HALEY.

Kansas City, Mo.

A Beacon Light.

REV. J. H. GARRISON, My Dear Sir: Permit me to congratulate you on the occasion of your thirty-fifth anniversary of your editorial management of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. You have made it a great paper, a beacon light shedding its rays of Christianity throughout the land. The work you have done for the ennobling and uplifting of mankind will live for all time. Wishing you many more years of usefulness, I am,

Sincerely yours,
St. Louis. JOS. W. FOLK.

Ability and Vision.

MY DEAR DR. GARRISON: Let me send you my personal congratulations on the fortieth anniversary of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. It is a worthy leader of a great Christian communion. Some parts of your paper seem to me to be unsurpassed for ability and vision. In these days when so many religious journals are losing their hold on the people, it is a great joy to know that yours is appreciated and growing in strength and usefulness. You have a right to be proud of your success. It has been honestly earned.

Very sincerely,

AMORY H. BRADFORD.

Montclair, N. J.

A Worthy Monument.

DEAR BROTHER GARRISON: I want to congratulate you on the rounding out of thirty-five years of valuable editorial labor. What a vast and constant audience you have preached to in all those years!

I am sure the love and confidence of your brethren throughout this and other lands is not the least of the rewards for your splendid labors in the cause of Christianity. The great religious journal of which you are the head, is, with its wide and increasing influence, a monument of which any man might be proud. May the years deal gently with you, is my earnest prayer.

ALLAN B. PHILPUTT,
Pastor Central Christian Church.
Indianapolis, Ind.

DEAFNESS Cured at Home

Dr. W. O. Coffee, the famous aurist, has discovered a simple treatment of mild remedies that cures at the patient's home, deafness, head noises, catarrhal deafness, catarrh of the head, nose and throat. Eradicates catarrhal poison in every case.

64-page FREE Deaf Book

Explains all about Dr. Coffee's method and how he cures deafness without operations.

This book tells how he restored his own hearing after being pronounced incurable by the best doctors in the United States and shows how thousands of deaf people are having their hearing restored by this simple home treatment. He sends this book to every person afflicted with deafness or any disease of the ear, nose or throat, FREE. Write today and ask for book on deafness.

DR. W. O. COFFEE, 950 Good Block, Des Moines, Ia.

DR. COFFEE

10,000 Plants for 16c

More gardens and farms are planted to Salzer's seeds than any other in America. There is reason for this. We own and operate over 500 acres for the production of our warranted seeds. In order to induce you to try them, we make you the following unprecedented offer:

For 16 Cents Postpaid

- 1000 Early, Medium and Late Cabbages.
- 2000 Delicious Carrots.
- 2000 Blanching Celery.
- 2000 Rich Nutty Lettuce.
- 1000 Splendid Onions.
- 1000 Rare Luscious Radishes.
- 1000 Gloriously Brilliant Flowers.

Above seven packages contain sufficient seed to grow 10,000 plants, furnishing bushels of brilliant flowers and lots and lots of choice vegetables, together with our great catalog, telling all about Flowers, Roses, Small Fruits, etc., all for 16c in stamps and this notice. Mammouth 144-page catalog alone, 4c.

JOHN A. SALZER SEED CO.,
R. La Crosse, Wis.

An Unprecedented Proposition

THE GREATEST BIBLE COMMENTARY OFFER EVER MADE.
Only the Expense of a Postal to Those Who Wish to Examine This Great Work
AN EXPOSITION OF THE BIBLE

Special Offer to Christian-Evangelist Readers

We will send this magnificent set of books by freight, all charges prepaid, to any address on examination for ten days, without any advance payment, under the agreement that if found satisfactory one of the plans of payment named below will be accepted and money forwarded within ten days of receipt of books, or, if not wanted, to be carefully boxed again and returned by freight at our expense.

Only
$10.00
for the Complete Work Delivered
Each Volume measures
10 3-8 x 7 1-2 x 17-8 inches, complete number of pages, 5,261
(double column)

THIS GREAT WORK consists of a series of expositions covering all the books of the Old and New Testament by the greatest Biblical scholars and divines of modern times. The Scriptures are analyzed, illuminated and interpreted in a style that is thoroughly interesting and positively fascinating. The knowledge imparted through this work cannot be overestimated. It is an invaluable aid to ministers, expositors, teachers and students of the Bible.

The eminent authors of these expositions are as follows: Genesis, St. John, First Corinthians, MARCUS DODS, D. D. Exodus, St. Mark, Ruth, Job, R. A. WATSON, D. D. Deuteronomy, ANDREW HARPER, D. D. Joshua, First and Second Samuel, W. G. BLAICKIE, D. D., LL. D. First and Second Kings, Daniel, DEAN F. W. FARRAR, D. D. First and Second Chronicles, W. H. BENNETT, M. A. Ezra, Nehemiah, Esther, Song of Solomon, Lamentations, W. F. ADENEY, M. A. Psalms, Colossians, Philemon, ALEXANDER MACLAREN, D. D. Proverbs, R. F. HORTON, D. D. Ecclesiastes, SAMUEL COX, D. D. Isaiah, Twelve Minor Prophets, GEORGE ADAM SMITH, D. D., LL. D. Jeremiah, C. J. BALL, M. A. Ezekiel, JOHN SKINNER, M. A. St. Matthew, J. MONRO GIBSON, D. D. St. Luke, HENRY BURTON, M. A. Acts of the Apostles, G. T. STOKES, D. D. Romans, H. C. G. MOULE, D. D. Second Corinthians, Thessalonians, JAMES DENNEY, D. D. Galatians, Ephesians, G. G. FINDLAY, D. D. Philippians, ROBERT RAINY, D. D. First and Second Timothy, Titus, James, Jude, A. PLUMMER, D. D. Hebrews, T. C. EDWARDS, D. D. First and Second Peter, J. R. LUMBY, D. D. First, Second, and Third John, W. ALEXANDER, D. D. Revelation, W. MILLIGAN, D. D.

COMMENDATIONS

THE S. S. SCRANTON CO.

Hartford, Conn.

Gentlemen: This great work is such a marvel of cheapness in price as to bring it within the easy reach of the ministry of the country. It is preeminently the Pastor's Book of Instruction in Bible Study. It is more than a Commentary, it is a sacred library of theology, rich in suggestion and felicitous in expression.

(Rev.) GEORGE M. STONE, D. D., Asylum Ave. Baptist Church.

THE S. S. SCRANTON CO.

Moriches, N. Y.

My Dear Sirs: I consider it the greatest Bible help that I have ever seen. I think so much of it that I would not take $50.00 cash for the same if I could not get another set. Believe me most sincerely,
Yours in Jesus,

CHARLES H. HALLOCK.

THE S. S. SCRANTON CO.

Marysville, Ohio.

Gentlemen: I am simply delighted with the work. It more than met my expectations in style, printing, and binding, and the work throughout is one of the greatest bargains I ever received from you. The writers on the different books of the Bible are at the head as Bible scholars and expositors, and I do not see how a better work could be compiled at any cost.

Very truly yours,
JOHN M. BRODERICK, Judge Union County Probate Court.

THE S. S. SCRANTON CO.

Illiopolis, Ills.

Gentlemen: It is the richest collection of suggestive, explanatory and stimulative exposition which has come to my notice. The work of George Adam Smith alone is worth the entire set.

Cordially and sincerely,
(Rev.) S. W. BEGGS, Pres't Decatur District Epworth League.

DIRECTIONS FOR ORDERING—TWO PLANS

1. Send $10.00 and the six volumes will be forwarded at once by freight or express as directed, or send the $10.00 in ten days after receipt of books.

2. Send $1.00 and promise in same letter to pay $1.00 monthly for the next eleven months, making $12.00 as complete payment, and the six volumes will be forwarded at once, or commence the monthly payments of $1.00 in ten days after receipts of books.

Freight charges are prepaid on either of above plans and we also guarantee safe delivery.

GUARANTEE. Every page of the 5,261 in these books is clearly printed and the volumes strongly and handsomely bound in genuine buckram cloth.

The books will be in good condition when received, and answer to description in every particular.

After ten days for examination, if the books are not found to be just as above set forth, they may be then returned to us in good order by freight at our expense, and the money received by us for them will be refunded.

As to our responsibility, we refer to The Christian-Evangelist or to any commercial agency. Established 1866. Mention The Christian-Evangelist when ordering.

THE S. S. SCRANTON COMPANY, Publishers, Hartford, Ct.

THE CHRISTIAN- EVANGELIST

A WEEKLY RELIGIOUS NEWSPAPER.

Vol. XLI. No. 4.

January 28, 1904.

$1.50 A Year.

BONA THOMPSON MEMORIAL LIBRARY,
BUTLER COLLEGE, INDIANAPOLIS, DEDICATED DECEMBER 20.

SEE PAGE 131

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING CO. ST. LOUIS, MO.

The Christian-Evangelist

J. H. GARRISON, Editor

W. E. GARRISON, Assistant Editor

F. D. POWER, } Staff Correspondents.
B. B. TYLER, }
W. DURBAN, }

Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year

For foreign countries add $1.04 for postage.

Remittances should be made by money order, draft or registered letter; not by local cheque, unless 15 cents is added to cover cost of collection.

In Ordering Change of Post-office give both old and new address.

Matter for Publication should be addressed to the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. Subscriptions and remittances should be addressed to the Christian Publishing Company.

Unused Manuscripts will be returned only if accompanied by stamps.

News Items, evangelistic and otherwise, are solicited and should be sent on a postal card, if possible.

Entered at St. Louis P. O. as Second Class Matter.

What We Stand For.

For the Christ of Galilee,
For the truth which makes men free,
For the bond of unity
Which makes God's children one.

For the love which shines in deeds,
For the life which this world needs,
For the church whose triumph speeds
The prayer: "Thy will be done."

For the right against the wrong,
For the weak against the strong,
For the poor who've waited long
For the brighter age to be.

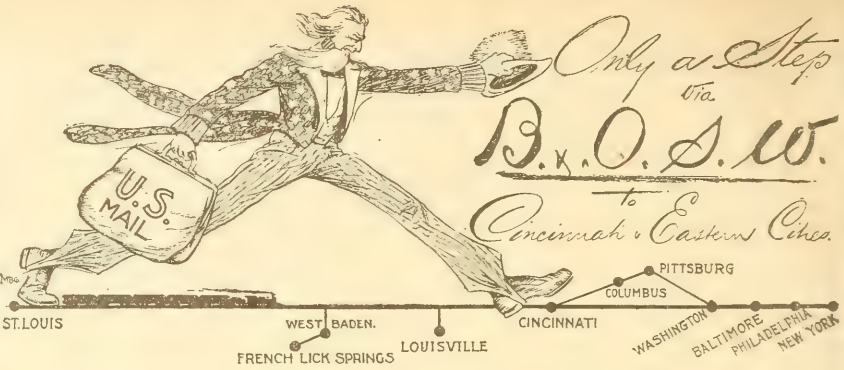

For the faith against tradition,
For the truth 'gainst superstition,
For the hope whose glad fruition
Our waiting eyes shall see.

For the city God is rearing,
For the New Earth now appearing,
For the heaven above us clearing
And the song of victory.

CONTENTS

Current Events.....	115
EDITORIAL:
Unconquered Land—III.....	117
Bro. McPherson on Federation.....	117
Concerning Baptism in the New Testament.....	118
Editor's Easy Chair.....	119
Notes and Comments.....	119
CONTRIBUTED ARTICLES:
The Present Emergency in Moral and Religious Education. Prof. George Albert Coe.....	120
The Weakness of Our Ministry. C. A. Freer.....	121
A Timely Funeral. Chalmers McPherson.....	122
Christian Enthusiasm. Clayton Keith.....	122
My Pilot Knows (poem). Thomas Curtis Clark.....	122
The Romance of a Century. F. D. Power.....	123
The Purgatory of a Great People. Wm. Durban.....	124
Educational News and Notes.....	125
NEWS FROM MANY FIELDS:
Illinois.....	126
Kentucky.....	126
Western Pennsylvania.....	126
Michigan.....	127
Nebraska.....	127
Washington, D. C.....	127
THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.....	128
MIDWEEK PRAYER-MEETING.....	128
CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.....	129
OUR BUDGET.....	130
CORRESPONDENCE:
Our Western Letter.....	132
Missouri.....	133
C. W. B. M. in Missouri.....	133
Iowa Bible-School Work.....	133
The Christian Pioneer.....	134
The Church Register.....	134
Birthday Greetings.....	135
EVANGELISTIC.....	136
MARRIAGES AND OBITUARIES.....	138
THE QUIET HOUR.....	138
FAMILY CIRCLE.....	139
WITH THE CHILDREN.....	141

Only a Step
via
B. & O. S. W.
to Eastern Cies.

ST. LOUIS      WEST BADER.      LOUISVILLE      CINCINNATI      COLUMBUS      PITTSBURG
FRENCH LICK SPRINGS      WASHINGTON      BALTIMORE      PHILADELPHIA      NEW YORK

Ticket Offices
OLIVE and SIXTH
and
UNION STATION.

VESTIBULED TRAINS LEAVE ST. LOUIS DAILY
9.30 A. M.      9.08 P. M.      2.05 A. M.

DINING CARS A LA CARTE

F. D. GILDERSLEEVE, Ass't Gen'l Pass. Agent.      St. Louis, Mo.      H. C. STEVENSON, City Pass. Agent.

Find a Cheap Home

In the Southwest. All that's needed is a few hundred dollars with a willingness to work.

Southeast Missouri, Arkansas, Louisiana and Texas are full of opportunities—the climate is mild, the soil is rich, the lands are cheap.

Half rate excursions Jan. 5 and 19, Feb. 2 and 16, Mar. 1 and 15, via the Cotton Belt.

Write for descriptive literature, maps and cost of tickets.

E. W. LaBEAUME, G. P. & T. A.,
Cotton Belt, ST. LOUIS MO.

A Combination Offer.

1.—SUCCESS, the great monthly magazine of New York, known everywhere and esteemed for its superior excellence. Price per year, $1.00.

2.—OUR YOUNG FOLKS, which needs no commendation from those who will read this. A sixteen-page weekly. Price per year, 75 cents.

3.—JUNIOR ENDEAVOR WORLD, the best paper of its class in the wide world. A sixteen-page monthly. Price per year, 35 cents.

Regular price for the three, one year, $2.10.

All Three will be sent for $1.50.

Address, CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING CO.,
St. Louis, Mo.

POPULAR HYMNS No. 2

By C. C. CLINE

Now used by

Thousands of Churches Everywhere
in the land.

The Popular Song Book
with the People.

PRICES:

SINGLE COPIES, POSTPAID.

Limp cloth, - 25 cents      Boards, - 25 cents
Cloth, - 30 cents

PER DOZEN, NOT PREPAID.

Limp cloth, - $2.00      Boards, - $2.50
Cloth, - $3.00

PER HUNDRED, NOT PREPAID.

Limp cloth, - $15.00      Boards, - $20.00
Cloth, - $25.00

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING COMPANY
St. Louis, Mo.

Helps To Faith

By J. H. GARRISON.

Blue Cloth Binding; Title in Gilt;
245 Pages.

$1.00, Postpaid.

DEDICATION

"To all lovers of Truth who are seeking a stable foundation on which to build a faith that will give strength, comfort, and inspiration for service here, and a triumphant hope for life hereafter."

A book of exceeding great usefulness and popularity. It is well calculated to not only strengthen the faith of the believer, but to implant faith in the breast of the doubter. It should be found in every reading-room, study and family circle.

Christian Publishing Company
1522 Locust Street      St. Louis, Mo.

THE CHRISTIAN EVANGELIST

"IN FAITH, UNITY, IN OPINION AND METHODS, LIBERTY, IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY."

Vol. XLI.

January 28, 1904

No. 4

Current Events

The Canal Debate.

A substantial contribution to the gaiety of nations was made by Senator Morgan who last week introduced a bill providing for the annexation of the entire Republic of Panama to the United States. This seems rather a radical project in expansion to be fathered by a senator from Alabama. The measure carries an appropriation of ten million dollars to be paid to Panama as an inducement to accept annexation, an equal amount to be given to Colombia as a compensation for the loss of Panama (a sort of cash apology for our premature recognition of the new republic), and sixty million dollars to be used in buying the entire property of the canal company, including its rights and concessions. There is no reason to suppose that Mr. Morgan has suffered a change of heart with reference to his partiality for the Nicaragua route. But he assumes the attitude now of one who, believing that the President's action commits us irrevocably to the Panama proposition, proposes to make a wry face and swallow the dose in spite of his confessed dislike for it. The grotesque notions of inviting Panama to be annexed for a cash consideration and of paying Colombia for the territorial loss which she has suffered through a revolution in which our government was not involved, are part of the grimace with which he swallows the distasteful idea of accepting the Panama route. Mr. Morgan may find in it material for a good many hours of speech-making; but otherwise the bill is not likely to have much influence.

The Senate has, after some hesitation, for fear of giving aid and comfort to the opposition, and affording occasion for needless delay, adopted Mr. Gorman's resolution calling on the President to transmit to the Senate a full and explicit history of all our relations with the governments of New Granada and Colombia, especially of the circumstances under which we have landed troops on the isthmus by request for the maintenance of peace. It can scarcely be said that a vote on the canal treaty is in sight. Neither does there seem to be any chance that the opposition will discover the thirty votes which are requisite to defeat the treaty when it does come up for action.

The motive of the Republican papers in reminding us so frequently of Mr.

Mr. Bryan as a Factor,

Bryan's continued influence in the councils of his party is not unlike that of the Democratic papers in their recent attempt to persuade us that Mr. Hanna was an available candidate for the Republican nomination. The Democratic leaders would be pleased to have Mr. Hanna nominated, and the Republicans secretly rejoice that Mr. Bryan's following has not deserted him sufficiently to admit of a sweeping reorganization on lines widely different from those of the Kansas City platform. But making due allowance for these interested representations of Mr. Bryan's influence, the fact remains that he has still a larger personal following than any other man in his party. He has recently reiterated his faith in the Kansas City platform, and has asserted that he can see no proper course for the party to pursue other than to reaffirm the principles of that platform. He declines to state whether or not he will bolt the ticket in case this course is not pursued, but, so far as present indications go, it seems highly probable that Mr. Bryan will be found at the head of a no-compromise movement, with a platform of free silver and anti-imperialism, and that, whether his followers or the so-called reorganizers shall control the convention, the dominant element will in neither case command the support of the other in the campaign. It can scarcely be said that anything is impossible in politics, but nothing could be much more improbable than that within the present year the followers of Mr. Bryan and the admirers of Mr. Cleveland should be found supporting the same platform. Mr. Bryan's recent utterances have been significant as showing that he will not be contented with a platform which ignores the old issues and shifts the battle to new ground. In taking this position he eliminates the only visible chance of re-union by compromise. There still remains for the party the hope that one of its parts will become strong enough to carry on a successful campaign without the help of the other.

The Cleveland Phantom.

Physically Mr. Cleveland is no airy specter, but politically he is a most persistent ghost, and one which, like Banquo's, will not down.

Unlike Banquo's ghost, however, Mr. Cleveland would apparently down if he could, but his friends will not let him. Moreover, the Republican organs are unwilling to allow him to be forgotten for fear the Democratic ranks might lapse into harmony under Mr. Bryan or some other leader. It might have been supposed that Mr. Cleveland's letter to the Brooklyn Eagle, which had been vigorously advocating his nomination, would put a stop to all this talk. It did, so far as the Eagle was concerned, for Mr. Cleveland stated positively he would not be a candidate, and the Eagle has transferred its allegiance to Judge Parker. But there are others who take Mr. Cleveland's declination less seriously. They remind us that Samuel J. Tilden was deeply disappointed when the Democratic convention of 1880 accepted his declination and gave the nomination to Hancock; that Blaine resigned from Harrison's cabinet to become a candidate for the nomination after he had declared in writing that he would not accept it; that Mr. Cleveland himself, in his letter of acceptance in 1884, advocated a constitutional amendment prohibiting the election of any candidate for a second term, yet became a candidate again in the next two campaigns; and that in 1891 he announced that he would not accept another nomination, but yielded to the solicitation of his party in the following year. All of these facts lend a certain plausibility to the suggestion that Mr. Cleveland's present declination is less final than it appears on the surface. But setting aside the fact of his refusal, there is, it seems to us, plenty of ground for considering Mr. Cleveland at present only an unsubstantial apparition so far as his candidacy is concerned. There is no man in his party whom popular opinion in the west and south has more thoroughly identified with those plutocratic interests which it considers the natural enemy of true democracy. For the party to pass abruptly from Mr. Bryan in 1900 to Mr. Cleveland in 1904, would not be to reorganize, but to flop.

The most ominous reports from the far East are those which assert that

Troops Moving in Korea.

Japanese troops to the number of 12,000 have been landed on the coast of Korea and that Russia is meeting this advance by a mobilizing of troops along the Yalu River, which forms the boundary between Manchuria and Korea. This is highly important if true, for, as we have said before, it is far more likely that hostileities will break out as the result of local tension in Korea than that peace will be broken by a formal and deliberate declaration of war. Almost two weeks have elapsed since the last Japanese note was dispatched to St. Petersburg, and the reply which is momentarily expected has not yet been received. Much will depend upon the tenor of this reply. The Czar is said to have abridged the power of Viceroy Alexieff and to have taken from him the authority to give the signal for the beginning of war. This looks like peace. If the signal must be received from St. Petersburg instead of from the viceroy's office in Manchuria, there is a much greater likelihood that, in spite of local friction, diplomacy will find a modus vivendi and hostilities will be averted. Every delay favors compromise and peace. But it must be remembered that no present compromise will be a permanent check upon Russia's advance toward open ports on the Pacific. She may yield now for the sake of saving the expense of a war, but she will stand ready when the time is ripe to take up her claims just where she laid them down.

One must, of course, admit that the modern theory and practice, which recognizes the common International Meddling. interests of the nations as a great, though not always a well disciplined, family, having mutual rights and obligations, is a long advance upon the old arrangement under which every government was a free lance to the extent of its military and naval power. The "concert of the powers" is a cumbersome machine, but it embodies, imperfectly to be sure, the idea that nations have some common interests and that the interests of civilization necessitate united action. But there are times when one cannot but regret that the powers have found it expedient to interfere in the settlement of quarrels which seemed to be in a fair way to settling themselves. When Japan, in her war with China in 1894, first revealed to the world her astonishing achievements in the modern art of war, Korea was the chief bone of contention. Japan won. By all the rules of old-fashioned war, she was entitled to the spoils, which would in this case have been complete control over Korea and considerable rights in Manchuria. But Russia interfered, with specious pretexts and plausible inventions intended to conceal her own ulterior motives, and Japan was cheated of her prize. Manchuria and Korea remained—to be a prey to Russia in the fullness of time. The case has some points of similarity to the course of events in Macedonia. Aided by Russia, the people of this province threw off the Turkish yoke years ago. England interfered, for fear Russia would gain something by the new arrangement (as she undoubtedly would have done) and Macedonia was restored to Turkey—sacrificed in the interest of that potent abstraction known as the "balance of power." If Great Britain had been less selfishly jealous of Russia in 1877, the Macedonian problem would doubtless be as nearly solved now as any part of the Balkan problem is or can be. If Russia had been less selfishly meddlesome in 1894, Manchuria and Korea would not now be the powder magazine of the East in which a spark of local hostility may bring on an explosion that will shake the world.

We hope our readers will not lose sight of the fact that there is now pending before Congress one of the most important reform measures that has been under consideration for many years. The purpose of the Hepburn bill is to make state prohibition laws effective within their respective states, by preventing the shipment of liquor into them under cover of the Interstate Commerce law. The courts have held that State prohibitory laws cannot prevent the shipment of liquor into any state, but can have jurisdiction over it only after it has been delivered to the consignee to whom the interstate shipment is addressed. This ruling has opened a wide door for the mail-order liquor business, which is carried on extensively in all prohibition states. The Hepburn bill does not introduce prohibition into any new territory, but aims only to prevent the nullification of existing prohibition laws by the method indicated. It provides that interstate shipments of liquor shall become subject to the jurisdiction of state laws as soon as they cross the boundary of the state to which they are consigned. The liquor forces have increased their lobby at Washington and are fighting this bill as they have never fought one before. The first hearing on the bill before the House Committee on Judiciary was held on January 20. One of the attorneys of the liquor dealers stated to the committee that this is the most important legislation that has been proposed since the civil war. It is of immense importance to the friends of temperance to urge the passage of this measure. We subjoin a statement from Mr. Edwin C. Dinwiddie, legislative superintendent of the American Anti-saloon League:

Our definite request of our temperance constituency in all the churches and throughout the country at this time is for individuals to write at once to their own Congressman and invoke his aid with the Committee and the House for the speedy and favorable report and the early passage of the bill. The liquor men are getting Congressmen from the centers of the distilling and brewing trade to urge delay. This must be offset at once by counter pleas from our friends as indicated. Do not delay. Do this at once from everywhere and stand ready to aid, as information shall be given out from this office in regard to the contest. We have arranged that Mrs. M. D. Ellis, legislative superintendent W. C. T. U., shall have charge of the petition work so that our efforts are not duplicated and no energies are lost or wasted. Petitions should be for the Hepburn bill only in the House and the Dolliver bill in the Senate. Couple no other measure with these so that the petitions will go right to the Committee and be effective. It is deemed unwise to divide our energies on other bills at this time. The liquor men would doubtless be glad to compromise in order to defeat this most important bill. All at it and at once will win the fight.

The three principal organizations of retail liquor-dealers in this country—viz., the Knights of Fidelity (sic), the Royal Arch, and the National

The Liquor League.

Retail Liquor-Dealers' Association—with a combined membership of 150,000, have formed a coalition, to be known as the National Liquor League. The purpose is to fight "unfair" legislation and to "throw the mantle of protection about its members in every possible way,"—not in every lawful way, nor in every right way, be it noted, but "in every possible way." All this was decided upon at a meeting of the three organizations held Jan. 7, at Cincinnati, and the union is to be perfected at a general convention to be held in St. Louis in October. Part of the plan contemplates the raising of an immense fund by the sale of stamps, which members of the association are expected to place on their wares. Five million dollars is mentioned as the total amount which it is proposed to raise "to fight legislation inimical to the trade," and to employ "attorneys to look after the Association's interests in Congress and the various state legislatures." Here is nothing more nor less than a bare-faced proposition to raise the funds necessary to buy up legislative bodies. One of the liquor papers, Truth, opposes the scheme on the ground that legislatures will, as they have done in the past, take the money and fail to deliver the goods. That same journal, whose utterance is for once in harmony with its name, says that "the raising of funds to corrupt the machinery of government and publicly announcing its intent to do so, will not aid the trade in holding public confidence." No, it certainly will not. But we are grateful to Truth for this unequivocal testimony to its understanding of the Association's proposition. It is to raise money for bribery, pure and simple.

This incident is instructive. It is a warning to temperance people to get together and make their principles effective. It is a hint to keep your eye on your congressmen and assemblymen, and note their attitude on reform measures. It is a side-light on license and taxation as a means of restricting the liquor business. It thrives so well on taxation that the dealers are proposing to impose an additional voluntary stamp-tax on themselves. They can afford it. In the end, it all comes out of the consumer.

Unconquered Land.—III.

Internal Prejudices and Misconceptions.

Everyone acquainted with the internal history of our movement knows that, while there is no formal division of our forces, and cannot be, of course, consistently with our fundamental position, there are, nevertheless, prejudices, misconceptions and alienations, which effectually prevent co-operation and neutralize to a certain extent, our plea for unity. The question is, whether any attempt should be made to bring about a better understanding between ourselves, on matters of difference, and to remove such prejudices and alienations as have grown up out of these misconceptions.

It seems to us that the same spirit of unity which leads us to plead for the unification of Christendom, under the Lordship of Christ, should lead us to seek a better understanding and a better feeling between those who are standing aloof from our missionary work and our general co-operative movements, and those of us who are using such agencies and methods for carrying on our work. The more one stops to think about it, the greater the reasons appear why we should present to the world a united front. When we have done all that can be done, there will no doubt be factions among us, even as there were in the apostolic church and have always been. But are we not justified in supposing that the great mass of the brethren standing disconnected with our co-operative movements, are honest in their convictions, and only need to see their duty more clearly in this direction in order to do it?

The chief causes of difference, as we understand it, are: the legitimacy of missionary organizations, as agencies for carrying out Christ's great commission; the rightfulness of instrumental music in public worship, and, perhaps, the question of the organization of the local church. These are considered important, we think, about in the order we have named them. Have the brethren on either side of these questions reached a stage of feeling, in which they are unwilling to meet together in a friendly conference to talk over these questions of difference as brethren, and consider whether there is not some modus vivendi by which we may at least agree to get on together in peace? We hope not. So far as we are concerned, we should be glad to meet with any number of these brethren to reason with them, and to be reasoned with, concerning any of these questions of difference. Why could we not have a conference of our editors, since we have most direct access to the brotherhood?

The old method of newspaper controversy, with its personalities and offensive epithets, has been tried and found wanting. Let us have no recourse to that method. Back of all attempts at coming to a common understanding, there must be brotherly love, mutual confidence and an earnest desire to see together, that we may act together. It will be found, in this case, just as between ourselves and other religious bodies, that the differences have been magnified and the unities have been minimized or overlooked. While it is very desirable that we should secure such a degree of unity of understanding, as to enable us to work together in the great enterprise of missions, of benevolence and of education, if this cannot be so now, is it impossible for us to agree that these differences of opinion and method, are not to be causes of estrangement between us, as brethren, and of alienation and strife? For instance, we all agree in the necessity of missionary work, of sending the gospel to all the world and of preaching it throughout all our borders. The differences relate simply to method—what is the best method of doing this work? Is this a matter about which brethren should quarrel? Take the matter of public worship. Here again, we are all agreed in the necessity of such worship, and of the use of such human aids as meeting houses, hymn-books, systems of musical notation, different parts in music, etc. The difference arises on the point as to whether it is lawful or permissible for Christians to use an organ to aid in the singing. Is this a cause for disfellowshipping each other? Personally, we think the less of no brother, or his character as a Christian, because he cannot worship God with the use of an organ. Why should he want to disfellowship us, because we can? The same principle applies to the question of what is sometimes called "the one-man pastorate." Is the question as to whether one man shall be called pastor, having others associated with him, who are not preachers, and who are called elders, or whether all of them be called elders or pastors, a matter of such great importance as to make it a test of fellowship? It is, after all, more a question of names and words than of principles.

Would our conservative brethren who regard these matters as of sufficient importance to justify them in withholding their co-operation from their brethren, be willing to agree that a number of their representative leaders should meet, in brotherly conference, an equal number of brethren from whom they differ, not to debate, but to see whether a better agreement can be reached? If not, will they suggest some better method by which the same end may be reached? If there be the yearning desire for greater unity and fraternity among us, then it seems to us a way can be found to secure it. But if our opinionativeness outweigh our love for each other, and our desire for a better mutual understanding, then the time has not yet come for a brotherly exchange of views, and we must wait. But some of us cannot wait long if we are to see this desire of our hearts before we go hence.

Bro. McPherson on Federation.

We give place elsewhere to the strictures on our recent editorial, with pleasure. We regret to say, however, that the article begins with a mistake. The quotation which we made from a letter, as the basis of that editorial, was not "written by a Texas editor," nor by anyone else in Texas, nor by anyone who was satirizing Brother McPherson's address, but by one who thoroughly agreed with him, and who believed that he had indeed preached the funeral of church federation. Our brother should have inferred as much from our statement that the letter was from a "brother whose zeal for Christian union was more or less marred by his deep-seated prejudice against practicing it." "The Texas editor," whom our brother probably had in mind, is one of the last men that we would have characterized in that way.

In reply, therefore, to the remark of our brother, that he was not conscious of anything having been "slaughtered" at the Texas Christian Lectureship, it is enough to say that this was not our interpretation of the effect of his address, but the interpretation of one who viewed the question from his own point of view. It is scarcely necessary for us to say that the thing which we admitted to be dead, was not church federation as presented by its recognized exponents, but "the child of an over-heated imagination"—an unreal federation which has no actual existence.

Brother McPherson admits that the conclusions of his paper "were based chiefly on Mr. Sanford's treatment of two questions asked him by me," (him). That, we submit, was a very insufficient foundation on which to build an address against federation. There is a great deal of literature extant on the subject, which would have given our brother a much better basis for his conclusions.

Let us look at these two questions which he has propounded, and which he required should be answered categorically by yes or no. First, look at question No. 1: If such a question as that were asked of us by a representative of any of the denominations, with a request that we answer it by yes or no, we should respectfully decline. The question does not admit of such an answer. What is meant by "under all circumstances?" and what is meant by "without any restraint or interference whatever?" Perhaps the "circumstances" are such that it would be clearly unwise for the particular religious body, asking the question, to undertake the establishment of a church. Would not the members of the council "be absolutely free," also, to point out to such body the unwisdom of such an undertaking, and the propriety of selecting another field? Would that be considered "any restraint or interference whatever?" Our churches in the city are continually abandoning places where they have begun work. Is it to be supposed that our association with other religious bodies would prevent their advising such action, for the same reasons that have hitherto influenced us? It is plain that the question cannot be answered by yes or no. If our brother meant to ask whether, in the last analysis, each local church must not decide for itself whether or not it would occupy a given field, that could be answered affirmatively, but his question was not framed that way.

The second question is no easier to answer categorically. It doesn't seem very much of a caricature to interpret it to mean something like this: "But, suppose we should be desperately stubborn, and refuse to yield to any argument, no matter how well founded, in favor of abandoning work in any given field, and should make ourselves generally disagreeable, would other churches still smile on us, and regard us just as much in favor of federation as they are?" That is much more definite, and could be readily answered negatively; but a kind-hearted man like Dr. Sanford, would not give it so bad an interpretation as that, and yet if he should answer it affirmatively, without any qualification, he might be understood as saying that federation does not ask or expect the co-operating churches, under any circumstances, to subordinate their own local interests to the higher interests of the kingdom of God. But that would not be true, for in many cases that is precisely what it would advise churches to do. As to the latter part of the question, it may be said that federation does not ask us, or any other religious body, to advise members to unite with any other church contrary to their own convictions of truth.

We claim, therefore, our brother did not present, fairly and frankly, "the kind of federation we were asked to enter." The kind of federation we were asked to enter was amply explained in an address delivered before our last Congress, by the same man who offered the Omaha resolution, and the leaders of church federation have endorsed that address, as an excellent presentation of what they are advocating. That address, and its endorsement, were before Brother McPherson when he prepared his address. He will not say, we think, that that address advocates or involves any compromise of any of our principles.

Of course, no "one of our preachers or editors would be willing to take the replies of Mr. Sanford as a basis of federation." They were not intended as such. But his replies did refer him to an answer to his question which almost any of our brethren would accept as a basis of church federation. We have no space for the correspondence referred to, and we regret that Brother McPherson found space for it in his address before the Texas Lectureship. It was a splendid opportunity for him to give his Texas brethren a bugle-blast in favor of closer unity among themselves and with their religious neighbors,—such a union in co-operation as would compromise no truth we hold, but would show to the world that we were really sincere in our desire to work with all other Christians in advancing the kingdom of God. Brother McPherson was capable of giving the proper key-note, but he was strangely hampered by that correspondence.

We thoroughly agree with Brother McPherson that this subject is far too important to be dismissed with a little satire, as our correspondent tried to do in the letter to which our editorial was a reply. It does, indeed, "touch the heart of our plea," in a way that many have not yet realized. Our brother may rest assured that it is not going to be dismissed without a thorough investigation, although we believe there is at present substantial agreement among us, so far as there is mutual understanding of what is proposed.

Concerning Baptism in the New Testament.

DEAR BROTHER GARRISON: Dr. J. L. Withrow, formerly pastor of the Third Presbyterian Church, Chicago, and now located in Boston, has for a number of years, given in the Record-Herald a weekly exposition of the Sunday-school lesson. Will you tell your readers what you think of the following from his remarks on to-day's lesson:

Was Christ immersed? I have no doubt that he was. Nor have I any doubt that others were set apart to discipleship under Christ by the same mode. But as I do not find any record of "the twelve" disciples who were chosen to accompany the Master in his ministry, being baptized by either immersion or sprinkling or pouring, it has never seemed to me essential that either of these modes should be employed to the exclusion of the others.

As Edersheim says, the baptism of Jesus was the last act of his private life. He was out in the open after that. He had done all that a loyal Jew should do, and entered upon a mission for saving all who would do righteously. The preparation period was passed, and when (Luke iii, 21) he went up out of the water praying, he was, in his exalted excellence, doing just what every one of those who now would be his disciples should do. He prayed as he went up out of the water.

Chicago.

W. P. KEELER.

The admission of Dr. Withrow that Christ was immersed, and that "others were set apart to discipleship under Christ by the same mode," does credit to his candor as a scholar and Bible teacher. We have read many of Dr. Withrow's comments on Sunday-school topics with interest. But when Dr. Withrow says that, "as I do not find any record of 'the twelve disciples' who were chosen to accompany the Master in his ministry, being baptized by either immersion or sprinkling or pouring, it has never seemed to me essential that either of these modes should be employed to the exclusion of the others," he seems to us to reason very illogically. If the record showed that some of "the twelve" had been immersed, others poured and others sprinkled, his conclusion that "neither of these modes should be employed to the exclusion of the others" would be entirely logical; but since Christ was immersed, and John immersed his disciples, and there is no record of anything else, it is very unsafe reasoning to conclude that "the twelve" were not baptized, because no record is given of the baptism of each of them! It is far safer to reason that Jesus would select for his disciples those who, like himself, felt it incumbent upon them to fulfil every righteous command, and had submitted to that ordinance at the hands of John. As a matter of fact we know that some of "the twelve" were disciples of John, and had no doubt been baptized by him. Again Dr. Withrow seems to us to be guilty of an anachronism in implying that pouring and sprinkling, as forms of baptism, were practiced either under John or Jesus. The practice of affusion for baptism according to the highest authorities, came in many centuries later.

We are glad the time has come when these questions can be discussed without sectarian bitterness or strife, and wholly in the light of the best scholarship of the world, as it is thrown upon the inspired record. We predict that the time is near when the question of baptism will cease to be a subject of denominational controversy, but will be calmly and dispassionately settled, as every other Bible question must be settled, by rigidly scientific, and honest investigation of the New Testament record.

Dr. E. B. Sanford, 90 Bible House, New York, kindly forwards to us the following note, which he had just received, and which we publish here because of the bearing it has upon a current topic of discussion:

"DEAR DR. SANFORD.—I have yours of Dec. 18th. I have read the pamphlet you kindly sent me. I like Dr. Garrison's views on federation. I can wheel into line, and I do not see why the Disciples should not.

Fraternally,

C. L. THOMPSON, Sec'y."

Dr. Thompson is secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Home Missions, and would be as much opposed, as any of us, to entering into any sort of an alliance that would compromise his convictions and principles. He does not believe that the view of federation which the editor of this paper has presented involves any such sacrifice. He, like Dr. Sanford, endorses the view of federation which we have presented. Does any one among us object to it?

Editor's Easy Chair.

A reader of more than ordinary spiritual discernment, in a letter which we have just been reading, remarks upon two very different methods of removing error and promoting truth. The one is the hammer of the iconoclast who, working from the outside through methods of external criticism, knocks off, here and there, what he conceives to be error, in his cold, merciless way, while the other method seeks to build up from within the spiritual life, so that in the process of intellectual and spiritual growth, the errors will naturally fall away. Isaac Errett used to illustrate the latter method by a tree which stood in his yard, in Michigan, and which held on to its leaves right through the winter until he would become anxious lest there would be no place for the new leaves of spring; but when spring came, with its rising sap and expanding life, the old leaves dropped off and the new ones came to take their places. We have just such a tree out at Rose Hill. We noticed this morning how tightly it held on to its leaves of last summer, even though they were laden with snow. We could go out with a club and, by great labor, knock them off; but in so doing we would likely injure the tree and destroy many of the young buds, now latent, that are only waiting for the coming of spring to form the green foliage of the coming summer. We leave that task, therefore, to the flowing sap and the expanding life of the coming spring.

✧

Alexander Procter had another figure for explaining the same principle. He took his illustration from the New Testament. Only let Christ into the temple of the heart, he said, and he will expel everything that is impure, unholy and injurious, just as he cleansed the temple of old from the thieves and the moneychangers. Both these illustrations focus a very strong light on one of the most fundamental principles of our religious movement. It has been said that our creed is too short and will admit men into the church with too many doctrinal errors; but the answer to that objection is that any error that Christ can tolerate, we ought to be able to tolerate until his growing life in the heart expels it by the normal process. This principle is more far-reaching than many of us have supposed. It ought to make us very patient with each other, and very tolerant of each other's crudities of opinion and errors in judgment, and even of each other's faults in life. If one studies carefully Christ's method of dealing with his disciples, he will marvel at the patience which he manifested toward them, and how he bore with them, knowing that only their spiritual growth could cure them of their crude views and false ambitions. He perceived and expressed what was the deepest need of humanity when he said, "I came that they may have life, and may have it abundantly."

"Tis life whereof our nerves are scant,
O life, not death, for which we pant,
More life, and fuller, that I want."

✧

Environment has much to do with one's view of the world. How different must be the sea-gull's opinion of the world from that of the oyster! We can imagine a dialogue between the two on the nature of the world. The gull, for a change, is strolling along the shore, meditatively, when he sees his humble neighbor, the oyster, lying in the shallow water, and thinking to be social, remarks: "It is a fine day; glorious skies, splendid breeze, and a wide expanse of sea stretching out in the distance." "No," mutters the oyster, "I see no expanding sea, nor glorious skies, but only a narrow cell in which I live. The world seems very narrow and limited to me, with only a little salt water, and a low-vaulted roof over my head." No one can deny that the oyster described the world, as it appeared to it, just as accurately as did the gull. The difference is, the latter enjoys a larger, fuller life, with greater freedom and opportunity. When a man says there is no heaven, no future life, no immortal love that is stronger than death, no God, no spiritual life, no vision of things eternal, do not condemn him too strongly. These things do not exist as realities to him. His eyes have not been opened to the larger and truer vision of things. You cannot help him by scolding him or condemning him, but if you can help to beget in him, through the gospel, a new life, that life will cast out his narrow and false views and fill his soul with truer visions and higher aims.

✧

This truth of the primacy of life is basic in all our moral and social reforms. Herein a great many so-called reformers have parted company with Jesus of Nazareth, thinking to renovate society and rejuvenate the world by certain external improvements and regulations. Jesus Christ blended, as no other reformer has ever done, the individualistic and social views of life. Men are to be renewed in spirit, individually, and being so renewed, they are to introduce a new and purer social order, and incarnate the truths and principles of the kingdom of God in the organic life of the race. But rest assured that the "new heaven and the new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness" can only be realized through the combined labors of those who have become new creatures in Christ Jesus. In other words, the gospel remains the supreme remedy for our individual and social ills, and its supremacy consists in its power to renovate and purify and enlarge the life of men. "Every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but the corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit. A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit." This is the philosophy of Christ's religion. It proposes to make good men, relying upon good men, not only to live good lives, but to make good laws, organize good governments, establish good institutions, and so make a good world.

✧

The Oldest Editor.

The following shows that the editor of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST is not the oldest editor among us, or in the service of the Christian Pub. Co., but that that honor belongs to our faithful co-laborer, W. W. Dowling, who has been editor of our Sunday-school publications almost from the beginning of our company, and who before that was engaged in the same business in Indianapolis:

Forty years ago the Editor-in-Chief of Our Young Folks went to the city of Indianapolis, Ind., to engage in religious journalism with Elder Elijah Goodwin on The Christian Record. At that time The Record was one of the two religious weeklies published by the Disciples of Christ, the other being The American Christian Review, edited by Benjamin Franklin. Thirty-nine years ago, the first of the present month, the editor of this journal issued the first number of The Little Sower, an eight-page monthly for Christian Sunday-schools. It seemed to meet a "long felt want," and prospered from the first. At the beginning of the second volume it became a semi-monthly, and at the beginning of the fifth year, a weekly. Indianapolis continued as the place of publication until the year 1878, when the office of publication was removed to St. Louis and became a part of the Christian Pub. Co. A few years later, in a general consolidation of publishing interests, The Little Sower united its fortunes with another Christian Sunday-school weekly and took the name of The Sunday-school Evangelist; and still later that of The Young Evangelist. But through all these thirty-nine eventful years, there has been no change in the chief editorship, though for the last dozen years or more, the chief work on the paper has been done by an Associate, assisted by many contributors, the time of the Chief Editor being largely occupied in the preparation of the Lesson Annuals, Quarterlies and other exegetical and Miscellaneous books and in the editorial work of the weekly in which you find these Observations.—W. W. Dowling, in Our Young Folks.

✧

The following extract from a letter received from a distinguished member of another religious body, some time ago, giving his impression of what are some of our strong points, ought to be instructive as well as encouraging:

"I cannot begin to tell you how delighted I was with the members of the Disciples' brotherhood whom I met at Macatawa. A church that has in it so much of the Berean spirit cannot fail to grow in the knowledge of the things of God. With your freedom from the bondage of creed subscription and with your stout insistence upon the right of private judgment you ought to be leaders in the present day movement toward Christian union."

Any waning of the "Berean spirit"—the spirit of inquiry after truth—or of the spirit of freedom in which this Reformation had its origin, or of the spirit of unity—which was the motive behind the movement—would mark a decline from our original spirit and purpose, and unfit us to be "leaders in the present day movement toward Christian union."

The Present Emergency in Moral and Religious Education

By Prof. George Albert Coe

For the first time in the history of the National Educational Association, a whole session of its national council was given at the Boston meeting in July to the consideration of religious education. Within the same year there was organized the Religious Education Association, a society of national or rather American scope, having for its object the promotion of religious and moral education. These two events are an index of a mighty movement that is going on in the minds of thoughtful persons of all classes. Other signs of it may be found in an extraordinary output of books and articles on this subject, and in the discussions of educational and religious bodies.

A serious emergency has, in fact, arisen in respect to the training of character. On the one hand, the conditions of modern life make such training more imperative, if possible, than ever before, while on the other hand there is in some respects a manifest decline in such training, and in other respects entirely inadequate provision therefor.

The greater need arises in part out of the growth of popular government. We have always recognized the truth that the success of democracy depends upon popular education, but up to the present time the American people have laid the chief stress upon intelligence rather than character as the proper outcome of such education. We are now waking up to the fact that the evils under which our political parties and our civil and criminal administration suffer are due far less to ignorance than to lack of awakened and trained conscience on the part of the citizens. Further, the evolution of commerce and industry makes the consequences of good or bad character more far reaching than ever before. An obscure employe at some lumber mill "scamps" his work by loading a car carelessly; a few timbers from the load fall from the freight train as it moves; a passenger train is wrecked by those timbers, and three score lives are lost. On the other hand, combinations of capital and of labor have forged vast tools which may become instruments for national weal or woe according to the personal aspirations that inspire them. Sometimes a single laboring man or a single capitalist dominates the fortunes of hundreds of thousands. Always back of the individual who attains this power is a more or less organized social sentiment that makes his power possible.

The demand for character-training is rendered doubly imperative by the enormous growth of the modern city. For the city children of to-day are deprived of many of the means of character building that once were common. Not only has the city child less contact with nature, less opportunity for wholesome play, less of the simple life that befits childhood, but his participation in the family life is lessened. There was a time when the occupation of most fathers was carried on at or close to the home, so that the child was in constant contact with him. In the modern city the father is absent from the home from morning to night, and in many cases the mother is absent also. There was a time when the employer of children or youth stood in a semi-paternal relation to them; this has been superseded by the conditions of the modern factory, or other large industry. In other days many forms of industry were carried on at home, but the modern family performs fewer and fewer kinds of service for itself. It spends money instead. For what was once made in the home is now purchased ready to use. This is true of clothing, of food, of house furnishings and decorations; and a similar process has gone on with respect to light, heat and water. Under the old conditions each child, at an early age, assumed regular duties in the way of family service. Thereby were developed habits of industry, thrift, obedience, a sense of responsibility, and a realization of mutual rights and obligations. Under present conditions this character-forming participation of the child in the real life of his elders is almost entirely lost. The child is therefore on the street with nothing to do, and often without an appropriate place in which to play.

More than that, in the modern city the forces of evil are massed together, and so they secure a standing and an opportunity which they have nowhere else. The young behold evil constantly; they see it tolerated and taken for granted; they cannot help knowing how their lower propensities can be indulged with the least chance of discovery and reproach. This is true not only of evil in its grosser forms, such as drinking, gambling and licentiousness, but also of all those frivolities that enervate character.

Thus, while democracy and city life make increased demand for popular morality, the incidental, unorganized means of character-training are disappearing. Moreover, it is universally admitted that the most important of all educational institutions, the family, gives less specific attention to the training of character than it did a generation ago. Family prayer has been crowded out by the conditions under which the modern man works. There is less family instruction in religion and morals. There is less deliberate assumption of responsibility for family discipline. Why this is so, we shall not here inquire. Possibly milder methods of family government were needed. Possibly the decline of family instruction is merely a pause between the abandonment of defective methods and the adoption of better ones. The overwhelming fact is that there has been a decline.

At the same time the separation of church and state has ruled out of the common schools the religious instruction that was universally given a very short while ago. Indeed, we have come perilously near assuming that the separation of the church from the state schools is equivalent to mutual indifference between public education and religion. Thus, both in the home and in the daily school, the child fails to receive the religious instruction that once was his. It is true that educators are fairly well agreed that the real end of education is the development of character, but the populace still believes that intelligence is the end, and the schools—primary, secondary and collegiate—are giving incomparably closer attention to training the intellect than the character.

The Sunday-school movement, almost coincident with the life of the American public, has done much to meet this emergency. It has enlisted millions of laymen in the specific work of religious instruction; it has created in each local church a machine for doing the work; it has committed the churches to the principle of regular, systematic religious education as a part of their essential functions; it has carried a knowledge of the Bible to uncounted millions who would otherwise have been ignorant of it, and it has organized many churches in frontier communities and other neglected districts. Yet it has not reached its maximum efficiency. Its methods are behind those of other schools. Its teachers have been given few opportunities for the training that their duties demand. Probably not one Sunday-school library in a hundred contains a set of modern commentaries or a Bible dictionary, and not one in a thousand a single book written for the purpose of showing teachers how to teach.

This is the extraordinary emergency that is awakening so much anxious thought. Yet we are not left without at least some means for meeting it. New resources have been developing along with our new needs. First, the nineteenth century saw the working out of some of the main principles of a new philosophy of education, the central ideas of which have reference to the moral and spiritual nature.

(Continued on page 133.)

Some Weaknesses of our Ministry

By C. A. Freer

[Brother Freer is a member of the Advisory Committee for Ohio, which was appointed to help churches to find preachers and preachers to find churches. In that work he sees many things that are encouraging and some that are not so cheerful. As correction is more important than congratulation, he has chosen to write only of the latter. There are hero tales of the ministry that could be told.—EDITOR.]

H. L. Hastings once said, "What the world needs is not more men, but more man." More man would be a help to our ministry. The modus operandi of our ministry and churches at once calls for the highest type of man, and offers the most temptations to the unmanly. It is the strongest and weakest form of church polity. Ideally it is the best, practically it may be made the worst. Only a few things are here said. They are on the pessimistic side, too. Much, yea, very much, could be said on the strong side of our ministry. Our churches also have some great weaknesses that supplement the weakness of the preachers. In a full discussion all these phases ought to be treated. But to our task. A few specific weaknesses:

I. A lack of a broad conception of relations to the kingdom of God as a whole.

Too many take a call to the ministry as a call to a single congregation. Out of this grow many evils. It leads to narrowness in thinking and of vision. He has little interest in others' success. He feels no responsibility outside of his parish. His is too much the spirit of the hireling. Many preachers do not know much of the preachers and churches even in their own state, to say nothing of the great movements of all Christendom.

II. So many preachers lack stability.

That word would better be spelled stay-bility. We can't always have long pastorates. It is not always wise or desirable. But it ought to be the rule. A young man might change after two or three years experience, with profit. Ordinarily when a man has preached from three to five years he ought to be able to adjust himself to a place that would be something of a permanent fit. Then he could grow himself and really build up the kingdom. The temptation, however, under our method of operation, is to change often. It is easy to move. There is no special obligation felt to anybody. We will never have a strong ministry on two or three years' pastorates. Many men have 'only' about one hundred sermons and a few novel methods of doing a few things and when these are gone over they are ready to go on to the next town and show the same goods. Every preacher ought to profit by Brother Aylsworth's article in a recent issue of this paper on "Spiritual Invention." When a man has gone through his barrel it is so much easier to move than to dig. It is easier to work his old method in a new field than to get a new one for his present field. He sees such vast possibilities in another place. Laziness accounts for many removals.

Many preachers are cowards. When a little flurry occurs or things seem a little dull it is so easy to resign. Joseph Parker says, "It does not take a great mind to resign a ministry. Many men have thought they were acting quite amajestic part in human history when they resigned their work. It satisfies their vanity, and pleases their little fevered pride to say they have 'resigned.'" Instead of heroically, prayerfully taking hold of the problem, they run off and seek a new field only to repeat the same thing. I know a man who has been in a field two years. Within the past six months there was a threatened disruption, that meant ruin. How easy to resign and run. Did he? Not for a moment. He counceled, prayed, rebuked and spanked. He was a wise, godly man. He won. A meeting since has added half a hundred to the church. The church was saved and became a savior. This man stands higher in the church and community than he ever did. He had a right conception of his relation to the kingdom of God as a whole. We have too many boomers and not enough builders. Be a hero! First of all be a man, a Christian man in spirit, word and deed. Then grapple and wrestle with the problems of your parish. All places have their difficulties. A preacher is not to go to heaven on flowery beds of ease. To stay long he must not be lazy. He must not be a coward. He must hold his temper and his tongue. He must be wise. He must be a man.

III. Self-seeking is a weakness of our ministry.

Too many preachers are, unconsciously perhaps, seeking self-glory rather than the glory of Christ. How far is ambition in the ministry justifiable and in what ways? The minister surely ought not seek the praise of men. He surely ought not brag of his own work. A marvel to our Advisory Committee is this. A man gives such a glowing account of what he has done in his present field. Sunday-school doubled, great missionary offerings, crowds flocking to hear him preach, etc., etc., but he has resigned. In some instances advice has been given to hold on. Keep the good work going. Almost invariably the advice is unheeded and in some instances offence taken at it. Place-seeking is an abomination in our ministry. Should not the place seek the man? If he is worthy, will it not seek him? If the man fills his present field so full as to overflow, will he not be sought in larger fields? Most surely. The eternal place-seeker is not usually a desirable man. One Ohio church recently received near seventy letters in answer to an advertisement in one of our religious papers. One, Ohio pastor had and refused twenty calls in two years. Why was he called? Because he was a hero, and had done a heroic work. He was a spiritual inventor, a student, and realized the opportunity in his present field.

It is amazing how some men do boast of their own work! This committee is often made to blush for them. Such work is usually of the mushroom type. They are not builders, but boomers, which often turn out to be a boomerang. Voluminous reports will not always bear investigation. A man gives as one reason for leaving a town of 8,000 with twelve churches that he only preaches to 200 people on Sunday night! Most men would count that a bonanza. The average city preacher would be confused by so great a gathering. It is not a mark of a great preacher to count noses while the an them is being sung. Uplift Christ and he will draw. We are to glory in him not self.

IV. Infidelity to each other is a weakness among preachers.

S. H. Bartlett recently said, "the vital part of a man's pastorate is the last month." Many preachers seem to enjoy making things hard for their successors. They glory in his failures and chafe under his successes. If he really revives their old work to any extent, they are mad. They predict failure. Some let things run down and boastfully assert that they will let the new man work it up. This shows a lack of a right conception of the kingdom as a whole. Two cases are cited as the opposite of this. They are both recent. One man talked with his successor and told him all about the field and the good people and studiously avoided the brother of weak faith. He gave his successor knowledge that it would have taken months to learn alone. He knew how to approach his new flock at once. Another man made a complete directory for his successor with street addresses to date and by certain marks indicated the worth and work of each member. He also told of those that might be reached in the community. Preachers ought to do these things for the kingdom's sake. Many preachers are jealous. They rejoice in no man's success except their own. But this is enough on this side of the picture. It would be a delight to tell of the strength of our ministry. But they are human, some exceedingly so. May we each study ourselves and mend our weak places. May we, as servants of the Most High, be found faithful.

"A Timely Funeral."

By Chalmers McPherson.

The CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, of January 7, is before me. It contains an editorial bearing the title, "A Timely Funeral," which opens with a quotation from a letter written by a Texas editor as follows: "Did you attend the funeral services of Church Federation? The sermon was preached by Chalmers McPherson and published in the Christian Standard of Dec. 19. The poor thing is dead." This bit of satire refers to a paper read by me before the Texas Christian Lectureship on "Church Federation from the Standpoint of the Plea of the Disciples." The CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, in commenting, says:

"The kind of Federation which was slaughtered at the Texas Christian Lectureship and whose demise was chronicled in the Christian Standard, was the child of an overheated imagination, and never had any chance of living. It was cross-eyed, bow-legged, and otherwise ill-favored from its birth. It was better that it should die young. Now that it is dead and buried, let us hope that we have heard the last of it."

I was not conscious of anything having been "slaughtered" at the Texas Christian Lectureship. The brethren of Texas do not meet for that purpose, but we did consider the subject mentioned above. "The kind of federation" considered was that which is proposed and advocated by The Federation Chronicle, the organ of the "National Federation of Churches," and that brought out by quite an extended correspondence with Mr. Sanford, the secretary of the organization. I should not call it "cross-eyed, bow-legged and otherwise ill-favored," but if these terms suit the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST it is not my purpose, to object to their use.

The conclusions of the paper were based chiefly on Mr. Sanford's treatment of two questions asked him by me:

"1. If our local congregations should all enter the federation, would they all, and under all circumstances, be absolutely free to establish other congregations anywhere they chose, without any restraint or interference whatever, and at the same time be acceptable parties in the federation?"

2. Could they persistently decline to abandon any field already occupied, and continuously refuse to advise their brethren anywhere to become members of churches that wear denominational names, or subscribe to denominational creeds, but rather urge them not to do so under any circumstances, and at the same time be acceptable partners in the federation?"

The paper discussed no federation except the one our people have been asked to enter, the one represented by Mr. E. B. Sanford. It expressly stated that its author could conceive of possible federation which we could enter heartily, but that the one being considered was not of this kind.

I am curious to know who of our preachers or editors would be willing to take the replies of Mr. Sanford to the questions propounded to him, as a basis of federation, and advise our people to enter it. If the CHRISTIAN-

EVANGELIST desires to publish the full correspondence between Mr. Sanford and myself, (which covered a period of seven months) I shall be glad of the opportunity to furnish it. This would be no breach of confidence as he was told in advance that the replies were asked for publication.

This subject is of far too much importance to be disposed of by satire, or swept aside by ridicule. It touches the very heart of the plea of the Disciples and is entitled to candid, serious consideration.

[See editorial elsewhere.]

Christian Enthusiasm.

By Clayton Keith.

What we want is reapers. "Give me one hundred men," said Wesley, "who fear nothing but God, hate nothing but sin, and are determined to know nothing among men but Christ and him crucified, and I will set the world on fire."

So wrote F. D. Power in the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST recently. Such men would be called religious enthusiasts—fanatics—like Paul before Agrippa—"beside thyself," because his soul was filled with enthusiasm for Christ and the salvation of men.

How much progress would the cause of Christ have made had it not been proclaimed by men of enthusiasm? After the apostles, think of Luther and Calvin; of Wesley and Whitefield; of Campbell and Stone, and a host of others.

Christianity has turned the world upside down because it has been preached by men whose souls were on fire with the truth, and who were full of enthusiasm to spread it abroad. The enthusiasm of Wm. Booth and Bishop Taylor has caused many of the dark places of earth to become flooded with light and truth. It is because the number of enthusiastic Christians is rapidly increasing that the man who reads the signs of the times is led to believe that the world will soon be won for our King.

And yet it does not require a telescope to discover the existence of a great many professed Christians who are far from being enthusiasts. Some, like the Laodicean church, are neither hot nor cold. God does not approve this course. He does not want men to be half-hearted in his service, but to be filled with zeal, well directed.

Who that ever heard them can forget Campbell's words: "Young brethren, when you go forth from these halls, I would have you go filled with enthusiasm." How shall we gain so desirable an element in our characters? All agree that it is not gained by exalting self. No, no. Nor is it gained by educating the mind only.

As a people we are fully alive to the benefits of education. We believe in it. One of the greatest blessings within our reach or that we may become possessed of is a well-disciplined mind—a mind filled with a vast storehouse of varied and useful knowledge. And yet we know that God has work for men whose minds are not disciplined; that the discipline of the heart must not be inferior to that of the mind.

How shall we gain Christian enthusiasm? I answer, just as we do in any other department of our life work:

1. By meditation upon the truths of God's Word. Meditation upon any subject with which a man is in love, will increase his interest in that subject. By study and meditation upon the great truths of Christianity our interest in them grows greater and greater, until our enthusiasm reaches the point where we can no longer rest until we bring others to read, to know, and to enjoy the same glorious truths. We talk of them so continuously that others catch the enthusiasm.

2. Prayer will help us to gain the desired enthusiasm. Men who know God as a gracious Provider and benevolent Ruler have a high respect for him. But only those who get into his immediate presence and know him as a kind and wise Father love him. They love him because of this intimate association. Prayer is the only way by which the soul can get into the immediate presence of God. As a man engages much in prayer his love for God and his enthusiasm become greater.

3. Working for God will help us to win it. As the Christian sees men turning from darkness to light, from the power of Satan to God, as those of us who read the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST from week to week are delighted to know—that hundreds and thousands every week are born into the kingdom of God—an earnest enthusiasm steals into the soul and he yearns to do something for the salvation of men that will help them to turn from their wicked ways and live for God. He seeks the nearest avenue open to him in which he may engage in the Lord's work, and he goes at it.

By meditation, by prayer and by work for God, the spark is fanned into a flame, and the man of cold heart becomes warm; the indifferent man becomes earnest; and all become enthusiastic, and therefore men of mighty power, and reapers indeed.

My Pilot Knows.

Thomas Curtis Clark.

As moves my fragile bark along the rugged main,

Great waves beat o'er her side,

As North wind blows;

Deep in the darkness hid, lie threat'n-

ing rocks and shoals;

But all of these,—and more,

My Pilot knows!

Sometimes, when dark the night, and every light gone out,

I wonder to what port

My frail ship goes;

Yet, though the night be long, and restless be my hours,

My distant goal I'm sure

My Pilot knows!

The Romance of a Century

By F. D. Power

In March next, the British and Foreign Bible Society keeps its hundredth anniversary. It is an occasion of Christian thanksgiving and thankoffering which should interest all Christendom. For the purpose of "adding its endeavors to those employed by other societies for circulating the Scriptures through the British dominions, and also, according to its ability, extending its influence to other countries, whether Christian, Mohammedan or pagan," this society was founded in March, 1804. During its hundred years it has fulfilled this purpose to the extent of having been the means used of God for circulating over 180,000,000 copies of Scripture, complete or in parts. Had these copies been in one language the work would have been stupendous, but it assumes infinitely greater proportions when we remember the versions included in this circulation comprise 367 distinct forms of speech, and to print them over fifty different sets of characters are required. The society also employs living agents, 745 colporteurs, who sold last year 1,400,000 copies of the written Word, and 626 native Bible women in connection with fifty different missionary organizations.

The occasion out of which grew the institution of this blessed and wonderful work was the scarcity of Welsh Bibles. There was great complaint among the poor for want of Bibles, and there were none to be had for the money. As early as 1787 this need was felt. There is the familiar story of Mary Jones, a young Welsh girl who in 1792 read in a neighbor's Bible these words: "Search the Scriptures." She longed to have the book, but they would not give it up. She decided to earn enough to buy a Bible. For eight years she labored hard and practiced the greatest economy, till she saved the price of a Bible, which in those days cost a great deal of money. She then started to walk twenty-five miles barefooted, for she had no shoes. When she got to the man who sold Bibles he said he had none but those that were engaged. Her grief at her disappointment so touched him he said: "You must have a Bible." God used this girl's faithfulness to stir up the hearts of others who, four years later, organized the British and Foreign Bible Society. Now there are eighty societies engaged in this work, and a man can get a perfect copy of the Word of God for twenty-five cents.

The meeting for organization was called for Wednesday, March 7, 1804, by fourteen persons, and met at the London Tavern, Bishopsgate Street. About three hundred were present, representing different religious denominations. Granville Sharp was called to the chair. The society was formed for the sole object of encouraging "a wider dispersion of the Holy Scriptures, without note or comment." It was an extraordinary day, memorable in the experience of those who participated in it, peculiarly honorable to the character of Great Britain, and marking an epoch in the religious history of mankind. If nothing else could besaid we may declare of this organization that it has done more for philology than any literary society the world has known. Its whole history is a veritable romance.

The world is not without people who think the Bible an out-of-date book. It would probably startle them to know that a single, up-to-date press issues forty Bibles a minute, and thinks nothing of receiving single orders for 100,000 copies at a time. For three hundred years the Oxford Press has sent forth its Bible publications in one hundred different languages and dialects. Every year six hundred tons of paper are used, orders for half a million can be filled, and, if necessary, eighty Bibles a minute can be furnished. One hundred and ten different editions of Oxford Bibles have been published, varying from the magnificent folio to the brilliant, the smallest edition of the Scriptures in the world. The folio measures 19 by 12, the brilliant text Bible is three and three-quarter inches long, two and one-eighth wide and three-fourths of an inch thick, and weighs less than three ounces. At the banquet held on the 400th celebration of the beginning of the art of printing, Mr. Gladstone held up a copy of the Bible which had been printed and bound entirely since midnight of the preceding day. The Oxford Press has issued fourteen editions of the Revised Version. More than a million copies of the revised New Testament were ordered before the day of publication in May, 1881, and workmen of the establishment refused a bribe of $20,000 for a copy before the date of issue, and when issued in New York the Chicago papers telegraphed every word of it, notes of the American revisers, and all from Matthew's, "The book of the generation of Jesus Christ," to John's last word on Patmos, "Amen," set it up in one night, and published it the next morning and sold it on the streets of the Windy City for a nickel. I have a copy of the Chicago Tribune of that issue for which I gave five cents on the street, and for which I would not take fifty dollars. And this the Bible! and this in Chicago!

Think of forty Bibles a minute! And this is just one printing office with 650 employees engaged in publishing the Word of God, and yet men sit on soap boxes in back-woods, crossroads corners and gravely talk of the old Book as a back number, no longer challenging the attention of intelligent people! The liveliest book in all literature to-day is The Book. Other books may be literature, but the Bible is a literature which has influenced all literature. There are over 1,000,000 Bibles sold every year in Chicago alone.

People speak of the six best selling books of the month or the year without reckoning that the Bible is a better selling book than the most popular novel ever published. Booksellers say the sale of the Bible in Chicago is not only greater than that of the co-called best selling books of the year, but it is better than any ten of them. McClurg & Co. say that their concern alone sells over 50,000 Bibles every year, and that the sale of other bookstores and of the Bible Societies to Chicago people easily runs the figures up to a total sale of over 1,000,000. The romance of the century is the story of the Bible Society. The publishing of the Word in over four hundred tongues is the renewal of the miracle of pentecost.

DR. FED HIMSELF

Found the Food that Saved His Life.

A good old family physician with a life time experience in saving people finally found himself sick unto death.

Medicines failed and—but let him tell his own story. "For the first time in my life of 61 years I am impelled to publicly testify to the value of a largely advertised article, and I certainly would not pen these lines except that, what seems to me a direct act of Providence, saved my life and I am impressed that it is a bounden duty to make it known.

"For three years I kept failing with stomach and liver disorders until I was reduced 70 lbs. from my normal weight. When I got too low to treat myself, three of my associate physicians advised me to 'put my house in order,' for I would be quickly going the way of all mankind. Just about that time I was put on a diet of Grape-Nuts, predigested food. Curiously enough it quickly began to build me up, appetite returned and in 15 days I gained six lbs. That started my return to health and really saved my life.

A physician is naturally prejudiced against writing such a letter, but in this case I am willing to declare it from the housetops that the multiplied thousands who are now suffering as I did can find relief and health as easily and promptly by Grape-Nuts. If they only knew what to do. Sincerely and fraternally yours." Name of this prominent physician furnished by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Look in each package for a copy of the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

The Purgatory of a Great People

By William Durban

Life in England at this juncture is characterized by some ominous aspects. It has, during the last three years, seemed to me that my country is plunging down a broad road that leads on to some terrific crisis. The Roman Catholic doctrine of purgatory would be correct if it were altered in two directions. It should be applied to nations, not to individuals, and it should refer to this life, not to the future. There is no kind of arbitrary providence which interferes with the self-will of nations in order to prevent them from being guilty of even suicidal folly. The collectivism of folly is strangely permitted, heaven giving no sign of impatience or anger until the appalling results ensue. There is another species of collectivism which is nationally fatal when it becomes an acquired popular attribute. I allude to that kind of conceit which is insufferable in an individual, but in a race is the surest passport to peril. In reading the wonderful 46th psalm, which Luther sang aloud as he was walking into Worms to face his foes, I am impressed with the true doctrine of the earthly purgatory of the peoples which is there enshrined. We see plainly from that magnificent declaration of divine attitudes and methods how, while the individual sinner is judged in the next state, nations have their punishment in this world.

Too Much Complacency.

A feudalistic fatalism has stolen over my nation. The noble heritage of the past is our glory and our pride. Of our ancestors we have a right to boast. But, alas, in the present popular mood, we are hugging the evil items of the inheritance and rejecting all the elements which should be conserved. Some malign spirit of perversity seems to have demented the aggregate soul of England. That dementia which I have called a collective conceit, at times seizes on every race. It destroyed the unfortunate Boers as an independent nationality. The Boer women from the days of Majuba Hill never ceased to taunt their husbands, brothers and sons with their supine folly in failing to turn on the "cowardly Rooineks" and to drive them into the sea. So the men were hounded on the attack of a mighty empire, under the delusion that British soldiers did not know how to die, and that the despised empire would prove to be nothing but a clumsy Goliath at the mercy of the Dutch David. On our side an arrogant assurance prevailed, for our government of supposed sages imagined that we should capture Pretoria with a mere walk over. At any rate, no preparation was made for anything better. So England plunged into her political purgatory and the nation is writhing in it still.

England's Evil Genius.

The sinister spirit who precipitated the war, by an unspeakable folly on our side corresponding with that of Paul Kruger on the Boer side, seems to have succeeded in hypnotizing the national mind. Joseph Chamberlain is the evil genius of this empire, but the majority of the people seem blinded as to the inevitable consequences of his policy. He was once an advanced, and he was for years the firm friend of Gladstone, perhaps the grandest statesman the world has ever seen. I believe that posterity will allot that place to William Ewart Gladstone. Chamberlain betrayed Gladstone. He left Liberalism in the lurch. He had something more to do with the miserable Jameson raid, in connivance with Cecil Rhodes, than has ever been allowed to be divulged. He climbed to power, such as he now exercises, by promises of the hollow order of demagogue ranting. For instance, Chamberlain drew up an elaborate scheme for granting old age pensions to all people over sixty-five years of age, and thus he captured the allegiance of multitudes of the workers. He took a trip to South Africa, once more arrogated to himself almost royal honors, seemed to establish order in the midst of chaos, and in reality only promoted bitterness by playing into the hands of the millionaire magnates of the Gold Rand. He came home and found the government of which he was a member, in the ditch of muddiest discredit, and he was immediately ready with a sensational scheme of fiscal reform which has effectually diverted the mind of the masses from the disgraceful disclosures of the war commission and the religious education struggle. He has set himself to work by political charlatanism to save the Tory government from the doom which seemed inevitable.

Fiscal Perplexity.

And now I have a delicate and difficult task to perform. That is, in the short compass of a few lines, I have to dwell on the folly of any protectionist program for Britain. I am conscious that this can hardly be an acceptable topic to the ordinary American reader, however cultured and intelligent, because the settled policy of the American people is protectionist. It may seem exceedingly presumptuous on the part of a Britisher to say that Britain has been right in the adoption of the free trade system, and that she will be fatally wrong in reverting to protection. It would be more presumptuous still if I were to dare to express an opinion that the United States would go along the right path if free trade were adopted and protection were thrown over. But I am constantly reading the best American papers. I note that the New York Tribune asserted the other day that America flourishes in spite of protection, not because of it. I was talking one day to two American Baptist ministers whom I casually met. They had traveled much, and I was impressed with their culture. Both were high university graduates. They did not belong to the great Democratic party, either, but to the equally great Republican section. Therefore I was somewhat surprised to find that they were both emphatically in favor of free trade for America, and one of them eagerly assented to my assertion that if the Americans adopted free trade, the United States would sweep the world. I am humbly conscious that all this on my part will seem to the majority of my esteemed American readers like so much economic heresy, and I am of course not qualified to dogmatize on any matters pertaining to the United States. But were there space, I could give serious reason for the faith that is in me, and some day I may crave space to do so.

Prosperous but Deluded.

The sad fact to me is that Chamberlainism is at this moment the supreme force in this country. Because some trades and some manufactures have languished, therefore the theory is set up that free trade is destroying the national supremacy in the world's competition. Yet by a specious parade of only such figures or statistics as suit his purpose, Mr. Chamberlain gulls great audiences. He carefully abstains from reminding the people that the income of Great Britain was far larger last year than ever before, that the nation is much more prosperous than at any former period, that if industry shrinks in some directions, the compensations in other quarters are enormous, and that, moreover, England is altogether in a unique position, and therefore cannot be compared, as to conditions, with any other country. Protection was starving the people in the first three decades of the last century. The taxation of food inflicted misery which cannot be generally understood by this generation. We have waxed fat and now are kicking against all the traditions of our fathers who fought magnificent battles and won the victories which emancipated the nation from the feudal yoke. But now the infatuated commonwealth has consented to assume that same yoke in the shape of the old Toryism under the guise of the new Conservatism, popularly known under the euphemism of Unionism, since Chamberlain and others seceded from Gladstonian Liberalism at the unhappy Irish Home Rule crisis.

Rifts in the Gloom.

But there are at least a few encouraging signs. Unionism is in confusion. The Duke of Devonshire (formerly famous as the Marquis of Hartington)

Mr. Ritchie, Sir Michael Hicks Beach, and Lord Goschen, who have all been notable Tory Ministers in their time, have turned with other influential men against Chamberlainism and Balfourism as represented by the fiscal factors called Protection and Retaliation. Under the term "Preferentialism" Mr. Chamberlain is throwing dust in the eyes of the people, persuading them that his aim is to create a vast imperial unity against the rest of the nations commercially. Some of us believe that Mr. Balfour's Retaliation is unChristian in principle and will create acute international animosity. Others of us see that our great colonies will not be likely to give any real preference to the rest of the empire, fiscal selfishness being universal amongst them. And so the confusion of counsels is distracting the national intellect. My individual conviction is that the people, by forsaking the pathway of progress, are also abandoning the road to further greatness, and are preparing for themselves a time of great tribulation. But do not the signs all over the world point to that coming of the predicted crisis which cannot escape the attention of every careful Bible student? My hope concerning the near future politically is in the affinity of the whole Anglo-Saxon race. The British Empire and the American Republic are predestined to a massive conflict, side by side, with the Slav Colossus and the great confederacy allied with that portentous power. The free nations are to fight against the hoarde controlled by the despots who would enslave humanity. Curiously enough, the very leaders in this country who would incline towards the establishment of a partial or mimic autocracy, are themselves involuntarily taking up an attitude of antagonism towards Russia. How inscrutable is the working of the destiny which under divine appointment overrules the universal lot! I have now come thus to the mention of England's relation to the far East problem, of which I hope to have something to say in my next.

London, England.

Educational News and Notes.

Christian College, Columbia, Mo., has recently completed improvements amounting to $120,000. This is one of the best equipped institutions of its kind in the central West.

In a report recently sent out, Booker T. Washington claims that no graduate of his great school has ever been accused of crime or committed to prison. Perhaps he gives the key to the race problem.

Kentucky University will profit by the site of the new Lexington public library, which is in close proximity to the university campus. The building is in course of erection and promises to be of unusual beauty and usefulness.

In a recent article on our mission work in India, G. L. Wharton, our returned missionary, says: "Untrained men cannot meet the subtle Brahmin and the wrangling Mohammedans who are to be found in every village of India."

The International Y. M. C. A. has just sent out several men to become general secretaries of native Y. M. C. A.'s in the Orient. It is a significant fact that every man sent out on this mission is a college or university graduate.

William Woods College has an enrollment of about 200. Provision has lately been made for two scholarships open to daughters of foreign missionaries. This is kind thoughtfulness which in the end must react upon the institution for its own good.

W. J. Lhamon, chairman of the education committee appointed by the Missouri Missionary Society, has issued a strong series of arguments for our educational institutions in the "Imperial State." The same logic is good for every State in the Union.

Butler College now has the finest library building in our brotherhood. The Bona Thompson Memorial is a large fire-proof structure, splendidly planned and arranged. Beside the large college library, it contains a deposit of the city library of Indianapolis of which it has been made a branch. It is not only a credit to Butler, but an honor and ornament to the city.

February 14 has been designated by the World's Student Christian Federation as the universal day for prayer for students. There are now enrolled in this movement 89,000 students and professors, a great volunteer reserve for the Lord, waiting orders from the King. Surely in this we see education and Christianity joining hands in an effort to redeem mankind. We suggest that any congregation which has not already observed Education Day, might select February 14 as a suitable time to think and give for this purpose. Any offerings should be sent to general secretary, H. G. Hill, box 111, Indianapolis, Indiana.

In a letter to one of our papers, our Brooklyn pastor, M. E. Harlan, says: "The writer of these notes has been asked by many friends why he has sent his son to Drake University, while Columbia and Harvard and Yale are right at his door. It might be proper to give my reasons. I have a growing confidence in the essential features of our plea in calling a divided church back to Christ, as a necessary prerequisite to the world's evangelization. In training men for successful prosecution of that plea, colleges are absolutely essential. The three great colleges named above might exist forever without doing the work in question like our own colleges are doing it. But we cannot have colleges unless they are patronized, and if we ourselves do not patronize them we surely cannot expect others to do so. Supposing our colleges are not so well equipped as are some of our large Eastern schools, we surely will not add to their equipment by turning from them the patronage over which we have control. And it is a striking fact that the men who are talking down our colleges are not the men who are talking up our plea."

QUIT COFFEE

Said the Great German Specialist.

It disappoints some people to be told that coffee causes the disease. But it is best to look squarely at facts and set the face towards health, for that's more fun than anything else anyhow. A Cincinnati man consulted a Berlin physician on nervous diseases and says:

"Four years ago I was an habitual coffee drinker, having used it for 25 years, and being naturally of a nervous temperament, I became almost a nervous wreck, greatly suffering from insomnia, almost constantly constipated and weighing only 128 pounds.

"I consulted physicians and took medicine all the time, but had no relief. About three years and a half ago I went abroad, and while in Berlin heard frequently of a great physician, Professor Mendel, an authority on nervous trouble, so I resolved to consult him.

"Professor Mendel surprised me very much by asking at once if I was a coffee drinker, and on my telling him I used it two or three times a day, he said, 'It is poison.' After carefully examining me, he told me there was nothing the matter with me whatever, but what could be entirely cured in 30 days by letting coffee and other stimulants alone and dieting.

"I had a hard time following his advice. I did not know what to do until I came home and told my wife who got some Postum. We tried it, but at first did not like it; then we went over the directions on the package together and found we had not boiled it long enough. That was the beginning of the end of my trouble, for the Postum was delicious after that, and I drank it regularly and it helped from the start.

"In a very short time I began to feel much better, and in the last three years I haven't been absent from business one hour on account of ill-health, for my health is fine now. I have a good appetite, sleep well and weigh 175 pounds." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Any nervous person who drinks coffee will feel better from 10 days use of Postum in place of coffee. Trial easily proves this. There's a reason.

Look in each package for a copy of the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

News From Many Fields

Illinois.

Gridley has a small church of about 50 members. It has a fair house, but lives too close to the dead line. It is anxious to join some other church in supporting a minister, and we hope it will succeed. There are some splendid people in Gridley.

Rutland is one of the best churches in the state. Although it only numbers about 125 members, no worthy cause knocks in vain. This can be accounted for largely, from the fact that its young people were generally educated in Eureka College, and imbibed the moral and public spirit worthy a noble people. This was the childhood home of Leroy Skelton, who graduated in Eureka about '63, and preached until his death for the Bloomington Church.

A. H. Trowbridge, a noble pioneer of these field after leaving Eureka College, and he was a great blessing to the church. Bro. I. W. Lowman has just concluded his pastorate here, and Bro. R. L. Barshers has entered upon the work. We shall expect good reports.

Watseka is one of the most enterprising churches of the state, with a membership of almost 500. Bro. B. S. Ferrell, now of Buffalo, N. Y., did a fine work in a pastorate of some seven years. An elegant parsonage houses the preacher and a beautiful new $12,000 brick church, houses the congregation. The church will be ready now to take a stronger hand than ever in the great enterprises of the church. Bro. D. J. Elsea, formerly of Abingdon, has accepted the work and has just entered upon it.

Fairbury is a struggling church of 50 members, which has an elegant house and some and internal. This was C. S. Medbury's first excellent people. Fairbury and the new church at Forrest, want to engage a minister together.

Forrest has always had in it a few Disciples. This is the home of Brother and Sister S. A. Hoyt, known to all our public enterprises as generous helpers. The two churches will make a good field for some live, energetic man.

Eureka College, since the holidays, finds itself in possession of several new students. It is not surprising that around Eureka College should cluster so many interests of the state. There are representatives here from all parts, besides from many other states, Jamaica and England. Old students are scattered nearly everywhere, and are glad to learn of its prosperity.

Education day, we hope, was observed to great advantage in many churches. We have heard from about 50 who promised to observe it. If it required three and a half years for our Savior to prepare his ministers for their work, we need not be surprised to find it our necessity to spend something in training ministers for the world now. If every church would bear a liberal share, none need be burdened.

Our children are being lost to the church, and consequently are not only damaged themselves but the church is weakened, because they attend college without religious and moral influences. I was talking to a mother to-day, in easy reach of Eureka College, who has six sons, but not one of them a professing Christian. Three colleges were represented in their education, not one of which was a Christian.

Eureka, Ill.

J. G. WAGGONER.

Kentucky.

I. J. Spencer, of the Central Church, Lexington, is assisting W. F. Richardson in a meeting at Kansas City, Mo.

After a faithful ministry of ten years, J. A. Holton has resigned as minister of the New Union Church, Woodford Co., his resignation to take effect April 1. Brother Holton has done a most excellent work during his ten years' stay at this point, and will leave the church in a most prosperous condition. We trust he will not be allowed to leave Kentucky.

J. W. Zachary, of Lexington, has been called to Montgomery City, Mo.

E. J. Willis, of Hopkinsville, has accepted a call to the First Church, Bristol, Tenn.-Va., and has already begun work in his new field.

We have had six more additions here at regular services since our last report, four by confession and baptism, and two by letter.

Homer Carpenter, of Lexington, has accepted a call to the church at Washington, Mason Co.

G. H. C. Stoney has resigned at Flemingsburg, his resignation to take effect April 1.

The church at Owensboro is prospering greatly under the wise leadership of R. H. Crossfield. A beautiful new church building is now in course of erection.

Evangelist S. M. Martin, of St. Louis, has just closed a splendid meeting with V. W. Dorris and the Georgetown Church, which resulted in 85 additions.

E. R. Childers has begun work with the church at Middlesboro.

R. B. Neal, of "Eastern Kentucky," is in a splendid meeting in the little village of Rodburn, near Morehead, with 24 additions to date.

Milo Atkinson, of Petersburg, will act as supply for the First Church, Covington, during the absence of their minister, Geo. A. Miller, in the Holy Land.

R. H. Robertson has begun work with the church at Henderson.

The tenth annual "Powell's Banquet for Men," which was held in the parlors of the First Church, Louisville, on the night of Jan. 21, was largely attended, and a decided success in every way. Covers were laid for 400 guests.

J. D. Williams, of Tecumseh, Oklahoma, has begun work with the church at Butler.

Justin N. Green, of Cincinnati, is in a meeting at Berea.

The new church at Erlanger was dedicated by F. M. Rains, on Jan. 10. L. B. Haskins is their regular preacher.

The foreign mission rally, which was held in the Broadway Church, Lexington, Jan. 22, was a great success, and will no doubt result in much good.

Geo. W. KEMPER.

Midway, Ky.

Western Pennsylvania.

The regular monthly meetings of the Western Pennsylvania Disciples of Christ were held in the First Church, Allegheny, Monday, Jan. 4. Pres. Burris A. Jenkins, of Kentucky University, gave a splendid address in the morning to the Ministers' Association and in the evening addressed the quarterly meeting and rally of the Christian Endeavor.

The Western Pennsylvania Christian Missionary Society has created a department to take up the work among the foreign population. Brother Kenseff, of Turtle Creek, and Sister Vasicek, of McKeesport, are to be employed and will go to the Croats, Russians, Slavic and Polish people. Fifteen hundred dollars will be needed to carry this work for one year.

Evangelist Fred A. Bright is at Johnstown, Pa., with E. A. Hibler, minister of First Church, and is preaching every night to large audiences.

James Small is at Indiana with E. Lee Perry, minister, and reports 15 added in 8 days. This is a splendid report for that place.

J. A. Joyce, secretary and evangelist, is at Meadville in a meeting. This is a new point. The Central Presbyterian Church building was vacated by a union of the First and Central churches and has been rented. A goodly number of scattered Disciples have been found and are being brought together in the hope of organizing a church and starting a permanent work. Any one knowing of any Disciples in Crawford county, Pa., will confer a favor by sending the name and address to J. A. Joyce, Box 384, Meadville, Pa.

Christian Church, Valley Junction, Iowa.

regions, lived and died here. His son Thomas, an extensive business man of Nebraska, a graduate in Eureka College in '72, is a man of great moral worth. He had two sisters, both educated in Eureka College, one the wife of Bro. Ed. Litchfield, a graduate of Eureka College, the banker of Planagan, the other a teacher in the conservatory of music in the city of Boston, Mass. The Roe brothers, bankers and business men of Rutland, were educated in Eureka College, as was also Robert Ward, banker at McNabb, whose parents still live in Rutland. It is not surprising, therefore, that after an address on Christian Education, there would be subscribed thirty memberships in the Illinois Educational Association, and a hundred dollars on the Colman proposition. W. F. Kohl is their young talented preacher. A church does not have to be large to be great. A Christian education is the best basis of business life.

The church at Toluca is in a mining Catholic town of 3,000 population, with 20 saloons, and two small Protestant churches. We have some noble people who are loyal and true under heavy pressure. Bro. G. W. Thomas' failing health relegated him to a farm here where he is active and useful to the church. Bro. S. P. Telford is just beginning his ministry here under auspicious circumstances.

El Paso is one of the old churches for which the writer preached while attending college. It has come through many struggles; external

E. W. Thornton, Pittsburg, First Church, is helping E. A. Cole, Washington, in evangelistic services this month.

Allen T. Gordon, class '03, Bethany College, has taken up the work as pastor at McKeesport, and reports additions at nearly every service.

J. H. Craig, for seven years pastor at Bellevue, has resigned to accept a call to Logansport, Ind.

Prof Wm. H. Erskine has resigned his position in Bethany College to become pastor of Bristol Street Church, Pittsburg, Feb. 1.

Finlay B. Sapp has closed his pastorate with the H Street Church, Washington, D. C., and is looking for work among the churches in the district. He preached at Monessen Sunday, Jan. 10th, and also the 17th.

Ebensbury Church has extended a call to E. F. Randall, Swampscott, Mass.

Mahoningtown Church, New Castle, Pa., will be dedicated Jan. 31. A. M. Chisholm, assistant pastor of Park Church, has had this work in charge.

A. P. Cobb, Waynesburg, will hold the meeting for Beaver, where W. H. Fields is minister.

S. J. T. Sale, the new pastor at Bellvernon, is already on the field and reports the work as hopeful.

Harry F. Rector, who was pastor at Ellwood City, has taken up work in Trimble, O. The corresponding secretary spent December with Ellwood City. Eight were added to the congregation and people are united and looking out for a minister. G. W. Watson, a student in Bethany College, visited and preached for them Jan. 10.

The first quarterly banquet of the ministers and their wives was held in Pittsburg, Jan. 11, 8 to 10 P. M., E. W. Thornton, toastmaster. It was a most enjoyable occasion and promised much for closer fellowship in the work in Western Pennsylvania.

McKeesport, Pa. J. A. JOYCE, Cor. Sec.

Michigan.

F. T. Porter recently closed a meeting at Cowden Lake with six additions to the church. He is now in a meeting at Forest Hill.

L. O. Drew had 14 additions at Byron Center, organized a church and placed J. J. Terry in charge to minister to them in the gospel of Christ. Brother Drew is now in a meeting at Sumner.

H. H. Haley has been called by the Kalamazoo Church for the fifth year, at an increase of $200 in salary. This is as it should be. Brother Haley has done a splendid work in Kalamazoo and the outlook now is brighter than ever before. A young minister of excellent ability from the Baptist church recently took fellowship with the Church of Christ at Kalamazoo. This is becoming quite common in Michigan.

W. B. Taylor began a meeting at Ionia Jan. 12, assisted by Robt. M. Hopkins, of Kentucky, as leader of song. Brother Taylor has a strong, live church behind him, and we may look for large results. The Ionia Church gave $1,620 for missions last year. This is a record to be proud of. It is not what we do for ourselves, but what we do for others that is the test of our Christian character. Many churches can be moved to liberality when it is for the local work, and they are to receive the benefits of the giving, but it is the fellowship in the larger work that proves the unselfishness of the giver and the presence of the spirit of Christ.

The writer begins a meeting with his home church Jan. 17, assisted by W. A. Van Dyke as leader of song. The record of the Cascade Church for the past year was one of the best in its history. With only 80 members, in very moderate circumstance, $172 was given for missions. This is an increase of 140 per cent over last year, and, considering all circumstances, is a record which cannot be excelled in the state, we think.

More than twice the amount of money has been received from the churches for Michigan missions thus far this year than was received for all of last year. Keep it coming. Let every church fall in line, and we will

An Ancient Foe

To health and happiness is Scrofula—as ugly as ever since time immemorial.

It causes bunches in the neck, disfigures the skin, inflames the mucous membrane, wastes the muscles, weakens the bones, reduces the power of resistance to disease and the capacity for recovery, and develops into consumption.

"A bunch appeared on the left side of my neck. It caused great pain, was lanced, and became a running sore. I went into a general decline. I was persuaded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, when I had taken six bottles my neck was healed, and I have never had any more trouble of the kind since." Mrs. K. T. SNYDER, Troy, Ohio.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills

will rid you of it, radically and permanently, as they have rid thousands.

come to Adrian in June with a record that will make the saints and angels sing for joy. Cascade, Mich. C. M. KEENE.

Nebraska.

Nebraskans have had no need to go to Florida, the Isle of Pines, or California this year for delightful weather. Sunshine and moderate weather with lovely roads have marked the days. It has been splendid for winter meetings, and a number of the churches have been hard at work. Others are about to begin. Prosperity has smiled on us. God is good to us. We know the gospel and can preach it fairly well. Why not fill the whole state with the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea?

The meeting at Humboldt, DeForest Austin, preacher, was expected to close on Jan. 17. A day or so prior, the report showed 47 additions, all by baptism save three. This is a great meeting in every sense, but especially great in the proportion of conversions to the whole number. This is the largest meeting held in the state this year (missionary) as far as reports have come to me. He goes next to Irvington.

Lawrence Wright and Lewis R. Smith were successfully leading the battle at Beatrice when last heard from a week ago. Brother Edgar Price is the efficient preacher there.

The new half fare permits this year will be in the form of books containing 100 slips, and one of these must be filled out for every ticket bought. This means a little more form. It is intimidated by some local railroad men that this has been changed on account of the abuse of the courtesy accorded: the loaning of permits by men who hold them to those who have not; in some instances they have been sold; to continue to use them after one has engaged in other work, secular, which voids the permit. Only such as are engaged wholly in religious work are entitled to them. To sell books, or canvas for papers for profit is looked upon as secular work barring one from the privilege. It is a sad state of things when the railroads must hedge against the ministers of the gospel to keep them from defrauding them! True, perhaps, most of these irregularities are committed by unprincipled men. But it has been credibly brought to my notice that not all who misuse the courtesy are bad men. Nebraska Christian preachers will read carefully the rules, and abide by their conditions.

Three have been added at North Platte. This report is a week old. There may be more. Brother Ogden is reported as preaching vigorous sermons. Alma is his next point. Riverdale has called for him. J. K. Simpson, of Miller, is preaching there regularly, has raised the balance of debt due against the church, and increased the audiences. The church had not been having services until Brother Simpson went there. I understand that Brother Simpson is engaged in secular work during the week. His work shows what a consecrated man may do.

The secretary [supplied one evening at Hebron, last week, in the beginning of S. D. Dutcher's meeting with that congregation. Brother Dutcher was unable to get there until Tuesday on account of sickness. Brother Schell has everything ready for a fine meeting, including a new baptistry heater and electric lighting in the building. There is a new preacher at Brother Schell's house, too, and his name is Robert Shell, seven days old as I write this.

On Jan. 17, I visited [Verdon to supply for Brother Morrison, and to present state work. Had good audiences both morning and evening. This is a substantial church, in a delightful country, with a nice parsonage. Brother Morrison preaches his last sermon there on Jan. 31.

The secretary will attend annual meetings of churches at Valparaiso and Aurora this week. Will meet with the remaining members of the Marquette church to determine a course of action in that place. While in that vicinity will visit Hastings on a matter of vital importance [connected with the Pulpit Supply Committee.] This itinerary will take most of the days and nights of this week, and should some letters remain unanswered "by return mail" it need not be wondered at.

It is a delight to record the splendid Foreign Missionary Rally held at Bethany on Jan. 13. Thirteen is evidently not an unlucky number in this great work. There was a large attendance, and under the genial rays of an enthusiastic reception, both Brother McLean and Brother Wharton gave us splendid addresses full of information. The addresses by the home talent was of the same character.

I understand there were forty applications for the Falls City pulpit. In the face of the general scarcity of good men for the pulpits in all the states, the query comes to me: Do we have a class of men who apply for about every church that is known to be vacant? Professionally out of employment?

Lincoln, Neb.

W. A. BALDWIN.

Washington, D. C.

The work at Whitney Avenue is in a prosperous condition. In the last six months we have had thirty additions, nearly all baptisms. Large audiences and splendid interest. "Missionary Rally" at the Ninth Street Church was a success, in every way. Fifteen ministers met in Brother Power's study this A. M. Brother Rains gave us a good talk. The reports given at that time, by the ministers present, show that the churches in this part of the world are very prosperous. I read with great profit, Brother Power's able articles in the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. May the Lord quicken and bless the work all along the line. We had two more additions last eve.

Jan. 14, I organized a ministerial class. I have six gifted young men from my congregation who are studying for the ministry. These are hard working, earnest men. It is impossible for them to leave their work and go to school, so we spend two, or at least one, hour per day in earnest, prayerful study of God's word. We have a special meeting every Thursday evening. Here I outline the work and teach them. I also get them to lay by two or five dollars per week, this money to be used in going to some good college in a year or two.

A great many consecrated men can be found for the ministry in this way, if the preachers all over the world only look for them and teach them. This helps the minister, the members, and in the end our universities and the salvation of the world. One of my young men desires to go to the foreign field. May the dear Lord bless our young men and get them to say, "Woe is me if I preach not the gospel."

W. L. HARRIS.

All mothers of daughters should write to Mrs. M. Summers, Notre Dame, Ind., for a free copy of her "Advice to Mothers." See ad. in this paper.

The Sunday-School.

Feb. 7.

A SABBATH IN CAPERNAUM.—
Mark 1:21-34.

Memory Verses 21, 22.

GOLDEN TEXT.—He laid His hands on every one of them and healed them.—Luke 4:40.

The Order of Events.

The evangelists were more interested in telling of the words and deeds of Jesus than in recording the precise order in which events occurred. We find now that the order of the events among which the lessons are moving is not the same in the different gospels. In Luke, the call of the four disciples is narrated immediately after this Sabbath of teaching and healing in Capernaum. In Mark, the call of the four immediately precedes the day in Capernaum. In Matthew, the order is the same as in Mark, except that other events (the sermon on the mount, the cleansing of a leper, and the healing of the centurion's servant), are mentioned as having occurred meanwhile. The harmonies usually follow the order given in Mark, and the lessons in this case have been arranged accordingly.

Not as the Scribes.

Jesus, having been rejected at Nazareth, had now taken up his residence at Capernaum where he made his headquarters for a period of probably more than a year. Few of the many events which must have transpired during this time are recorded, but these few give us all the necessary insight into the nature and method of his work. In the first place, he was a Jew among Jews. As such, he faithfully attended the synagogue. He had already acquired wide reputation as a teacher and healer, and it was natural that he should be asked to address the audience. We are given no outline of that sermon, and may only guess at its purport by its effect. "They were astonished at his teaching, for he taught them as having authority and not as the scribes." The scribes dealt always with precepts; Jesus dealt with principles. The scribes were busy devising schemes for escaping the penalty of broken law, and defining precisely the limits to which one might go without incurring punishment; Jesus was proclaiming love of God and man as the essence of the law and the guiding principle of life. The scribes had such a reverence for truth that they wished to protect it by wrapping it up in traditions and storing it away where it would be safe from contamination; Jesus had such reverence for truth, and such faith in it, that He wished to free it from all its incubrances, to bring it out into the light and air, confident that it could take care of itself. The scribes were commentators, opinionated and arbitrary but claiming no original authority; Jesus spoke as one who knew the truth at first hand. The scribes wrangled and disputed over their conflicting views of what they believed to be truth; Jesus did not even argue, but stated great truths luminously and convincingly, and let the inherent power of the naked truth and the force of His own divine personality stand as the sufficient proof of his utterances. No wonder that even the common people perceived at once that this new teacher, who came teaching in the synagogue on the Sabbath just as a scribe would do, had something about Him which set Him apart from the scribes.

The Unclean Spirit.

A dramatic interruption occurred in this memorable synagogue service. A man with unclean spirit, a demoniac, cried out, recognizing Him both as Jesus of Nazareth and the Holy One of God, and begged not to be tormented. Just what this demoniacal possession was, is one of the unsolved mysteries. An unclean spirit, which referred all unusual phenomena to the presence of good or bad spirits, might well give such an interpretation to what would be called insanity or epilepsy. Probably this was often the case. But this explanation does not account for all the facts, especially

SPECIAL OFFER! WEBSTER'S VEST POCKET PRONOUNCING DICTIONARY

194 pgs., size 5 1/2 x 2 1/2 in. Leather: gilt edges; indexed. Postpaid, 25c. Will send free particulars of Argument Sifter, Writing Desk Book, and other Vest Pocket Editions. Agents wanted.
GEORGE W. NOBLE, Publisher,
602 Lakeside Bldg. CHICAGO

for the fact that the evil spirits are frequently said to have recognized Jesus, as in the present case. Whatever the cause may have been, the trouble itself was evidently some disorder which, while rendering its victim unfit for the ordinary duties of life, frequently gave him a certain insight into the things of the spiritual world—an insight, however, which the afflicted party had no disposition, and perhaps no ability, to turn to account in the control of his own life. There was a quickening of the perceptive powers extending even to spiritual realities, and an accompanying decay of the will and the practical reason.

The devil which possessed this man asked only to be let alone. That has been a favorite appeal of the devil and his agents from that day to this. Jesus did not heed it, but healed the man of his affliction, to the great amazement of all who witnessed the episode.

A New Teaching.

"What is this?" cried the Jews in the synagogue, "a new teaching: with authority He commandeth even the unclean spirits and they obey Him." Here certainly was a conspicuous point of difference between the teaching of Jesus and that of the scribes. The authoritative tone of His teaching, which they had noticed and wondered at before, now finds its justification. He not only claims authority, but actually exercises it. The teaching of Jesus differed from that of the scribes not only in substance and method, but in its power and effect. Any estimate of the teaching of Jesus which leaves this element out of account is wholly inadequate. His teaching was never primarily for the satisfaction of intellectual demands or for the mere spread of information. Its great purpose has always been, as it was here, cleansing. It is the power of His teaching to cleanse the heart and cast out evil and re-create the life, that gives it its unique value.

A Day of Healing.

Jesus, with the four disciples whom he had recently called, went home after the synagogue service with Simon Peter. Peter's wife's mother, who was sick with a fever, was healed as quickly as the demoniac had been.

Meanwhile, the report of the latter event had doubtless been circulating, and as soon as sunset had brought the Sabbath to an end, the people of the city began bringing to Jesus their sick and afflicted, and He healed them all. The strength of their Jewish prejudices—or perhaps we should say their conviction of duty—is indicated by the fact that, though they had proof of His ability to heal, they did not take advantage of it until the end of the Sabbath.

Doubtless He taught them while He was healing them, and what an audience it must have been! A throng of men who needed Him and knew they needed Him. They knew the diseases of their bodies but not the diseases of their souls, which He had come to cure. Yet one cannot but believe that, in the twilight of that Sabbath evening, as He was teaching and healing their sick and crippled bodies, He found occasion to drop into their hearts some vital truths which lead many of them to understand that He had come to confer upon them a greater blessing than even the restoring of their bodily health.

A CHANCE TO MAKE MONEY

I have been selling "Non-Alcoholic-Flavoring-Powders" for the past six months, and have made $815.00. Every family buys three or four boxes. The flavoring-powders are better in every respect than the liquid extracts, and are lovely to sell. I do not have to canvass. People send to me for the powders. Any intelligent person can do as well as I, and average $30.00 per week. I get my flavoring-powders from the California Fruit & Chemical Company, St. Louis, Mo. Write them, and they will start you in business. E. C.

Midweek Prayer-Meeting.

Feb. 3 1904.

CHRIST'S PRAYER FOR HIS OWN.

—John 17:9-24.

It must have been a source of great strength and comfort to Christ's personal disciples that he himself interceded for them with his father, among the closing acts of his earthly life. It should be no less a source of strength and comfort to his disciples to-day, for they, too, are included in his prayer. It was on the eve of his betrayal, when he was about to be separated from them. How natural and how characteristic of Jesus, that his heart should go out after his disciples in view of the impending crisis that was to take him out of the world and leave them in it alone, without his personal oversight and care! It may well be supposed that at a time like this, he would pray for those things which he deemed most important for his disciples. What does he pray for?

1. For their Spiritual safety. "Holy Father, keep them in Thy name which Thou hast given me." Note the fact that he does not expect that his disciples would be able to keep themselves, and that he implores his Father to keep them in His name, from all the perils which were to beset them. While he was with them, he kept them safe and guarded them, and not one of them had fallen but the son of perdition. He speaks these things while yet in the world that they may have his joy fulfilled in themselves. This was the joy of inward peace—a joy which can co-exist with external tribulation and conflict.

2. That they may be kept from the evil one. Notice that he does not ask his Father that He should take his disciples from the world, but that he should keep them from the evil one. Our Lord has use for his disciples here in the world, and as long as we may serve to advance his cause, we should be content to abide here, only seeking to be kept from the evil that is in the world.

3. For their sanctification or consecration. His disciples, he says, "are not of the world, even as I am not of the world." Both he and they were in the world, but not of the world. Their higher life, their character, their personality, were all from above. Therefore, he prays that they may be sanctified or separated from the world by the truth, and devoted to God, whose they are, and whence their life has been derived. What is meant by sanctification or consecration, as the word may be rendered, we can learn from the further statement of Jesus: "And for their sakes I sanctify myself, that they themselves also may be sanctified in truth." What Jesus meant, then, by their sanctification and his, was the devotion or consecration of their lives to God, for human welfare.

4. For their unity. Here the prayer widens: "Not for these only, do I pray, but for them also that believe on me through their word; that they may all be one; even as Thou, Father, art in me and I in Thee, that also may be in us; that the world may believe that Thou hast sent me." Notice that the petition for unity follows that for sanctification or consecration. Is this not suggestive? Our divisions come from the flesh. Just in proportion as we are consecrated to the will of God will we be united with Him and with each other. The glory of being one with the Father, which had been given to Christ, he now gives unto his disciples, that they may be one with him and with the Father. This is the glory that awaits its perfect manifestation. Nothing will do more to bring the world to the feet of Christ, than the perfect union of his disciples with him and with each other.

Prayer. Our Father who art in heaven, we repeat for ourselves the petitions which our Lord and Master made in our behalf—that we may be kept from the evil in the world through the power of Thy name, that we may be consecrated to Thy service, by the truth, and so made one with Thee and one with each other, that the world may be converted. In Christ's name. Amen.

Christian Endeavor.

By H. A. Denton,
Feb. 7.

CHRIST FOR THE WORLD AND FOR ME.
—John 3:14-21.

For the Leader.

The thought to be brought out in the study of our topic to-night is decision for Christ; that is, the decision of the unconverted to accept Christ as a Savior and obey Him in the ordinances of His gospel. Christ for the world: that is a topic unlike any ever heard in any religion save the Christian religion. The many religions of the olden times are national religions. If any more than this, it is only in pretense. The religion of Christ is the universal religion. Breaking down every wall dividing the nations, Jesus comes as the Son of Him who is Father of all, and He comes as the Savior of all. No one too lowly for Him to notice. There is no one here to-night who is out of Christ so far gone in sin that Jesus will not receive him and forgive him. As Endeavorers we should give more attention to the great work of winning souls for Christ. Let this be our thought.

For the Members.

1. In order to decision there must be conviction. The mind must be satisfied. If one is to stand for Christ he must believe that He is his Savior, and able to save him. Upon what can he base this belief? "How shall they believe in Him of whom they have not heard?"—Rom. 10:14. Belief in Christ is the result of the reception of the gospel of Christ.

2. To believe in Christ is only a step in the direction of decision. Many a time has one halted between the desire to go and the unwillingness to make the sacrifice. To believe on Christ in the Scripture language is not only to hold the mental conviction that He is what He claims to be, but to believe Him with the faith that turns from sin into His way and life. In Acts 2:37 the people were calling out of their belief. "What shall we do?" and they were told, as the next step, to repent. Acts 2:38.

3. The repenting believer in Christ, that is, the believer who was turning from his life of sin to the Christian life, was told to be baptized. As he had left the old fellowship of sin and the crowd of that way, he must now enter a new fellowship and join the crowd that throngs the way of life. Acts 2:38, follows the command to repent. Thus baptism, to him who has come with a purpose of heart fully turning to the Lord, is the point of transition out of the fellowship of sin into the fellowship of righteousness. Rom. 6:3; Gal. 6:27.

4. To decide for Christ in the light of the Scripture requires faith, repentance, baptism. In other words, this is a description of a Scriptural decision. This is sometimes ridiculed as a less spiritual way, a formal way, a way that does not require enough. But let us see: Does it add to the spirituality of a decision for Christ to take away something from the acts of obedience one performs? That is strange. Christ may be accepted theoretically and formally by any theory of conversion. We must not accept Christ formally. The formality is not taken away by changing the plan. We must see to it that we are obeying Him from the heart, or else we must know that it avails us nothing. This view of turning to the Lord has in it all that the Scriptures require, and, again, it has more in it than any view that would leave out any part of this outline of the change. This is the larger view, not the smaller; the richer, not the poorer; the Scriptural, not the human.

Quiet Hour Thoughts.

Have I rendered the whole hearted and Scriptural obedience to the Lord, and am I standing upon the promises of the blessed book?

DID NOT KNOW SHE HAD KIDNEY TROUBLE

Thousands of Women Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It.

Gertrude Warner Scott Cured by the Great Kidney Remedy, Swamp-Root.

WOMEN suffer untold misery because, the nature of their disease is not always correctly understood; in many cases when doctoring, they are led to believe that womb trouble or female weakness of some sort is responsible for their ills, when in fact disordered kidneys are the chief cause of their distressing troubles. Perhaps you suffer almost continually with pain in the back, bearing-down feelings, headache and utter exhaustion.

Your poor health makes you nervous irritable and at times despondent; but thousands of just such suffering or broken-down women are being restored to health and strength every day by the use of that wonderful discovery, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

Among the many famous cures of Swamp-Root investigated by the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, the ones we publish this week for the benefit of our readers, speak in the highest terms of the wonderful curative properties of this great kidney remedy.

Doctors Said I Had No Kidney Trouble

Vinton, Iowa, July 15th, 1902.
DR. KILMER & CO., Binghamton, N. Y.

GENTLEMEN:—My trouble began with pain in my stomach and back, so severe that it seemed as if knives were cutting me. I was treated by two of the best physicians in the country, and consulted another. None of them suspected that the cause of my trouble was kidney disease. They all told me that I had cancer of the stomach, and would die. I grew so weak that I could not walk any more than a child a month old, and I only weighed ninety pounds. One day my brother saw in a paper your advertisement of Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy. He bought me a bottle at our drug store and I took it. My family could see a change in me, for the better, so they obtained more and I continued the use of Swamp-Root regularly. I was so weak and run down that it took considerable to build me up again. I am now well, thanks to Swamp-Root, and weigh 148 pounds, and am keeping house for my husband and brother. Swamp-Root cured me after the doctors had failed to do me a particle of good.

Gertrude Warner Scott

To Prove What SWAMP-ROOT, the Great Kidney, Liver and Bladder Remedy Will do for YOU, Every Reader of the Christian-Evangelist May Have a Sample Bottle FREE by Mail.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—No matter how many doctors you have tried—no matter how much money you have spent on other medicines, you really owe it to yourself, and to your family, to at least give Swamp-Root a trial. Its strongest friends to-day are those who had almost given up hope of ever becoming well again. You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful discovery, Swamp-Root, sent absolutely free by mail, also a book telling all about Swamp-Root, and containing many of the thousands upon thousands of testimonial letters received from men and women who owe their good health, in fact their very lives, to the great curative properties of Swamp-Root. In writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure to say that you read this generous offer in the St. Louis CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. Swamp-Root is pleasant to take, and is for sale at all drug stores everywhere in bottles of two sizes and two prices—fifty cents and one dollar.

DAILY READINGS.

M. Decision before Service.	Luke 9:57-62.
T. Immediate Decision.	Josh. 24:14-25.
W. No Divided Service.	Matt. 6:24.
T. Separation from the World.	Neh. 10:28-31.
F. Decision Brings Love.	Deut. 6:1-5.
S. Blessedness of Decision.	Josh. 1:1-7.
S. Christ for the World and for Me.	John 3:14-21.

Suburban Foresight.

The citizen of Drearyhurst was showing his visitor through the spacious garden in the rear of the house.

MRS. SCOTT.

Not only does Swamp-Root bring new life and activity to the kidneys, the cause of the trouble, but by treating the kidneys it acts as a general tonic and food for the entire constitution.

The mild and extraordinary effect of the world-famous kidney and bladder remedy, Swamp-Root, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. A trial will convince anyone—and you may have a sample bottle sent free by mail.

In taking Swamp-Root you afford natural help to Nature, for Swamp-Root is the most perfect healer and gentle aid to the kidneys that has ever been discovered. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

"Over there," he said, pointing with his cane, "is the turnip patch."

"You must be a good deal fonder of turnips than I am," commented the visitor.

"Oh, we don't use them on the table," his host replied. "We raise them to throw at the neighbors' chickens. They're cheaper than coal."—Chicago Tribune.

LAND FREE! Send stamp for information. J. L. LOVERING, Agt., 118 4th st., St. Paul, Minn.

Our Budget

—"It was great," is the universal verdict concerning the Anniversary Number.

—We print elsewhere some of the overflow of greetings etc., from last week's number.

—In answer to inquiries received, we would say that we can supply extra copies of the number, for a limited time, to those who wish to use them for the interests of the paper, but they are going very rapidly and the large edition we published will soon be exhausted.

—Now is the time for our friends everywhere to bestir themselves in a little active effort to increase our circulation in their churches and communities. Our superintendent has called for 10,000 new subscribers to mark this fortieth anniversary of the paper. It ought not to be difficult to make this increase.

—We call attention to our new story by Breckenridge Ellis in the Children's Department. Do not suppose that because it is written for that department that you will not be interested in it. That is perhaps the very fact that will make it interesting to you. Brother Ellis is a story writer of much experience, some of whose works have found a place among our best fiction of recent years.

—It is now time that we bestir ourselves to raise the $5,000 necessary for the building and the exhibit at the World's Fair. We had hoped to have a cut of the proposed building, together with a statement of funds already raised and needed, for our religious press this week, but the artists have delayed us until it is too late to get copies to our other papers, in time, and we withhold it from our own, until next issue. There is not an hour to lose now, if we are to have our building ready by the opening of the World's Fair.

—James W. Zachary has been called to the church at Montgomery City, Mo.

—J. H. Jones, of LaBelle, Mo., has accepted a call to Bolivar, Mo., for his whole time.

—W. F. Richardson, of Kansas City, is holding a protracted meeting at the Central Church, Lexington, Ky.

—S. R. Hawkins, of Murray, Ky., has been selected as corresponding secretary of the mission work in Indian Territory.

—M. E. Harlan, recently preached a sermon on "Prisoners of Hope," (Zach. 9:12) which is printed in The Treasury for January.

—Lee Furgeson, Bedford, Ia., writes: "Large audiences and fine interest here. The church is in the best condition of its history."

—M. A. Hart, pastor at Fulton, Mo., has been very ill for three weeks with congestion of the brain and typhoid fever. He is reported better.

—O. G. White, who has been serving acceptably as financial agent of Bethany College, has become pastor of the Twenty-fifth Street Church, Baltimore.

—W. F. Richardson has been lecturing out in Kansas on "The Four I's of Success." The greatest successes we have ever noticed have had only two eyes, of which Bro. R. is a fine illustration.

—Irvine LeBaron has been unanimously called to continue for the third year at Milton, Iowa. He writes that he can put a Disciple in touch with a good studio equipment for sale in a growing town.

—Eva Marshall Shontz, of Chicago, President of the Young Peoples' Temperance Union of America, gave Chas. M. Sheldon's story, "Who Killed Joe's Baby," at the Third Baptist Church, St. Louis, Jan. 24.

—E. W. Bowers, pastor of the First Christian Church, Springfield, Mo., was the victim of a donation party on Jan. 14. Brother Bowers has been with this church for four years and it has prospered greatly under his ministry.

—The church at Weston, Mo., will celebrate the 50th anniversary of its dedication on Jan. 31. T. P. Haley will conduct the morning services, and M. M. Goode the evening services. All former pastors and members and the brethren generally are invited.

The Railroads run on ELGIN TIME

The Elgin Watch is the watch for those who use railroads as well as for those who run them.

Every Elgin Watch is fully guaranteed. All jewelers have Elgin Watches. "Timemakers and Timekeepers," an illustrated history of the watch, sent free upon request to

ELGIN NATIONAL WATCH CO., ELGIN, ILL.

—Miner Lee Bates, who has recently closed a pastorate at Warren, Ohio, will succeed R. P. Shepherd as pastor of the church at East Orange, N. J., and will take some courses in Columbia University and at the Union Theological Seminary.

—The Philadelphia Press of Jan. 15, contains a sermon by G. P. Rutledge, pastor of the Third Christian Church in that city. The report of the sermon is preceded by a short sketch of the religious body, pointing out its remarkable growth and some of its characteristics.

—J. W. Kilborn, who has recently accepted the pastorate of the church at Keokuk, Ia., was given a public reception in the church parlors Jan. 14. There was a large attendance and a hearty welcome was extended to the new pastor, who reports that the outlook is very encouraging.

—The church at Blythedale, Mo., was dedicated Jan. 17 by W. H. Hook. Brother Canaday, who held the deed of trust on the house for $500, gave it to the church and the document was burned in the presence of a large audience. There were seven additions in a brief meeting following the dedication.

—We have received from the long established firm of D. M. Ferry & Co., of Detroit, a package of flower and garden seeds. As the thermometer happens to be hovering about zero just at present, this sweet harbinger of spring is the more welcome. Ferry's seeds are the kind that grow. We've tried 'em.

—The great southwest has possibilities, and even actualities, which are scarcely dreamed of by the conservative east and north. A little pamphlet full of interesting information on industrial and agricultural conditions and prospects of this great region, has recently been issued by the M. K. & T. R. R. (The Katy.)

—O. P. Spiegel writes that there have been 57 additions to the church in New Orleans during the past year. There were only 78 members when he took the pastorate. The attendance of both church and Sunday-school is large, and the outlook is in every way encouraging. The cash contributions for the year were more than $3,000.

—Edward S. Ames, pastor of the Hyde Park Church, Chicago, will publish one sermon each month in neat pamphlet form. To cover the cost, the price has been fixed at $1 for the 12 sermons of the year. Copies will be sent, post paid, to any address on receipt of that amount. The first sermon of the series will be on, "The Religious Nature of Man."

—Four mission Bible-schools are conducted in Lexington by the students of the Bible College. At a conference of the Christian ministers of the city, and the ministerial students, it was decided to take steps toward the establishment of a city evangelization committee to oversee these several missions, and to plan for the establishment of others.

—J. D. Williams has closed his work at Tecumseh, Okla., and has accepted a call to Bellflower, Ill., where he will begin work at once. David O. Peters, of Trinidad, Colo., will spend the spring months in Palestine, Egypt and Europe. It was erroneously reported in our issue of Jan. 17 that he had just returned from such a trip. He is to be congratulated on having it still before him.

—The First Church of St. Paul, Minn., was dedicated Jan. 24. Z. T. Sweeney, president of the American Christian Missionary Society, delivered the dedicatory sermon. A. D. Harmon, the efficient minister, has greatly strengthened the work at this place, and the church, which has been assisted by the A. C. M. S., up to the present time, assumed entire self support on the day of dedication.

—Last week the building of the "Non-sectarian Church," in this city was wrecked by a wrecking company, as the lot has passed into other hands. The congregation that used to meet there has been "wrecked" a good while ago. This, our readers will remember, was the side-track movement of R. C. Cave. One good thing about such movements is they do not wove. Sic transit gloria mundi.

—We printed a very large edition of our Anniversary Number to accommodate those who wish to use extra copies for acquainting their congregations and friends with the character of the paper. At the rate they are going they will not last very long. They will be sent free where the parties ordering them promise to make a judicious distribution of same among those who should be subscribers.

—The universal day for prayer for students is Feb. 14, as appointed by the World's Students' Christian Federation. The second Sunday in February has been so observed for several years by an increasing number of educational institutions in all parts of the world. We recommend that all of our colleges and schools, and those churches which are closely connected with schools, should observe this day.

—Edgar D. Jones, of Franklin Circle Church, preached last Sunday on "The Religious Newspaper," giving a brief history of the leading journals published among the Disciples of Christ, and urging the members to subscribe for them. Every live pastor knows that the only way for a church to be interested in Christian work is to have it well informed, and that the only way to keep it well informed is through religious papers.

—The Washington State Board which receives help from the American Christian Missionary Society reports that the Chehalis meeting resulted in adding 21 to their 20 members. They have a lot 100x120 feet, with money enough subscribed to pay in full for the lot and have $100 left on the house. Chehalis is the growing county seat of Lewis county. There was a good hearing much of the time. It was said to be the best hearing that any church ever had in the town.

—Editor CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST: This little struggling missionary church needs a hymn-book. We would like to have the Christian hymnal, and if any of our more prosperous churches have them on hand and not in use, we would be glad to get them and pay expressage. Please address G. S. Judd, Everett, Wash. The above is a good opportunity for doing a little quiet missionary work, by extending a helping hand.

—The Central Church of Indianapolis, Alban B. Philpott, pastor, reports for the year, 1903, $10,629.84 raised for all purposes; $1,732 of this was for missions. The Sunday-school raised $800. There were 177 additions to the church during the year. Loss by letter and death, 72; net increase 105. The present membership is 1,253. The church is out of debt. This is a living link church in the American Christian Missionary Society and also in the C. W. B. M.

—Thank you for the "Railway Parables." If you give us such pabulum as that I shall never doubt your orthodoxy.

Marion, Ind., Jan. 19. E. L. FRAZIER.
We have never departed from the teaching of the "Railway Parables," which we believe to-day, as much as we did twenty years ago, when we wrote them; but are there not other truths to be taught, no less wholesome, even if they be less acceptable? For the teaching of these, we beg our brother not to "doubt our orthodoxy."

—Writing on the progress of the temperance cause, J. S. Hughes says: "I have the assurance that two-thirds, some say nine-tenths of our preachers confess God in the polling booth, voting against Christ's worst enemy, the license system. I have lived to see a Christian preacher the national chairman of the Prohibition party, and another Christian preacher the secretary of the national committee, and others active in the work, but the rank and file remain 'filthy still.'" —An aged Presbyterian minister, it is said, used to preach a series of seven discourses on "Who was Melchisedek?" to each new charge which he took, and his seventh discourse closed as follows: "So you see, brethren, we do not know who Melchisedek was!" Some of the recent discussions on "Federation" have reminded us of the old parson's serial in their outcome. A straightforward affirmative answer to the question, "What is Federation?" will be sent to anyone who will enclose fifteen cents in stamps to this office.

—Weatherford, Okla., dedicated a new $6,000 house of worship, free from debt, Jan. 17. L. L. Carpenter had charge of the services. The new church, under the charge of Frank L. Van Voorhis, is now in splendid condition for aggressive work. At the close of the evening services on dedication day, Brother Carpenter, assisted by J. M. Monroe, ordained the pastor to the work of the ministry. Brother Carpenter writes that Brother Van Voorhis is one of the rising preachers of Oklahoma, and is greatly beloved by his people.

—O. P. Spiegel, missionary under the American Christian Missionary Society at New Orleans, La., reports: "This is a hard field, but the gospel will convict to-day as it did in the first century. From the results of our last two or three weeks we feel that our planting of a year is just beginning to yield an increase. Our Lord's day services number 90 per cent as many as we have members, 33 per cent of whom are not Disciples, while our prayer-meetings number 50 per cent as many as we have members, with 30 to 50 per cent of the attendants not Disciples. The people hear and we have hope."

—The Little Philanthropist is the title of the new annual Easter exercises now being distributed by our National Benevolent Association. In a most interesting manner it pictures the relief being given hundreds of orphans, helpless old people and the friendless sick, in the name of Christ and by his church. Geo. L. Snively, 903 Aubert Ave., this city, will send the exercises to all Bible-schools that will write him. It will greatly commend our common Christianity to men of the world for them to know our church is restoring to its faith and practice this striking feature of the apostolic church.

—At Chefoo, China, where the Asiatic squadron of the United States Navy was stationed last summer, and where it is proposed to rendezvous the squadron regularly during the summer months, a handsome building is to be erected for the International Naval Y. M. C. A., if present plans are carried out. The United States Consul at Chefoo, Mr. John Fowler, is now spending his furlough in this country and expects to raise $15,000 for this purpose before his return. Naval authorities, and especially Admiral Robley D. Evans, who is in command of the Asiatic squadron, are heartily in favor of the plan.

—J. J. Haley, who has entered upon his work as pastor of the Seventh Street Christian Church, Richmond, Va., writes: "I have been here three weeks to-morrow. I have never been more cordially and graciously received anywhere. This is a magnificent church, and its possibilities are great. The indications are that I shall be happily situated here." We know enough of the Richmond Church to congratulate any minister on being so fortunate as to become its pastor, and we are well enough acquainted with Brother Haley to congratulate the church on securing him as pastor. We predict a fine work as the result of this union.

—Some of our smaller weekly papers seem to us to be doing as good work in their sphere of circulation as any of our larger ones. They deserve the hearty support of the particular states or sections of the country which they specially represent. It is not fair, either, to compare their size and price with the larger weeklies, because the special service they are rendering to their sections impose certain limitations upon them which justify the higher price relatively. The Christian Courier of Dallas, Texas, and the Pacific Christian of Oakland, Cal., are good illustrations of the kind of papers we refer to, but there are several more of them, equally deserving.

St. Louis Discipledom.

The Christian churches of St. Louis held their Foreign Missionary Rally at the Central Christian Church on Monday, Jan. 18. It proved to be the largest and most enthusiastic rally of the kind ever held by our churches in the city, and we doubt if it has ever been excelled by a similar meeting in any other religious body in St. Louis. We had with us the president of the society, A. McLean, and two of our foreign missionaries, G. L. Wharton and W. P. Bentley. The other speakers were brethren here in the city. The afternoon audience was fine, and the C. W. B. M. of the Central Church gave a good dinner between the afternoon and evening sessions. In the evening, the auditorium of the Central Church was packed, and the people heard, with deepest interest, addresses by Brothers McLean, Bentley, and Wharton. All the churches were represented, and we may confidently expect as the result, a large offering for Foreign Missions.

On Thursday evening of last week, at the First Church, there was a meeting of the Central Board of the Christian churches in the city, consisting of the pastors and official boards of the various churches. This meeting was preceded by a meeting of the committee of 19, under the chairmanship of W. H. McClain, having in charge the arrangement for our National Convention in October next. The chairman of the committee acted as host, and served dinner to the committee, hearing afterwards reports from the chairman of the several sub-committees. The reports showed that progress is already being made in getting things in order for entertaining the largest convention in the history of our people. It is predicted that 25,000 Disciples will be in the city at that time. President J. H. Allen presided at the meeting of the Central Board, and reports were made from all the churches of the city, except one, showing that all of them are preparing and making plans for extra work during the World's Fair year. There was a free and fraternal discussion of all the matters relating to the welfare of our common cause in the city. The missionary com-

We are going to stop at the Christian Endeavor Hotel, World's Fair, St. Louis

And so are we, because

It will be the headquarters during the Exposition for Christian Endeavorers, Baptist Young People, Sunday-Schools, Educators, etc. Adjoining the Fair Grounds, with street cars direct from Union Station to hotel. Built for perfect safety, and comfort. Capacity, 3,000 daily; auditorium, 3,000. Backed by men of highest standing; endorsed by St. Louis clergy. Charter Certificates, Series A, issued on receipt of $1.00, entitle holders to reduced rate of $1.00 per day for lodging or $2.00 per day for lodging and board. For full particulars address at once,

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HOTEL and AUDITORIUM CO.,
Chemical Building, St. Louis, Mo.

mittee which has been expanded into the St. Louis Christian Missionary Society, made a good report of work accomplished during the past year. The spirit of unity among our St. Louis churches is growing stronger, all the time, and this means more rapid growth in the future, because of closer co-operation. In the election of officers for the coming year, W. D. Pittman was elected chairman, W. Palmer Clarkson secretary, and William Hopper treasurer.

New Butler College Library.

On the cover of this issue appears a picture of the new library building of Butler College, which is known as the Bona Thompson Memorial. The cost of the building was provided for by the late Mr. E. C. Thompson, of Irvington, Ind., in memory of his daughter, who was a member of the class of 1897 of Butler College. The building is perfect in all its appointments and contains room for 60,000 volumes, in addition to an ample basement which can also be fitted with book stacks if the library outgrows these proportions. The total cost of the building was $42,000, exclusive of the ground on which it stands. On Dec. 20 it was formally dedicated. Addresses were made on this occasion by Pres. Scot Butler, Hon. Addison C. Harris, Hilton U. Brown, Andrew M. Sweeney and Mayor Holtzman. An arrangement has been made with the Indianapolis city library by which the city library board installs a branch library of 5,000 volumes, establishes free delivery of books from the city library, and provides most of the cost of maintenance. The building, by the beauty of its design, the perfection of its equipment and its adaptation to its intended use, is a credit both to the college and to the city, and a fitting monument to a much loved alumnus of the college and to her parents, both of whom have passed away since the building was commenced.

Through Service to Florida.

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad in connection with the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad operates a through buffet drawing room sleeping car daily between St. Louis and Jacksonville, via Montgomery, Alabama. This car leaves from the Union Station, St. Louis, at 8:45 P. M., arriving at Montgomery next evening at 7:45 P. M., and Jacksonville the second morning at 8:30 A. M., and making direct connections with through trains for all points in Florida. No route to Florida offers more attractions for the sight seer than the route via Montgomery, traversing as it does the most populous and fertile section of the South. For rates, time tables, maps or sleeping car reservations, address, J. E. Davenport, Division Passenger Agent, Louisville & Nashville Railroad, 206 N. Broadway, St. Louis, Mo.

Correspondence

Our Western Letter.

I am in a condition of mind this morning which enables me to look back with a degree of pleasure through forty years, and forward with hopeful anticipations. May I indulge in a brief retrospect and prospect in the columns of the CHRISTIAN EVANGELIST?

I began my work as a preacher of the word, about the time the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST began its honorable and successful career.

The war for the preservation of the union was in progress. It was a time of intense feeling. The bitterness of the period cannot be adequately set forth by any collocation of words that I can command. There were alienations that were never healed. Families were broken up; churches were rent in twain. For a time the American people seemed to be rushing madly into irretrievable ruin. The moral tone of the people was low. Yet in the midst of this, the Disciples were remarkably successful in turning men to Christ. The converts did not begin their religious life on a high plane; but they began, and that was a great thing.

Out of that experience in the experiences incident to the civil war, the Disciples emerged a united people. No other Protestant body came out of the war in as good condition as came out the Disciples of Christ. In the conflict, some wore the blue, some wore the gray. They differed in their understanding of questions concerning the nature and administration of the government; but they were one in their allegiance to Christ Jesus as Lord. The practicability and potency of their conception of Christ and Christianity had never had a finer illustration. The civil war, with its hellish hates, could not so alienate Disciples as to cause them to divide into the Southern Christian Church and the Northern Christian Church. They were simply Disciples of Christ; their congregations were simply churches of Christ; they were popularly known as "the Christian Church;" their religion was that of the New Testament—this and nothing more. The bond of union had been sorely tested. It stood the strain. It was, to say the least, strong enough for all practical purposes.

Many thought that with the death of Alexander Campbell the movement in the interest of Christian unity and union by a return to the Christianity of the Christ—its creed, its ordinances, its life—would die also. Mr. Campbell died March 4, 1866. Benjamin Franklin was the great man among the Disciples of Christ at that time. And he was a great man. He was a great preacher. He was a great editor. He was a good man. He was not infallible. He erred sometimes in his judgment. Who does not? He went astray on the question of instrumental music. He saw a dangerous ecclesiasticism in our missionary organizations. Like an honest, brave man, he opposed the introduction of the organ into our churches. He combatted our missionary organizations. The debates over these matters were bitter in the extreme. The indications were that this latter day Christian union movement would be wrecked over the use or non use of instrumental music in the churches; over the manner of carrying forward the work of world-wide evangelization. Again this singular movement was subjected to a terrible strain. It bore the test, the Disciples remained in fellowship with their Lord and with each other. Only the older men among us remember those days of heated discussion. The younger men cannot imagine the character, the intensity and the extent of the commotion. The band of union is again proven to be sufficient. This was victory number two, on a large scale, in our experience. We can differ as to the propriety of the use of instrumental music in the churches; we can differ as to the manner in which best to put ourselves together in order to obey our Lord when he said: "Preach the gospel to the whole creation." We can differ over such questions and hold fast to the Head of the Body, Jesus Christ our Lord. There never was a time when those who differed over these issues declined to recognize each other as brethren and their respective congregations as Churches of Christ, in the scriptural import of the term. My faith in the plea grows stronger, believe me, as I indulge in this hasty retrospect.

Such experiences as those of which I speak were not favorable to the development of the best religious literature. The American Christian Review, Benjamin Franklin editor, was for years the paper among the Disciples. Whom it would, it made; whom it would, it unmade. Its power was tremendous. Benjamin Franklin was the pope, for years, among the Disciples. But they were not born to be the slaves of any man. They were patient; they waited for a change. The controversy continued; the ill feeling abated not. The writing of that period was almost wholly controversial. The literature was not a literature of which the Disciples are proud.

About this time there came a man whose name was Isaac Errett. He was a man of remarkable ability. He possessed great power on the platform and in the pulpit. He founded the Christian Standard. He was its editor for twenty years or more. Mr. Errett's familiarity with our plea was surpassed by no man among us. He was accused of being a traitor, but he was loyal to the Christ and to his work. A sweeter spirited man has not arisen among us than was Isaac Errett. He possessed a judicial mind. He was not a partisan. It was impossible for Isaac Errett to be a sectarian. His influence was mighty. It deserved to be. He maintained his poise wonderfully. If you will permit me to state his position for years among the Disciples of Christ, in up-to-date colloquial English, I will say that Isaac Errett was "it." The Christian Standard became the paper among us. It was a really great paper. The English of its editor was of the best. It was recognized as one of the great religious papers in the United States. It covered the best period of our literature.

During the influence of Isaac Errett and the Christian Standard, the Christian Woman's Board of Missions and the Foreign Christian Missionary Society came into existence and began their work. Mr. Errett was the president of the Foreign Christian Missionary Society from the time of its organization to the day of his death—Dec. 19, 1888.

Meantime the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST was coming into its commanding position. Its editors were in fullest sympathy with Isaac Errett, his purposes and methods. B. W. Johnson, who was educated at Bethany College, who came under the gracious influence of Alexander Campbell, when Mr. Campbell was in his prime, had given up teaching, as a profession, and was identified with the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, for years, up to the time of his decease, May 24, 1894. Over all these events was the eye of our father. If ever a movement in the Church of Christ was divinely begotten and divinely directed it is the movement with which the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST is identified. From the beginning of its existence it has been identified with the best phases of the work. The sweetness of spirit of which I have spoken as characteristic of Isaac Errett and the Christian Standard, the loyalty to New Testament teaching, the judicial poise of which I have spoken, the progressive conservatism, so important at the present time, have been distinguishing features of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, and its present sole editor for many years.

I must not in this place, at this time, say all that is in my mind concerning J. H. Garrison and the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. It might not be in good taste; but if you have followed me thus far in these reminiscences you can, I believe, easily imagine what I would say if I were to express myself fully.

What of the future? The outlook is glorious. The Disciples of Christ have come to the place where they can do effective work in the evangelization of men as never before.

Will they do it? I believe they will. "Believe in God and keep the fires burning." This message of the president of the Ameri-

For Singers and Speakers.

The New Remedy for Catarrh is Very Valuable.

A Grand Rapids gentleman who represents a prominent manufacturing concern and travels through central and southern Michigan, relates the following regarding the new catarrh cure, he says:

"After suffering from catarrh of the head, throat and stomach for several years, I heard of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets quite accidentally and like everything else I immediately bought a package and was decidedly surprised at the immediate relief it afforded me, and still more to find a complete cure after several weeks' use."

"I have a little son who sings in a boys' choir in one of our prominent churches, and he is greatly troubled with hoarseness and throat weakness, and on my return home from a trip I gave him a few of the tablets one Sunday morning when he had complained of hoarseness. He was delighted with their effect, removing all huskiness in a few minutes and making the voice clear and strong."

"As the tablets are very pleasant to the taste, I had no difficulty in persuading him to use them regularly."

"Our family physician told us they were an antiseptic preparation of undoubted merit and that he himself had no hesitation in using and recommending Stuart's Catarrh Tablets for any form of catarrh."

"I have since met many public speakers and professional singers who used them constantly. A prominent Detroit lawyer told me that Stuart's Catarrh Tablets kept his throat in fine shape during the most trying weather, and that he had long since discarded the use of cheap lozenges and troches on the advice of his physician that they contained so much tain, potash and opium as to render their use a danger to health."

Stuart's Catarrh Tablets are large, pleasant tasting lozenges composed of catarrhal antiseptics, like Red Gum, Blood Root, etc., and sold by druggists everywhere at 50 cents for full treatment.

They act upon the blood and mucous membrane and their composition and remarkable success has won the approval of physicians, as well as thousands of sufferers from nasal catarrh, throat troubles and catarrh of stomach.

A little book on treatment of catarrh mailed free by addressing F. A. Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich.

can Christian Missionary Society takes hold of me. "Believe in God and keep the fires burning." The Disciples believe in God. They will keep the fires burning.

I congratulate the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST on its honorable history and on the line in which it stands—the line of succession. It is in line with our noblest and best. May its future be as honorable and useful as its past. I doubt not it will be. B. B. TYLER.

A Fine Kidney Remedy.

MR. A. S. HITCHCOCK, East Hampton, Conn., (The Clothier), says if any sufferer from Kidney and Bladder Disease will write him he will direct them to the perfect home cure he used. He makes no charge whatever for the favor.

$3 a Day Sure

Send us your address and we will show you how to make $3 a day absolutely sure; we furnish the work and teach you free, you work in the locality where you live. Send us your address and we will explain the business fully; remember we guarantee a clear profit of $3 for every day a work, absolutely sure. Write at once to J. L. MANUFACTURING CO., Box 125, Detroit, Mich.

Missouri.

The wonderful harvest of souls still continues. Every efficient harvester who thrusts in the sickle finds abundant reward.

G. H. Combs held a week's meeting for his own congregation, Sixth and Prospect, Kansas City, and over 50 were added to the church. A severe cold compelled him to close, but last Lord's day 20 more came into the congregation.

J. J. Lockhart has recently held three meetings, at Odessa, Eldorado Springs and now at Mayview; in these meetings over 150 have been added to the saved.

D. W. Campbell closed a three weeks' meeting at Carterville with 47 brought into the kingdom. He was compelled to close, but he will return, and many more will come.

J. N. Murphy, of Eldorado Springs, had 21 additions at Milford in a two weeks' meeting.

J. M. Rudy and F. L. Cook had 21 additions in a short meeting at East Side Church, Sedalia.

C. O. McFarland went to Quitman—when the church had quit—man; yes, but there were 46 added to the Lord, and the church will employ for one-half time.

M. S. Jameson has returned to Missouri, settling at Clearmont, where he is now in a meeting. Will preach for the church one-half time.

J. W. Zachary, of Kentucky, has been called to the church at Montgomery City.

Fred Nichols has been called to the Ivanhoe Church in Kansas City and is now at work.

B. F. Hill, of California, is now in a meeting with F. B. Elmore at Burlington Junction. That ought to mean a great ingathering.

H. Warner Newby is assisting Geo. E. Dew in a meeting at Neosho. Many of the prominent people of the town have already confessed the Lord and many more are expected.

J. B. Corwine, after many years of service at New London and in the region round about, has resigned and will seek a field elsewhere. Eternity alone will reveal how much our cause in Ralls county and, in fact, the whole of northeast Missouri, owes to this consecrated, talented man of God. We hope some Missouri church will bring a blessing to itself by calling him as its pastor.

B. F. Hill had expected to fully enter the evangelistic field, but the conditions of his wife's health forbids, and he will preach for Pilot Grove, Russellville and Holt.

H. F. Ritz, one of the strongest young men Christian University has graduated in recent years, has been called to Beloit, Kansas.

Francis Boyd moves from Monroe City to Gorin, preaching at that and neighboring points.

The work of M. J. Nicoson at Memphis is crippled because of lack of audience room; the church will not hold the people. We are glad to note this appreciation of one of the best of men.

C. E. Wagner, formerly assistant pastor to Brother Northcutt, at Kirksville, has taken charge of the church at Shelbyville, and the next thing you know he will have an assistant—but we must not tell all we know.

J. P. Pinkerton has entered upon his new work at Plattsburg, and both pastor and people are delighted with each other. It was a case of love at first sight.

Harold B. Wright has begun his work at Forest Avenue Church, Kansas City, and his people are searching the dictionary to find adjectives to tell how much they like him. By the way, Brother Wright is the author of that splendid book, "That Printer of Udell's," which, if you have not read, you have missed a rare treat.

West Side Church, Kansas City, is to have a series of meetings soon. Brother Aber is to be assisted by Bro. B. F. Hill.

The receipts for state missions in December were better than in any previous month since Sept. 1, when the year began, but still they are utterly inadequate to meet present demands. Call after call for help came to your board, but every one had to be turned down. We have set our mark at $10,000 for state missions this year. Is this too much to expect 180,000 people to give? A brother writing says, "Northwest Missouri alone ought to give $10,000 for this great work." This is true. In other states many churches give from $100 to $500 for state work; we have few churches that run over $100.

We plead for the cooperation of every preaching brother in the state. Give us this, and we will shake this commonwealth and swing it in full line for the gospel of Christ.

Kansas City, Mo.

T. A. ABBOTT.

C. W. B. M. in Missouri.

Clinton district ranks first in the matter of reporting for first quarter. Every auxiliary, except two, has sent reports. This is fine. Let auxiliary officers have a care, as to how they hold up or hold down the general average of their districts.

The duty which now lies before each one is to raise its special money. Let each accept its apportionment, if possible, and with enthusiasm and love, raise it before June.

Too little is heard from our Junior work. I fear our auxiliary sisters are forgetting that on them rests the responsibility of the success or failure of the Junior Christian Endeavor. The Junior Society work ought to lay upon the hearts and consciences of every member. Neglect to train the children in missionary knowledge and you lay a fine foundation for anti-ism in the next generation. Have we a right to neglect any opportunity to relieve the church of the future, of this spirit? Let us train the children the way we want them to think and live and give. Every Junior Christian Endeavor mission band, should contribute through the C. W. B. M., by sending missionary offerings to Miss Mattie Pounds. If your regular missionary offerings have not been sent, do it now. All Juniors should send for their Easter cantata and give it, asking for an offering for their chosen work.

St. Louis.

MRS. L. G. BANTZ.

The Present Emergency in Moral and Religious Education.

(Continued from Page 120.)

Froebel, the founder of the kindergarten, looked upon the child as coming from God, and upon education as a process of bringing the child to a consciousness of God. Thus the kindergarten stands for the unity of education, for the culture of the whole man. Now the principles which have made the kindergarten are transforming education of all grades. There is every reason why they should be deliberately adopted into the Sunday-school, so that it may become in the highest sense a school, and a fitting member of our great trinity of educational institutions, the family, the church, and the state. Again, modern progress in psychology, and especially of the psychology of childhood and adolescence, is putting us into possession of no small amount of information that can be used directly in the training of character. Finally, the revival of Bible learning cannot be followed by a revival in the teaching of the Bible to all the people. In no century has the church possessed so comprehensive and so minute a knowledge of the Scriptures; never has there been a more favorable time for making the spiritual values of the sacred writings available in the training of the young.

It can hardly be doubted that a revival of moral and religious education is setting in. The Religious Education Association is a voice crying to all earnest persons to prepare a way for its coming. There is no existing agency that can compare with this society in capacity for awakening public attention to our emergency and the means for meeting it. It is national and more than national in scope; its membership and its officials are drawn from widely separated parts of the country and from the greatest variety of interests, religious and educational; its seventeen departments represent every phase and every instrument of religious and moral education;

DEAFNESS CURED

By No Means Until "ACTINA" Was Discovered.

Ninety-five per cent of all cases of deafness brought to our attention is the result of chronic catarrh of the throat and middle ear. The inner ear cannot be reached by probing or spraying, hence the inability of aurists or physicians to cure. That there is a scientific cure for deafness and catarrh is demonstrated every day by the use of Actina. Actina also cures asthma, bronchitis, sore throat, weak lungs, colds and headache; all of which are directly or indirectly due to catarrh. Actina is sent on trial, postpaid. Call or write us about your case. We give advice free and positive proof of cures. A valuable book—Prof. Wilson's 100-page Dictionary of Disease, Free. Address New York & London Electric Association, Dept. 203, 929 Walnut Street, Kansas City, Mo.

its conventions, conferences and publications, and its projected bureau for supplying local centers with moral instruction for Sunday-school teachers and others, are all calculated to bring it into immediate and helpful touch with the people. In fact, it may be doubted whether any other single agency has stirred the thought of the country on this important topic as has this organization during the short career of less than a year.

Iowa Bible-school Work.

Our Iowa Bible-school work, which was begun a year over two years ago, now has three men regularly employed in the field including the state superintendent. During the past month they have organized five Sunday-schools, reorganized two churches and organized two new congregations. We are planning for a vigorous spring campaign and hope to go the convention in June with a good report of work done and all bills paid.

We are working for 400 contributing schools and asking for ten cents a member. Those schools which reach their apportionment will be given a roll of honor certificate.

The revival was used last year by about 250 of our schools and quite a number are repeating the contest this year while many new ones are added to the list.

All pledges and cash for our work should be sent to me. J. H. BRYAN, State Supt.

Des Moines, Iowa.

So Easy to Forget

In 999 cases out of every thousand, the directions which accompany a physician's prescription or proprietary medicine, tell you to take a dose three or four times a day, either before or after meals, and on going to bed. In 999 cases out of a thousand, this rule is never strictly followed. You start in to observe it religiously, and succeed pretty well at first, but soon you'll begin to skip doses, then the medicine fails in its intended effect. It's so easy to forget.

If the remedy is in liquid form, the business man loses a dose in the middle of the day unless some thoughtful wife, mother or sister gives him a spoon and makes him take an extra bottle to the office. Most men hate to do this. If the medicine is in tablet form, the chances are he will never think of it until he reaches for carfare on his way home. It's so easy to forget. This applies to men and women alike.

The proprietors of Vernal Palmettona (formerly known as Vernal Saw Palmetto Berry Wine) had sense and foresight enough to make their remedy so that only one dose a day is necessary. It is easy to remember to take it after the last meal or on going to bed. It stands in a class by itself. If you are pestered with indigestion, constipation, liver trouble, bowel trouble or any skin affliction resulting from bad blood, Vernal Palmettona is what you need. Try it at our expense. Write for a free sample bottle. It will do you good. Address, Vernal Remedy Co., Suite 506 Seneca Building, Buffalo, N. Y. Sold at all druggists.

Alloy Bronchial Irritation and effectively relieve Coughs and Throat Troubles.

And Imitations. Wm. L. Brown

The Christian Pioneer.

[The following historical sketch was written by Bro. T. P. Haley for our anniversary number, but was received too late for publication in that issue.—EDITOR.]

The Christian Pioneer was founded in 1861, at Lindley, a small town in Grundy Co., Mo., by David T. Wright, a preacher who came to Missouri from Tennessee in 1846, and located in Mercer Co.

He associated with himself as editor, Dr. John R. Howard, of Tennessee, who was a prolific writer for the papers of the brotherhood, and especially for the American Christian Review. The Pioneer was issued monthly in pamphlet form, and had, at the beginning, a very small circulation.

The editor devoted himself largely to local affairs. Dr. Howard in lengthy editorials discussed the large questions, before the Christian public.

The editors and publishers were without means, and depended on the subscriptions and local advertising. He continued to preach as he had opportunity, and received some small remuneration.

This was insufficient, even though he and his family set the type, read the proof, did the press work, the stitching and binding and the mailing.

I am under the impression that he owned a small press and printing outfit on which he had printed a county newspaper at Trenton, Mo.

The editor was a sweet-spirited, earnest and zealous man. The need of his paper, in his estimation, reconciled him to great sacrifices in its publication.

From the start, the paper struggled for existence. In January, 1869, he was induced to remove to Chillicothe, where he continued its publication. This removal enlarged his field and increased the number of his subscribers.

Dr. Howard had in the meantime dropped out, and a number of new writers had appeared. Among these were J. M. Henry, J. M. Long and Dr. W. D. Jourdan. Ben. H. Smith and others were frequent contributors.

After a time a small stock company was formed, and the paper enlarged, subscriptions increased, and the future seemed more promising, but still the income did not meet the expense of publication. The editor struggled with many difficulties, calls were frequently made for financial aid which came tardily if indeed it came at all.

Complaints were heard on many sides that the paper did not worthily represent the brotherhood of Missouri, either in its editorial or its "mechanical makeup." Meanwhile the civil war, through which it had struggled, had closed. Many of the preachers who had been absent from the state had returned. There was an earnest desire to inaugurate a more vigorous campaign for the restoration of the churches and the evangelization of the state. There was much talk of a new paper. This movement was precipitated by the organization of what was called the "Louisville Plan" of missionary co-operation.

The movement for a new paper took shape at the state meeting at Macon, Mo., in the fall of 1869. At that meeting an effort was made to induce the editor of the Pioneer to remove his paper to Kansas City, and to consolidate with the proposed new paper. He was offered the position of office editor and manager. This he declined. The new paper "The Christian" was launched in the beginning of the year 1870. In a short time afterward, overtures came to the editors of the Christian from the Pioneer. The negotiations resulted in the Christian's taking the subscription list and good will of the Pioneer, and filling out the time of the subscribers. The Christian-Pioneer ceased to issue on the 3rd day of November, 1870.

It ought to be said, that, considering the stormy, political period in which it was born, and the distressing conditions that obtained throughout the state for almost the entire period of its existence, and the limited resources of the editor, the wonder is that it lived as long as it did. On the part of the editor it was indeed a work of faith and a labor of love. He earned the gratitude of his brethren, and, whatever has been said of the inadequacy of the paper to meet the demands of the time, must not be construed as any reflection on the ability or faithfulness of its founder. Those who enjoyed personal acquaintance with him will remember him as a most earnest faithful and laborious minister of the gospel. He has left a precious legacy to his children.

T. P. HALLEY.

E. L. Craig.

The above cut, made from a photograph sent us by Bro. M. S. Ballinger, Lovington, Mont., represents the founder of the Gospel Echo at Carrollton in 1864, to which reference was made in our last number. It reached us too late to appear in our Anniversary Number, but we give it a place here because we are sure it will be gratifying to many who remember him and who have read his writings. It was the editor's privilege to be associated with him a year on the Gospel Echo, although we met him seldom during that period. We remember his writings as characterized by good, strong, common sense and excellent spirit. He was a man of fine character, of more than average ability, and having served his generation faithfully, has been called to his reward. Brother Corwine's tribute to him in our last week's number is true and well deserved: "Brother Craig was a man of lovable spirit, and while true to the plea of our people, and brave in its defense, was in no sense a sectarian. For those days of hot battle with constantly and defiantly arraigned denominationalism, he was a prince for his fine carriage and conduct in the midst of the greatest strife."

Church Register.

1. The Church Register first appeared as a little folio monthly, devoted to the interest of the Christian Church at Plattsburg, Mo., and was published Jan. 1, 1888. It began its second year Jan. 1, 1889, enlarged and extended into a general field.
2. The third year of its publication it was enlarged to a quarto and published semi-monthly and its subscription list extended to every state and territory, except three New England states.
3. From 1889 to 1896, at different times, U. M. Browder, A. P. Terrell, J. W. B. Smith, Simpson Ely and G. W. Dew were associate editors.
4. In 1887, the Register Publishing Co. was organized and G. A. Hoffman, R. L. Wilson and T. A. Capp bought half interest.—Wilson and Capp becoming equal editors with James C. Creel.
5. In 1899, James C. Creel, the original owner and editor, after ten years and seven

RHEUMATISM

Cured Through the Feet

External remedy so successful that the makers send it FREE ON APPROVAL to anybody.

TRY IT.

Send your name and address to the makers of Magic Foot Drafts, the great Michigan cure for every kind of rheumatism—Chronic or Acute, Muscular, Sciatic, Lumbago, Gout, etc., no matter where located or how severe. You'll get a pair of the Drafts by return mail—prepaid—free on approval.

If they give relief, send them a dollar; if not, keep your money. You decide.

Magic Foot Drafts are worn without inconvenience and cure rheumatism in every part of the body by drawing out the poisonous acids in the blood through the great foot pores. You can see that this offer is proof of their merit, for hundreds of thousands of persons answer these advertisements, and only those who are satisfied with the benefit they receive, send any money. Write to-day to Magic Foot Draft Co., S. I. 30 Oliver Bldg., Jackson, Mich., for a trial pair and be cured. A valuable illustrated book on Rheumatism also sent free.

months, sold his interest (half interest) to G. A. Hoffman, R. L. Wilson and T. H. Capp, and retired from the paper; the paper was then moved to Kansas City, Mo., and later to St. Louis, where it was consolidated with the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST.

JAMES C. CREEL.

Cancer Cured by Anointing with Oil.

The Dr. D. M. Bye Co., of Indianapolis, have perfected a combination of oils which are specifically on malignant growths. All forms of cancers and tumors (internal and external), also piles, fistula, skin diseases, etc., successfully treated. Don't trifle with life; write at once for free books giving particulars and indisputable evidence. Address Dr. D. M. BYE Co., Drawer 505, Indianapolis, Ind.

BLMYER B. CHURCH BELLS. UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY. Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

FOR SCHOOLS AND CHURCHES BUY
American Bells
Sweet Toned, Far Sounding, Durable.
AMERICAN BELL & FOUNDRY CO.
FREE CATALOGUE NORTHVILLE, MICH.
41 Cady Street.

SUBSCRIBERS' WANTS.

FOR SALE—A brand new upright piano at a bargain price. Address D, care Christian-Evangelist.

MARIA MONK—Black Nunnery Exposed. New and complete edition by mail, 35 cents. Address J. D. Williams, box 330, Columbus, Ohio.

LEARN STENOGRAPHY—Send 50 cents to the Oliver Typewriter Company, 315 North 9th Street, Century Building, St. Louis, Mo., for self-instructor in shorthand and typewriting.

WANTED—To sell or exchange for St. Louis real estate, two pieces of Kansas City residence property: one valued at $2,500.00, deed of trust $900.00; the other valued at $2,000.00, deed of trust $700.00. Address Y, care Christian-Evangelist.

Birthday Greetings.

[The following were received too late for publication in our anniversary number last week.—EDITOR.]

From President of the World's Fair.

DR. J. H. GARRISON, EDITOR CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, Dear Sir:—I am informed that the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST will shortly celebrate the completion of its fortieth volume and the thirty-fifth year of your editorial connection with the paper. It is pleasing to me to tender to you my congratulations upon this auspicious occasion. I trust that the CHRISTIAN EVANGELIST will continue to be a power for good in its field and that your editorial connection may go on for many years to come.

Very truly yours,
St. Louis. D. R. FRANCIS,
President Louisiana Purchase Exposition Co.

From a Former Co-worker.

If others have a right to congratulate the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST upon the attainment of this honorable anniversary, and they have, I have more. My long editorial connection with the paper, and my still more complete identification with it in spirit, and the great purposes which have always characterized its conduct, entitles me to be in the front rank of the great host of friends and admirers who are hastening to send their warmest congratulations to the greatest paper, all things taken together, that has ever been published by the Disciples of Christ. May it live forever and afterwards!

J. J. HALEY.

The Champion of Christian Liberty.

The Christian Century congratulates the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST upon the attainment of its fortieth birthday. We especially congratulate Bro. J. H. Garrison upon the fact, that, believing with John Robinson, God had more truth to break out of his word, he has ever kept the columns of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST open to new light from old truth. No journal has kept the faith more loyally and fought the good fight for Christian liberty more nobly than the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. We wish for it a place second to none in American journalism, as well as among the Disciples of Christ. May the faithful editor live to see at least its fiftieth anniversary.

CHAS. A. YOUNG.

Chicago.

From The Outlook.

So long as there are people who have faith, hope or love, so long will their faith, their hope, their love, need expression. And when a body of people have a faith, hope and love in common, they must find a common language. To furnish this common language, we believe, is the great function of any journal that attempts to speak for a body of people who have vision. That the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST has lived for forty years, signifies that the church it represents has not been without utterance. Our congratulations to you are not merely for the years you have lived, but for the service you have rendered.

THE EDITOR OF THE OUTLOOK.

New York.

Would Join the Congratulators.

DEAR BRO. GARRISON:—I have read every one of the letters of congratulation, approval, administration and esteem for yourself personally, and as editor, and for the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, which appeared in the fortieth anniversary issue of that paper, with as much pleasure and gratified pride as if all that is said in these letters had been said respecting my own son according to the flesh. Few of the writers of these letters have known you so long or so intimately as I have, and none have appreciated your worth, esteemed you more highly, nor loved you with a deeper love than I. . . . Permit me then to add, with those who have spoken, my congratulations for the past and best wishes and prayers for the future.

Sincerely yours,

St. Louis.

JAMES O. CARSON.

From Father to Son.

DEAR BROTHER GARRISON: The Christian-Evangelist came to my father's home since my earliest memory, and has been coming to me constantly since I began preaching. I feel when I get your paper, and retire to my room to read it, that I will come forth better prepared for the great struggle with temptation, and better equipped for my most sacred work. Its soundness and safety I have never thought to question, and its helpfulness and deep spirituality bulk large in my own spiritual life.

J. N. CRUTCHER.

Moberly, Mo.

Reminiscent.

I remember well the "Gospel Echo," and when that royal man of God, J. C. Reynolds, became its editor, the request he made of me to become a regular contributor. Then when Brother Garrison, under whose splendid editorial management it has become such a power in our religious movement, became his associate, I call to mind the reception of a little note from him couched in cordial phrase, and which is tucked away somewhere among my papers highly prized, requesting me to furnish regular poetical contributions for the paper; and so for thirty years it has been my pleasure, regularly and irregularly to send these productions, good, bad and indifferent for its columns.

Again, I remember that about the year 1874 I received a request from Bro. G. T. Carpenter of blessed memory, my associate in college, and one of the truest friends I ever had, to become editor for Illinois of the "Evangelist." My good wishes go out on its fortieth anniversary that its past may be but a prelude to the future.

AARON PRINCE ATEN.

Let the Perfect Cast Stones.

I have been a regular reader of the Christian-Evangelist from its beginning. That in all these years it should have slipped occasionally, no one should think strange, for no paper can approach nearer the perfect than those whose thoughts fill its columns, nor its management be clearer of mistakes than the judgment of its editors. It seems to me that this is a good time for those who have made no mistakes to cast a stone at the Christian-Evangelist. It must be a great satisfaction for one who knows his house is not glass to pelt his neighbor. But if no one throws a stone but the perfect, the editor of the Christian-Evangelist need not dodge. For more years than he has been in the editor's chair, have we been friends as well as brethren. My eye has been upon his work, not as a critic, but as one who rejoices in his success. I am glad we have the Christian-Evangelist, and that for so many years J. H. Garrison has been its faithful and efficient editor. May his years be multiplied and his labors continue to be blessed of the Lord.

E. J. LAMPTON.

Bowling Green, Mo.

From The Christian Standard.

J. H. GARRISON, Dear Brother:—Ten years ago I might have been inclined to give you sage advice on how to manage a religious newspaper; or have secretly felt, with a pardonable trace of dissatisfaction with my own lot, that your position was one of light labor, large honor and abundant rewards as compared with that of the regular ministry in the churches. As it is, I can offer the sympathy of a common experience with your own. To those who do not share the full secrets of the newspaper fraternity, I can say that no other position among the brethren would have taxed your energies or tried your patience more severely, and called for more grace in the performance of regular duties than the one you have occupied for the past thirty-five years.

But, after all, the inspiration and the joy which come to the editor in his fellowship with the choicest spirits among the best people on earth, make one forget the trials and tribulations incident to the work of editing a church paper.

As it is my increasing conviction that the

WHAT SULPHUR DOES

For the Human Body in Health and Disease.

The mention of sulphur will recall to many of us the early days when our mothers and grandmothers gave us our daily dose of sulphur and molasses every spring and fall.

It was the universal spring and fall "blood purifier," tonic and cure-all, and mind you, this old-fashioned remedy was not without merit.

The idea was good, but the remedy was crude and unpalatable, and a large quantity had to be taken to get any effect.

Nowadays we get all the beneficial effects of sulphur in a palatable, concentrated form, so that a single grain is far more effective than a tablespoonful of the crude sulphur.

In recent years, research and experiment have proven that the best sulphur for medicinal use is that obtained from Calcium (Calcium Sulphide) and sold in drug stores under the name of Stuart's Calcium Wafers. They are small chocolate coated pellets and contain the active medicinal principle of sulphur in a highly concentrated, effective form.

Few people are aware of the value of this form of sulphur in restoring and maintaining bodily vigor and health: sulphur acts directly on the liver, the excretory organs and purifies and enriches the blood by the prompt elimination of waste material.

Our grandmothers knew this when they dosed us with sulphur and molasses every spring and fall, but the crudity and impurity of ordinary flowers of sulphur were often worse than the disease, and cannot compare with the modern concentrated preparations of sulphur, of which Stuart's Calcium Wafers is undoubtedly the best and most widely used.

They are the natural antidote for liver and kidney troubles, and cure constipation and purify the blood in a way that often surprises patient and physician alike.

Dr. R. M. Wilkins while experimenting with sulphur remedies soon found that the sulphur from Calcium was superior to any other form. He says: "For liver, kidney and blood troubles, especially when resulting from constipation or malaria, I have been surprised at the results obtained from Stuart's Calcium Wafers. In patients suffering from boils and pimples and even deep seated carbuncles, I have repeatedly seen them dry up and disappear in four or five days, leaving the skin clear and smooth. Although Stuart's Calcium Wafers is a proprietary article, and sold by druggists, and for that reason tabooed by many physicians, yet I know of nothing so safe and reliable for constipation, liver and kidney troubles, and especially in all forms of skin disease, as this remedy."

At any rate, people who are tired of pills, cathartics and so-called blood "purifiers," will find in Stuart's Calcium Wafers a far safer, more palatable and effective preparation.

golden age of religious journalism is in the future, I congratulate you on the privilege you have enjoyed of doing foundation work, and preparing for the larger and more influential ministry of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST and its contemporaries in the generations to come. In accordance with apostolic teaching, you have labored and other men will enter into your labor.

I heartily congratulate you, therefore, on the completion of thirty-five years of strenuous ministry, so far as known, the longest term of continuous service of one kind among all our preachers or other general church workers. As the dean of our editorial fraternity, you will be looked up to by the rest of us—mere boys in service—to keep us on our good behavior and to give dignity to our special calling among the brethren. That you may be granted many years yet to give us the benefit of your wide experience and ripening wisdom, and that the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, the child of your tears and prayers and hopes, may grow in efficiency and in favor with God and man through generations to come, is the sincere wish of your brother,

Cincinnati, O.

J. A. LORD.

Editor Christian Standard.

Evangelistic

We invite ministers and others to send reports of meetings, additions and other news of the churches for publication in this department. It is especially requested that additions be reported as "by confession and baptism" or "by letter."

Additions Reported Last Week.

Baptisms .....	1,233
Letters and statements.....	301
Denominations.....	111

Total.....1,645

M. L. BUCKLEY.

Harrison, O., Jan. 21, 1904.

Special dispatch to the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST.

EL RENO, OKLAHOMA, Jan. 18.—Forty additions in two weeks. House crowded. Will continue indefinitely.—PARK AND STANLEY.

ARKANSAS.—Springdale.—Please report two additions Sunday, Jan. 17. Ladies' Aid gave a reception Tuesday, Jan. 19, at the Christian church and served fine lunch. It was a grand success.—DANIEL TRUNDLE.

COLORADO.—Fort Collins, Jan. 21.—Five confessed Christ last night; two the night before. Eleven added first five days of meeting. We have begun with local workers, but expect Bro. F. O. Fannon to-day.—WM. J. LOCKHART.

FLORIDA.—Ocala, Jan. 21.—D. E. Hanna closes his work as minister here Feb. 1. During his year's labor the membership has been almost doubled, about two thousand dollars raised for all purposes, and the Sunday afternoon mission kept in flourishing condition; the mission not being chartered, the confessors were added to the mother church. The Ladies' Aid Society has had the church house repapered and refitted, new carpet, song books, etc. The Y. P. S. C. E., the Junior Christian Endeavor and the C. W. B. M. are in healthy condition and doing excellent work. Eight were baptized last night and Sunday night by the minister.

ILLINOIS.—Chicago Heights, Jan. 18.—One addition at last night's service; head of family. We organized a Christian Endeavor Society, Jan. 3, 1904, with 20 charter members. Work moves off nicely.—HARRY E. TUCKER, minister.

Knoxville.—John T. Stivers, of this place, commenced a meeting at East Galesburg, Ill., Jan. 4. Large audiences and splendid interest. Forty one additions up to date, Jan. 17, thirty-five by primary obedience; all are grown people, except two.—ALICE DARWIN STIVERS.

Chicago.—Last summer I went into south Chicago, a district of 70,000 people, where a gospel sermon of the simple faith had never been preached, and preached afternoons. Established a good church on Commercial Ave., and turned it over last Lord's day to want to get fat and fat people want to get thin—human nature. If you are fat don't take Scott's Emulsion. It will make you gain flesh. If you are thin Scott's Emulsion is just what you need.

THIN PEOPLE

It is one of the greatest flesh producers known. Not temporary gains but healthy, solid flesh that will fill out the body where it is needed.

There's nothing better than Scott's Emulsion for weakness and wasting.

We'll send you a sample free upon request.
SCOTT & BOWNE, 409 Pearl Street, New York.

the Chicago board. I begin the work in another field next week, when I will preach week nights and hope to build a stray church soon. The membership of the Wallace Street Church increased 150 per cent last year, and the finance in every department did fully as well. This is now one of the most substantial churches in the city. We have a unanimous call to remain here for 1904. Fifteen confessions this year. Best wishes for the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, hoping that you may receive 1,000 subscribers this year.—N. G. BUCKLEY.

Williamsville, Jan. 18.—Began my second year's work here yesterday. Am in a promising meeting with home forces. Last week Brother Lynn, of Springfield, Brother Lappin, of Atlanta, and Brother Sharpe, of Carlinville, each assisted with a sermon; four confessions to date. The church here recently gave us a splendid donation of provisions. Will build a new house of worship this coming season; over $5,000 raised for this purpose already.—IVAN W. AGEE, pastor.

Lynnville.—On Jan. 4, 1904, the church here closed a four weeks' meeting. H. Warner Newby, of Guthrie, Okla., assisting. There were 17 confessions, two by statement and one since by letter.—J. W. CAME.

INDIANA.—Indianapolis, Jan. 18.—There were eight added at North Park Church yesterday, three confessions and five by letter.—AUSTIN HUNTER.

New Albany, Jan. 21.—I closed last night an 11 days' meeting for Chapel Hill Church, with 26 accessions, 24 by baptism. One of these 50 years a Catholic and two others from Catholic family. Chapel Hill is twelve miles from New Albany and the best country congregation in southern Indiana. They have a new up-to-date house and they are thoroughly missionary and progressive.—B. F. CATO.

Indianapolis, Jan. 19.—The Sixth Church is still alive, though no report was made through our papers last year. Besides all running expenses, we reduced a $3,600 debt to the sum of $1,000. We had the following additions to our membership: by statement, 43; by letter, 40; by baptism, 21; a total of 104. Better than anything that figures can tell, there was a splendid spiritual growth. Peace and harmony prevail. "Forward" is the watch-word for 1904.—A. L. ORCUTT, pastor.

Knightstown, Jan. 22.—Five added in a short meeting held at Lynn, Ind. Was compelled to quit on account of sore throat. The pastor, J. A. Brown, continued a few nights with one addition.—ALLEN T. SHAW.

Charlestown, Jan. 22.—Short meeting at Florence, Ind.; seven confessions and baptisms; two by letter.—FRANK DAVIES.

INDIAN TERRITORY.—Tulsa, Jan. 17.—We recently closed a meeting conducted by Sister Alice M. Wickizer, of Bloomfield, Ia., assisted a few days by her husband, Bro. D. A. Wickizer, with 30 additions to the church, making us now a total membership of 86. Sister Wickizer is certainly a fine gospel preacher. Her sermons are brimming full of pointed Scripture bearing on the text, and she tells it in such a way as to send home to the hearer's heart the burning truth unto conviction. Brother Wickizer's parents live here, and he was home on Christmas vacation, is the why of our having this portion of Bloomfield, Iowa's, blessing. May the Lord bless Brother and Sister Wickizer, who were willing to use their vacation in helping this young congregation in its struggles toward establishing the truth in this new field.—S. WALLACE MARR, minister.

IOWA.—Corydon, Jan. 18.—Thirty-six additions thus far in the meeting. Ten added yesterday. Interest intense. People attending church a distance of 20 miles. F. D. Macy, pastor.—HAMILTON AND WILKINSON, Evangelists.

Sac City, Jan. 16.—Three confessions and one restored last Sunday. Four more by confession Thursday night.—E. N. TUCKER.

Oelwein, Jan. 18.—Grand services yesterday. Four additions: two by confession, one by letter, one from the Methodists, for many years an officer in that church. Expect to dedicate our new $15,000 church house in May.—J. T. SHREVE.

Clarion, Jan. 15.—We have had in the past week, three by confession and baptism and one from the Baptists as the start in the new year.—C. H. MATTOX.

Adel, Jan. 19.—I just closed a two weeks' meeting with home forces. Seventeen accessions, 15 confessions. Splendid interest from the first night. Large audiences. We are all gratified with the result and hope for larger work in the future.—H. JAS. CROCKETT, pastor.

New York, Jan. 18.—Two additions by letter at Bethlehem yesterday. I gave my lecture "The Boys of America," there recently under These trade-mark crisscross lines on every package.

GLUTEN FLOUR For DYSPEPSIA.
SPECIAL DIABETIC FLOUR.
K. C. WHOLE WHEAT FLOUR.
Unlike all other goods. Ask Grocers.
For book or sample write
Farwell & Rhines, Watertown, N. Y., U.S.A.

auspices of Ladies' Aid. Will close my work with congregations at Bethlehem and at this place about March 1. Churches in southwest Iowa or southeast Nebraska desiring to locate a minister of four years experience, address me with stamp.—O. L. ADAMS, Russel, Ia., R. F. D. No. 3.

Colfax, Jan. 20.—Brother Macy, of Des Moines, Iowa, brought over from the Andersonville mine, a missionary point three miles from here, five persons, Jan. 17, 1904, and immersed them in our chapel and into Christ.—THOMAS H. PAPPLEWELL.

KANSAS.—Wichita, Jan. 18.—Three confessions at the South Lawrence Ave. Church yesterday.—W. T. McLAIN.

Jewell City, Jan. 18.—Our work starts off well. We have been here three weeks, have had large audiences, and two additions so far. At the close of yesterday's service, we raised $65 for current expenses in a few minutes.—B. A. CHANNER, pastor.

Salina, Jan. 18.—We have just had a rich experience. The church decided that the best way to use the "week of prayer," would be for the pastor to preach each night. Without previous preparation we commenced, and by Friday night the interest was so great we could not stop. In twelve days twenty-one were added to the church, all adults excepting two. The people prayed and worked. Have had nine weddings and four funerals in seven weeks.—DAVID H. SHIELDS.

Kansas City.—The work at the North Side Church moves encouragingly, with ten additions during the month—six by primary obedience, two reclaimed, and two by letter. The writer gave annual reception last week to his Bible-class of young ladies, a report of which gives evidence of the pastor's power for good in the school. Organizing with three members, we have enrolled 54 during the year, with an average attendance of 36, and an average lesson grade of 84. The class brought 60 new pupils to other teachers in the school, and established a young men's class now numbering 20. Nineteen young ladies in the class obeyed the gospel during the year, making a total of 30 who are now members of the church. Eight of our class have left the city, five have become teachers, and six have dropped out, and we reorganize with an enrollment of 35. Two new pupils for the class last Sunday and ten for the school. We praise God and take courage. A new motto for the year is, "A Christian paper in every home."—C. P. SMITH.

KENTUCKY.—Covington, Jan. 18.—At the morning service yesterday, assisted by Benj. L. Smith and George B. Ranshaw, we ordained three elders of the First Church. At the close of the service, two young men made the good confession.—GEORGE A. MILLER.

MICHIGAN.—Belding, Jan. 18.—One more good confession here last Lord's day. I begin a revival in the Christian Tabernacle, St. Johns, Mich., to-night. D. Munro, Cor. Sec., will supply for me here.—W. H. KINDRED.

MISSOURI.—Springfield, Jan. 15.—Our work prospers. Six confessions since our meeting closed. We close our sixth year the latter part of next month. This has been one of our very best years. Our official board has just granted us three months' vacation, with supply for pulpit and keep our salary going while we visit Palestine and attend the World's Sunday-school convention at Jerusalem. This is generous beyond measure. We have one of the most magnanimous boards in the country. Twice they have increased my salary already. Our vessel sails March 8. Truly ours is a good heritage.—D. W. MOORE.

Marceline, Jan. 18.—The work at this place thus far is very encouraging to both members and minister. There was one addition the first Sunday in this month, one the second and six last Sunday. We are looking for a prosperous year's work.—A. MUNYON, Pastor.

Butler, Jan. 17.—There were four added yesterday morning; one confession. Work is in splendid condition.—E. H. WILLIAMSON.

Maitland, Jan. 19.—One young man made the good confession at New Point at the evening services, Sunday Jan. 17. Good prospect for more soon.—T. B. DRY.

Moherly, Jan. 18.—Fine missionary rally Saturday, with A. McLean and A. W. Kokenoffer as visitors. Two baptisms that day. Brother McLean preached to a large audience yesterday morning. Two added last night. I am to visit all our churches in Randolph county in the interest of the March offering.—J. N. CRUTCHER.

Salisbury, Jan. 19.—Brother E. H. Kellar assisted us recently in a splendid 14 days' meeting in which there were fifteen confessions and three otherwise. The meeting had to move from the church to the court house on the fourth night to accommodate the people. Much of the material is on the ground for enlarging our church early in the spring.—W. D. McCULLY, Pastor.

Mountain View.—I herewith submit a summary of my work as state Bible-school evangelist in southeast Missouri for the year 1903, ending Dec. 31. Number of days in the field, 304; sermons preached, 314; revival meetings held, 18; number added to the Church of Christ, 140, of which 90 were by confession and baptism; thirty from other churches and twenty by letter and otherwise. I dedicated two new church buildings one at Greenville and one at Taskee, Mo. During the year organized two Bible-schools and two young people's society of Christian Endeavor. Cash received for Bible-school work, $831.65; money raised for building churches, $545; money raised on salary of local preachers, $617; pledges secured for Bible-school work, $55; grand total for all purposes, $2,048.65. Churches wanting me for revival meetings will please write me as soon as possible, as I am arranging for the spring and summer campaign. Address me at Mountain View, Mo. I have a new tent 40x60 feet and expect to hold tent meetings as soon as the weather will permit.—T. J. HEAD, Bible-school Evangelist.

NEBRASKA.—Beatrice, Jan. 16.—Forty added to date. A firm interest prevails.—LAWRENCE WRIGHT AND SMITH.

Beatrice, Jan. 23.—Forty-six added to date. We continue another week. Our next meeting will be with Prof. Lockhart, of Drake University. From there we go to Montana.—LAWRENCE WRIGHT AND SMITH.

Beatrice.—Bros. Lawrence Wright and L. R. Smith have just finished the third weeks' meeting here, with 45 additions to date. Hundreds were turned away last night; could not get in. Great interest is manifested, and we hope for many more additions before the meeting closes.—S. B. DOOLEY.

NEW YORK.—Niagara Falls, Jan. 19.—A steady growth in numbers, the grace of liberality, and the missionary spirit cheers the church here. During 1903, a net gain of 50 members; given to missions from all departments, $483.83; building debt reduced $675, during the year and $2,025, in the past two and a half years. March offering for foreign missions next.—J. A. WHARTON.

OHIO.—Collinwood, Jan. 16.—Our meeting, now 13 days' old, is progressing finely. Large audiences are in attendance every evening. Brother Freer is presenting the gospel in a plain and forcible manner, and Brother Hackleman's singing touches the hearts of the people. Fifteen additions to date, all by primary obedience.—D. R. KING.

Stuebenville, Jan. 11.—We have just held a week's meeting in our new chapel on La Belle View with ten additions, representing as many different families. These will take membership with the First Church. Two other additions a week ago and four yesterday.—C. P. Leach, of Iowa City, Ia., will come to-morrow to continue the meetings. Miss Blanche Harris is leader of song.—H. H. MONINGER.

Rudolph, Jan. 14.—We are in the second week of a meeting with home forces. Five confessions and two by statement. Recently this church gave a liberal offering for Jamaica.—J. MUNRO.

Collinwood, Jan. 22.—Special evangelistic meetings still continue. Weather conditions extremely adverse; 25 confessions to date and two added by letter.—D. R. KING.

Massillon, Jan. 22.—Have just returned from Shreve, O., where I assisted the pastor, E. C. Harris, in a meeting of 18 days' duration. We had 25 additions, mostly confessions. Brother Harris is doing excellent work and feels that additions will be regular and constant. After all, the best revival is the weekly one. This is the church Br. the Spayd served just before leaving for Africa. Altogether it raised him between $300 and $400. I believe it can be developed to give that much annually to foreign missions; and I believe Brother Harris is the man to bring it up to that standard. I wish you a most happy and prosperous year, and the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST ever-increasing usefulness.—GEO. DARSIE, Jr.

Columbus, Jan. 18.—Brother Dodd, our pastor, is holding nightly meetings, with 20 additions the past week.—O. C. KECKELEY.

OKLAHOMA.—Gerry, Jan. 20.—On Dec. 27, last I began a meeting at Palace school house, 25 miles north and eight miles west of Woodward county, Okla. We closed the meeting Lord's day night, Jan. 17, having continued three weeks with 62 additions, 17 of whom were by confession and baptism, the others by statement and from other religious bodies. We organized a Christian Endeavor Society with 48 active and six associate members, on the night we closed. The residences of this county are sod houses. The prairie dog yet has a home here. We are holding a meeting now near Saverne at Spring Creek school house, Woodward county. Any brethren in this county desiring to form an organization, or to have a meeting, should address me here at Gerry. We have a team and a telescope organ. Mrs. Smedley travels with me and does the playing and singing.—R. S. SMEDLEY, "Living Link" Evangelist.

Elreno, Jan. 22.—Am assisting Bro. J. F. Parker, the Elreno pastor, in a successful meeting. There have been 49 additions. Meeting 18 days' old. Will continue indefinitely. Deep interest and many more will come to Christ. Two chorus classes; 50 in children's chorus, 30 in regular chorus.—TALMAGE STANLEY, singer.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Wilkes Barre, Jan. 2.—Bro. Robert Sawtell, of Stillwell, is holding a meeting for Bro. C. A. Frick, of West Moore, across the river from us. Fifteen added to date, 14 by baptism. Meeting is little over two weeks old. The bishop of West Moore, Bro. C. A. Frick, is doing a good work; has built a nice house of worship, gathered 140 members, is out of debt. Bro. L. O. Knipp, of Plymouth, Pa., four and one-half miles from us, has a continuous revival on hand. Six by baptism at prayer meeting last week; no service without evidence of the great work he is doing for the Master. We are alive here. Our mission is gaining. Eastern Pennsylvania is looking up.—E. E. C.

Johnstown, Jan. 23.—Have been assisting the pastor, E. A. Hibler, in a three weeks' meeting with the church here. It has been a delightful fellowship. Closed last night with 20 added, 16 by baptism.—F. A. BRIGHT, evangelist.

Wilkinsburg, Jan. 16.—Your report from Wilkinsburg last week reads, "We had two accessions on the first Sunday of the new year." It should have been ten. We have had 16 accessions at regular services in two weeks.—L. N. D. WELLS pastor.

SOUTH DAKOTA.—Roubaix.—On the first day of the week, Jan. 17, Disciples of Christ, (ten in number) in the Black Hills of South Dakota, met at the home of Brother and Sister Charles Beck, in the city of Deadwood, in fellowship at the Lord's table. It was a precious meeting. Texts: "He that hath the Son hath life;" "By this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God and keep his commandments." "And his commandments are not grievous," from the epistle of John, the disciple. The privilege of offering to the work of the Lord met a generous response.—MRS. O. B. AMSDEN.

TENNESSEE.—Nashville, Jan. 18.—Annual business meeting of Woodland Street Church Jan. 10. All departments in good condition. $625 raised for missions last year. All expenses and debts paid. Young ladies' aid society reports $400 in treasury, bearing interest. Church will probably rebuild or remodel during the present year. Four additions at regular services this year. Three baptisms.—JOS. DARDEN ARMISTEAD, minister.

TEXAS.—Fort Worth, Jan. 19.—On last Thursday night Bro. Frank O. Fannon, of St. Louis, closed an eighteen days' meeting with the Tabernacle Church in this city. During his stay there were seventy additions, and on the Sunday following his departure there were eleven more confessions. Brother Fannon's preaching and personal influence were a great spiritual uplift to the church and a moral tonic to the community. In the strength of the spiritual meat which he gave us we will journey many days. We are planning for him to come again.—JAMES S. MYERS.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Jan. 18.—One confession yesterday at the H. Street Christian Church. Hope to begin a meeting with home forces soon. F. M. Rains, of Cincinnati, was with the Washington churches last Lord's day stirring up the pure minds of the brethren by way of remembrance. We know our duty now. And from all indications the capital city will roll up a good offering.—J. MURRAY TAYLOR.

WASHINGTON.—Waitsburg, Jan. 17.—Two more additions to the church to-day. Audiences on the increase. Begin our revival meetings to-day. Sixty in Junior Christian

A Start on the Road to Riches is always made by saving. One dollar or more will start a savings account with us. We pay 3 per cent per annum, compounded twice a year. Write for leaflet on instructions in regard to depositing by mail.

Capital, Surplus and Profits..... $8,200,000

MISSISSIPPI VALLEY TRUST CO

FOURTH & PINE STS. ST. LOUIS

Endeavor and still growing; Sunday-school moving steadily upward; Christian Endeavor active; prayer-meetings fine.—W. T. ADAMS.

Cheney, Jan. 17.—Brother McConnell, evangelist for this part of the state, held a three weeks' meeting here with 30 converts. For several years the church has been dead. But it has been revived and now we have a resident minister, Brother Messick, and expect to pay him $600 a year. We have also purchased a church lot, for which we paid $100, and we have one of the very best locations in town. This is a small town, but one of the state normals is located here. I wish we had more young ministers here in the West. I wish some thing could be said or done that would persuade some of our young ministers, as soon as they finish school to come to this western country to begin their ministry. If we had able ministers to meet the demand, the state of Washington would soon be won for Christ.—MRS. M. KATHRYN HINES.

WYOMING.—Sheridan, Jan. 21.—Our meeting with home forces goes on. Two additions last night, ten added to date, 12 since last report; three confessions. We continue a few days longer.—F. E. BLANCHARD.

Changes.

R. D. Chinn from Vandalia, Mo., to Biloxi, Miss.
Geo. C. Ritchey from Orange, Cal., to Rosebury, Cal.
Milo Atkinson from Petersburg, Ky., to Covington, Ky.
Walter M. Jordan from Helena, Mont., to Quincy, Ill.
M. L. Errett from Knoxville, Iowa, to Keosauqua, Iowa.
J. H. Couch from Knobnoster, Mo., to Tip-ton, Mo.
J. C. Powell from Moore, Okla., to Norman, Okla.
T. R. Hodgkinson from Eldora, Ia., to Sloan, Iowa.
S. P. Telford from Dallas City, Ill., to Toluca, Ill.
Horace Siberell from Clarkston, Wash., to Fredericktown, Mo.
H. L. Atkinson from Geneva, O., to Flushing, Ohio.
W. A. Meloan from Media, Ill., to Elsberry, Mo.

DRAKE'S PALMETTO WINE.

Every sufferer gets a trial bottle free. Only one small dose a day of this wonderful tonic, Medicinal Wine, promotes perfect Digestion, Active Liver, Prompt Bowels, Sound Kidneys, Pure, Rich Blood, Healthy Tissues, Velvet Skin, Robust Health. Drake's Palmetto Wine is a true unfailing specific for Catarrh of Mucous Membranes of the Head, Throat, Respiratory Organs, Stomach and Pelvic Organs. Drake's Palmetto Wine cures Catarrh wherever located, relieves quickly, has cured the most distressful forms of Stomach Trouble and most stubborn cases of Flatulency and Constipation, never fails, cures to stay cured. Seventy-five cents at Drug Stores for a large bottle, usual dollar size, but a trial bottle will be sent free and prepaid to every reader of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST who writes for it.

A letter or postal card addressed to Drake Formula Company, Lake and Dearborn Streets, Chicago, Ill., is the only expense to secure a satisfactory trial of this wonderful Medicinal Wine.

Marriages.

BUSH—THRELKELD.—Married, Milton, T. Bush and Jessie K. Threlkeld, both of South St. Joseph, Mo., on Dec. 16, 1903, N. Rollo Davis officiating.

MAGEE—BROWN.—Married in Centerville, Ia., Jan. 8, 1904, Maxie Cameron Magee, of Bowie, Tex., and Grace D. Brown, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. C. F. Brown, at their residence, Rev. F. L. Moffett, pastor of the Christian Church, officiating.

STAFFORD—MURPHY.—Married, at the residence of Daniel Trundle, on West Meadow St., Springdale, Ark., Jan. 10, 1904, Jno. P. Stafford, editor Springdale News, and Miss Myrtle Murphy, also of Springdale.

Obituaries.

Notices of deaths (not more than four lines) inserted free. Obituary memoirs, one cent per word. Send the money with the copy.

ALDERMAN.

Alvin Grant Alderman was born of the flesh at Sulphur Springs, Ohio, Sept. 29, 1888; he was born of the Spirit in 1882. He had the blessed heritage of godly parents and early Christian training. Would that this might be said more frequently in this greedy, commercial age, when so many thousands are more zealous for the treasures of earth than treasures of heaven. After a common school education he attended college at Holton, Kan., after which he spent one year at old Bethany, and took the A. B. degree at Central Christian College, Albany, Mo. When sixteen years old he began teaching during the winter months, and attended the normals during the summers, for he had a thirst for knowledge, and desired to become useful in the world. He exemplified the old saying, that you can't keep a boy down when he is determined to get up. On Nov. 24, 1892, he was married to Miss Cora Evans, at Valley Falls, Kan., and they made their home at once at Oregon, Mo., where he was pastor. Of this union four children were born, who are left to mourn with their mother the early departure of their father. Bro. Alderman served acceptably as pastor for the churches at Ridgeway, Bethany and Albany, Mo., and North Topeka, Kan. While pastor at North Topeka he was also a member of the Kansas State Board, and for a short time assisted in the office of the State Board, where his ability to organize, and his cool-headed calculating were of lasting benefit to the state work. In 1898 he became one of the Bible teachers in Central Christian College, Albany, Mo., and also superintendent of the business department. He quickly learned himself to the students, and all who ever attended Christian Central College, while he was connected with it are his friends to-day. In the spring of 1901 he was called to take charge of our C. W. B. M. mission work at Monterey, Mexico. His ability as an organizer was much needed here, and showed in a marked increase in the work. In fact, the growth of our work in Monterey for the first twelve months after he took charge is without a parallel, so far as we know. On Sept. 23, 1903, after an illness of only a few days with the terrible disease, yellow fever, he yielded up his spirit, and left behind him for a time his devoted wife and four little ones alone in a foreign land, and in the midst of that terrible scourge of Yellow-Jack. After his death Sister Alderman and two of the children had the fever, but all recovered. I believe I have never known a young man as well prepared to take the long journey to the other world as was our lamented brother. His faith was clear and steady, and since his whole heart and purpose had been to glorify the Redeemer in the spread of his glorious gospel and the saving of perishing souls, his very life was in tune to the great purposes of the Infinite, and he was fitted to rest in the Master's bosom. Would that the world was full of such heroes of faith. May the abiding comfort of the Spirit of our God uphold and sustain and sweeten the remaining years of the bereaved family, is our earnest prayer.

O. J. LAW.

DENNIS.

Sister Dora E. Dennis wife of U. H. Dennis, of Sedan, Kan., and daughter of Brother and Sister F. C. Fouts, was called to her final reward, Dec. 28, 1903. Besides a husband and two children she leaves a father and mother and a brother and sister to mourn their loss. Funeral services were conducted by the writer, her former, and Bro. F. M. Commings, her present, pastor. Sister Dennis was born in Canton, Ill., Dec. 8, 1861. She became a Christian at the age of 16. She was one of the most devoted, active members in the Christian Church at Sedan.

J. T. BAYS.

FRANK.

The death of my brother, Holton Osborne Frank, marks the earthly closing of one of the most beautiful lives I have ever known. Holton was the youngest of the three sons of J. C. and Sallie D. Frank, and was born near Flemingsburg, Ky., Aug. 8, 1880, and died at St. Joseph's Hospital, Lexington, Ky., Jan. 1, 1904. He was educated in the schools of Lancaster, Ky., where father was pastor of the Christian Church from 1889 to the time of his death, Dec. 1, 1893, and in Kentucky University and the College of the Bible, Lexington, Ky., from the latter of which institutions he was graduated, June 11, 1901. He leaves a stepmother, three sisters and two brothers. After sweet, simple services at the Broadway church, Lexington, of which church he was a member, and at the church in Flemingsburg, of which for thirteen years father was pastor, his body was laid to rest beside his father, mother and sister on the quiet hillside overlooking the village. His was an unusual life. I have never known another which for purity and beauty equalled

If he ever had a bad habit, it was never known even to his most intimate friend or associate. I never heard him say a word, I never saw him do a deed that would have brought a tear to his mother's eyes, or sent a feeling of regret to her heart. I know no other boy of whom I can truthfully say this. His life furnishes unmistakable refutation to that poor teaching which says, "You must know sin before you can know righteousness or appreciate virtue," for Holton loved, with his whole heart, those things that were noble and good. Nor was his goodness of the negative kind. Eternity alone can reveal the many deeds of kindness which he did. The unfortunate of earth appealed to him in a peculiarly strong manner, and many way-worn souls were cheered by the sunshine of his life and the words of his counsel. Holton has always been a preacher. From the day he lisped his first sentence to that New Year's afternoon when he fell asleep, the one unswerving purpose of his life was to preach the gospel. There are hundreds of children in the various towns in which he lived who will never forget those Sunday afternoon services into which he gathered them to hear him give his rendition of the sermon which he had heard father preach at the morning church service. And this preaching was not play with him. He was as serious in it as he ever was in any preaching that he did in his manhood. During his college life he preached for some country churches near Lexington. He preached his first sermon, March 20, 1898, at Poplar Plains, Ky., in the same church in which father had preached his first sermon 30 years earlier. After his graduation, he preached for churches in the vicinity of Lexington, and at the time when he was taken sick he had under consideration calls from influential churches in other states. Had he lived, he would unquestionably have become one of the best preachers, for he had in his character those traits that make a man a servant of God. The sun of his earthly life went down in its morning hours, and yet it leaves a beautiful radiance in the hearts of those upon whom its pure light fell.

ROBERT GRAHAM FRANK.

MAJOR.

Dr. L. S. Major at the age of 81 passed from this life Jan. 3. Dr. Major was for over half a century very intimately connected with all our church interests here. He was one of seven to organize the First Christian Church in this city in 1850. He was for years a most liberal supporter of our cause. He was one of the builders of Chicago. A large block erected before the great fire, rebuilt since, stands as a monument to his energy. Mrs. Major, four daughters and a son remain to mourn their loss.

Chicago, Jan. 14.

MARTIN.

Perry T. Martin died at the home of his mother in Crawfordsville, Ind., Jan. 15, aged 37 years. He recently gave up his work as pastor of the Christian Church of Neosho, Mo., and came home to battle with tuberculosis, to which he finally succumbed. He leaves a wife and mother to mourn his loss, and a host of friends to pay respect to his memory. Bro. A. J. Frank conducted the funeral. The Indiana ministry will feel his loss, for he was well known and loved here.

H. RANDEL LOOKABILL.

DR. S. E. PEARRE.

"Know ye not that there is a prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel?" The well-rounded life of a good man has been ended and the burden of care laid down.

Dr. Sterling Elwood Pearre was born in Ohio, Aug. 27, 1825 and departed this life, Jan. 9, 1904 in the 80th year of his age. He was a son of Otho Pearre a descendant of an old Maryland family and a fellow-laborer with Stone, Rogers and others in the New Light Reformation. Elder S. E. Pearre became a Christian early in life. He graduated from a medical school in 1850 and practiced medicine and surgery with success until at the earnest solicitation of friends and a sense of duty, he laid down the surgeon's knife and took up the sword of the Spirit which he wielded with great power in the interests of humanity. That he might be a more efficient worker for his Master he entered Bethany College in the beginning of his ministry from which he graduated with honors in 1855. He was an intimate friend and a great admirer of Alexander Campbell from whose life he drew a wonderful inspiration. He was a profound scholar, a great preacher and a sedulous worker up to about eight years ago, when the affliction, which resulted in his death, overtook him. Surrounded by relatives and friends at the home of his daughter, in this city, he passed away peacefully as a little child falls to sleep. Much of his ministerial work was among our stronger congregations and many are the "Old Guards" remaining who will remember him with love and veneration for the faithful work he gave the churches in Dubuque, Ia., Philadelphia, Pa., Ashland, O., Springfield, Ill., Grand Rapids, Mich., Indianapolis, Ind. and other places. He leaves on this side the "dark river" a faithful wife and co-laborer, the organizer of the C. W. B. M., an only daughter, the wife of Elder Wilkes, of this city, with their children, a host of friends and a rich heritage of good work for the Master. May his sleep be sweet as he rests from his labors. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: Ye, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them."

California, Mo.

S. J. VANCE.

WEAVER.

George W. Weaver departed this life Lord's day, Jan. 17, aged 69 years, 11 months, 22 days. Bro. Weaver has been one of the strongest pillars of the church at Haydens Grove in Benton County, Mo. Bro. W. F. Hamann, assisted by the writer, conducted the funeral services. The Masonic Order, of which Bro. Weaver was a member, was out in body and took part in the services.

W. H. SCOTT.

The Quiet Hour

"He came unto his own, and his own received him not." John 1:11.

This is our golden text for the Sunday-school lesson, next Lord's day. Let us linger a moment on it, at this quiet hour of study, to see if it does not have a direct application to us as well as to the Jew's of Christ's time.

It must have been a great grief to the heart of Christ that his own people, whose prophets had foretold him, whose poets had sung of him, whose whole history and worship had pointed to him, should refuse to receive him when he came among them. Why did they not receive him? He did not come as they expected and desired he would come. He was not the kind of a Savior they were looking for. Their ideal was wrong. They did not apprehend their real need. Jesus was the very Saviour they needed, but alas not the one they desired; hence they rejected him—rejected him who came to bring them salvation.

But Christ, in a very large and true sense, owns all men. He has redeemed them with his own precious blood. He has come to us as he came to the Jews. Have we received him? Have we admitted him into our hearts, into our lives, into our daily conduct? Alas! how large a number of the people, including many of our friends, all about us, have never yet received Jesus Christ, the world's best friend.

But we who have professed Christ and acknowledged him as our Savior and Lord, have we received him as he asks to be received, to sit upon the throne of our hearts, to mold our characters, to fashion our lives? It availeth little to pay Jesus the compliment of calling him "Lord, Lord," if we do not do the things he desires us to do, and are not the characters he desires us to be. Let us search our hearts with the question, "Have I received Jesus Christ in a way that all who know me, know that I am his, and that he is the inspiration of my life and the chief object of my affection?"

Oh, the inhospitality of refusing to receive Christ! There was no room for him in the inn at Bethlehem; there was no room for him in Jerusalem or Samaria or Galilee. The world had no room for him when he was here; and it crucified him. O! the pity of it! O! the shame of it! But the world did not know him. We know him, however, for nineteen centuries of history have thrown their light upon his character. How much greater is our sin, therefore, if we refuse him whose coming into the world has proved such a blessing to our race!

But it is not enough that we should receive him and give him a warm welcome into our hearts and homes. We must introduce him to others, and urge them to receive him likewise, that they may share in the joys of that salvation, which he always carries with him. Here is another question with which to try our hearts: "What am I doing to cause others to receive Jesus Christ as their Lord and their Savior?"

Oh Lord, we open our hearts to Thee, and bid Thee come in to abide with us evermore. Forgive our ingratitude, our inhospitality to Thee in the past, and may it be the joy of our lives to have Thee as our best Friend and to bring others into the knowledge and enjoyment of that love which has blessed our own lives! Amen!

The Infant

takes first to human milk; that failing, the mother turns at once to cow's milk as the best substitute. Borden's Eagle Brand Condensed Milk is a cow's milk scientifically adapted to the human infant. Stood first for forty-five years.

Family Circle

A Sunset Picture.

By Emma D. Andrews.

A day of toil and achievement
Forevermore was done.
The sun, in power and splendor,
His glorious course had run.

In the quiet hour of evening,
When the shadows began to fall,
While the after glow of the sunset
Shed a halo over all.

A scene of marvelous beauty
Greeted my wondering eyes.
Did the brush of a heavenly artist
Blend the tints of those western skies?

A thrill of awe and of rapture
Still enters this heart of mine.
At thought of those soft hues, blended
By the hand of that artist divine.

When Death the great Revealer
Drew the curtain of life aside,
Ere the deeper shadows had fallen
On our nation's strength and pride,

The eyes of a stricken people
Through the mists of blinding tears,
Beheld a beautiful picture,
Which shall linger through the years,

In the hearts and homes of our nation,
A light o'er the darkness beneath,
A halo of love and devotion,
O'er the gathering gloom of death.

How Roy Caught a Bird With Salt.

The boarders at Glendale Farm thought little Roy Rogers just "too cute for anything," for he had so many winning ways and said so many bright things; and then he was the only little boy on the farm.

It was Roy's first summer in the country, and every day he could scarcely eat his dinner for telling them, at the table, how many wonderful things he had seen.

The birds delighted him most, especially when they sang. He would stand as if spellbound until the song was ended, then he would pucker up his little, rosy mouth into a round "O" and try his best to whistle something like what the birds sang.

"If I could only have a bird for my very own!" he said, one day, at the table.

"Then why don't you catch one?" asked a big, fat man, looking over his teacup at the little boy, as his mother was tucking a napkin under his chin.

"How can I?" he asked, opening his eyes very wide.

"Sprinkle some salt on their tails," said the old gentleman.

There was a general laugh, but Roy remembered. He wondered if a bird could be caught in that way, and, after dinner, he went out into the kitchen and filled both his pockets with salt.

"What do you want it for?" asked the cook.

"Wait until I can tell you," laughed Roy, hop-skiping out of the door.

Then all that afternoon Roy tried to get close enough to a bird to get some salt on its tail, but found he could not. Much discouraged, he went out into a field back of a barn, where were some little white houses with little bits of doors. These doors were open, and out of them something was coming—yes, surely, just the prettiest yellow birds he had ever seen. But when he tried to catch one, they would run back into the white house, and Roy would lose sight of them. At last one fellow, more venturesome than the others, came farther out, and, quick as thought, Roy stopped up the door, then got out a handful of salt, and chased the soft, downy creature round and round, while it chirped with fright.

"It can't fly or sing," he said to himself, "I think, 'cause it's too young." And, throwing the salt, it fell just above the bird's short tail, and it fell, staggered like, to the ground.

In an instant Roy pounced upon it, and picked it up in both fat little hands, and fairly flew over the ground until he reached the house. There were mamma and all the rest of the boarders seated at supper.

"I've caught one! I've caught one!" exclaimed Roy, in great excitement.

"What can the child mean?" asked his mamma.

"Why the bird, mamma! I caught one with some salt. I frowed it on his tail," and, opening his hands, out dropped something into mamma's lap, almost scared to death.

"Sho, now," said the landlady, looking on curiously, "if the boy hasn't gone and caught one of my little chickens!"—Selected.

All the troubles of this world are born with wings.—Mary E. Wilkins.

GEO. KILGEN & SON

BUILDERS OF HIGH GRADE

Pipe Organs

ST. LOUIS, MO.
Best of References. Correspondence Solicited.

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR 25 CTS.
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use
in time. Sold by druggists.
CONSUMPTION

EST. 1847. Allcock's

POROUS PLASTERS

A universal remedy for pains in the back (so frequent in the case of women). They give instantaneous relief.

For pains in the region of the Kidneys, or for a Weak Back, the plaster should be applied as shown above. Wherever there is pain apply Allcock's Plaster.

Wherever there is a pain a Plaster should be applied.

Rheumatism,
Colds, Coughs,
Weak Chest,
Weak Back,
Lumbago,
Sciatica,
&C., &C.

Allcock's Plasters are superior to all others.

O. Brandt

For Rheumatism or Pains in Shoulders, Elbows or elsewhere, or for Sprains, Stiffness, etc., and for Aching Feet, Plaster should be cut size and shape required and applied to part affected as shown above.

This Book, "Home Bible Study,"

FREE if you write and enroll at once. Course covers the whole Bible and leads to diploma and degree. You can take this course at home by mail. Terms easy. Best testimonials. For free catalog write C. J. BURTON, Pres. Iowa Christian College, Oskaloosa, Ia.

INVESTORS

desiring to realize the Large Interest and Profits possible in legitimate Mining, Oil, Timber & Smelter Investments and Dividend-paying Industrial Stocks, listed and unlisted, should send for our Booklets, giving full information, mailed free. DOUGLAS, LACEY & CO., Bankers & Brokers, 66 Broadway, New York

AULT & WIBORG

COMPANY

Manufacturers of Printing Inks.
CINCINNATI, NEW YORK,
CHICAGO, ST. LOUIS.

This Paper Printed with Ault & Wiborg Ink

The Only Published Addresses of
ALEXANDER PROCTER

are contained in

"The Witness of Jesus"

A cloth-bound volume of 404 pages.

Every Christian, particularly preachers of the Word, should have it on their book shelves.

Price, $1.25.

Christian Publishing Company
1522 Locust Street St. Louis, Mo.

"An Endeavorer's Working Journey Around the World."

By John F. Anderson.

$1.50 Postpaid.

Hon. Champ Clark says it is "The most interesting book of travels published since Mark Twain wrote 'Innocents Abroad.'"

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING CO.,
1522 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo.

In the Twilight.

By Eugene Clay Ferguson.

I sit in the dusk of the evening,
At the close of a short winter's day.
At a frost-covered window and watch them,
The children troop by in their play;
The weary school session is ended,
And out in the fast falling snow,
They shout and they call to each other,
As trooping on homeward they go.

They gather the snow in great handfuls,
And they pelt every fellow that strays;
They hit or they miss quite regardless,
"Till they come to the parting of ways;
Their cheeks are the skies of the morning,
Kissed red by a slow rising sun;
Almost I am tempted to join them,
And mingle again in their fun.

I sit in the dusk of the evening,
And I think of a snow-drifted road,
Of a lane leading up to a hilltop,
That oft in my boyhood I trod;
Of a school-house as white as the snowdrifts,
Of children that toiled gayly on,
To the crested, white house on the hilltop,
Of Thomas and Albert and John.

Ah, forty long winters the snowdrifts,
Have blown o'er that lane that we trod;
The children are grown up and scattered,
And some are at rest 'neath the sod;
And I watch in the gathering twilight,
With the snow shining white in my hair,
And I hark to the shouts of the children,
And my own are among them out there.

So I sit in the dusk of the evening,
In the dusk of the evening of life;
My schooldays long since have all ended,
The toil and the turmoil and strife;
I would shield their young feet but I cannot,
Uneven and rough lies the way,
And I pray that the Father may guide them,
That none of these lambs go astray.
Bloomington, Ill.

Two Painters.

Two painters each painted a picture to illustrate his conception of rest.
The first chose for his scene a still,
lone lake among the far-off mountains.
The second threw on his canvas a thundering waterfall, with a fragile birch tree bending over the foam. At the fork of the branch almost wet with the cataract's spray, a robin sat on its nest.

The first was only "stagnation;" the last was "rest." Christ's life was outwardly one of the most troubled lives that was ever lived; tempest and tumult, tumult and tempest, the waves breaking over it all the time, till the worn body was laid in the grave. But the inner life was a sea of glass. The great calm was always there. At any moment you might have gone to him and found rest. And even when his enemies were dogging him in the streets of Jerusalem, he turned to his disciples and offered them, as a last legacy, "My peace."—Henry Drummond.

"Thank You."

Little Jack was only four years old and a great pet of Aunt Ruth on account of his sweet, affectionate ways.
One day his cousin, a boy of sixteen, set Jack to work for him. He told him to pull up some weeds in the field while he finished his story. Little Jack worked away until his fingers were sore and his face was very hot.
When, at length, he returned to the house, his aunt said to him: "Jackie, what have you been doing?"

The tears came into his eyes and his lips quivered, and for a moment he did not speak. Then he said: "I've been kind to Cousin Frank. I worked dreadfully hard for him and he never said
'Thank you' to me."

Poor little Jackie! I felt so sorry for him. It was hard lines not to have a word of thanks after all his hard work.
But that night when I put him in his little cot, he said to me: "Aunty, this morning I was sorry that I pulled the weeds, but now I'm not sorry."

"How is that?" I asked. "Has Cousin Frank thanked you?"

"No, he hasn't; but inside of me I have a good feeling. It always comes when I've been kind to anyone; and, do you know, I've found out what it is?"

"What is it, darling?" I asked.

Throwing his arms around my neck, he whispered: "It's God's thank you."—Zion's Watchman.

"Singing Birds Build Low."

One who had been listening while a bright girl announced most ambitious aspirations and purpose for her own life, answered gently: "You may be right, dear child, but do not forget that 'the singing birds build low.'"

Taking this as its text, the Philadelphia Public Ledger speaks these words of comfort to girls: "If your flight is above the roof-trees, if your haunts are to be high up among the wind-rocked boughs, the home nest can not fail to suffer loss. Apart from the loss to those who remain, the daughter who goes out often finds too late the low nest was safest and best. There are colder winds on the mountain crags, and it is the birds of prey that build their nests on high.

"After all one's thinking and talking of progress of man or woman, it is true that nothing ever comes to us that is so sweet as the life of home.
Let women seek the largest culture, the broadest freedom, the highest service. All goes well while they keep the home love warm. When the love wav-ers, it is time to pause. We are building our nests in the wrong place.
Singing birds are to make melody, first, for our nearest and dearest, and when our best is too good for the home, we are placing our nests too high."—Standard.

Ruskin, in the preface to the third volume of his "Modern Painters," speaking in answer to some of his critics, says that "it is perfectly possible to protect one's self against small error, and yet to make great and final errors in the sum of the work; on the other hand, it is equally possible to fall into small errors, and yet be right in tendency all the while, and entirely right in the end. In this respect, some

The long looked for hymn book
Just issued.

NORTHFIELD HYMNAL

By GEO. C. STEBBINS

For use in Evangelistic and Church Services, Conventions, Sunday Schools and all Prayer and Social Meetings of the Church and Home.

It contains a very large number of most useful and singable sacred songs, both new and old, among which are

MANY of the favorite "Gospel Hymns" and "Sacred Songs."

MANY NEW SONGS soon to become FAVORITES,
MANY Church Hymns and tunes, new and old,
from the best American and English composers.

MANY pieces especially useful for Evangelistic and Convention Choirs, and many for Solo, Duet and Quartet purposes.

Substantially bound in cloth, $25.00 per 100.

5c. each per copy extra by mail.

Before deciding on the new hymn book for your church you had better see

NORTHFIELD HYMNAL

A returnable copy for examination, sent free to any earnest inquirer on application.

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York and Chicago.

men may be compared to careful travelers, who neither stumble at stones nor slip in sloughs, but have from the beginning of their journey to its close chosen the wrong road; and others to those who, however, slipping, stumbling at the wayside, have yet their eyes fixed on the true gate and goal, and will not fail of reaching them."

"What do you put on your face after shaving?" asked the man who smelled of bay rum.

"Court plaster, usually," replied the nervous chap, gloomily.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

For Over 60 Years

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup

has been used for over SIXTY YEARS by MILLIONS of Mothers for their CHILDREN while TEETH-
ING, with perfect success. IT SOOTHES the CHILD, SOFTENS
the GUMS, ALLAYS all pain,
CURES WIND COLIC, and is the best remedy for DIARRHOEA. Sold by Druggists in every part of the world. Be sure and ask for Mrs.
Winslow's Soothing Syrup and take no other kind. 25 Cents a Bottle.

An Old and Well-tried Remedy

CHURCH FURNITURE

Pews, Pulpits, Etc.

The best that money can buy.

Grand Rapids School Furniture Works

Corner Wabash and Washington Sts., Chicago, Ill.

TOPIC CARDS FOR 1904

Uniform Prayer-Meeting Topics for the year, per hundred	$0.25
Midweek Prayer-Meeting Topical Outlines for the year (a booklet of 52 pages), per hundred	1.50
Y. P. S. C. E. Prayer-Meeting Topics for the year, per hundred	1.00
Y. P. S. C. E. Prayer-Meeting Topics for three or six months, with list of Officers, Committees and Leaders, per hundred	2.75
The Topical Hand Book, containing Mid-Week Topics, Y. P. S. C. E. Topics and Sunday-School Topics for the year, per hundred	3.00

AND ALL OTHER CHURCH SUPPLIES

Christian Publishing Co., 1522 Locust St. St. Louis, Mo.

With the Children

By J. Breckenridge Ellis

The Green Witch.

CHAPTER I.—CONCLUDED.

The hoarse voice of the drunken man came roaring down the narrow street: "I'll trim you, I will! I'll trim you, I will!"

"Who is he?" asked George in unpleasant surprise. "What did he mean by my getting his job?"

"He was the delivery man of the grocery store," said the hauler. "Haven't you saw him drivin' about town? Pore old Tuck, though! He will git on a spree occasional, an' then his son delivers in his place. This time he's got on a spree an' seems like he won't never git off, agin! He makes all his fambly hand over their earnings, an' his son got tired of deliverin' an' handin' over, so he quit,—an' pore old Tuck's too drunk to rezoom his place! So this new man that bought the store—Stoner—he ain't got no respect of our old customs, an' instid of waitin' on Tuck, an' drivin' the wagon hisself till pore old Tuck have come roun', he employs you,—so Tuck says."

"I begin to work for Mr. Stoner in the morning," said George.

"Well, well," said the other, "and pore old Tuck have lost a job he's been holdin' fur five year! I doubt if you'll hold it that long. I'm afraid pore ole Tuck will git you, George; he's a-layin' fur you. I wouldn't never deliver up in this part of town if I was you. The best thing you could do, George, would be to go to Mr. Stoner an' say to him, 'You take back Tuck Hootin.' Why, pore ole Tuck have had that job ever since ten year after he married my sister. An' he's the sweetest-tempered an' most seasonable man when sober that ever I see, or you either, I don't keer how traveled you air."

"I am sorry," said George, "to deprive Mr. Hootin of his position, but I can't afford to give up the place. I am poor, and my father depends upon me. And it seems to me it is all his own fault, Mr. Teeny, and when he is sober he can't blame me."

"Well, I speak entirely fur yore good," said Mr. Teeny, "an' you'll find out whether he can blame you or not, first time you fin' yoreself laid up with yore head bruck. Pore ole Tuck ain't jest hisself, an' in his blind an' errin' way, he strives pow'ful hard to even down and trim off the injustices of our social system." Mr. Teeny belonged to that most unsocial of sects known as "Socialists."

"I wonder," said George, treating himself to a small flavor of irony, "what job his daughter has taken away from him."

"His daughter," said Mr. Teeny, "would drive any drunk man sober but pore ole Tuck. I say it, if she is my own niece. That Mag Hootin is the most no-account, triflin', lazy and indifferent piece of goods that was ever labeled 'a girl,' an' then left dead upon the market. She won't hire out, she won't work at home, she won't do nothin' but be a provocation. She's different from all her brothers and sisters (there's a half-dozen), and if any good is to be spoke for Mag Hootin, I am first to hear it spoke. Well, our roads part here. Good-bye, my boy, an' keep an eye out fur pore old Tuck, fur ef he ain't killed an' slaughtered before now, it's because people has took keer to git outter his way." George hurried from "Hobb's Addition," wishing he had gone at once to Mr. Stoner's. It was now dusk, and he feared to postpone making the acquaintance of his employer's family.

CHAPTER II.

When George Clayton reached his employer's house, the windows showed the white radiance of electric lights. It was one of the largest houses in Burr City. There was a broad two-story porch which ran the width of the front of the mansion. Following the two great rounded swells formed by the face of the building, the front porch made an enormous capital "B." The front steps led up to the middle of the "B." The front door, which now stood open, was placed where the two great swells of the house came together. Heavy vines clung to the sides of the porch, reaching to the roof of the second story; and electric lights gleaned from among the green leaves. From the hall shone mellow red lights which suggested luxury and comfort. George could not imagine a greater contrast to the soiled tent in "Hobbs's Addition," with its frowsy weeds, its dark, wild forest stretching behind it, and the drunken father beating the ragged daughter. It was rapidly growing dark, and the porch was brightly illuminated. A man and a girl were sharply defined as George came toward the steps. The man was old, with a flowing white beard and long white hair which reached to his collar. His face was benevolent and refined. The girl was about fifteen, rather slight for her age, richly dressed, yet with a dainty, flowerlike effect that offered no violence to good taste.

"Good evening," said the old man. His voice was one of those sincere and gentle signs of fair weather in the heart; for a pure, kind heart never beat but some lonely one saw the red promise at evening.

George returned the greeting and asked, "Is Mr. Stoner still at the store? Then maybe I'd better go there and come back with him."

"Oh!" cried the girl, "are you the new boy?"

Perhaps it was not polite to call him a "new boy," but the girl's tones were so friendly and full of interest, that George smiled. "I am George Clayton,—yes, I am the new boy."

"Come up and join us, George," said the old man. "As you are to live with us, we had better get acquainted. This is Flora, Mr. Stoner's daughter; and I am Mr. Halway,—Flora's grandfather."

"Did your father go away to Florida?" asked Flora; "and did you go with him to the depot?"

"No,—yes," said George, not knowing which question to answer first. He had never met many people who were friends from the first minute. Flora showed none of the timidity, or embarrassment, natural to one of her years when first meeting another. She laughed musically at his answer, and George felt more at home than ever.

A Few Remainders

—AT—

SPECIAL PRICES

	Publisher's Price	Special Price	Post.
Sermons and Addresses, Flint.....	2.50	1.00	.15
Peloubet's Commentary on Matthew.....	1.25	.50	.15
Book by Book.....	2.50	1.50	.15
Lectures on the Books of the Bible by Donald Frazer, 2 vols.	4.00	1.00	.25
Voice, Speech and Gesture. A Practical Hand book to Elec- tionary Art. 840 pages.....	3.50	.90	.20
Peloubet's Suggestive Illus. on Acts.....	1.25	.35	.15
Peloubet's Suggestive Illus. on Matthew.....	1.25	.35	.15
The Four Gospels, Fisher.....	.50	.12	.03
The Holy Father and Living Christ, Forsyth.....	.50	.12	.03
Aids to Belief, Chadwick.....	.50	.12	.03
The Restored Innocence, Camp- bell.....	.50	.12	.03
Forty Days of the Risen Life, Carpenter.....	.50	.12	.03
Personality and Gospel of Christ, Smith.....	.50	.12	.03
With Christ in the School of Prayer, Murray.....	.50	.12	.03
Told at Twilight, or Bible Stories that Never Grow Old, Rosen- berger.....	.25	.10	.04

Send for List of Book Bargains
NEW AND SECOND-HAND.

W. P. BLESSING,

192 Michigan Ave., Chicago

"No,—yes!" echoed Flora, still laughing. "Grandpa, can you guess that riddle?"

"Father went to Florida," said George, "but he had to go to the Junction, so I couldn't go to the station to see him off."

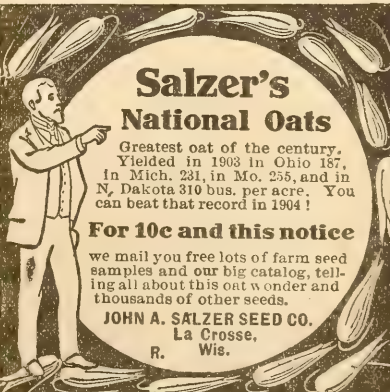

Flora gave him a shrewd, birdlike glance and asked, "Why didn't you say 'depot,' like I did?"

"Stations are where people get on cars," said George, "and depots are where boxes get on."

"Oh, Grandpa!" cried Flora in pretended alarm, "Isn't it a wonder I haven't been taken for a box?—For I always say 'depot!'"

"I am glad," said Mr. Hawley, giving the stranger an approving glance, "to find one so young, careful in his use of words."

"Oh, but I can't be very careful," said the other hastily, "because I know so little. I lost all last year from school. Father needed my time,—he was so weak, and his eyes were bad; and I read aloud to him when his head didn't hurt. And the year before that

Salzer's National Oats

Greatest oat of the century.
Yielded in 1903 in Ohio 187, in Mich. 231, in Mo. 255, and in N. Dakota 310 bus. per acre. You can beat that record in 1904!

For 10c and this notice
we mail you free lots of farm seed samples and our big catalog, telling all about this oat & under thousands of other seeds.

JOHN A. SALZER SEED CO.
La Crosse,
R. Wis.

20,000 CHURCHES

(OUR experience is at your service.)

Lighted by the FRINK System of Patent Reflectors. Send dimensions for estimate. OUR experience is at your service. State whether Electric, Gas, Weisbach, Acetylene, Combination or Oil. 551 Pearl St. I. P. FRINK, NEW YORK.

I lost five months from school,—we were moving and unsettled, and he was so sick. So I don't know much of what I ought to know. I feel ignorant all over!"

Flora laughed at him. "Now that you're to be our delivery-boy," she said, "you'll lose all next year, too, won't you?"

"Yes," said George regretfully.

"Then why be our boy?" demanded Flora. "Why not go to school and work after you've graduated? That's what I would do. That's what brother is going to do. Of course he don't have to work to earn his living, but he has to because pa makes him, so it's the same thing."

"If I put off working till then," said George smiling, "I'd have to put off eating and dressing and helping father and everything. I have to work for my living, and to support father,—and right now. So I don't know what will become of my brains. But at night I'll do what I can with my books. I couldn't before, because it disturbed father, having a light burning. But now that he's gone, I can study late at night."

"You don't know pa," said Flora, "if you imagine you'll have much extra time for yourself. Pa thinks if you are resting, that you've run out of work, and he hunts up more for you. If you were to work till you turned into a beaver with a tail, and then just sat on your dam to breathe, he'd believe you weren't earning your salary!"

George was somewhat dismayed at this description, but he only smiled. "Well, I'll manage somehow. I think if a fellow's brains are intended to do anything, they'll work their way to it, somehow."

"You're right, George," said Mr. Halway. "No matter what the difficulties a firm will can make its own luck, and homemade luck is the kind to trust to!"

George looked about him and said, "It's been two years since I sat on this porch."

"Who lived here then?" Flora asked.

"We did," he answered.

"Oh!" cried Flora, "did you use to live here?"

"Father built this house," said George. "It was our home. Mother died, and then everything went wrong. Father ran the Burr City Chronicle and he owned two other papers in other towns. So we had to rent out this place last year—everything was so different. And then it had to be sold."

"I'd think three papers would make piles of money," said Flora.

"They did," George answered. "But I'd like to see a pile so big that father couldn't—" He stopped suddenly, fearing what he was about to say might sound as a reproach to the editor.

"And you owned this place!" cried Flora. "And now you come here to board and to be our delivery boy! Don't that sound funny! It's just like a story. But we'll make you feel at home, won't we grandpa? We'll make you think that you own the place just as you used to until ma comes. There's no counting on ma. She hasn't ever been here yet, because she's just home from Europe with a party of friends, and she has stopped in Chicago. My! won't Burr City seem a little place to ma! She'll never be satisfied. But then, she never was, that's one thing! I like any place. Don't you? It isn't the place, it's the fun in the place, anyway. Did you ever hear of people being color blind? Well, some people are fun-blind. Ma is. She won't stay here consecutively. She'll be going and coming, all the time. She likes that better than anything else. Don't you think she does, grandpa?"

"I think," said Mr. Halway, "that it is much pleasanter, not to discuss one's pa and ma."

"I guess that's so," said Flora, "for a person has to take his pa and ma as he finds 'em. George, I suppose you know the best people here. I've only been in town two weeks, and I've been afraid of making acquaintances for fear of the wrong kind. Ma is so particular! But at Sunday-school, I looked about real sharp, and I think I found my set. It was a crowd of girls about my size, and they called each other Fanny and Beulah and Linnie and and Mary and Bertha—and that's all I remember."

"I know whom you mean," said George. "Yes, they are all my friends."

"Aren't they the nicest set?" asked Flora. "I want the very best. I won't have any other."

"I like 'em," said George doubtfully. "What do you call the nicest set?"

"Why, George! you know what I mean; their parents are the best people in town, of course."

"Well, I don't know about that," he replied. "One of that set's father didn't go to the penitentiary—but it wasn't his fault; and another one drinks, I know he does, regularly!"

"Oh, I don't mean that," retorted Flora, impatiently. "I don't mean what kind of people they are inside, but what others think of them. Now I'll give you a test. Is it hard for a girl to get to go with the ones I mentioned?"

"Yes, it is," said George. "They don't like to have anything to do with anybody but themselves."

"Ah, ha!" cried Flora, triumphantly. "They're my kind. The best set is always just naturally unfriendly, and that's the only kind I'm going with!"

"I think you must be naturally friendly," said George, smiling at the pretty, worldly-wise little face, "for I felt mighty lonesome when I came here, and I've forgotten all about it!"

"Yes, that's the trouble with me," said Flora, with a sigh. "Ma says so, too. I can hold my back as stiff as anybody, but if I don't watch it continually it limbers right down. Listen! there comes pa and brother."

Mr. Stoner, whom George had met several times, entered the yard, followed by his son, a youth of about seventeen. "Well, George, you're on hands," said the grocer, in a dry, indifferent voice that left one in doubt as to its owner's feelings. "This is my son Spot. He'll show you, in the morning, what to do. I'm going to bed."

Flora asked, "Are you tired to-night, pa?"

Mr. Stoner passed into the house without answering. He did not like questions.

"Come here, Spotsy," said his sister, "and let me tell your fortune."

"Fortune, nothin'!" retorted Spot, ungraciously. "Come on, George, let's go to our room. We're to bunk to-

DEAR MADAM: Please Read My Free Offer

Words of Wisdom to Sufferers from a Lady of Notre Dame, Indiana.

I send free of charge to every sufferer this great Woman Remedy, with full instructions, description of my past sufferings and how I permanently cured myself.

You Can Cure Yourself at Home Without the Aid of a Physician.

It costs nothing to try this remedy once, and if you desire to continue its use, it will cost you only twelve cents a week. It does not interfere with your work or occupation. I have nothing to sell. Tell other sufferers of it; that is all I ask. It cures everybody, young or old.

If you feel bearing down pains as from approaching danger, pain in the back and bowels, greenish jaundice, or if you are suffering from any of the above named troubles, then write to Mrs. M. Summers, Notre Dame, Ind., for her free treatment and full instructions. Like myself thousands have been cured by it. I send free a plain envelope.

Mothers and Daughters will learn of a simple family remedy, which quickly and thoroughly cures female complaints of every nature. It saves worry and expense and the unpleasantness of having to reveal your condition to others. Vision, health and happiness result from its use.

Wherever you live I can refer you to well-known ladies in your neighborhood, who know and will testify that this family remedy cures all troubles peculiar to their sex, strengthens the whole system and makes healthy and strong women. Write to-day, as this offer may not be made again.

MRS. M. SUMMERS, BOX 183, NOTRE DAME, IND., U. S. A.

The PRAISE HYMNAL

The Ideal Church Music Book. Half leather binding, $70 per 100. Vellum cloth, $50.

THE FILLMORE BROTHERS CO.
CINCINNATI, OHIO.

Music Publishers and Dealers. Also Band and Orchestra Instruments and Music. Catalogues Free, Correspondence Solicited.

gether." George followed the other through the familiar house, recalling many scenes of the past as he went up the stairs and through the halls. He was surprised when Spot opened the door of what used to be Mr. Clayton's lumber-room. He was still further surprised to find the floor carpetless, and the walls covered with dingy, broken wall-paper. From the center of the ceiling hung a strip which had torn loose, and which swayed back and forth as the August breeze felt its way softly through the open window. There was a closet overrunning with Spot's garments, and other clothes were thrown carelessly upon chairs and upon his trunk. There was a big goodsbox upon which was a tin washpan, a tin bucket which did service as pitcher, a soapdish, a towel and one of Spot's shoes. From the ceiling swung an electric bulb, which glared unabashed at its poor surroundings.

"This is our room," said Spot Stoner, emptying a chair of garments upon the bed that George might have a seat. "It's good enough for young fellows who are never at home, you know." Spot seated himself in the window, and George was impressed by his handsome face, his easy grace, and the skill he exhibited in keeping his hat upon the back of his head. "We clear out of here by six in the morning—you'll sweep out the store, you know, then go and hitch up the delivery-wagon, and hang around the store till we get there from breakfast—I'm the clerk there, till high school opens. Then you drive all day, put up the horse at dark, and hang around the store and close up, you know; and when you get here, you don't care whether you're treading on Brussels or pine. A man that works all day doesn't need exterior luxuries at night. It is such alleviations as these"—he drew a cigar from his pocket and offered another to George—"which tone up the inner man."

"Thank you, I don't smoke," said George.

"I'm not supposed to, either," said Spot. "But that's an advantage of rooming off here. It's true we can't have a fire in winter, as there's no flue; but we can make smoke just the same. Better try it. Pa would cut up if he found out I smoke, but he does it all the time, and I'm going to, when I'm a man. Half the good of being a man would be wasted if I didn't do the things other men do. Just take a whiff, and be lifted up among the stars!"

George declined this means of elevation.

"I'm afraid you're not going to be much fun," said Spot, looking at him doubtfully. "Still, I'd rather have a fellow just watch me smoke, than to sit up here alone over my cigar, as I've been doing. I guess you never take a dram, either?"

"Oh, no!" cried George, emphatically, beginning to feel uncomfortable.

Spot began to laugh. "Well, you are a little Paul Dombey!" he declared good-naturedly. "Nor play cards,

INDIVIDUAL Communion Cups

SANITARY COMMUNION OUTFIT CO., Dept. A Rochester, N. Y.

SEND FOR OUR FREE BOOK

Why do you permit a custom at the communion table which you would not tolerate in your own home? We will send a list of over 1500 churches where our Individual Communion Cups are used. Trial outfit free to any church.

either? Say! Let me show you. No harm up here alone; it's just for fun!"

"I can't do any of these things, Spot," said George simply, "for I promised my mother."

"Oh!" said Spot, staring. "Well, but you must just make her let you off. That's the way I do. I've promised the most unreasonable things to get out of trouble for the time being, you know; but ma comes 'round when she's forgotten about it."

"I can't be let off my promises," said George, "for mother is dead."

"Oh!" said Spot, staring harder, and beginning to drum upon the window-sill. Presently he said in a rather fretful tone, "Well, what can you do?"

George hesitated, while he tried to recall his accomplishments. "I'm afraid not much of anything," he finally confessed.

"You must be an awful bore to yourself," Spot observed with frankness.

George laughed. "Why, no, I am nearly always glad to be with myself. Oh, yes! I can swim. Can you?"

"Swim, nothin'!" retorted the other. "That's no sport. Have you ever handled the dice?"

"Certain not!" exclaimed George in real distress at these manifestations of worldliness.

Spot laughed. "Yes, I am an awful character," he chuckled. "You'd better not get too close to me, or you might catch something! Well; George, we'll get along in some way. There are plenty of fellows for me to have fun with. I can stand prosing with you the little time we'll be together at night. I hope you have some work clothes in your bundle; you'll ruin that suit driving old Poll around. Why! you're dressed up as nice as I am."

George unrolled his bundle and displayed blue overalls and a wide-brimmed straw hat. Spot began to undress, and George drew his chair under the light—there was no table—and began to read from a little book which his bundle had contained.

"What's that?" asked Spot, taking his cigar from his mouth to ask the question. He could not yet combine the accomplishments of conversation and smoking.

"I'm reading my chapter in the Bible," was the quiet answer.

Spot groaned.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

SELF-PRONOUNCING COMMENTARY ON SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS for 1904, by REV. J. M. COON, many years S. S. Editor The Standard, Chicago. HELPS right to the point. Small in size, but large in suggestion. Daily Bible Readings. Topics of Young People's Societies, with Benediction, etc. Pocket Size, 128 pages. Liner 25c, Morocco 35c, interleaved for Notes 50c, postpaid. Stamps taken. Agents Wanted. E. C. W. NOBLE, Lakeside Bldg., Chicago.

Bible College at Home.

Thorough courses by mail, leading to diploma and degree. Distance no hindrance. Students in every state and foreign country. Best testimonials. Catalogue free. Write C. J. Burton, President Iowa Christian College, Oskaloosa, Iowa.

Barnes Business College

BOARD OF EDUCATION BUILDING, ST. LOUIS, MO.

Established 22 years. Eight expert teachers. May we tell you what a business course with us means? And we'd be pleased to say something about our shorthand and Touch Typewriting course. We give personal instruction, and can offer advantages not to be obtained elsewhere. Catalogue free.

TEACHERS! TEACHERS!

We need a few more teachers at once for summer and fall schools. More calls than ever before. Schools supplied with competent teachers free of cost. Address nearest office. American Teachers Association.

J. L. Graham, LL. D., Proprietor,
1423 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.
11 Southern Express Bldg., Memphis, Tenn.

AMERICA FOR CHRIST

The American Christian Missionary Society calls attention to the vast need of our beloved country. Three-fourths of the land is missionary territory to us. Ours is the plea which presents the gospel as the power of God unto salvation. There never was a time when our plea was more gladly received or more productive of immediate results. In thirteen weeks, since the Detroit Convention,

21,229 Baptisms Have Been Reported

through regular channels. Add to this 1,459 who have come to us from the denominations, and we have a total of 22,688 additions in thirteen weeks, or an average of 1,745 per week.

We can be said to have firmly established the cause in but eight states. In nearly all the other states our cause is still in its infancy and can not live without help. More than $59,000 additional appropriations have been asked for already this year. This in the face of the fact that but $56,000 of last year's income was available for mission work.

The Home Board is asking of the brethren $200,000 this year, for pressing needs.

The Corresponding Secretary asks that this great work shall be given its rightful place in the hearts and the help of the brotherhood. The Board is planning wisely and broadly. They ask the preachers to join with them in a mighty forward movement. May is the date of concerted action. Shall we prepare for it? Write us your heart.

BENJAMIN L. SMITH, Secretaries
GEO. B. RANSHAW,

American Christian Missionary Society

Y. M. C. A. Bldg., Cincinnati, O.

Christian Publishing Company

1522 Locust Street

J. H. GARRISON, - - - - - President
W. W. DOWLING, - - - - - Vice-President
W. D. CREE, - - - - - Sec'y and Adv. Manager
R. P. CROW, - - - - - Treas. and Bus. Manager
G. A. HOFFMANN, - - - - - General Superintendent

I prize the Christian-Evangelist most highly.
E. M. GRIFFIS.

I have been a subscriber since 1865 or about that time.
MRS. E. A. TRAVILLION.

We can not get along without the Christian-Evangelist.
A. F. PERCY.

I enjoy your excellent paper more and more each week.
MARSHALL G. LONG.

I have greatly enjoyed, and thank you for the Christian-Evangelist.
A. R. WRIGHT.

Find enclosed $1.50. The paper is worth much more than it costs me.
T. H. TRAVIS.

We have been taking the Christian-Evangelist for twenty-five years.
Z. T. McANINCH.

I have to have the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. So much help to my family.
JOHN H. SHROPSHIRE.

I do not want to miss a number. I can't do without the Christian-Evangelist.
MRS. GEO. BRYAN.

To my thinking the Christian-Evangelist is the best paper in the brotherhood.
DR. E. C. L. MILLER.

I want to make a friend for the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST out of every preacher I can.
WM. W. SNIFF.

I like the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST very much. I enjoy its liberal principles so well.
MRS. FAY FINKLE.

I will do all I can to help you reach 10,000 new subscribers to the Christian-Evangelist.
F. M. GREEN.

As long as I can raise the money, I shall be a subscriber to the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST.
J. C. BOYER.

May the shadow of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST never grow less, but enlarge with the coming years.
LEWIS GOOS.

The CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, the best paper in the brotherhood, continues to make its weekly visits.
W. L. HARRISON.

I have been taking the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST for thirty-five years, and feel that I cannot do without it.
MRS. E. O. KEDWELL.

The Christian-Evangelist is a welcome visitor at my home. May this be the most prosperous year in its history.
E. D. MURCH.

I have been a reader of the Christian-Evangelist about thirty-five years. It would be a great loss to be without it.
A. D. WARD.

God bless the editor of the Christian-Evangelist, author, preacher and poet. May this be the best year of his life.
J. R. SHIE.

The CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST is just fine. I do not see how you can get it much better. God bless you in your great work.
W. T. ADAMS.

The last year of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST was the best year since I have taken it,

Fifty Years the Standard

DR. PRICE'S CREAM

BAKING POWDER

Improves the flavor and adds to the healthfulness of the food.

PRICE BAKING POWDER CO., CHICAGO.

and wishing the paper unbounded success, I am,
T. W. McDONALD.

The Christian-Evangelist grows better as it grows older, and I cannot do without it in my old days. May the good Lord spare you all for many years to carry on the good work.
MARY A. SAMPSON.

God bless the dear old Christian Evangelist that cheers me on my lonely journey. May its usefulness increase, its spirit be appreciated and its readers grow more Christlike.
MRS. S. M. GILIBINS.

We appreciate the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST very much. We wish you great success for 1904. We appreciate especially your liberal policy and your sound but progressive views.
JESSE LEWIS.

I have been taking the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST for twenty-six years. It was The Christian only when I first began taking it. I will use my best efforts to get others to subscribe.
MRS. V. A. LEWIS.

Please pardon me for not being more prompt in remitting. The CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST is the best paper published in the brotherhood, and it shall continue to make its weekly visits.
W. L. HARRISON.

God bless the dear old Christian-Evangelist. How it strengthens and cheers me on my lonely journey. May its usefulness increase. May its sweet spirit be appreciated and its readers grow more Christlike in my prayer.
S. M. GILIBINS.

I will do all I can in getting subscribers for the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, the best paper published among our brethren. May the paper always remain as pure and true to the Master's cause in the future as in the past, is the prayer of MARGARET LUDWICK.

The Christian-Evangelist improves year by year. I consider it the best paper among us. I like its spirit. Very seldom do I find an editorial utterance with which I disagree. I have questions, however, about how far we can go in the direction of federation. God bless your work.
O. C. ATWATER.

I have been taking the Christian-Evangelist for about fifteen years, and expect to take it the rest of my life. It seems to get better with every issue. It is the best paper that comes to my study, and I am taking six of our church papers. The Christian-Evangelist reaches me on Monday, so I have no blue Mondays. Will send you a nice list of new subscribers next week.
W. T. ADAMS.

The Christian-Evangelist continues to delight me. Its matter is well-arranged, well-printed and well-written. It is strong and gentle with the gentleness that is ever the companion and partner of strength. May the paper enjoy great prosperity in the future, and its present editors live long to bless a great brotherhood through its management!
H. D. SMITH.

Would like to say that I have been a reader of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST thirty-four years, and living away out here on the American desert where I have no church privileges, I greatly appreciate its weekly visits, and think it grows better every year. I hope Brother Garrison may be spared to us many years yet, for he is doing a grand work; his writings are so comforting to one like me that is aged and feeble.
MRS. W. G. PRICE.

THE CHRISTIAN- EVANGELIST

A WEEKLY RELIGIOUS NEWSPAPER.

Vol. XLI. No. 5.

February 4, 1904.

$1.50 A Year.

PAVILION FOR THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST,
LOUISIANA PURCHASE EXPOSITION,
ST. LOUIS, 1904.

GUY CRANDALL MARINER, Architect.

(See Page 163.)

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING CO. ST. LOUIS, MO.

The Christian-Evangelist

J. H. GARRISON, Editor

W. E. GARRISON, Assistant Editor

F. D. POWER,
B. B. TYLER, } Staff Correspondents.
W. DURBAN, }

Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year

For foreign countries add $1.04 for postage.

Remittances should be made by money order, draft or registered letter; not by local cheque, unless 15 cents is added to cover cost of collection.

In Ordering Change of Post-office give both old and new address.

Matter for Publication should be addressed to the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. Subscriptions and remittances should be addressed to the Christian Publishing Company. Unused Manuscripts will be returned only if accompanied by stamps.

News Items, evangelistic and otherwise, are solicited and should be sent on a postal card, if possible.

Entered at St. Louis P. O. as Second Class Matter.

What We Stand For.

For the Christ of Galilee,
For the truth which makes men free,
For the bond of unity
Which makes God's children one.

For the love which shines in deeds,
For the life which this world needs,
For the church whose triumph speeds
The prayer: "Thy will be done."

For the right against the wrong,
For the weak against the strong,
For the poor who've waited long
For the brighter age to be.

For the faith against tradition,
For the truth 'gainst superstition,
For the hope whose glad fruition
Our waiting eyes shall see.

For the city God is rearing,
For the New Earth now appearing,
For the heaven above us clearing
And the song of victory.

CONTENTS

Current Events.....	147
EDITORIAL:

Unconquered Land-IV. ....	149
Is it Preachable?.....	149
Editor's Easy Chair.....	150
Questions and Answers.....	150
Notes and Comments .....	151

CONTRIBUTED ARTICLES:

The Missionary Passion. C. T. Paul....	152
Are Our Public Schools Godless? Walter S. Hayden, Jr.....	153
Fortitude (poem). Walter Scott Whitaker.....	153
Our Education Day. F. D. Power.....	154
Books in the Home. G. A. Hoffmann....	155
Ecclesiastical Highwaymen. Stephen J. Corey.....	155
Our Western Letter. B. B. Tyler.....	156
Tramps in the Making. Harris R. Cooley .....	157

NEWS FROM MANY FIELDS:

New York.....	158
Ohio .....	158
Phoenix Letter.....	158
Washington State .....	159
St. Louis Letter .....	159
Virginia .....	159
Iowa Missions.....	159

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.....	160
------------------------	-----

MIDWEEK PRAYER-MEETING.....	161
-----------------------------	-----

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.....	161
-------------------------	-----

OUR BUDGET.....	162
-----------------	-----

CORRESPONDENCE

Retired With Honor.....	164
Dedication and Revival at Dayton, Wash.....	165
C. W. B. M. in Missouri.....	165
Bethany Assembly.....	166
Canton (Mo) Items.....	166
Dedication at Corydon, Ind.....	166
Dedication of First Christian Church, St. Paul, Minn.....	166
Ministerial Exchange.....	167
To Our Endeavor Societies.....	167

EVANGELISTIC.....	168
-------------------	-----

CURRENT LITERATURE.....	170
-------------------------	-----

MARRIAGES AND OBITUARIES .....	171
--------------------------------	-----

THE QUIET HOUR.....	171
---------------------	-----

FAMILY CIRCLE.....	172
--------------------	-----

WITH THE CHILDREN.....	174
------------------------	-----

Clean linen, clean, pure food and personal cleanliness are important requisites in the healing of the sick. On account of its purity, Ivory Soap is the best for the ward and operating room as well as for the hospital kitchen and laundry. It has been examined for germ life by microscopists and chemists and found to be free from impurities, and is now in use in hospitals, training schools and for general medical and surgical work, where the finest soap is required.

Reasons for not Going to Church.

The fact that workingmen seem to go to church less each year in England, has stirred many clergymen to find reasons for this fact. A pamphlet published by the Rev. Eric M. Farrar, son of the late Dean of Canterbury, has attracted considerable attention in London. He has collected nine reasons which he deduced from talks with numerous men in his parish. They are:

1. Because of their love of home, Sunday being the only day when many of them see their children awake.
2. Because they often have no Sunday clothes. (Mem.—I have often considered the fashion of Sunday clothes a device of the devil.)
3. Because there is so little welcome extended to the stranger entering church.
4. Because sermons so seldom touch on the subjects men are most interested in.

5. Because Sunday is the only day for recreation and social intercourse.

6. Because they are teased if they go by their comrades.

7. Because they have to stay at home to mind house and children if the wife goes.

8. Because they had too much of it as children.

9. Because they love the things temporal more than the things eternal.

This last reason was given by four of the men themselves.—New York Observer.

"Didn't you say there were accidents in that music?" asked Mr. Cumrox. "A great many," answered his daughter, who had musical ambitions. "Well, it's a great comfort to know that you were not doing it all on purpose."

THE CHRISTIAN EVANGELIST

"IN FAITH, UNITY, IN OPINION AND METHODS, LIBERTY, IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY."

Vol. XLI.

February 4, 1904

No. 5

Current Events

Most of the expressions which have found their way into print in criticism of the administration's Panama policy have either had a strong political coloring, or have at least been open to a suspicion to that effect. We are glad to be able to present a clear-cut and forcible statement on this side of the question by an eminent legal authority, who speaks as a lawyer and not as a politician in criticising the President's course in recognizing the Republic of Panama. Prof. Theodore Woolsey, of Yale, presents the argument on this side of the question in an article in The Green Bag. He summarizes his conclusions in the following statements:

- (1) The hasty recognition of a new state in Panama was not in accordance with the law of nations.
- (2) To justify it by the treaty of 1846, requires a new and forced construction of that instrument.
- (3) To prevent Colombia's coercion of Panama is an act of war.
- (4) The "man in the street's" verdict, that our smart politics served Colombia right, disregards law, sets a dangerous precedent, detracts from the national dignity, and may injure our influence and trade amongst the Latin-American states.
- (5) Our duty was and is to let Colombia recover Panama as she can; our policy, to use her troubles to get favorable canal action from the rightful sovereign.
- (6) Our recognition, if persisted in, makes of Panama a treaty-making agent, but for ourselves only.
- (7) The canal treaty negotiated and ratified by the Junta, with no constitutional authority or other authorization, is of doubtful validity, and the defect will need to be subsequently cured.

As our readers know, this statement by Prof. Woolsey is not in agreement with the position which we have taken in regard to the Panama matter. An inadequate criterion. It appears to us to be rather the verdict of a lawyer who is interested in the technicalities than of a statesman dealing with concrete problems. The same arguments which he adduces in criticism of our course in Panama, disregarding internal conditions and dealing only with formal principles, would have been valid arguments against our interference in Cuba, and against the interference of the powers in Macedonia. We are not presumptuous enough to undertake an argument with Prof. Woolsey about international law, but it occurs to us to remark in connection with his first paragraph that, since international law is not a matter of enactment but of precedent and common consent, the fact that all the other important governments followed our example in promptly recognizing Panama, very materially weakens the force of this criticism. The law of nations, like the laws of nature, is not so much an imperative mandate as a description of customary usage. If one nation takes the risk of establishing a new precedent and the other nations promptly indorse it, the transaction stands upon about the same basis, so far as the law of nations is concerned, as the other precedents which it superseded. Whether or not the actual conditions justified our government in so promptly recognizing Panama and preventing an invasion by Colombia, we are not saying in this connection. But what we do say is that our duty in the premises cannot be adequately determined without taking into account this factor, which Professor Woolsey omits.

The bill now pending in Congress to regulate the interstate transportation of intoxicating liquors, by preventing the nullification of state prohibition laws through the "original package" device, will not be passed without protest. Petitions against it are now being presented by hundreds. Pages of the Congressional Record are filled with the lists of these remonstrances. Where do they come from? That is the important point. Here, taken at random from a single page of the Record, are the names of a few of the organizations which protest against the proposed legislation. Judge for yourselves whether they represent American or foreign sentiment: Deutscher Krieger Verein, Freiheit Lodge, Turn Verein, Deutsche Bauern Lodge, Liederkrantz Singing Society, Germania Lodge, Plattdeutsche Verein, Deutscher Landwehr Maenner Verein, Arbeiter Liedertafel, Badische Saengerrande, Schwaben Unterstuetzungs Verein. The Germans make good, substantial citizens, and we are not passing any harsh criticism upon them as a class when we say that they need to be Americanized somewhat more thoroughly than the above list of names would indicate before they can completely represent the best American public sentiment. They were raised on beer in the Fatherland, and their opposition to legislation restricting the liquor business is based, not on any reasoned conviction, but on an instinctive hostility to whatever threatens to necessitate a change of personal habits. There is no justice in compelling this nation to remain in bondage to the beer-drinking customs which bear the mark, "made in Germany." Let the opposition of the bunds and vereins be duly discounted, therefore, and let those who have principles and convictions, and not merely habits, to defend, send in their petitions to their congressmen and senators.

Gov. Bates, of Massachusetts, in his recent inaugural address, made the following concise argument in favor of universal suffrage:

Do Women Want to Vote?

Women receive the benefits of our educational system. They outnumber the young men in all our schools, colleges and universities. Equally with men do they pay taxes and they are held equally accountable for infractions of the law. They are equally interested in the economical and efficient management of civic affairs. They should have the same right as men, if they so desire, to vote for those who are to represent them in that management—and that, too, irrespective of the question whether other women, similarly situated, desire to exercise that right.

This statement has called forth considerable newspaper comment both pro and con—mostly con. Nothing very new or very important has been added to the old discussion, but there has been a revival of the argument that women should not be allowed to vote because most of them do not want to. We are not posing particularly as advocates of woman suffrage (or equal suffrage, as its devotees prefer to call it), but it occurs to us that this argument from the indifference of some women, or even of the vast majority of women, is far less conclusive than is generally supposed by those who introduce it with the air of settling the whole question. If a hundred people have a certain right, and ninety-nine of them do not care to exercise it, the right of the hundredth is not thereby annulled. It is asserted, and truly, that the majority of women are not clamoring for the franchise. As a matter of fact, the extension of suffrage has seldom, if ever, come as the result of a clamorous demand on the part of those who are disfranchised—for one reason, because those who lack the franchise, lack the very means of raising an effective political clamor for that or anything else. The right of suffrage was not extended to the negroes because they expected it or wanted it or clamored for it. Whether or not the right of suffrage ought to be extended to women, is a question which we are quite willing to leave for wiser minds to settle. But it cannot be properly settled, or even considered on its merits, until we get away from that foolish and familiar non sequitur: some women do not want to vote; therefore all women are unfit to vote.

A coroner's jury in Chicago has for three weeks been receiving and sifting the evidence connected with the disaster at the Iroquois Theatre. As

The Coroner's Verdict. As the result of its investigation, it has found the following persons sufficiently implicated to justify binding them over to the grand jury: Carter H. Harrison, mayor of Chicago; W. J. Davis, president of the Iroquois Theatre Company; W. H. Musham, chief of the fire department; George Williams, building inspector; Edward Laughlin, assistant inspector; and three employees of the theatre. All of these, including the mayor, were compelled to furnish bond to avoid going to jail. The coroner's verdict passes a special criticism upon Mayor Harrison for his "lamentable tendency to shirk responsibility," and his "weak course and inefficiency," in the enforcement of law. This is rather startling. If city officials are to be held by the grand jury for the unforeseen results of their failure to enforce the laws, office-holding will lose its charm. Disastrous results are constantly following from the failure of city officials to enforce the laws. For example, there are few cities in the United States in which saloons are not doing business every night in violation of city ordinances, and from these saloons flows a stream of moral and physical ruin in comparison with which the loss of six hundred lives is almost insignificant, awful as that is. Mayor Harrison has been justly praised for promptly enforcing the laws relating to theatres, as soon as the Iroquois disaster had pointed out the danger, by closing the playhouses until they should make proper provisions for public safety. Yet he is held by the grand jury for not having enforced the law before the disaster. Is it not time to begin to enforce some of the other laws as well? When a man is killed in a saloon fight at two o'clock in the morning, when the saloon would not be open if the mayor and police were enforcing the law, might not a coroner's verdict hold the mayor responsible and hand him over to the grand jury as properly as in this present case, where only a building ordinance has been ignored?

The American Bible Society which has for eighty-eight years been doing, efficiently and successfully, a work in which all Christian people can co-operate — namely, circulating the Bible without note or comment — finds itself in danger of being seriously crippled from lack of funds. An appeal was recently sent out by the officers of the Society, and a second appeal signed by twenty of the most eminent men in the country has recently been published. After summarizing the work of the Society, this statement says: "To have circulated as it has done, seventy-two million Bibles, Testaments or portions thereof, is to have powerfully contributed to the moral health of the world. The social fabric of modern states has no surer foundation than the Bible, especially in a republic like ours, which rests upon the moral character and educated judgment of the individual. No thoughtful man can doubt that to decrease the circulation and use of the Bible among the people would seriously menace the highest interest of civilized humanity." This statement accompanied by the appeal for financial assistance for the Bible Society, is signed by the following men: Theodore Roosevelt, Grover Cleveland, Melville W. Fuller, John M. Harlan, David I. Brewer, L. M. Shaw, James Wilson, George B. Cortelyou, John Hay, John W. Foster, William P. Frye, John T. Morgan, H. C. Lodge, Thomas R. Bard, F. M. Cockrell, R. A. Alger, John Dalzell, Sereno E. Payne, John S. Williams, W. J. Bryan.

The meteoric career of Mr. Whittaker Wright has ended, as meteoric careers usually do, in ruin and tragedy. For a few years Mr. Wright's success as a promoter of vast enterprises was one of unprecedented success. Something usually happened to the enterprises to prevent the realization of the expected profits by the stockholders, but the promoter never failed to reap his ample share of the proceeds. The mere mention of the colossal enterprises which he has floated, and for which he found backers in the highest ranks of British society, makes a formidable list. From every one of them Mr. Wright made millions, while the investors lost millions, but he was always ready with a plausible excuse and a new scheme. The collapse of the London and Globe Corporation several months ago caused a great sensation, and for the first time Mr. Wright found himself unable to explain. Upon investigation, it appeared that he had deliberately wrecked the concern in order to profit by its ruin. Although this episode cost the stockholders ten million dollars, this is less than one-tenth of the total amount out of which the investors in Mr. Whittaker Wright's schemes have been swindled. He was charged with fraud, and last week was convicted and sentenced to seven years' imprisonment. Within an hour after sentence was pronounced, he fell to the ground unconscious and shortly afterward died. It is believed that his death was the result of suicide. Mr. Wright was the most daring, resourceful and successful swindler that this generation has seen. His final failure and disgrace are a more convincing sermon than any preacher could preach on the theme, "Wealth, and How Not to Get It." When the career of a man who seems to have been endowed with a perfect genius for rascality, ends in blank failure, it would seem that the rest of us, with our lesser talents, would better be honest out of sheer prudence, if from no better motive.

A Napoleon of Finance.

Harry Hawes, who is attempting to further his gubernatorial ambitions in Missouri by stumping the state in opposition to Folk, is never tired of asserting that Mr. Folk is not a Democrat. Mr. Folk does not agree with him on this point. By way of clinching his argument, Mr. Hawes recently asked in one of his speeches whether Mr. Folk would pledge himself to support with vote and voice whomsoever the party may nominate for governor. Is it necessary, then, that a man shall pledge himself to support every nominee of his party in order to be loyal to it? The affirmative of this proposition is an error fruitful of political evils. Every person in this state who reads the papers with common intelligence, knows that the leaders of the dominant party are divided broadly into two groups: one which is willing to pay the price of public corruption for personal and party victory, and one which stands for honest government in the interest of the people. No man can prophesy yet which of the two elements will control the nominating convention. And now the man who is the acknowledged leader of the element of honesty and reform is asked to pledge in advance his support to the yet unknown candidate of the party. He will not do it. He is too good a Democrat to bind himself to the theory that the party can do no wrong. He is the kind of a Democrat who believes that there is no place for a boodler in the Democratic party, and we have no doubt but that he will gladly agree to support any Democrat of that sort who may secure the nomination. But he will not stultify himself by supporting the sort of men whom he has been trying to put into the penitentiary.

Referring to Mr. Hearst's aspiration for the Democratic nomination for the presidency, Mr. Watterson says that Mr. Hearst is dead in earnest. Does he mean that Mr. Hearst is politically dead, in earnest?

Russia's reply to the last Japanese note has not yet been received. It is reported that it will be presented on Thursday of this week. It is announced that after Feb. 1, the trans-Siberian railroad will be closed to all ordinary traffic and will be reserved for military uses.

Unconquered Land.—IV.

The Creed, the Ordinances and the Life.

One of our definitive statements, in setting forth in what respects we are seeking to restore primitive, or New Testament Christianity, is, that we are aiming to return to its original creed, its ordinances and the life to which both creed and ordinances looked. This is an excellent generalization of the main things contended for in this Reformation as the Scriptural basis of that unity which was the primary aim of the leaders in the movement. It will not be denied, however, that there remains yet much to be done before there is a clear perception and full realization, on the part of the whole body of our membership, of what is involved in each one of these items. In the hope that we may contribute something to a clearer understanding, and higher appreciation of the value of our position, we propose an article on each one of the three features indicated above.

The Creed. Every tyro in the knowledge of our movement understands that the creed of Christianity, as we conceive it and present it, is Jesus Christ himself, whose Messiahship and divinity constitute the rock-truth on which our Lord declared He would build His church. The great question in the first century of our era, and in the twentieth century, was and is, "What think ye of Christ, whose Son is he?" Every thing in Christianity hinges upon that question. If He be not the Son of God, in a unique sense, who came into the world to reveal God's character and will to men, that fact would be fatal to his claim to be the Savior of all men and the Founder of God's spiritual kingdom in the world. If He be, indeed, the promised Messiah, and God's only begotten Son, then it follows that men's moral attitude toward Him is the determinative factor in their present religious status and future destiny.

If the Bible be "our rule of faith and practice," that rule directs us unmissably to Christ as the supreme object of faith. Both the Old and New Testaments have to do with Him—the former in prophecy and type, the latter in history and doctrine and institution. In vain do we seek eternal life in the Scriptures if we do not see and accept the Christ whom they reveal. To the Jews who rejected Him, Jesus said: "Ye search the Scriptures, because ye think that in them ye have eternal life; and these are they which bear witness of me; and ye will not come to me that ye may have life." The life is not in the Scriptures, but in Him of whom they testify. How much less, then, can eternal life be secured by the acceptance of any uninspired formulation of doctrine! Divine life can only come from a divine Person, and the faith that secures such life must lay hold on such Person. That much is clear.

Practical experience has taught us that there are some errors to be guarded against, which, accepted as truth, work out harmful results. One of these is, while stoutly denying any other article of faith in our creed than that confessed by Simon Peter, when he said, "Thou art the Christ the Son of the living God," to practically elevate some pet opinion of ours into a test of fellowship. We have seen recently the extent to which this error has grown in England and perhaps to a less degree in some English colonies. Nor are we without illustrations of the same subtle error in our own land. It is noteworthy, too, that this error is often committed by very conscientious people who are in bondage to their misconceptions. It is clear that if we are to make difference in methods of doing missionary work, or of conducting our public worship, or an opinion of any kind not fatal to Christian character, a test of fellowship, we have, to all intents and purposes, made a human creed which is none the less harmful in its effects for not being written out and formally sanctioned by a council. To correct this error by all kindly methods of instruction is, as we have recently pointed out, one of the pressing duties that lie before us.

Another error which we cannot too carefully guard against, and which is even more fatal in its effects than the one mentioned, though it may often co-exist with it, is to mistake the mere intellectual acceptance of a formula concerning Christ as the New Testament faith which has the promise of salvation. Nothing could be more fatal than this. There is no form of sound words that possesses any divine charm to heal a sinful soul by mere repetition. The confession of Christ, with the mouth, must be the expression of the sincere faith of the heart—a faith that loyally accepts Christ as Savior and Lord, and is ready to link the soul's fortunes with Him for time and eternity—if it is to be "unto salvation." It must be a loving faith, that prefers Christ to all the sinful pleasures of earth, and a loyal faith, that will follow where He leads. Preachers, teachers, parents, cannot take too great pains in giving the young and others instruction at this point. That confession of Simon Peter may be repeated in as purely a formal and intellectual way as any of the various creeds of Christendom. The people must be made to see that it is the personal Christ they are confessing and with whom they are entering into covenant relations, and not a mere formula.

It is a wonderful creed—this divine creed of Christianity. They reason without knowledge who think it a narrow creed. It comprehends all the truth there is in the Bible. It involves obedience to every command which Christ gives to His followers. It is large enough to furnish room for the soul's growth in knowledge through all time and eternity itself. But it must be vital. It must link the soul with Jesus Christ, in such a union that the believer becomes a partaker of the divine life, and grows up into Him who is the living head. Few of us, in looking back upon our ministry, can but feel regret that we have not laid greater emphasis upon this point, and taken more pains to guard those coming to baptism under our ministry against the error of supposing that their intellectual agreement with the doctrines we preached was the faith that fits one for baptism.

There is an important work to be done here by our colleges, our pulpits, our press, that this truth may stand out with greater distinctness in our literature, our preaching and our practice. This increased clearness and emphasis upon a vital point is only realizing and utilizing more fully one of the cardinal principles of the Reformation.

Is It Preachable?

One of the most suggestive things in Dr. Gordon's "Ultimate Conceptions of Faith" is what he says concerning the testing influence of preaching on certain theories and doctrines which have been handed down from the past. It is a very noticeable fact that a great change has come over the character of preaching within, let us say, the last half century. The pulpits are not uttering the same sentiments they once did. The preachers are not preaching exactly the kind of sermons they once preached, or which their fathers preached before them. As Dr. Gordon remarks: "This quiet surrender to silence, of bodies of divinity, found incommensurate with the light and the love generated in the heart of the preachers, is a large and a significant phenomenon."

The explanation of this phenomenon is, that the thought of the world has been widening "with the process of the suns," and this silent dropping out of certain doctrines and dogmas is due to the fact of their unpreachableness, in the new light that is shining out of and upon the Word. When any given dogma ceases to express the sincere conviction of him who preaches it, it has become unpreachable by an honest preacher. This accounts for the dropping out of the modern sermon of the old doctrines of predestination, election and reprobation; the old theories of the atonement; the doctrines of total hereditary depravity, as once held and preached; the utter passivity of man in the matter of his salvation; the arbitrary and literalistic views of heaven and of hell, which constituted the staple of sermons a quarter and a half a century ago. These are good illustrations of doctrines that have ceased to be preachable because they have ceased to express the honest convictions of the larger part of the ministry of to-day. There is a truth underneath each one of these erroneous doctrines, which has steadily grown until it has displaced, in a large measure, the error which concealed it.

There is no better way of testing our theology than of bringing it into contact with actual life. The theology that does not spring out of actual life, and is not a satisfactory explanation of that life, lacks the essential mark of reality. We suppose every preacher of experience has quietly dropped from his list of sermons certain outlines which he once used, because they no longer express his best thought, and have been found to be unproductive of good. Every preacher ought to be testing the quality of his preaching by its results, keeping in mind, of course, that these results may vary widely in their character, and yet be very helpful in building up the kingdom of God.

But we may rest assured of one fact, and that is that any doctrine or system of theology which we may hold that will not bear preaching, fully and frankly, just as we hold it, is lacking in reality or truthfulness, and should be abandoned. Any theory of church organization which, when put to the actual test, does not produce desirable results, may be safely relinquished. Every view which we may entertain and preach to our own circle, as to our religious position, which will not stand presentation in the very highest centers of religious thought, and the severest scrutiny and criticism, may well be regarded as unworthy of a place in our system of thought, and in our preaching. That which is not preachable is not tenable.

Editor's Easy Chair.

It is clear enough to all who have eyes to see, that the question of the relation between labor and capital is one of the most serious problems now demanding solution. We call it a problem, but after all, it is not so much the difficulty of knowing what ought to be done as getting people to do it. The Easy Chair does not profess to be a specialist on the labor question, and much less on the question of capital, but it has a few old-fashioned ideas as to how this question must be dealt with, and in what direction we must look for its ultimate solution. One striking feature of the Bible, which distinguishes it from almost every other book in the world, is the reiterated emphasis which it places upon the fact that God is on the side of the poor, the downtrodden, the weary and the heavy laden, and against all their oppressors. That is one truth to recognize in dealing with this problem. God has always championed the widow, the orphan, the neglected, and those whose opportunities in life have been most meager, and whose burdens have been heaviest. The strong, the rich, the mighty, are able to take care of themselves, and there are always those ready to befriend such. But if God and his people do not look after the weak, the unfortunate and the needy, who will do it? Let this fact be a pointer to us in studying the labor problem.

The principle above stated, demands that the church should have a vital interest in the so-called problem of labor and capital, and should study the subject with a view of giving guidance and assistance to those most in need of moral direction, sympathy and encouragement. The church cannot satisfy its conscience by saying that the masses of laboring men are alienated from the church. This fact, if it be a fact, does not dissolve the obligation which the church is under to champion the cause of those least able to look after their own cause. No doubt one reason why many laboring men have lost interest in the church, is that the church seems, to them at least, to have lost interest in their welfare. We believe the facts will show that there is far more alienation from the church, among laboring men, than from Jesus Christ and his religion. One audience, which hissed the mention of the church, cheered the name of Jesus, when it was uttered. This looks as if there was something of a chasm between the church and Jesus Christ. Perhaps if we should succeed in bridging that chasm, we would find it much less difficult to bring the masses of wage-earners into sympathetic relations with the church. If there be moral obliquity on the part of laboring men, as there no doubt is, even as among capitalists, and a failure to perceive that their highest interests lie in conserving those principles of righteousness and truth, of brotherhood and fraternity, for which we are indebted to Jesus Christ, there is all the greater need that the church, as the servant of Christ, should seek to give them the moral and spiritual guidance which they lack.

As a matter of fact, we believe there is more interest in the church to-day on this question, and more intelligent study of the problems involved, than in any previous age in the history of the church. The church has lost its leadership in moral and social reforms because of its unholy divisions and bitter controversies in the past, but it is rapidly outgrowing this narrowness, and is beginning to face the real work which it has been established here in the earth to accomplish. There is reason to hope that the next quarter of a century will witness a marvelous advance in the way of a peaceful settlement of the differences between labor and capital, through the application of the Golden Rule to our industrial life. We believe the present agitation looks in that direction. It cannot be that selfishness and greed will always be the ruling factors in the world, between man and man. Surely, those high principles taught us by the Man of Galilee must yet rule the world. The prophets of old, and our poets in more modern times, have foretold the coming of a golden age, when all men shall brothers be, and when mutual love and fraternity, rather than selfish competition, shall rule the world. Is this a vain delusion, or shall we look for its coming? The Golden Rule, applied to all our human relationships, will bring in the Golden Age. And because Christ is increasing in power, that blessed age is coming.

'Tis coming up the steep of Time,
And this old world is growing brighter!
We may not see its Dawn sublime,
Yet high hopes make the heart throbb lighter!
Our dust may slumber under-ground
When it awakes the world in wonder;
But we have felt it gathering round!—
We have heard its voice of distant thunder!
'Tis Coming! yes, 't is Coming!

'Tis coming now, that glorious time
Foretold by Seers, and sung in story.
For which, when thinking was a crime,
Souls leaped to heaven from scaffolds gory!
They passed. But lo! the work they've wrought,
Now the crowned hopes of Centuries blossom!
The lightning of their living thought
Is flashing through us, brain and bosom:
'Tis Coming! yes, 'tis Coming!

'The World will not forever bow
To things that mock God's own endeavor.
'Tis nearer than they wot of now,
When flowers shall wreath their swords forever!
'Tis coming, yes, 'tis Coming.

'Fraternity, Love's other name!
Dear, heaven-connecting link of being:
Then shall we grasp thy golden dream,
As souls, full-statured, grow far-seeing:
Thou shalt unfold our better part,
And in our life-cup yield more honey:
Light up with joy the Poor Man's heart,
And Love's own world with smiles more sunny!
'Tis Coming! yes, 'tis Coming!"

Questions and Answers.

Is there any other manifestation of the Spirit's work now, than that contained in the apostolic writings?—PREACHER.

If not, why should anyone pray, or preach, either, for that matter? There is no longer, according to the theory that would answer the above question negatively, any direct communication between heaven and earth, between God and the human soul. All divine influences must come through the ancient writings. This is directly opposite to the promises of the Holy Spirit in the New Testament, especially those made by Christ, and it is contrary to Christian experience. Every devout, praying Christian is conscious of having come into direct touch with God in prayer and in service, and has received unmistakable evidence of the divine strength and approval. Read the 14th, 15th and 16th chapters of John's gospel, and compare with these chapters the Acts of Apostles, and then your own Christian experience.

The brother who asks this question has had the most remarkable experiences of the Holy Spirit's help in his work, but has been troubled of late by a work on the Holy Spirit which has suggested the question. Let no human speculation on this subject override the clear testimony of God's word and the testimony of our own Christian experience.

In what new sense did the Holy Spirit come after Pentecost?—A READER.

Christ's life and death, His resurrection from the dead and His ascension to the right hand of God, opened up a new chapter in the history of God's revelation, and made possible such unity between God and man as to cause the Holy Spirit to enter into a new and unique relation with men. With the faith, the hope and the love gained through this glorious gospel, it was possible for men to receive the Holy Spirit in a measure in which they had never received him before. He comes after Pentecost as an indwelling guest to strengthen, to comfort, to communicate a larger life and love, and to promote spiritual growth and development into the likeness of Christ. This is why it is said (John 7:39): "But this spake He of the Spirit, which they that believed on Him should receive: for the Spirit was not yet given; because Jesus was not yet glorified." It was the glorified Christ that would give the Holy Spirit, and He would give it through the faith made possible through the process of His glorification.

Whereas the Sunday-school Helps have well-nigh driven the Bible out of Sunday-school and church, would it not be well for our papers to make an effort to restore the Bible to its rightful place as the text book in the hands of Sunday-school teachers and pupils?—J. P. DAVIS.

How far the Sunday-school Helps have had the effect suggested above, we are not prepared to say. We are sure, however, that the habit of taking the Bible to the Sunday-school, and of using it, by both teachers and pupils, is one to be greatly commended. It is no part of the design of Sunday-school Helps to dispense with the Bible in Sunday-school, and superintendents and teachers should see to it that they do not have this effect.

Does the word anaxios, translated unworthily, have an adjectival as well as an adverbial force in 1 Cor. 11:27, and does the examining of verse 28 refer to verse 27, or to the life of the communicant?—J. J. HUNDSAKER.

The word "unworthily," we think, refers to the manner of partaking, and has an adverbial rather than an adjectival force. The examination, or proving, as we have it in the Revised Version, of the following verse, refers primarily, we think, to the manner or spirit in which we partake, as suggested in verse 27, and refers to the life only so far as that may be involved in such examination. The main thing is to discern the spiritual meaning of the Lord's Supper, and to partake of it in the spirit of thankfulness, and of penitence for our own shortcomings.

Notes and Comments.

Many devices are recommended for building up a Sunday-school. But the first requisite is to stop the leaks. Where are the ten-year-olds who were in your Sunday-school eight years ago? Are they still there? Are twenty percent of them there? If so, yours is an exceptional case. If not, there is a problem to be solved.

Ministers who are afflicted with a multitude of petty announcements which they are expected to read from the pulpit, and who feel that this intrusion of irrelevant matters into the hour of worship is becoming more of a nuisance than a convenience, may find a suggestion in the following episode. In the days of President McCosh at Princeton, it was customary to have all manner of college notices read during the chapel service. The notices multiplied. The religious exercises were in danger of being crowded out. The President was in despair. One morning he included the following petition in his chapel prayer: "Dear Lord, bless this college of Princeton, and confer thine especial blessing on Prof. Karge's class, which meets this morning at 9:30 instead of 10:30."

The Sunday evening service, Dr. John Watson (Ian Maclaren) has recently suggested, should be made different from the morning service by the use of a manual of worship containing printed forms of prayer and by lectures on the Bible and social problems in place of the sermon. Dr. Watson is usually wise, but we doubt the wisdom of this advice. Conditions differ in different places, but in most churches the Sunday evening service offers the best opportunity for purely evangelistic effort. To make it merely a quiet, reposeful service, or to reduce it to an occasion for imparting useful information, is to do less than the greatest service. Make it rather the time for an active gospel campaign. Sunday morning, comfort and edify the saints. In the evening, convert the sinners. The two services will then fit together perfectly, for sinners are often converted by hearing the saints exhorted, and the saints are always strengthened when sinners are converted.

Our letter notifying the leading religious papers of the country of our Anniversary Number, reached the office of the Sunday-school Times, in Philadelphia, just a few days after the death of its distinguished editor, Dr. Henry Clay Trumbull, who for twenty-eight years had been editor of that valuable publication. We have a note from his son, C. G. Trumbull, who succeeds his father as editor, explaining the delay in responding and adding: "Although I presume that any word now will be too late to be of any service for that issue, will you not permit me, in this informal way, to convey my own personal greetings to you, and to assure you of my hearty interest in your paper and of my sincere wishes for your own continued success and prosperity." We reciprocate most heartily these kind personal greetings from Mr. Trumbull, and would express our very high appreciation of his able and distinguished father, both as an editor and author, and of his great usefulness to the cause of our common Christianity. May the son prove a worthy successor to the noble father in the responsible position to which he has been called.

Bro. Fred Rowe, in the Christian Leader, recently made this sagacious remark: "The strongest argument you can make against wrong methods in mission work is to go forward and do it in the right way." That, in our judgment, is the wisest utterance that has been made in many a day, relative to the legitimacy of missionary societies and other "human devices" for advancing the Lord's work. The proof of the pudding is in the eating, and the proof of a missionary method is in its working. The Lord certainly cannot be pleased with any system of evangelization which does not evangelize. Those of our churches which use the Foreign Christian Missionary Society as their instrument for collecting and disbursing money for foreign missions, expect to raise a quarter of a million dollars for that purpose this year. We shall be heartily delighted if the churches which the Christian Leader represents will adopt Brother Rowe's suggestion and do a work as much greater than this as their method is, in their judgment, more apostolic.

The Philadelphia Press, with its accustomed enterprise, contained in its first issue of the new year, a symposium on the question, "Does the new year find the world growing better?" The writers represent clergymen, presidents of colleges, editors and other prominent religious workers. The general tone of the answers is decidedly optimistic. Some of the writers draw the shade a little darker than others, but on the whole there is a decided conviction that this old earth of ours is steadily, if slowly, rolling out of darkness into light. There is no attempt to disguise the fact of sin and wrong doing in the world, nor, on the other hand, is there a disposition to underestimate the mighty recuperative and regenerative forces that are at work for lifting up humanity to higher intellectual and moral levels. This work might proceed much more rapidly if there were a wiser concentration and conservation of spiritual forces, and a deeper consecration on the part of the church to its sublime mission of extending, and incorporating in the life of mankind, the principles of the kingdom of God.

The Missionary Passion By C. T. Paul

Principal Fairbairn defines Christianity as the "contagion of the divine life." This is true subjectively, for we are made partakers of the divine nature. Objectively it is true. The cause of Christ has progressed in proportion as his followers have been thrilled and actuated by his enthusiasms. God through Christ communicates himself to the believer, that the latter may mediate God to a sinful world. The motive power of all the mighty deeds and triumphs of the church has been this divine contagion, burning as a sacred fire in the Christian heart, laying hold of and sanctifying every faculty of the soul, and expressing itself, by its own irresistible impulsion, in sacrificial love and service for mankind.

Jesus, who was the very incarnation of this divine contagion, saved others but could not save himself. From the beginning to the end of his ministry he wrought the will of God under the all-compelling sway of a spiritual necessity. "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" "I must work the works of him that sent me." In the call and training of the Twelve he seeks to empty their hearts of all else that there may be room only for the holy purposes that he would infuse into them. They are to forsake all and follow him; they are to put the kingdom of God first; and in the great commission, instinct with all the solemnity of his crucifixion and mighty with all the power of his resurrection, he lays upon them and upon all the church with and after them, the sublime and universal necessity of disciplining the whole world.

This divine contagion is the missionary passion which glowed in the hearts of the apostles and early Christians. Ask Paul for the secret of his earnest ministrations and his wonderful missionary journeys, and he will say, "The love of Christ constraineth us." "Woe is me, if I preach not the gospel." There was in the gospel an inherent expansiveness which, outflowing from the heart of Jesus, at length possessed the disciples and sent them forth in the power of Pentecost to turn the world up side down and set it ablaze with Christian love.

All missionary effort, all missionary lives, all missionary movements are inspired by the communication or rekindling of the divine enthusiasm in some heart or hearts. "Trace back the history of any mission epoch to its source," says Dr. Lawrence. "You will find that it starts simply in some fresh religious experience, the instinctive outcome of which, unless hindered by special causes, must always be a longing for the expansion of Christ's kingdom." Eusebius tells us how Constantine, harassed and worn, marching against Maxentius, saw in the sky the form of a cross with its wondrous inscription, "In hoc signo vinces!" Be the vision as it may, this much is certain, that into the heart of the emperor there came a passion for the Christ that spiritualized his conquests, resulting in the downfall of Roman paganism and the imperial recognition of the Christian religion. It was the passion of the cross that kept Boniface well-nigh half a century amid our barbarian forefathers in the Teutonic forests, that sent Patrick into Ireland to plant churches on the ruins of Druidical cromlechs, and Columba among the warlike Picts to build his missionary school at bleak Iona. The same passion led Ulfilas to spurn courtly dignities and devote his life to the untutored Goths, giving them the word of life in their own tongue, as it led Cyril, the philosopher, and Methodius, the artist, to perform a similar service for the degraded Slavs.

From Carey and Moffet to Livingstone and Mackay, from Judson and Morrison to Paton and the martyred Chalmers of the South Seas, this passion has in modern times thrust forth into the harvest fields of the world a glorious host. So truly have modern missionaries caught the spirit of their Lord that to nearly every one of them may be applied what Lewis Morris in his "Vision of Saints" wrote of the seraphic Henry Martyn:

"And, being a pure saint, like those of old,
Abased himself and all the precious gifts
God gave him, flinging all before the feet
Of him whose name he bore,
The thought of God
Filled him with infinite joy; his craving soul
Dwelt on him as a feast, as did the soul
Of rapt Francisco, in his holy call,
In blest Assisi—
He knew how swift the night should fall on him, and burned
To save one soul alive while yet 'twas day."

Looking forward to the March offering the Disciples of Christ have their "vision of saints" too, and as the vision passes, dear and familiar faces of those far away return and provoke our questionings. What snatched Dr. Macklin from professional emoluments in America, set him down in a filthy Chinese city and kept him there for all these years, throbbing out his pure and faithful life amid the unspeakable sins and loathsome diseases of heathendom? The contagion of the divine life. He would save others, he cannot save himself. What lured the youthful Faris and his bride to the fever-infested Congo to dwell in the lonely hut in Bolengi, imperiling their lives in the dank miasma of the African wilderness, in the attempt to carry Christian sunshine into dark African hearts? The enthusiasm of the Christ. What heals Dr. Rijnhart's deep sorrows, and takes her back radiant with hope to the distant Tibetan border to labor for her husband's murderers, and what prospect in such a mission can appeal to the health and vigor of young Dr. Shelton and his cultured wife? The cross is the attraction. Why this unrest in the soul of G. L. Wharton? Why can he not settle down in a pastorate amid the fellowships, comforts and needs of the home work? Has he not seen enough of the jungle, the famine and the scourge? The missionary passion explains it all.

Suppose this missionary passion should lay hold of all our preachers and churches at home; suppose the extension of the kingdom of God in all the earth were to become the supreme ambition, the dominant enthusiasm of all our activity; suppose the zeal of our Lord's world-wide commission were so to consume us that we would devote all our powers and means to its fulfillment, counting our business and our profession merely as accessories to the one great end, as Carey did. Then, indeed, like Carey, we could expect great things for God. Then we should see "what a million disciples can do" and the sight would be marvelous in our eyes, for the possibilities of this passion are far beyond our dreams.

The missionary passion will not take us all to the foreign field, but it will make us one in heart and sacrifice and labor with the servants of God in the uttermost parts of the earth; it will increase our gifts so that where we have given cents we shall give dollars, and where we have given dollars we shall give tens, and tens will grow into hundreds, and our hundreds into thousands. It will wrest from us our costly spikenard boxes, and the benediction of the widow's mite will be multiplied a thousand fold.

What better preparation for the March offering than a seeking on the part of all our churches to be refilled with the enthusiasm of Jesus, with his love for God and his yearning for the salvation of men? If we would receive this gift we must come anew to the giver, we must have a fresh experience of the impact of Jesus himself.

We must get behind all motives in mission work to Christ, the motor and energizer of all our vitalities and activities. "Not the command of Christ, not the love of Christ, not the glory of God, not the peril, or guilt, or possibilities of souls, no one of these alone is the great constraining force, but Christ himself in the fullness of his being." If, like Zinzendorf, we can say, "I have but one passion and that is He, only He," that passion must needs express itself in such vicarious lives as characterize the followers of Zinzendorf to this day. Upon our response to the claims of Jesus, there will easily follow as one small fragment of the result, the raising of a quarter of a million for foreign missions.

Are Our Public Schools Godless

By Walter S. Hayden, Jr.

Again and again one meets the assertion that our public schools are not only Godless, but that the moral training afforded by them is entirely inadequate. Recently a prominent Roman Catholic prelate reiterated the statement and declared that the time had come for the Roman Church to claim its share of the public money for the support of its own parochial schools. Roman Catholics, he said, could not conscientiously send their children to schools where the moral training is so defective, and should not be compelled to help support them. For years Roman Catholics have been using all their influence to exclude the Bible from the schools, even objecting to its being read without comment by the teachers. This effort, which has been seconded by the influence of many freethinkers, atheists and infidels, and by some Jews, has been successful in many cases. Teachers and school boards have been terrorized into forbidding all use of the Bible in the school-room, and this in places where the vast majority of the patrons of the school are Protestants and heartily in favor of an unsectarian use of the Bible in the moral instruction of their children.

Amidst all this outcry against the schools, many Protestants are becoming bewildered. They feel the force of the argument that a merely secular education is but a half education. They see religious instruction being pushed out of the school curriculum and they wonder if our public schools are really becoming Godless institutions. This state of bewilderment and uncertainty is just what the Roman hierarchy desires, and seeks to foster. When the public mind is in a state of dissatisfaction with the situation as it is and of uncertainty as to what ought to be done, then persons with definite convictions and a definite program of action usually carry things their way, even though they be in a minority. This is the hope of the Roman hierarchy; this the purpose of a large part of the talk against the public schools.

The same prelate whom I quoted above expressed the hope that ere long the church that discovered America might claim the country as its own. But it can never succeed in that hope until it secures possession of the schools. When a few years ago Dr. McGlynn, of New York, was excommunicated he began to go about the country lecturing and revealing the plans which the Roman Church entertained concerning our public schools. This continued until it began to be so damaging to the church that the leaders became reconciled to Dr. McGlynn, received him back into the church and gave him back the parish from which he had been removed. Dr. McGlynn returned, declaring that he would not retract anything which he had said, but from that time until his death his mouth was closed on the subject. No one, however, who is familiar with Roman Catholic policy in other countries or who has watched the trend of recent events, can doubt the purpose of the church to control legislation, the purse and the system of public instruction in its own interest.

This purpose can be successfully met only by intelligent and united Protestant action. One of the first needs is information as to what the public schools really are accomplishing in moral training, and what can rightfully be expected of them. Parents who never give a thought to the moral training of their children in their own homes and who habitually allow them to run wild without discipline or restraint, can scarcely complain if public school teachers do not work miracles with them.

It is a fair question whether many of the defects of moral training charged upon the schools do not in reality have their root in defective home training. The Outlook has recently performed a public service by securing statements from a large number of college presidents as to the moral character of the young people who come from the public schools to the colleges as compared with that of those who come from private and church schools. The results were distinctly favorable to those coming from the public schools.

Those who had the rare privilege of attending the meeting of the Religious Education Association held in Chicago last winter will remember that several of the addresses bore upon this subject. One of the ablest was that of President Henry C. King, of Oberlin College. Speaking from the standpoint of the psychologist, he showed that the public school was a great factor in moral training, even when all positive religious instruction was omitted.

The most powerful factor in religious and moral education is personality. The personal, moral character of the teacher is more powerful for good or ill than the presence or absence of formal religious instruction. The larger part of the influences that enter into the formation of moral character are indirect and work through unconscious imitation. Put noble men and women with high ideals into our schools as teachers and the results cannot but be good, whatever the restrictions on formal religious teaching.

President King also showed the great value of the public school as a training school in democracy: equal rights, equal opportunities, the absence of all snobbishness, every one to stand on his own merit. This is the spirit of the public school, and it is impossible to estimate its value for the moral life of the children of the nation. In this connection it may be remarked that the newspapers report the English education commission to have been overwhelmed with astonishment at finding the children of President Roosevelt in the public schools side by side with the children of ordinary mechanics and laboring men. But this is a part, and a very valuable part, of the moral worth of public school training. President King laid great emphasis on the need of home training, and those present will remember the applause and enthusiasm which greeted his statement that we needed to go back to the old-fashioned chores in the training of our boys and girls. They supplied a means of moral discipline utterly wanting in many a modern household.

There is a strong disposition manifest among the great religious leaders of the Protestant churches and educational institutions to insist on the use of the Bible in the public schools as a foundation for simple and unsectarian instruction in ethics and morals. This sentiment found expression in the address of Prof. Coe, of the Northwestern University, when he said that we had been gaging our religious instruction in the public schools by the men who had fewest ideals, but that it was time we listened to those who had most ideals. This statement was received with great applause.

The time is ripe for the formation of a definite Protestant program on these matters. In the Religious Education Association we have a powerful executive agency through which to speak if we wish to use it. It is time for Protestants to forget their jealousies and sink their differences and speak with one voice. No influence can resist the united and intelligent demand of the Protestants of this nation.

Fortitude.

Walter Scott Whitacre.

What care I for the winds that blow,

The storms that sweep the sky?

However fierce the gales, I know

They all will soon pass by.

What though the wintry air is cold?

What though the flowers are dead?

The spring will come, the flowers unfold,

And beauty round me spread.

Why should I fear the storms that rise

On life's tempestuous sea?

However fierce the gale, the skies

Will clearer, calmer be

Whenever it has spent its force

And passed upon its way,

And smoother, straighter, be my course

Toward life's perfect day.

Our Education Day

By F. D. Power

This important day was duly observed at the Vermont Avenue Church, Washington. No service of the year has seemed more universally acceptable. There can be no question as to the importance of the subject, or the duty of the church in regard to it. There is no higher office than that of the educator of youth, and the sovereign educational force in the world is Christianity. The Supreme Teacher is the Teacher sent from God, and the common school and the university are alike the offspring of the faith that was preached in Judea. Greece, with all its culture, genius and learning, had no such institutions. Rome, with all her liberal arts and her fair humanities, her literature, philosophy and law, could not claim them. Christianity alone seeks to quicken and expand the minds of the humblest, and has filled the world with millions of schools and laid the foundations of its ultimate civilization. Whatever else is true, the supreme educational force of the world appears in this system of faith which came by peasants as its ministers and the Son of a Carpenter as its sovereign teacher.

Never was the obligation of the church to this cause more pressing than it is to-day. We are facing two perils—over-education and one-sided education. There never was such giving to this cause. Carnegie, in a single year, 1901, gives $10,000,000 to Scotch universities, $10,000,000 to the Carnegie Institute at Washington, $7,000,000 to technical instruction in Pittsburg, $4,000,000 to benefit the Carnegie employees, and several millions to libraries—over $40,000,000. Mrs. Stanford gave $30,000,000 to Leland Stanford University, and Mr. Rockefeller gave six or eight millions to Chicago University. Since Solomon set forth that "to know wisdom and instruction; to discern the words of understanding; to receive instruction in wise dealing, in righteousness, judgment and the equities; to give subtilty to the simple, to the young man knowledge and discretion, that the wise man may hear and increase in learning and that the man of understanding may attain unto sound counsels," is beyond everything the most suitable field of human effort, it may be granted that to confer on future generations something more precious than gold is the noblest charity.

But is there no danger that a country may become burdened with an unproductive class who look with scorn upon those whose education has been merely in the art of bread-winning? Is there not a peril, when higher education develops no special talent, that men will be helpless in the struggle for existence and will become foes of social order, blaming the system for their difficulties in making a living? Then there is the training, which leaves out of consideration the moral and spiritual and looks purely to the intellectual and the utilitarian. It is a serious question whether it profits the state to have thieves that can write and cipher, talk French and German, or read Greek and Latin. One of our governors the other day declared education to be a curse to one of the races which forms a large part of the population of that commonwealth. Certain it is, there is an education that is destructive rather than constructive, that educates and acuminates the mind and leaves the soul an untilled barren, that ignores the capacities and desires of the spirit for immortality, that regards man as a lump of organized matter with no claims upon him beyond those of time and sense.

What is the work of the church here? She must use her influence to make education both practical and Christian. With advanced secular education we find a generation rising about us without God in their thoughts. Rationalism is in the air. Materialism has entrenched itself mightily. Ecclesiasticism would tamper with the public schools. The saloon is a great educator of youth. The church must see that education is Christian. "Moral education is the bulwark of the state," said Fenelon. "To educate in the arts is important, in religion is indispensable," said Webster. "To make popular education truly good and socially helpful, it must be fundamentally religious," said Guizot. Christianity must be in the fountain heads. Christian morality, Christian conceptions of God and man, of man's duty toward God and toward society, and of the duty of nations toward nations, are the foundations of our civilization. Christianity is, and always has been, part of the common law of the state; and our institutions shall not perish so long as the Christian idea is pre-eminent. But forever and ever we must insist that the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom, that the Bible is the greatest of text books, that the highest of all teachers is the Teacher of Nazareth.

Is not this in harmony with our national history? On the shores of Massachusetts Bay, John Harvard started his young college in 1636 for the education of the English and Indian youth of this country "in knowledge and godliness." Its overseers were charged with furthering the college "in piety, morality, and learning." Among its rules was this: "Every one shall consider the main end of his life and studies to know God and Jesus Christ which is eternal life." Its motto was "Christo et ecclesiae," the motto chosen by the Christian Endeavor Society, "For Christ and the Church." William and Mary, our second institution, was started with the same thought. When the pioneers of the Old Dominion in 1693 asked for "a college," the Lord Chancellor said: "Let them raise tobacco!" "The Virginians have souls to be saved," was the answer. William and Mary granted the charter. The fruits of this seed-sowing are seen in over five hundred chartered Christian colleges.

What are we doing to forward this cause? Here are the public schools. "Agnosticism and infidelity in every possible form are being instilled in the minds of the young in our public schools," some one has said. I do not believe it. I know scores of public school teachers and with one or two exceptions they are all Christians. Nineteen college presidents were recently asked: "Is any difference noticeable in the moral character of young men who come from the public schools, and that of those from denominational, church, or other schools?" and their testimony is almost unanimous as to the high moral character of our public schools. If there be any truth in the accusation brought against these institutions, all the more necessary that Christian people should be alive to the great interests of education. Yet from January to December, in how many pulpits and prayer-meetings do we hear the petition: "O Lord, bless our public schools; remember all schools and colleges; preserve, inspire, and sanctify all teachers of youth; quicken our people to a just appreciation of their duty to the great cause of education."

Most of all, the church needs to be interested in her own schools. At the basis of all our work lies education. Jesus begins with a school and twelve pupils, and is three years training them for their high service. The church needs educated men and women for her pulpits, her missions, her schools and hospitals and orphanages. The supreme need is for trained workers. The way to secure this force is through culture—Christian training. This is basal, fundamental, indispensable. With what care and at what cost the nation trains her young Grants and Farraguts. West Point and Annapolis are busy every year drilling many of the brightest lads of the land, developing them under the most effective educators that can be found, training them in body and mind that they may be fitted to lead her armies and navies. This for carnal conquest, for Santiago and Manila Bay. The church has a greater cause under a mightier Captain. The church must have her fighters ready, chosen like Paul because gifted and strong, drilled and equipped for their high calling. We have our Bethanys and Drakes, and Hiram and Butlers, and Kentucky Universities and Eurekas. Let us pray for them, cherish them, give to them, honor and serve them.

Books in the Home.

By G. A. Hoffmann.

All the publishing houses among the Disciples of Christ are owned and controlled by individuals or private companies. The money invested in them has been accumulated by the strictest economy and greatest self-sacrifice. Disciples of Christ owe a debt of gratitude to the men who have so faithfully borne the burden of editing and publishing our periodical literature and writing our books. With very few exceptions our business men have invested no money in this great and worthy enterprise of the church. The denominations often contribute thousands upon thousands of dollars, and every minister takes a delight in, and feels honored, that he can act as agent for the literature of his church. He says it is the best pastoral work that he does. He has the matter of Christian literature in the home on the right basis. The minister places a first class religious journal into every home, and doubles his ministry by so doing. More periodical Christian literature is needed in the home, in order that his preaching will be understood and appreciated and his ministry become far more effective.

The greatest need in our homes, however, is more good books setting forth the plain teaching of Christ. Several years ago the writer was asked to deliver an address on the literature of the Disciples of Christ at one of our state gatherings. Before speaking we asked a number of ministers how many books published by the brotherhood they had at home in their studies. Almost thirty responded. Three acknowledged they had none. Five said from three to six copies. One about fifteen, one about thirty and the rest from eight to ten copies. The very best and most important works were often lacking in this meager supply of books. Instead of filling the homes of their congregations with the books which would bring truth to the hearts of the home, some of our ministers even lack these works in their own libraries. The books of our publishing houses cannot be sold through local book stores. Their value to the home must be presented by the ministry of the church, and any preacher who would place the sale of religious books on the same basis with the secular, or who would not carefully guard the homes of his people against the bad in literature, and encourage them to secure the best writings of the church, is far from making the best use of his time, or rendering the best service. The best and most useful men all recognize this as true.

Now, allow me to particularize just a little here and say that such books as "The Peoples' New Testament," a commentary on the whole New Testament, by B. W. Johnson, should be in the home of every Christian worker. Then there is McGurney's commentary on Matthew and Mark; Milligan on Hebrews, Lhamon on Acts and Lamar on Luke, all worthy a place in the home of every student of the Bible.

Then there are the works of A. Campbell. To be without these is to acknowledge that you have but little interest in the cause with which you claim to be identified.

Then there are some of the splendid biographies, such as the "Life of John Smith," "Men of Yesterday," and "Life of A. Campbell," by T. W. Grafton.

Then we come to the two great books—"The Reformation of the Nineteenth Century" and "The Old Faith Restated," edited by J. H. Garrison. These are indispensable to an intelligent Disciple. No library is complete without Everest's "Divine Demonstration," or Milligan's "Reason and Revelation."

And yet hear me again on some great doctrinal books, such as Milligan's "Scheme of Redemption," "The Office of the Holy Spirit," by Richardson, "The Living Pulpit" and "The Fundamental Error of Christendom," by W. T. Moore, "Walks About Jerusalem" and "Helps to Believers" by Errett and "Form of Baptism" by Briney. These are great books.

But pardon me, my brothers. There are "Helps to Faith," "The Heavenward Way," "Half-Hour Studies at the Cross," "Alone with God," and "A Modern Plea for Ancient Truths," by J. H. Garrison. Time would fail me to mention all our other books which ought to be in the homes of our people. There are the missionary books, the books of sermons, and the books to lead the thoughtful to Christ; such as "Mary Ardmere," "Hugh Carlin," "The Great Legacy," and scores of others, so helpful, so essential, so readable and at the same time so easily secured. Write us and we will help you. You shall have any of these on the best of terms from the Christian Publishing Company.

Ecclesiastical Highwaymen.

By Stephen J. Corey.

I have recently received the list of worthy preachers published by the Iowa brethren. Their plan has been to protect the churches of their state against impostors by circulating a list of the good men. The effort is surely to be commended. During the last six months I have had the humiliating and unsuccessful experience of trying to revive two churches killed by unworthy preachers. It indeed makes one's heart ache to go into these places and see the havoc wrought amongst God's flock by a wolf in sheep's clothing. The evil done is simply beyond measure. I do not believe there is a crime in the category of human sins baser than the wrecking of a Church of Christ by an immoral and time-serving scoundrel who calls himself a preacher of the Word. A highwayman is a gentleman in comparison with such an inhumanly hypocritical and blasphemous plunderer. How a man with such iniquity in his heart can pose as a preacher of the gospel and an ambassador of Christ, is beyond the conception of an honorable man. A murderer kills the human body, but he who maliciously wrecks a church, tramples under foot the very bride of Christ and sends many souls perditionward. He blights the moral tone of a whole community, drags into open shame a sacred and holy cause, and does it all under the cloak of one of God's messengers. One sad part of it is that the churches are, in part, at fault in this matter. A man, sleek, affable and a good speaker, with self-endowed recommendations, will drop in on some small church and captivate his unsuspecting hearers. The church, without looking into his previous career, or asking the advice of the state officers, forthwith calls the man and the mischief begins. We need a dispensation of stern, summary treatment for such men; a dispensation of jealous watchfulness for the welfare of the churches. We must learn that he who defiles the church, defiles the temple of God, creates anarchy in the spiritual kingdom, turns traitor against highest heaven, and makes himself a fiend in the garb of a saint.

WELL POSTED

A California Doctor With 40 Years Experience.

"In my 40 years' experience as a teacher and practitioner along hygienic lines," says a Los Angeles physician, "I have never found a food to compare with Grape-Nuts for the benefit of the general health of all classes of people. I have recommended Grape-Nuts for a number of years to patients with the greatest success, and every year's experience makes me more enthusiastic regarding its use.

"I make it a rule to always recommend Grape-Nuts and Postum Food Coffee in place of coffee when giving my patients instructions as to diet, for I know both Grape-Nuts and Postum can be digested by anyone.

"As for myself, when engaged in much mental work my diet twice a day consists of Grape-Nuts and rich cream. I find it just the thing to build up gray matter and keep the brain in good working order.

"In addition to its wonderful effects as a brain and nerve food, Grape-Nuts always keeps the digestive organs in perfect, healthy tone. I carry it with me when I travel, otherwise I am almost certain to have trouble with my stomach." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Strong endorsements like the above from physicians all over the country have stamped Grape-Nuts, the most scientific food in the world.

There's a reason.

Look in each package for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

Our Western Letter By B. B. Tyler

The founder of the Christian religion was a mechanic. He was the reputed son of a carpenter. His mother was a peasant woman. Joseph and Mary were working people. In this world's goods they were poor. Jesus was spoken of by his contemporaries as the carpenter. He associated with the common people. His companions were those who lived the life of the lowly. The purse-proud of his time looked upon him with indifference or contempt. They regarded his claims as preposterous. Not many noblemen received him as the Messiah. Those whom he first attached to himself were working-men. The first preachers of his religion were fishermen. They reached and influenced men who moved on their plane of life. A number of men and women who lived in comfort, some persons of wealth even, became disciples of Jesus; but they were the exception. Generally, in the apostles' age, those who received Jesus as the Son of God, and who trusted in him for salvation, were men and women who toiled. There were many who thought of Jesus as a man who would bring in better social and economic conditions. They did not understand the spiritual purpose of his mission. At one time an effort was made to place him on a throne, by force. If he would only consent to reign as king he, in a short time, would deliver them from their oppressors. This was their thought. So they would take him by force and make him their king. John the Baptist, even, could not understand his delay in assuming kingly authority. He, therefore, sent a committee to inquire if he were the coming One. The principles enunciated by Jesus, as well as the life that he lived, served to thoroughly identify him with the unfortunate of the race, with the outcasts from society, and with the oppressed. The condition of the workingman when Jesus was on the earth furnished a problem, to say the least, quite as serious as the problems of the workingman today in our own fair and prosperous America.

The attitude of Jesus toward the bread-winner, the wage-earner, cannot be doubted. Read his text when he appeared in the synagogue in Nazareth. Read his sermon on the hill. Run over his isolated sayings. Procure a copy of the "Red Letter New Testament," and in a few minutes read every word that came from the lips of the Master, and that has come down to us, and discern, as you read, the Spirit of Christ in respect to domestic, social and economic problems. Then remember the saying of St. Paul: "If any man hath not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his."

The Church of Christ is imperfect. It has always been so and pretty certainly will continue to be imperfect in its conduct to the end. Why? For the obvious reason that it is composed of fallible men and women. A hundred million fallibles will not make one infallible. It is easy to find flaws in the life of the church. A man with but small talent can do that. To abuse the church is not evidence of either superior talent or piety. A fool who is a blasphemer, can do that.

But with all the imperfectness of the church, it is to-day, as it was in the beginning, as it has been through the ages, upon the whole, the friend and the helper of the man whose lot in life is hard. The church is not composed of rich men. Here and there, now and again, is a person of wealth a member of the church; but generally, church members are persons who are compelled by circumstances to earn their bread in the sweat of their face.

My ministry began in 1861. I have served in the pastorate office at Charleston, Ill., Terre Haute, Ind., Frankfort, Ky., Louisville, Ky., and New York City. These congregations were, and are, composed of working people. I have also gone among the churches as a herald of the good news. I have been an evangelist as well as a pastor. I have never come into touch with a congregation of rich people—never. For every person in the churches with which I have worked who, by even an elastic use of the word rich, can be characterized as rich, there have been ten with whom the effort to secure shelter, raiment and food, has been continuous and strenuous, week in and week out, month after month and year after year. There is not a person in the South Broadway Christian Church, Denver, the congregation which I now have the honor to serve as pastor, concerning whom I have a right to believe that he is worth $50,000—or near that amount. There is only one family in our church the members of which are not wage-earners—and the head of this one family works more than eight or ten hours a day, works six days in the week, works twelve months in the year. He has no vacations.

I am proud to serve such congregations as I have served—as I now serve. It is an honor that any man may well covet—to be the spiritual teacher, adviser, counselor, helper, of the sons and daughters of toil. The church, I repeat, in Denver, and elsewhere, is composed of such persons and is their friend and helper.

It ought not to be necessary to affirm that wage-earners have a right to organize for mutual protection and assistance. This, however, that there may be no possible misunderstanding, I affirm. This affirmation, moreover, is made without hesitation, mental evasion or equivocation. It would be an anomaly in society, as society is now constituted, if bread-winners did not organize for mutual protection and assistance. I not only affirm, and affirm heartily, their right to organize, but in the same manner, and to the same extent, I affirm their right to strike, i. e., to discontinue work when they desire higher wages, shorter hours, or better sanitary or other conditions. Such persons as those of whom I speak have a right to good wages, even the best their employers can afford to pay, reasonable hours, and as good sanitary conditions as can be obtained. If these cannot be secured without a strike—THEN STRIKE. I believe, therefore, in the organization of working men; I believe, under certain conditions and for certain reasons, in strikes.

But the organizations in which I believe, and with which I am in sympathy, have no right to compel men to join them. This they would not do, not attempt to do, if they were controlled by real workingmen; but they are not. They are, to a large extent, controlled by men who make money by exploiting the laborer. It would be a pleasure to me to believe that Sam Parks is an exceptional character among the leaders of workingmen; but he is not. Long before Sam Parks was heard of I had reason to believe that there were such men in high positions in labor organizations. My information came from the inside and from persons who held official positions. I am not indulging in romance. Again and again good, true, reliable, Christian men have told me in Colorado, in the city of Denver, that they have been compelled to join a labor organization. It was that or hunger for themselves and those dependent on them. Do not tell me that my brothers lie! They are men of veracity. They are men whose word is as good as any man's oath or bond.

My indignation in the presence of this unAmerican and unChristian conduct is intense. My protest is as earnest as it is possible for my nature to utter a protest. It is made against the oppressor, and the oppression of the man who works with his hands for a stipulated wage. It is made because I am the pastor of this man—because I believe in and love him. He is my brother. We sustain such a relation to each other that he comes to me in fullest confidence with his story of oppression and suffering. It brings tears to my eyes as I recall stories to which I have listened, and the really heroic characters of some of the sufferers. My information was not obtained from books, but from association, intimate, constant, confidential, with men who earn their bread with the labor of their hands. I KNOW WHEREOF I SPEAK.

The men who strike have no right, neither legal nor moral, to interfere with men who desire to work. EVERY

(Continued on page 171.)

Tramps in the Making.

By Harris R. Cooley.

Director of Charities, Cleveland, O.

With our progress in productive power and wealth has come the tramp. The same causes produce the idle, purposeless traveler inside the Pullman, and his counterpart on the trucks underneath the car. These tramps and vagabonds are, after all, human. Alleys were once fresh. Every degenerate, begrimed tramp was once a child, fair, prattling, hopeful. To know all the path up which the feet have walked would often substitute pity for contempt.

Every recurring period of financial depression, every industrial storm casts upon the shore this social wreckage. In the first stages of development, incipient trampism is again appearing to an alarming degree.

With lack of employment, the weak, crippled and less efficient are first crowded out of the ranks of industry. Men with defective sight or hearing, with only one leg or one arm, men handicapped by old age or weakness of body or mind—these are coming in large numbers seeking employment or public relief.

With our present methods, many of these weaker members of society are thrown into the so-called criminal class. They form one-tenth of the population of our workhouse. To-day has been pardon day, and the following are some of the cases which came before us:

Joseph Schmeth, an Austrian, a strong young man, 20 years of age, came to this country six months ago, leaving his father and mother in the home land. He worked three months in the iron mills near Pittsburg, and was then thrown out of employment and drifted to Cleveland in search of work. He wandered about the city for eight days, and then gave himself up, asking to be taken to the workhouse. He had been locked up for two months.

Thomas Fogarty is 38 years old, and came from Ireland when a boy. He evidently had less than ordinary ambition and ability. He said he was knocked out of work early in the fall, and had not been able to find anything else. He did not want to go outside during the cold weather, as he was afraid he would be worse off than in prison.

Christ Uhlmer is a stalwart German, 56 years old. He has been in this country twenty-two years, and has worked as a stone-cutter's helper. When asked in regard to his family, he replied: "My woman ish dead." He had gone to the Central police station, said he had no work and no home, and wanted to be sent to the workhouse.

Joseph Aubeler, an Austrian, 38 years old, a skirtmaker by trade, and a man with a fine, intelligent face, had also found the workhouse a refuge.

In his broken English he said: "I no got work."

Mike Gonaski, a young Polish man, 26 years of age, had been in this country a year and a half. He had worked for some time in the mines near Pittsburg, but was thrown out of employment, and started west, riding on the train as far as $3 would carry him, this being all the money he had. Then he walked for two days and reached Cleveland. Seeing a warm stove in one of the rooms of a steel plant, he went in to get warm. He understands nothing of our language and our ways, and was arrested for violating the property ordinance, and for this had been locked up in prison for six weeks.

George Berger, an able-bodied German, had been in the workhouse for a month. He had asked to be arrested because "he had no place to go, and did not want to make a board bill with no money to pay." He had formerly worked on the railroad, but had been out of employment for six weeks.

This present unusual manifestation of lack of employment and vagrancy is probably but the beginning of more serious conditions which will eventually crowd even some of the stronger and better equipped into the tramp class. They are the direct and indirect victims of unjust social and industrial conditions. They have been deprived of natural birthrights in the earth, and of the opportunity to earn a living. In our consideration of the social question, we have given attention to the fabulous fortunes and the special privileges of the rich, and have neglected the more serious side of the unprivileged and the disinherited. It is not so much that a few obtain great fortunes, but that so many are debased and crushed by these conditions. With solemn emphasis the great Teacher culls his followers to thoughtfulness and ministry even to "one of the least of these" weak, sick, poor or imprisoned ones. The words of Jesus express not only a pleasing sentiment, but the only rational method of permanent social development. The motive in our present problem should not be envy of the unbounded riches of a few, but a human sympathy for the misery, wretchedness, vice and crime into which, on the other hand, these "mounded heaps" of wealth crowd the weak and the poor. We cannot have a privileged class unless we also have an unprivileged class. We cannot make one man a master unless we make other men slaves. We cannot adjust social conditions so that some men receive fabulous, unearned incomes, and live in luxury without working, unless we compel other men and women to work in misery without living. While some utterly unproductive men wander in idle extravagance upon the earth, some other men will tramp in idle poverty. This is a social law as fundamental as the law of gravitation. We may not be able to trace in every individual case each step in the working out of this fundamental law, but we see its unmistakable effects in the present crowding of the less efficient and weaker members of society into the vagrant class.)

Notice to Bible-School Workers.

The Board of "The National Bible-School Association" of the Christian Church, appointed at the Detroit Convention, will hold its first conference in St. Louis, Feb. 11, 12. This Board was appointed "to recommend to a general meeting of the Bible-school workers of this land to be held at the time of our next general convention in the city of St. Louis in 1904 any change or modification of plans for the advancement of Bible-school work that may be deemed wise and expedient." At the conference Feb. 11 and 12 the Board will be glad to consider any suggestions that may be offered by any of the Bible-school workers of the brotherhood. If you have any advanced ideas send them to the secretary, Charles M. Fillmore, Carthage, O., and they will be considered by the Board.

DIDN'T BELIEVE

That Coffee Was the Real Trouble.

Some people flounder around and take everything that's recommended to them, but finally find out that coffee is the real cause of their troubles. An Oregon man says:

"For 25 years I was troubled with my stomach. I was a steady coffee drinker, but didn't suspect that as the cause. I doctored with good doctors and got no help, then I took almost anything which someone else had been cured with but to no good. I was very bad last summer and could not work at times.

"On Dec. 2, 1902, I was taken so bad the doctor said I could not live over twenty-four hours at the most and I made all preparations to die. I could hardly eat anything, everything distressed me and I was weak and sick all over. When in that condition coffee was abandoned and I was put on Postum, the change in my feelings came quickly after the drink that was poisoning me was removed.

"The pain and sickness fell away from me and I began to get well day by day, so I stuck to it until now I am well and strong again, can eat heartily with no headache, heart trouble or the awful sickness of the old coffee days. I drink all I wish of Postum without any harm and enjoy it immensely.

"This seems like a wonderfully strong story, but I would refer you to the First National Bank, the Trust Banking Co., or any merchant of Grant's Pass, Ore., in regard to my standing and I will send a sworn statement of this if you wish. You can also use my name." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Still there are many who persistently fool themselves by saying, "Coffee don't hurt me;" a ten days' trial of Postum in its place will tell the truth and many times save life.

"There's a reason."

Look for the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in each package.

News From Many Fields

New York.

We have received a copy of the Home Missionary Year Book. It is the best yet. Our secretaries are to be highly commended for this indispensable compendium of useful knowledge. Send in your twenty-five cents for the Home Missionary; the Year Book issue is worth far more than that.

Our great problem in New York state is the problem of funds. We have many splendid openings where we cannot enter because we lack any visible means of carrying on the work. All the money we have in sight is already placed in some work. We have just made a personal appeal to several business men and women of the state to combine their efforts and give one hundred dollars each to put a strong man in an exceptionally promising field, until the work is self-supporting. Already we have received several answers guaranteeing the $100. This will greatly enhance our missionary work in the state.

Have been examining the plans for the new building to be erected by the First Church, Elmira, where C. C. Crawford is pastor. It will be of stone and one of the best equipped and handsomest structures we have in the state. The church is fortunate enough to secure the stone practically without cost, except the hauling from the quarry.

The Second Church, Brooklyn, is in a good meeting with home forces, the pastor, Joseph Keevil, doing the preaching. Several additions have resulted so far.

F. O. Fannon will hold a meeting with W. D. Ryan, of Central Church, Syracuse, in February. They are making great preparations and expecting great things.

Our State Bible-school superintendent, W. D. Ryan, has just completed a plan for increasing the Bible-school offerings for state work. Each school is asked to set aside a month (preferably February) in which they will work on an offering for New York missions. The plan will not interfere with any regular work of the school. Each class will be given a missionary album to be filled with coins. A collector will be appointed from the class for each week, and at the end of the month the whole amount collected in each class handed in for state work. It is hoped this method will result in a large offering from the Bible schools.

W. G. Oram, of Kensington, Brooklyn, reports the work as beginning very favorably in that new field.

The 169th Street Church, New York City, where S. T. Willis is pastor, seems to be enjoying a season of marked prosperity since the dedication of their new building. There are continued additions to the membership and an increased interest. This church has a vigorous mission under its own supervision.

Your correspondent is in a meeting at West Side, Elmira, with twelve confessions so far. Last night Brother Otto, the pastor, baptized a grandfather over eighty years old and his five grandchildren. Will begin with C. C. Waite at Upper Troy Jan. 31.

The anniversary issue of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST is the best yet. Our brotherhood is proud of such a representative, up-to-date and readable paper. May its influence increase with every issue.

Many of the churches have not yet sent in their offering for state work. Remember that the convention comes the last of June this year, making the missionary year short. Let each congregation take a good offering as soon as possible—at least before convention time. Next fall it is hoped that practically all of the churches will be in line for "State Day," the first Lord's day in November.

STEPHEN J. COREY, Secretary-Evangelist.
Rochester, N. Y.

Ohio.

O. G. Blackwell held a week's meeting at Nashville, but had to close on account of a smallpox scare in the community. He has accepted a call from New Vienna for half-time preaching. There were three baptisms at Nashville.

C. R. Oakley is assisting Chas. Darsie in a meeting at Paulding.

Brooks and Kendall have been storming the fort at Bellefontaine. They have had great audiences and about 75 additions at last report. The Bellefontaine Church is coming to be one of the best in the state. W. T. Groom is the much beloved bishop of Bellefontaine.

Steubenville is after the sinners with Percy Leach, of Iowa, as evangelist. Brother Moninger held a week's meeting at La Belle View Mission, with several additions.

J. H. Bristol has taken possession of the parsonage at Shelby, and will minister to the saints who are called Christians only in that municipality. He will make things go.

Robert Chapman, of North Eaton, is assisting Chas. Pierce in a meeting at Calion. This is in exchange for the meeting held at North Eaton by Brother Pierce last fall.

W. L. Denslow has resigned at Rushsylvania to accept the work at New Berlin, where T. A. Flemming recently preached.

Wellsville is in the midst of a meeting. W. S. Gamboe of the Blue Grass state is doing the preaching. The Wellsville Church recently increased the stipend of their faithful pastor, W. C. Prewitt.

Brother Pittman, a student of Bethany College, held a successful meeting at the East End Church at East Liverpool, during the holidays. The debt of $1,000 on the building was recently provided for. This is a new and flourishing church.

John E. Pounds is now at Chicago assisting Lloyd Darsie in a meeting at the Jackson Boulevard Church.

There were 61 confessions reported at the Cleveland preachers' meeting last Monday. A very well-prepared review of Brother Aylsworth's book, "The Spiritual Aspect of Baptism," was presented by Brother Edgar D. Jones. The review provoked a very interesting and helpful discussion. If you have not read this book yet, get it of the Christian Publishing Co., and read it. The daily press brings the news of another flurry in the courts over the pernicious oil business. When will preachers let speculation alone and attend to their business. This scribe has been solicited by another concern located in Illinois, the past week, that looks like another get-rich-quick scheme. Let the preachers be careful. Money is the root of all kinds of evil.

The church at West Mansfield is looking forward to a fine meeting with S. J. White, of Bowling Green, as preacher. Brother White was once pastor at West Mansfield. I. J. Cahill was laid up for some days with the grippe. His pulpit was supplied Jan. 17 by A. Skidmore, of East Liberty.

T. L. Lowe, of Athens, is the preacher in a meeting at Washington, C. H., where W. H. Boden ministers.

A missionary rally will be held at Toledo Central, Feb. 3. This will be followed by a meeting with home forces.

M. L. Bates is now located at East Orange, N. J., and will be the living link of the Warren Church.

J. Cronenberger leaves Ashland, Feb. 1, and will go to Clarksville, Ga., for his wife's health, and will organize a church there. B. C. Piatt, of Eureka, Ill., will become pastor at Ashland.

C. A. FREER.

Collinwood, O.

Phoenix Letter.

Just at this time Phoenix is enjoying (nit) an unusually sharp breath from Boreas. Frost and ice—the latter fully as thick as a knife-blade—have been quite in evidence. Fingers and ears have been tingling with the old-time tingle, almost. With the exception of one day the usual smile of Old Sol has beamed upon us, but it did not seem to reach us with its wonted force, and we have been driven to seek comfort in the glow of commonplace stoves of the sheet iron variety, which remind us unpleasantly of a class of professed Christians who are alternately hot and cold and not very steady on their spiritual legs on account of their light weight.

Phoenix enjoys a perennial harvest time. Spring, summer and fall we gather in the fruits of garden, orchard and field; in winter we "take in" the tourists. And this we do "without regard to race, color or previous condition of servitude." But they seem to enjoy it, and return regularly from winter to winter. Between 9,000 and 10,000 people from all parts of the country winter in and about Phoenix each succeeding year.

Among those prominent in the Christian Church who are here this winter are Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Philpott, of Buffalo, N. Y.; Mrs. Prewitt, of Winchester, Ky.; Mrs. Lockman and daughter, of Centerville, Ia., sister and niece of Gen. Drake, lately deceased, Brother Stephens, of Iowa City, Ia., and others, all of whom are regular attendants upon the Sunday morning services of our church. I have felt it a benediction to enjoy this close contact with the cultured and sweet-spirited Philpott, and only regret that the state of his health robs me of the pleasure of hearing more of his beautiful and most helpful sermons. While his physicians insist upon absolute rest, they are not without hope that a time spent in this great natural sanitarium will serve to fully restore his impaired vitality; a consummation devoutly to be hoped for and prayed for by all who know the value to the cause of Christ of so cultured and able a minister of the gospel. If we are deprived of the sermons of the husband we are not without compensation, for at not infrequent intervals we are privileged to listen to the inspiring songs of the no less cultured wife.

Christian Church, Belle, Mo.

R. B. Havener began work here one year ago in an arbor. Church organized. Sixty additions. Over $1,500 raised for a house. Building committee, Dr. I. M. Owens, Chas. Paulsell and E. A. Wallace. Just before dedication Bro. Havener held another meeting with 43 additions. On dedication day $600 was raised and congregation freed from debt. The property is worth $2,500 and is the best Protestant church in the county.

The past year, all things considered, has been a prosperous one with the Phoenix Church. Substantial gains were made along all lines. The new year opens up with encouraging prospects. At this writing we are in a meeting twelve days old. The writer commenced the meeting on the 10th inst. and was joined by Bro. Grant K. Lewis, of Long Beach, Cal., on the 20th. There were eight additions the first week, four of whom were baptized. There is a quiet but growing interest and we are hoping for a successful revival.

W. H. BAGBY.

January 22.

Washington State.

The Dayton meeting closed with 159 additions, 105 by primary obedience. Brother and Sister Stephens are now at Davenport, and we may expect great results there.

J. T. Eshelman is now in a meeting at Ellensburg in their remodeled house.

A. C. Vail and the Webbs are leading the hosts at North Yakima and a great victory is assured.

E. E. Davidson is holding a meeting at Oakesdale, where a fine new church was recently dedicated.

Geo. L. Snively, secretary of the Benevolent Association, was a welcome visitor to the Pacific Coast this month. It is hoped that he may meet with willing helpers in this practical form of church work wherever he may go.

A Baptist minister, Brother Logan, took membership with the Central Church, Tacoma, last Sunday, and will henceforth, be satisfied to be known as a Christian minister. He comes with good testimonials from his brethren in the Baptist Church.

The writer announced that he would close his work with the First Church, Feb. 1, but the church has made such strong protest that he has reconsidered the matter and will continue. The year 1903 was one of the most prosperous in the history of the church. The missionary offerings were greatly increased, the church debt paid and 106 added to the membership—42 by confession and baptism. We have had nine additions since Jan. 1, five baptisms last Sunday evening. There is a great field here and sufficient aggressiveness and liberality with love and loyalty will give us a leading place in this city in a few years. A modern building on a suitable corner lot is much needed if we would accomplish the most good and keep pace with the rapid growth of the city.

Tacoma.

MORTON L. ROSE.

St. Louis Letter.

The work of the Christian churches of this city was never in better condition than at the present time. Our people generally are awake to the monumental task that is before them during this year.

Bro. W. H. McClain, the general chairman of the coming convention, is already stirring up his committees to the importance of the work intrusted to them. His work is thoroughly organized, and whenever Brother McClain organizes anything, it is organized to count.

Many of our people outside of the city do not fully understand about our hospital and Mothers' and Babies' Home. This is an institution under the management of the Christian Church. It is located at 2821 Lawton Ave. Mrs. C. R. Teas of the Compton Heights Christian Church is the efficient president, and Mrs. O. C. Shedd of the same church is the treasurer. Committees from the various churches of the city look after the work of the home. This home has been in existence four years. Has cared for 910 babies. Has given temporary shelter and found employment for almost 400 needy and deserving women of all creeds. Has placed 105 babies in excellent homes. Has no endowment. Has now 40 babies and 20 women, a matron, 10 nurses and 9 sick adults under its care. Is

Get the Most Out of Your Food

You don't and can't if your stomach is weak. A weak stomach does not digest all that is ordinarily taken into it. It gets tired easily, and what it fails to digest is wasted.

Among the signs of a weak stomach are uneasiness after eating, fits of nervous headache, and disagreeable belching.

"I have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla at different times for stomach troubles, and a run down condition of the system, and have been greatly benefited by its use. I would not be without it in my family. I am troubled especially in summer with weak stomach and nausea and find Hood's Sarsaparilla invaluable." E. B. HICKMAN, W. Chester, Pa.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills

Strengthen and tone the stomach and the whole digestive system.

doing a kind of relief work that no other institution in St. Louis is doing. Expends $400 per month for rent, coal, groceries, provisions, baby food and other supplies. Since Aug. 1, the rent on the building we occupy has been increased $30 per month."

It can be seen from this statement that help of various kinds can be rendered by those outside of the city. Mothers know what can be used in a Mothers' and Babies' Home. Any thing that can be used will be accepted with thanks. Ladies of churches who would like to have a part in this beautiful ministry can fill boxes with all such articles as may be used in such a place and send to Mrs. O. C. Shedd, 4011 Pine Street, and they will be acknowledged and duly credited. If any family would like to adopt a baby, all they have to do is to let our ladies know what they want, and if it is not in the Babies' Home, the application will be sent to the Orphans' Home, where it will receive immediate attention. We hope visiting brethren, and especially sisters, will drop into our Babies' Home to see what we have. We are sure that if they ever make one visit to it, they will become interested.

We had a great foreign missionary rally at the Central Church last Monday. We think Brother McLean was happily surprised. Our people in St. Louis have on their working clothes, and we propose to show the United States and the rest of the world that we know how to do things.

F. N. CALVIN.

Virginia.

J. J. Haley, of Cynthia, Ky., began his work in Seventh Street Church, Richmond, on the first Sunday in January. Already he has made a number of friends, and the people are delighted, both with the man and with his strong sermons. Brother Haley and this historic church seem to be well mated and should do a splendid work for the cause of primitive Christianity in this good city.

S. G. Sutton has accepted a call to Gethsemane and began his work on Jan. 10. Gethsemane is our strongest country church, but has been without a regular pastor for more than a year. Brother Sutton is one of our successful workers, and will give a good account of himself in this important field.

We are sorry to chronicle the fact that R. E. Elmore has resigned at Tazewell. Efforts are being made to have him reconsider and remain at Tazewell, but Brother Elmore thinks he has taken the wise course. He will enter upon evangelistic work, and will likely work under the V. C. M. S.

E. J. Willis has accepted a call to Bristol. Brother Willis is well-known because of his good work in Kentucky. We welcome him to our Virginia work.

Charlottesville has extended a call to R. Lin Cave, of Atlanta, Ga. It is not known whether he will accept.

Martinsville? Sunday-school [will] give one-tenth of its collections this year to state missions. W. H. Hook is the wide-awake minister at this place.

The state board has secured the services of T. G. Linkons, as evangelist in New River District. H. D. Coffey, who has worked two years in New River, [will] be transferred to South Piedmont.

Manchester, where C. O. Woodward ministers, will give nearly $100 to state missions this year.

S. A. Morton, of Crewe, has been unable to preach the last few Sundays. He has now recovered and is at his post again.

H. P. Atkins, loved by all our Virginia people, is conducting a two weeks' meeting with his church, West End, Richmond. He is preaching a series of discourses on "Saints and Sinners."

P. A. Cave, of Third Church, Richmond, will hold a meeting in 30th Street Church, Newport News, in February.

W. C. Wade is visiting churches in the Valley of Virginia. He will likely be called to the field made vacant by the resignation of W. C. Cocke.

H. C. COMBS.

Iowa Missions.

L. W. Spayd, of Illinois, has taken the pastorate of the church at Long Grove, Ia.

T. R. Hodgkinson has taken the work at Sloan.

J. C. Jacobs will preach half time for the church at Irwin.

F. W. Mutchler has a unanimous call to continue with the churches at Urbana and Prairie Creek the fourth year. They have remodeled the church at Urbana and will have the reopening Sunday, the 24th inst. Brother Milton Wells, of Wisconsin, who was a former pastor, is expected to be with them. Brother Mutchler has wrought a good work at both churches.

Prof. C. O. Denny supplied the pulpit at Ottumwa Jan. 17. J. M. Bailey, the pastor, is holding a meeting at Grand Detour, Ill.

Statistic cards were sent to all of the Iowa churches the first of January, about one-third of which have been filled out and returned, and others come in on every mail. No church should fail to respond. Many of the congregations are revising the lists of members and will report as soon as the lists can be made ready.

The new year brings good news to the friends of Iowa missions. The church at Centerville becomes a Living Link church for Iowa missions, and beginning January 1 will support an I. C. C. (Iowa Christian Convention) evangelist. We have had individuals who supported evangelists, but Centerville is the first to become a living link church. We expect to have three other congregations join the list within the next two years.

B. S. DENNY, Cor. Sec.

GIVES A LIGHT
THAT RIVALS ELECTRICITY
IN BRILLIANCY

STUDEBAKER ARC
PRESSURE LAMP
(700 Candle Power)

THE BEST AND CHEAPEST
LIGHT KNOWN

This Lamp has been approved
by the National Board of Fire
Underwriters, and its use
is permitted by all
Insurance Companies without increased
rate

It is simple, safe and strong, produces a perfect white light, cannot clog up, is easily cleaned, and can be hung anywhere or used as a standing lamp. With one-half gallon of gasoline burns 10 to 12 hours, at a cost of one-half cent per hour. Agents wanted in every city and town. Active men may obtain exclusive territory. Write for catalogue and prices. Address

STUDEBAKER GAS LIGHTING CO.
1101-1103 E. 9th St. Dept 6 Kansas City, Mo.

The Sunday-School.

Feb. 14.

JESUS FORGIVES SINS.—
Mark 2:1-12.

Memory Verses 3-5.

GOLDEN TEXT.—The Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins.—Mark 2:10.

Power and Prayer.

On the morning following the day of miracles in Capernaum—the events of which, including the healing of the demoniac in the synagogue, the healing of Peter's wife's mother, and the curing of many afflicted ones in the evening, were included in the last lesson—Jesus arose very early and went out into a lonely place to pray (Mark 1:35). He had been doing the work of God by the power of God, and it was necessary for Him to keep in close and constant touch with the great reservoir of spiritual power. Now, as then, anyone who will be in any measure an instrument through which God's power may be applied for the blessing of humanity, must have frequent intercourse with God. The Christian is like a storage battery; he must return regularly and often to the source of power to be charged.

Growing Popularity.

So great a stir had been made by this day's preaching and healing in Capernaum, that people were seeking Jesus early the next day. His disciples (the four) followed Him to His place of prayer—perhaps He had gone there many times before and they knew it was a favorite haunt—and told Him that the people were seeking Him. He heeded the call at once, but instead of returning to Capernaum, began a preaching tour through the towns of Galilee, everywhere preaching in the synagogues and healing the diseased, especially those afflicted with demoniacal possession.

The most striking episode of this tour, was the cleansing of a leper, whose faith was so strong that he expressed no doubt as to the ability of Jesus to heal him, and wondered only whether He would be willing. It was easier for Jesus to prove His power than to reveal His character and His love. All who saw His deeds were compelled to admit the former, but the latter was still a mystery, even when His fame became so great that He "could no more openly enter into the city, but was without in desert places, and they came to Him from every quarter."

The Return to Capernaum.

It was at this juncture, when His popularity was at its zenith and the period of opposition had not yet begun, that He returned to Capernaum, (Mark 2:1). Here, as elsewhere, the crowd thronged about Him as soon as He had

Buy From Our

FAC-TORY

Save One
Third

We cut three profits on the price of our carriages by selling direct, and offer a greater variety for selection than can be found at any dealers.

We guarantee satisfaction or refund money and pay freight both ways. Send for our free catalogue which gives prices and explains our plans.

THE COLUMBUS CARRIAGE & HARNESS CO., Columbus, Ohio.

gone into a house until it was impossible for anyone to pass in or out. A paralytic is brought on a stretcher, but it is impossible to clear a passage for him through the dense throng, who are unconscious of everything except the One within the house who had done such wonderful deeds and was now preaching to them such a wonderful message. But His four resourceful friends, not to be blocked by the crowd, carried the paralytic up by the outside stairway, with which oriental houses are frequently provided, to the flat roof, and there, lifting off a movable section of it, they let down the afflicted man in front of Jesus.

The Ingenuity of Faith.

The faith which was strong enough to overcome difficulties and ingenious enough to devise a method suited to the exigency, won the Master's approbation. It was nothing to Him that this method of bringing in a sick man was without precedent, that there was no explicit authority, Scriptural or otherwise, for this precise mode of bringing an afflicted one to the Physician. What He was interested in, and what He would have us all interested in, was getting the thing done promptly and effectively. The church has often quibbled and quarreled over the methods to be employed in bringing men into contact with Christ. Can the saving message be proclaimed by one who has not been properly ordained? Is it proper for a heathen to be brought to Christ by a missionary whose expenses are paid through a "human" society? These and kindred trivialities have often obscured the main issue, which is to find the most effective method of bringing together the sinner and the Savior, and then to use that method. The paralytic's four friends, when they found ordinary methods ineffective, devised a new method on the spot, and Jesus approved of it as a mark of their faith.

A Daring Claim.

"Thy sins are forgiven," were the words which He addressed to the paralytic. For the first time, Jesus here asserted His power to forgive sins. The same authority which enabled Him to cast out demons from the mind and body, gave Him also domination over sin. The scribes who sat by were right in the major premise of their complaint, which was that only God can forgive sin. The words which Jesus used implied the highest claim which He had yet made for Himself.

First Hostility of Scribes.

The unspoken criticism of the scribes, which Jesus perceived in their hearts and answered, was the beginning of the opposition to Him on the part of the priestly and official classes. It was the first distant thunder of the coming storm. Henceforth His career was to be one of varying popularity with the masses, and constantly increasing hostility from the scribes and pharisees. Sometimes a burst of popularity would come, obscuring the opposition for a time. Sometimes the popular feeling was less friendly. Even while He remained in Galilee, the priests in Jerusalem were taking counsel against Him, and at last there came a time when they dared, with the help of the Romans, to put Him to death. But even then there were some parts of the program which had to be carried out secretly, "for fear of the Jews." The unuttered protest of the scribes here in the synagogue at Capernaum, when the sins of the paralytic were being declared forgiven, may be marked as the real beginning of priestly hostility to Jesus.

Sound Logic.

Jesus' answer to His silent critics was one which left them no room for argument. His

A Start on the Road to Riches is always made by saving. One dollar or more will start a savings account with us. We pay 3 per cent per annum, compounded twice a year. Write for leaflet on instructions in regard to depositing by mail.

Capital, Surplus and Profits..... $8,200,000

MISSISSIPPI VALLEY TRUST CO.

FOURTH & PINE STS. ST. LOUIS

whole argument, as He embodied, it in word and deed, may be stated thus: You say that only by divine authority can sins be forgiven. True. But is it not equally true that only by divine authority can a man with the palsy be made to take up his bed and walk? If, therefore, I actually enable this palsied man to walk, you cannot deny My divine power. And, therefore, you cannot deny My right to forgive sins. So, to prove to you that I have power to forgive sins, I have only to say to this paralytic, "Arise and walk." And he arose and walked.

The people were amazed and glorified God, and there was good reason, for they had that day had evidence, not only that One stood among them who could cure the sick, but that the Conqueror of sin had come.

THE ELGIN FACTORY

is the largest in the world. The daily output is 2,000 watches, and 102 different kinds are manufactured. The watches go to every part of the world, and are sold even in Geneva, Switzerland.

The different parts of a watch are manufactured in different departments by different people, who have devoted their lives to that particular kind of work and have been trained to a delicacy and exactness which is more important in watch-making than in any other mechanical industry. These parts are then assembled as they are needed in another department, where they are put together by experts, who handle them as easily and almost as unconsciously as a great pianist will strike the keys of his piano. The completed watch is tested and timed, and then, strange to say, is put into a refrigerator with the temperature below freezing point and kept there for a number of days to cool off. After it has been frozen the watch is taken to a furnace, where it is allowed to lie for several days more in a temperature of 95 degrees. This particular discipline is intended to teach the watch that it must not mind changes of weather, and that the steel and other metals of which it is made must not allow themselves to contract or expand by cold or heat. You can learn a good deal in a watch factory.—From an article by William E. Curtis in Chicago Record-Herald.

IF QUALITY COUNTS
IT'S

Stuyler's
YOU WANT.

"OUR ONLY STYLE CAN."

YOUR GROCER HAS IT.

Christian Endeavor.By H. A. Denton,
Feb. 14.WHAT WILL REAL FRIENDSHIP DO?
—1 Sam. 20:1-23.For the Leader.

What is sweeter than real friendship? What is more bitter than a friendship betrayed? All the hopes of the human heart are buoyed up by a true friendship. All the best that is in us, may be dragged down by an evil friendship. Much as money will buy, yet friendship will buy more. Things are done for us on account of friendship that money could never buy. Honor that can not be bought, may be betrayed. Friendship is seen in the lower animals. As man is higher than the animals, so the working of friendship among men is higher and more noble than among the animals. It is God's law working in everything, holding together, bringing together, saving from isolated effort. The Christian friendship is the model friendship.

For the Members.

1. Our Scripture lesson affords an example of what friendship will do for us in a time of danger to our lives. Here is Jonathan, the friend of David, braving every danger of detection and punishment at the hands of a jealous king for the life of his friend. Friendship, like love, braves all dangers. Yea, friendship is love.

2. True friendship will invent its way out of all difficulties to help a friend. See the friends here agreeing upon a signal. "If I say to the lad, The arrow is on this side of thee, then all is well." "If I say to the lad, The arrow is beyond thee, then flee for thy life." And this agreement is sacred. The love that Jonathan bore David was a better guarantee of its fulfillment than the price of a king's ransom.

3. What a blessing came to the son of the changeable and cruel king through the friendship of David. How this sweet singer came into the life that might have inherited the moroseness and jealousy of the father, and made it an example of constancy and unselfishness evermore. It was a fortunate friendship. May the constancy that marks it find its counterpart in the friendships that characterize us. No greater blessing can come into the life of one than the forming of a true friendship. Its good effects do not stop with the two of the friendship, but they reach out, teaching by history to all generations to come, as in the instance before us.

4. The most precious of relationships, when prostituted, becomes the most dangerous and unlovely. Friendships, therefore, should be made carefully. Friendship in the loneliness of a great city, what a blessing! Yet to what depths of sin may it not drag us. Have a care, young people, as to who your friend is and as to his ideals of life. The things that are worth while in your estimation may be folly from his view point. Remember that two friends, like two storms meeting in the valley, do not go the way of each, but the way of one. The stronger personality decides the way you are to go. You may be taken in the toils of a false friendship. And be sure that you do not, as the stronger personality, lead some one into the evil way. The only real, and hence the only safe friendship, is the Christian friendship.

Quiet Hour Thoughts.

Am I a true friend, and have I the friendship of Him who is the friend of even a sinner like me?

DAILY READINGS.

M. Faithful friends.	Prov. 27:6-10.
T. Sympathetic friends.	Job 2:11-13.
W. How to win friends.	Prov. 18:24.
T. Gain of friendship.	Ecc. 4:9-12.
F. A friendship begun.	1 Sam. 19:1-7.
S. The best of friends.	John 15:13-16.
S. What will real friendship do?	1 Sam. 20:1-23.

Midweek Prayer-Meeting.

Feb. 10 1904.

THE CHILDREN AND THE CHURCH.—
Isalah 54:13.

Here is one of those beautiful, prophetic messages that foretell a glorious time for the church: "And all thy children shall be taught (margin, disciples) of the Lord; and great shall be the peace of thy children." What a beautiful picture that is! As we look upon it and admire it, we are compelled to say, "It is not yet. It lies in the future." But we are sure it is a part of the picture of a perfect and triumphant Christianity. Jesus Christ is in the picture.

Jesus and the Children.

What scene is there in the life of Jesus more beautiful than that (described by Matthew (19:13-15), where the children, led and carried by their mothers, are pressing their way to the Master, "that He should lay his hands on them and pray?" When the disciples rebuked them, Jesus said, "Suffer the little children, and forbid them not to come unto me; for of such is the kingdom of heaven." This shows how near to the heart of the Savior were the little children. With what grace and tenderness he must have laid those magic hands of his on the heads of the little ones, as he pronounced those beautiful, tender words! Two lessons are clearly to be drawn from this incident: the first is that the church should have the deepest solicitude for the moral and spiritual welfare of the children, seeking in all possible ways to instruct them in the things of God, and bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. The second is, that a little child is the type of citizenship in the kingdom of heaven; its humility, its teachableness, its unquestioned confidence and trust, its purity, are prime qualities of the citizen of God's kingdom. Are we cultivating these graces?

The parents' duty.

It might be inferred from what has already been said, that the parents have an obligation in this matter of training their children for God, but this duty is specifically enjoined by the apostle Paul (Ephesians 6:4) in an admonition, "And ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath; but nurture them in the chastening and admonition of the Lord." This, we fear, is a much-neglected duty at the present time. How many of the old family altars have been allowed to fall into decay! How seldom new altars are erected to take their places! How few parents seem to realize that God will hold them responsible for the moral and spiritual training of their children! Suppose the question be raised in the prayer-meeting to-night: "How many families here have any regular religious worship or Bible-study in their homes?" What would be the response? This meeting ought not to close without some earnest resolutions in the hearts of those who have neglected this matter, to begin at once, some form of family worship best adapted to the condition and needs of their respective families.

Result of such teaching.

"And great shall be the peace of thy children." Is not this just what we would desire for our children? Is there any legacy we could leave them half so much to be desired as that of peace—peace with God and their fellow men? Neither gold nor silver, nor real estate, nor bonds, nor bank stocks, nor any other material form of wealth can give as much happiness to our children as this religious instruction that brings them into right relations with God and each other.

PRAYER.

Our Father, who hast taught us, Thy children, and who hast enjoined upon us the duty of teaching our children the way of the Lord, grant us, we beseech Thee, wisdom and grace whereby we may discharge this obligation faithfully, to the end that we may save ourselves and those whom Thou hast committed to our care! In Christ's name. Amen.

THOUSANDS HAVE KIDNEY TROUBLE
AND NEVER SUSPECT IT.An interesting letter to our readers from Mrs. E. Austin, of New York City.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Nov. 9th, 1902.
A little over a year ago I was taken with severe pains in my kidneys and bladder. They continued to give me trouble for over two months and I suffered untold misery. I became weak, emaciated and very much run down. I had great difficulty in retaining my urine, and was obliged to pass water very often night and day. After I had used a sample bottle of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, which you so kindly sent me on my request, I experienced great relief. I immediately bought of my druggist two large bottles and continued taking it regularly. I am pleased to say that Swamp-Root cured me entirely. I can now stand on my feet all day without having any bad symptoms whatever. You are at liberty to use this testimonial letter if you wish.

Gratefully yours,

Mrs. E. Austin.

19 Nassau St.

The mild and prompt effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. Recommended and taken by physicians, used in hospitals and endorsed by people of prominence everywhere. To prove what Swamp-Root will do for you, a sample bottle will be sent absolutely free, by mail, also a book telling all about Swamp-Root and its wonderful cures. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and be sure to mention reading this generous offer in the St. Louis CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST.

If you are already convinced that Swamp-Root is what you need, you can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at the drug stores everywhere. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

A Prayer for Love.

God, give me love! I do not only pray
That perfect love may be bestowed on me;
But let me feel the lovability
Of every soul I meet along the way,
Though it be hidden from the light of day
And every eye but love's. Oh, I would see
My brother in the monarch and the bee—
In every spirit clothed in mortal clay!

Give me the gift of loving! I will claim
No other blessing from the lords of birth.
For he who loves needs no high-sounding name,
Nor power nor treasure to proclaim his worth:
His soul has lit at life's immortal flame
A lamp that may illumine all the earth.
—Elsa Barker, in the December Woman's Home Companion.

Our Budget

—Foreign Missions first Lord's day in March.
—Every church wheel into line for that quarter of a million.

—See cut of World's Fair Exhibit Building on our first page. Have you made a contribution for it? Read the appeal of the committee elsewhere.

—This is to be a year, we believe, of great progress, and that, too, in the "old paths" to which prophets, apostles, and reformers have ever sought to call the people—the paths of faith, obedience, love and sacrifice.

—Do not fail to read Professor Paul's splendid article on missions. A man who has the honor of teaching the largest class in missions in the world, so far as known, is worth reading after on that subject. This Professor Paul does in Hiram College.

—Now the clubs for the new year are beginning to reach us, and requests for copies of the anniversary number continue to come in. The movement to increase the circulation of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST by 10,000 new subscribers, as a testimonial for its fortieth anniversary, seems likely to succeed. G. A. Hoffman is leading the crusade. Write him for particulars and for samples.

—J. W. Allen, Spokane, Wash., announces his purpose to put a copy of the paper in every family in his church, as far as possible, and says:

The CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST is constantly improving in every way, and I do not see how it could be much better than it is; but I suppose it will just keep on getting better and better. Well, go ahead. You were never satisfied with your string of fish. Concerning his own work he says: "Things are moving on grandly here. The outlook is most hopeful. We seldom have a service without additions, and our audiences fill the house. Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

—E. L. Ely, of Atchison, Kan., is holding a meeting for S. W. Nay at Leavenworth.

—A. L. Ward is supplying the pulpit at Terre Haute while L. E. Sellers is in Europe with Dr. H. L. Willett's party.

—A. Martin has accepted a call to the church at Davenport, Iowa, and has already left Muncie, Ind., for his new field.

—Brother Ennefer, of Edinburg, Ill., called at this office last Monday, enroute to Circleville, Kan., where he is to hold a meeting.

—The First Church of Christ at Wilkes-barre, Pa., gave a reception to its pastor, E. E. Cowperthwait, and wife, on Friday evening, Jan. 22.

—David J. Elsea, of Abingdon, Ill., has accepted a unanimous call to the church at Watseka, Ill., and has made a promising beginning of the work.

Without MACBETH on it what can you expect of a lamp-chimney!

You need to know how to manage your lumps to have comfort with them at small cost.

Better read my Index; I send it free.

MACBETH, Pittsburgh.

—G. E. Shanklin, of La Monte, Mo., sends us a little tract on "The Plan of Salvation," which contains a plain diagram and a clear and simple explanation of it.

—Mrs. Josie D. Wyatt was ordained as a minister of the gospel by Harold Baldwin at Kingston, Mo., Jan. 21. Sister Wyatt has been a singing evangelist for over two years, and is an effective personal worker.

—O. P. Spiegel reports that the work is prospering in his difficult field at New Orleans. The attendance at Sunday-school last Lord's day was 154, which is the largest within the memory of the oldest inhabitant.

—Marion Stevenson, of Irving Park, Chicago, is giving a week of book studies in the Pentateuch at Noblesville, Ind., where E. H. Barnes is pastor. Brother Stevenson can be secured for one or two meetings this spring.

—R. H. Lampkin writes enthusiastically of Paonia, Colo., as a splendid fruit-growing and coal-mining country, and says there is a fine opening for a wide-awake Christian newspaper man to buy out the present owner of the local paper. Address G. W. Coffman.

—D. E. Hawes, singing evangelist, called at this office on his way to Kansas City, where he is to assist W. F. Richardson in a meeting. I. J. Spencer will do the preaching. Brother Richardson recently held a meeting with Brother Spencer's church in Lexington, Ky.

—"The Anniversary Number was simply delightful. I read the greetings with pleasure. To see brethren who have been standing for years on the mountain of truth, so full of faith and hope, greet each other in the sweet spirit of love, is a joy indeed."—E. J. LAMP-TON.

—Lee H. Barnum has resigned at Horton, Kan. At a farewell reception which was given by the Ministerial Union at the Christian Church on Jan. 22, resolutions of regret, prepared and signed by the pastors of the other churches, were unanimously adopted by the congregation.

—Eureka College will celebrate Founders' Day on Feb. 5 and 6. The principal addresses will be delivered by Dr. Nathaniel Butler and Dr. Thomas McClelland. This is the forty-ninth anniversary of the granting of the charter. Great preparations will be made for the semi-centennial next year.

—F. L. Cook, who has done such an excellent work with the East Broadway Church, Sedalia, Mo., has gone to Salida, Colo., where he began work Jan. 25. He reports that he was greeted by a large congregation and expects a profitable pastorate. W. F. Hamann succeeds him at Sedalia.

—D. D. Boyle has re-entered the evangelistic field, and will make his headquarters at Oklahoma City, Okla. He will begin a meeting with W. H. Hensley, at Humboldt, Kan., Feb. 7. Brother Boyle has only recently recovered from a long and serious attack of gripe and typhoid fever.

—The church at Hennessey, Okla., B. D. Gillispie, minister, had a note-burning jubilee Jan. 14, and began the new year free of debt. Two Church Extension notes and one on the parsonage were paid during the year, and more than the usual amount was raised for current expenses and missions.

—H. T. Morrison, pastor at Dayton, Wash., would like the names and addresses of all members of the Christian Church living in the western provinces of Canada, as he has matters of interest to present to them. He would like the names of several good preachers who would like a good pastorate in Washington. Salary not less than $1,000.

—A member of the Christian Church is wanted to build and conduct a college boarding house at Wilson, N. C., where Atlanta Christian College is located. The place is in the health resort region of North Carolina, and the summer tourist trade would alone make a profitable investment. A lot will be given free. Address G. G. Cole, Wilson, N. C.

—C. C. Hill has resigned at Richmond, Mo., and will take charge of a church at Roswell, N. Mex., about the middle of February. This action is taken on the advice of a physician. We regret to lose Brother Hill from the state, but hope that a brief residence in the

RHEUMATISM IN THE SHOULDER

Stop the Pain
WITH AN

Allcock's POROUS PLASTER

This painful trouble can be relieved and cured by using an Allcock's Porous Plaster. Warm the plaster before applying—it not relieved by bedtime, place a hot water bag against the plaster on the shoulder.

REMEMBER—These plasters are good for all pains and aches. They have been in use 55 years, have been imitated more than any article ever sold, and have made more cures than any other external remedy. Guaranteed not to contain belladonna, opium or any poison whatever.

Never Accept a Substitute.

country of sage-brush and sunshine will restore his health and enable him to return to Missouri. The church at Richmond has already made arrangements for a pastor.

—Bro. J. C. Reynolds calls our attention to the fact that he and Patrick Murphy did not graduate at Bethany College, as stated in our Anniversary Number, though they spent two years there, and had to discontinue on account of health failure. From the thoroughness which he manifested in his knowledge of Greek and Latin, when the editor of this paper sat at his feet, we will be pardoned for the mistake.

—"The Blue Book of Missions" is the title of a meaty little pamphlet recently issued by the Bureau of Missions in New York. It contains statistics and facts about all the leading foreign missionary societies of the United States and Canada. The Bureau of Missions was only recently established, but it is already doing valuable work as a clearing-house for information about missionary work in all religious bodies.

—John A. Stevens has been doing a piece of what he calls "constructive evangelism" in East Dallas, Texas. Three months ago he was sent by the American Christian Missionary Society into this field, where there was a district of four square miles without a church or mission of the Disciples of Christ. Beginning with a prayer-meeting, he next organized a Ladies' Aid Society, then a Sunday-school, then a church, a protracted meeting being conducted meanwhile. The present membership is 151, Sunday-school enrollment 185. A $2,000 lot has been bought and paid for, and the church is meeting in a commodi-

FOR SALE!

20 Acres in South Texas.

Grows everything. Strawberries ripen in January. Good hunting and fishing. Near oyster beds. Excellent for poultry ranch. Bargain. Write ous temporary building which was erected on the lot. Brother Stevens writes that within a few weeks a permanent minister will be located at a salary of $1,500 a year, all paid by the new church.

J. C. DICKSON, Pastor, Tyler, Tex.

—I am delighted with the anniversary number of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. Many of the faces are familiar to me and mine, and especially Bro. J. C. Reynolds, who was one of the first instructors of myself and wife in college. This number makes me look again into the face of the editor-in-chief and see the furrows and silver threads that years and toil have made. I was one of the first to greet him when he entered college, and we have kept in touch with each other through all these years. I was a reader of the Gospel Echo. It gave no uncertain sound then, and its dynamic sounds have not stopped with the boundaries of civilization, but have echoed through the corridors of heathen temples. I hope to join with you in your "golden jubilee." Accept a greeting from beneath our "vine and fig tree." J. DURHAM.
Irvington, Cal.

—B. F. Manire, who is at Palmetto, Fla., for the winter, writes: "I am preaching as I have the opportunity, on my own responsibility. We have not a single church in Manatee county which is a large one, and has in it several growing towns. As a fruit-growing and truck-farming region, it is equal to any other in the state. I can hear of only 23 members in the county, and these are widely scattered, a few at a place, on both sides of the Manatee river. I am making an effort to get these brethren to federate with each other, and thus form a church as a center, from which the word of life may be sounded out all over the county. At present, I have all this field to myself so far as "our plea" is concerned. I ask the prayers of the brethren everywhere in behalf of these few and scattered brethren including myself, that we may be strengthened and enabled to plant a church after the primitive faith and order that will become a beacon light to this entire field."

—Ministers of high standing in Ohio and Indiana inform us that a new money-making craze is attacking some of the preachers in those states. The new scheme, which is closely akin in all essential particulars to the recent oil swindle, is a patent gate. Preachers are being solicited to buy the rights for a county for $1,500 in cash or notes, and they are to get 50 per cent of all that they can persuade others to put into the scheme. One preacher is said to have made $8,000 since Dec. 21. It is a humiliating fact that so many preachers are easy victims to any plausible swindle. They would not, for any amount of money, assist in promoting a proposition which they knew to be fraudulent, but the desire to make money, accompanied by a lack of training in financial affairs and unfamiliarity with the methods of modern manipulators, renders them an easy prey. Brethren, don't do it. Your ministerial influence is too precious to be sold for any price that any promoter can pay, and remember it is your ministerial influence that they want. Don't sell it.

—Bro. C. M. Sharpe, of the Bible College, Columbia, Mo., gave us a pleasant call this week, having just concluded a very pleasant and successful meeting with the church at Hannibal. He reports that the building fund for the new Bible College has reached $24,000, only $1,000 short of the total amount which the building is to cost. There is no doubt that it will be completed and the building be erected in time for use at the beginning of next fall's term. Meanwhile, the endowment fund is also increasing. Brother Sharpe reports a gift of $1,000 to the Bible College from Mrs. Mary Dulany, widow of the late lamented Daniel Dulany, at Hannibal. We are glad to note that Sister Dulany is interested in the work on which her lamented husband had set his heart so strongly in the latter part of his life. His heart was in the cause of Christian education, and he had generous plans for aiding that cause, which his sudden departure prevented him from carrying out. It is gratifying to note that Sister Dulany has it in her heart as far as possible, to help on the same great work.

Our World's Fair Exhibit.

It is now only ninety days until the opening of the World's Fair in St. Louis. This is a short time in which to collect the remainder of the money necessary for the erection of the proposed building for the exhibit, and prepare the exhibit for same.

It will be a comely building in every way creditable to the brotherhood it is to represent, and well adapted to the purposes it is to serve. These are, a rendezvous for the members and their friends visiting the Fair, a rest-place for them when they become weary, and rooms for an exhibit by our colleges, missionary and benevolent organizations and our publishing houses, in whatever will illustrate the history and growth of the Reformation.

The general form of the building will be octagonal with two wings, 16x20, and an extension in the rear divided into two parts, for rest rooms with accommodations for men and women. The two wings will be admirably adapted for our missionary, educational and benevolent exhibits, and the central part for historical displays, including pictures, books, tracts, charts, etc., and for the use of our publishing houses. The cut below shows the ground plan of the building:

The important and pressing matter now is to secure not less than $5,000 for the erection of this building and the preparation of the necessary literature for free distribution. So far there has been pledged and acknowledged in our columns..... $1,640
The sums pledged, but not hitherto acknowledged are J. H. Allen, 104 S. Main St., St. Louis..... 100
Z. T. Sweeney, Columbus, Ind..... 50

Making a total of pledges..... $1,790
Balance to be subscribed..... 3,210

As the time is short it is important that preachers and others interested in this important enterprise call the attention of their congregation to it and urge immediate action.

A special finance committee has been appointed to solicit the funds for the carrying out of this enterprise, consisting of Oreon E. Scott, G. A. Hoffmann and J. H. Allen, 104 S. Main St., St. Louis, who is the treasurer. As the money will be needed soon to begin the work, the cash should accompany the pledge when practicable. All the money should be in the hands of the treasurer by May 1.

The undersigned committee appointed at Detroit solicits the kind co-operation of our religious papers and of all who are interested in this worthy undertaking.

J. H. GARRISON.
W. F. RICHARDSON.
Z. T. SWEENEY.
S. M. COOPER.
J. H. ALLEN.
Committee.

What Is Federation? And What Should Be Our Attitude Towards It?

An Address delivered before our last Congress, Des Moines, Ia., by

J. H. GARRISON.

together with questions to and answer from Dr. E. B. Sanford, Secretary Church Federation.
Price of pamphlet, in paper cover, 15 Cents, postage prepaid. Address

Christian Publishing Company
1522 Locust Street St. Louis, Mo.

Our Friends.

Many of our friends have expressed a desire to aid us in securing 10,000 new subscribers to the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. Kindly read in our other column the splendid offer of books to be given to those who will aid us in this campaign for 10,000 additional readers. We trust you can not only commend the paper to your friends, but thus build up your own library with the best books issued by our people. The Christian Publishing Company are anxious to do all in their power for their friends and we are satisfied that many will embrace this opportunity to enlarge the circulation of the CHRISTIAN EVANGELIST.

Dedication at Brownstown, Ind.

Brownstown is the county seat of Jackson county, Ind. The church there is an old one. Some of the pioneer preachers ministered to it in an early day. They have just completed a new and modern house of worship. It was opened for worship on Lord's day, Jan. 24. There was a debt of $1,750 to provide for. We raised $2,000, and the house was given to God with songs of rejoicing and solemn prayer to God. Bro. H. A. Wingard is the hard working and very successful pastor of the church. The church property is worth $7,000.

L. L. CARPENTER.

A Drop of Blood

Taken from a person who has for a few months used Vernal Palmettona (formerly known as Vernal Saw Palmetto Berry Wine) is pure and free from taint.

We say a few months, because it takes time to overcome the effect of years of careless living in the matter of diet, sleep and dissipation. This great one dose a day remedy gives quick relief from indigestion, constipation, dyspepsia, headache and all kinds of kidney, liver and stomach trouble, but as the impurities entered the system slowly, so they must be gotten rid of.

Poisons and disease germs creep into the blood through the retention of impure waste matter in the stomach and bowels and through inactive kidneys and a lazy liver. Vernal Palmettona gives gentle aid to the weakened digestive organs. Gradually they gain strength and are finally able to perform their natural functions without any help. When this stage is reached, use a little judgment in what you eat and drink and you will have no more trouble. You'll be able to do twice as much work as before, whether it is done with your hands or brain.

Perhaps you have read this kind of talk before and have found the remedy talked about to be a flat failure in your case. If so, you are prejudiced. Knowing that such a prejudice often exists, we give every one a chance to try Vernal Palmettona before they buy. It is on sale at all leading drug stores, but you can try it free of expense. Write us for a free sample bottle to-day. It will be promptly sent postpaid. If it does you good, it is easy to step into a drug store and get a full size bottle. The druggist will not try to sell you something else. If he does he is an exception, for druggists know that Vernal Palmettona is the best remedy of its kind in existence. Vernal Remedy Co., 506 Seneca Building, Buffalo, N. Y.

Invaluable in allaying the Hoarseness and Irritation incident to vocal exertion, effectually clearing and strengthening the voice.
Avoid Imitations. John S. Brown

Correspondence

Retired With Honor.

The following memorial, adopted by the Acting Board of Managers of the American Christian Missionary Society on the retirement of Wm. F. Cowden as Superintendent of Missions in the northwest, is a well-deserved tribute to a faithful servant of God:

Wm. F. Cowden has faithfully served the Church of Christ as Superintendent of Missions in the northwest under the direction of the American Christian Missionary Society for a period of fifteen years. During that time he has planted and watered the seed of the kingdom, and under his leadership he has seen churches grow that are an honor to the name of the King and the glory of the brotherhood, of which they are a part. He has been faithful in season and out of season; not sparing himself; taking long journeys that he might give to the needy fields his personal oversight, his counsel and his prayers.

At the invitation of the Board he has come eastward year after year and traveled among the churches, pleading for the great cause of home missions in a most earnest and effective way. Now he has reached the years of three score and ten, and desires to turn aside and rest awhile. He has fully earned this rest, and while we part with him with regret as superintendent of missions, yet, at the same time, we give him the benediction, anticipating the verdict of the Lord Jesus Christ: "Well done, good and faithful servant." We shall follow him in his retirement with our profound respect, our best wishes and our prayers. He has fought a good fight in the name of our King, and we say to him, "God bless you."

W. F. Cowden.

The Board also desires to express our thankfulness to Bro. Thomas W. Phillips, whose generous support of Brother Cowden has made all this possible. And we know that he must certainly have the answer of a good conscience as he thinks of the work that his generosity has made possible. We earnestly hope for a continuance of Brother Phillips' support in this great work of home missions.

Adopted by the unanimous vote of the Board at its meeting Jan. 15, 1904.

BENJ. L. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

We are indebted to our Home Secretary, Benj. L. Smith, for the following brief historical sketch of Brother Cowden:

Wm. F. Cowden was reared in eastern Ohio, not far from Youngstown. He was trained for the ministry of the Baptist Church; his neighbors were the famous Phillips brothers, of New Castle, Pa. While Brother Cowden was pastor of a Baptist Church in New Castle, he found himself out of harmony with the spirit of domination as manifested in the Baptist Associations, and on the question of close communion. The Phillips brothers had become earnest and loyal Disciples, and Thomas Phillips went to his young friend, W. F. Cowden, and taught him the way of the Lord more perfectly. The outcome of the matter was that Brother Cowden became minister of the church (Christian) at New Castle, Pa., which he served diligently and faithfully for many years. He was then called to the old Main Street Church of Lexington, Ky.—the church in which Alexander Campbell had held the great debate with Dr. N. L. Rice. Here he did splendid service. He was then called to the First Christian Church of Allegheny, Pa., and while in Allegheny he did some of the best work of his life. He inaugurated a plan of planting churches in the region round about the First Church of Allegheny. He made the First Church of Allegheny a cherishing mother. He organized a church in the East End of Pittsburgh, which has become one of the strongest churches among the Disciples. In following out the plan inaugurated by Wm. F. Cowden there, we have now eighteen churches in Allegheny county, where there were six.

The friendship between himself and Thomas W. Phillips has continued throughout their lives. At our National Convention in Louisville, Ky., in 1888, T. W. Phillips made a pledge of $2,000 a year to the Board of Home Missions to support Wm. F. Cowden as Superintendent of Missions in the northwest. Brother Phillips has continued his support of that work until this day.

And so, for fifteen years Brother Cowden has ably represented our interests in the great northwest, and has often thrilled our national conventions with his appeals for that great and growing empire, hearing with prophetic ear

"The first low wash of waves, where soon Shall roll a human sea."

Having accomplished his three score and ten, he felt a natural inclination to be relieved from the onerous duties of his official position, but not, we are sure, to retire in idleness. In a letter to the Acting Board he says:

"In retiring from this long service of fifteen years, I desire to express to the members of the Home Board my appreciation of the confidence they have reposed in me, and the generous and sympathetic support they have so uniformly given our work in this great field of the northwest. I wish to say that I have simply done the best I could under the circumstances, and I trust that they will remember my mistakes and failures with the same clemency that I trust to receive from the Master himself at the final accounting.

"I most heartily congratulate the Board on the remarkable prosperity which God has granted their work in recent years, and devoutly pray for a richer enlargement in the near future.

"It has been a benefit to be associated with Brother Benjamin L. Smith in this service. I am a better man for having touched heart with him, and I shall cherish the memory of our friendship and fellowship in this work as one of the best gifts the Lord has given to my life. If at any time I can be of any possible service to you, I shall render the service promptly. I shall always feel a deep interest in the work of home missions."

The following tribute to Sister Cowden from Brother Smith is, we are sure, well deserved:

"No account of the life and work of Brother Cowden can be given without mentioning the name of Mary C. Cowden, the splendid wife, who has stood by his side through the years, helped him in his work, wept with him at the graves of their daughters, prayed with him for the advancement of the kingdom, and encouraged his hand and heart in every good word and work. God was good to Brother Cowden in the friendship that has come into his life in the noble wife that he gave him, and in blessing him with a very fruitful ministry."

The CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST adds its "Well done, good and faithful servant," to these deserved tributes to Brother and Sister Cowden, and wish for them that peace and quiet enjoyment in their cozy home at Lacoma, overlooking Puget Sound, which come from the consciousness of duty well and faithfully done.

RHEUMATISM Cured Through the Feet

Don't Take Medicine, External Remedy
Brings Quick Relief. Sent

FREE ON APPROVAL. TRY IT.

We want everyone who has rheumatism to send us his or her name. We will send by return mail a pair of Magic Foot Drafts, the wonderful external cure which has brought more comfort into the United States than any internal remedy ever made. If they give relief, send us One Dollar; if not, don't send us a cent—you decide.

Magic Foot Drafts are worn on the soles of the feet and cure by absorbing the poisonous acids in the blood through the large pores. They cure rheumatism in every part of the body. It must be evident to you that we couldn't afford to send the drafts on approval if they did not cure, even after everything else had failed.

Since I used the Drafts I walk without crutches. They do just what you claim.

ANNIE LEE GUNN, Augusta, Ark.

I am much pleased with your cheap and simple remedy. I have found it to be just as you promised.

J. H. DIRKMAN, Danube, Minn.

I never found anything that would help me before trying your Drafts.

JOHN WHITE, Grafton, Mich.

I have suffered with rheumatism for the past ten years but Magic Foot Drafts have entirely cured me. I have felt no pain since using them.

MRS. MARY ST. ANGE, Woonsocket, R. I.

We have thousands of long letters of gratitude from men and women cured of rheumatism by Magic Foot Drafts. Will you let them cure you? Write today to the Magic Foot Draft Co., S16, Oliver Bldg., Jackson, Mich., for a trial pair of drafts free on approval. We send also a valuable booklet on rheumatism, free.

If you purchase a

PIANO OR ORGAN

with the name

upon it, you will have the VERY BEST MUSICAL INSTRUMENT that money can buy. Prices and terms most reasonable. Catalogues free to any address.

THE ESTEY CO.,

1116 Olive St., St. Louis, Mo.

Mention this paper.

GEO. KILGEN & SON

BUILDERS OF HIGH GRADE

Pipe Organs

ST. LOUIS, MO.

Best of References.

Correspondence Solicited.

ENTERTAINMENTS

CHURCH SCHOOL

MAGIC LANTERNS, STEREOPTICONS
for illustrating sermons, giving entertainments, illustrating hymns. Finest collection of slides. Large catalogue FREE. MFG. OPTICIAN.
McALLISTER 49 Nassau St. New York.

INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION SERVICE

Made of several materials and in many designs, including self-collecting tray. Send for full particulars and Catalogue No. 27. Give the number of communicants.

GEO. H. SPRINGER, Manager,
256-258 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

BIBLE STUDY COURSE

At home by mail. This book "Home Bible Study" free if you enroll now. Terms easy. For free catalog write
C. J. BURTON, President Iowa
Christian College, Osaka, Iowa.

Dedication and Revival at Dayton, Washington.

Eleven months ago, when I became their pastor, the church in Dayton was not in a prosperous condition. They had been for months without a pastor, and their building greatly needed remodeling. Many of the members were discouraged. Some came to the services but seldom, and others had entirely ceased to come. After mingling with the people for a few months, I saw no great forward movement could be made by the church without a good modern house of worship. I immediately began advocating this in private and in public. By the middle of July we were ready to commence tearing down and rebuilding the old structure. By the middle of November we had the largest and best arranged house of worship in the city ready for dedication.

H. T. Morrison and Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Stephens.

The main auditorium of the building seats 300, and with extra chairs it can be made to seat 400. The lecture room facing the pulpit, and separated from the auditorium by means of large sliding doors, seats upwards of a hundred, and three class rooms are capable of seating 100 more. Above these rooms there is space enough for two large class rooms. In utilizing this space the building can be made to accommodate 700. The old building, before commencing work on it, was worth less than $1,500. The building as it now stands could not be duplicated for $5,000. Yet, by the strictest economy, we kept the cost much below what is indicated by these figures. The self-sacrificing spirit manifested upon the part of nearly all the members, in the building enterprise, laid the foundation for the great meeting that has just closed. On the day of the dedication upwards of $1,200 in pledges was raised, which was more than enough to not only clear the building of all indebtedness, but to remove several hundred dollars of other indebtedness on the church.

When this house was completed our state evangelists, L. F. Stephens and wife, were secured to assist in the dedicatory exercises, and also help us in a meeting. The meeting commenced Nov. 29, and closed Jan. 10. The visible results of the meeting were 159 accessions. The total number of confessions was 105. One thing remarkable about the meeting was the large number of men among the additions. It was proverbial that few men belonged to any of the churches in Dayton. Of the 159 who came forward 85 were males, many of them past middle life, and several of them quite aged.

Brother Stephens is state evangelist of eastern Washington. He is a native of Missouri, is nearly forty years of age, and has spent nearly half of his life on this coast. After preaching for a time he and his wife spent three years in Drake University. This ministry has been spent largely in the evangelistic field. His strength, as a preacher, lies in his ability to unfold and enforce Bible teaching. He understands the plea of our brotherhood thoroughly. It has never been my fortune to be connected with any great meeting that has been as universally recommended by all classes as this one. Sister Stephens, as a leader of song, and general helpmeet of her husband, is in every way worthy of the high office she fills, and the part she takes in his arduous work. She is not only an excellent leader of song and soloist, but takes a most useful part in the devotional exercises.

HUGH T. MORRISON, Pastor.

C. W. B. M. in Missouri.

All the auxiliaries have received their apportionments for special work. As none have asked to have their amount changed, as yet, we understand that the apportionments are satisfactory to all. We hope so. The Missouri leaflet will be at hand in all cases before this letter reaches you. Many have written for the bundle promised. They were sent out from Warrensburg by your faithful and enterprising recording secretary, Mrs. H. A. Denton.

If our auxiliaries will send for the pledge book, issued from headquarters (see note foot of page 366, February Tidings), and put it in to hands of committee under suggestion

Piles Cured Without Pain

In the Privacy of Your Own Home.

The free trial package which we send to all who write will give instant relief and start you toward a perfect cure. After you have tried that, you can get a full-sized package from any druggist for 50 cents. Frequently one package cures. It is applied in the privacy of the home. Call for Pyramid Pile Cure and nothing else. All druggists have it, for it has cured so many cases of piles and relieved so much suffering and is so popular a remedy that no druggist can afford to be without it.

MRS. MAUD SUMMERS, Cured of Piles by Pyramid Pile Cure, After All Remedies and Doctors Had Failed.

The healing process begins immediately with the first application and continues rapidly till the sufferer is perfectly cured. The pain ceases at once and you go about your duties without further inconvenience.

This is much more sensible than being cut and tortured with a knife. It is much more satisfactory than a humiliating examination by a physician. It is much cheaper than paying a big doctor's bill for an operation. It is a certain, safe and painless cure for piles.

Write Pyramid Drug Co., Marshall, Mich., for free trial package which will be sent in plain wrapper. After that is used, you can get full-sized package from us or any druggist for 50 cents.

"5th," in special work letter, every apportionment will easily be raised, and much to spare. Will you do this, my sisters? Use all the helps furnished by the thought and care of those women whom you have chosen as leaders in this great work for the Master.

Mrs. J. L. Moore passed through St. Louis, tarrying between trains only, on her way to Southeast Missouri. May God guide the auxiliaries in that district to responsive, earnest effort, in behalf of C. W. B. M. work.

A neat booklet, with programs for the whole year of 1904, with leaders and committees, hostesses, membership roll, etc., is received from Mrs. E. J. Sears, president of Centralia auxiliary. They have 18 new members.

Sister Lhamon, of Columbia, says, "Last year you reported us as taking seven Tidings; we now take 30; we feel hopeful and encouraged."

February's Tidings reports Lamonte as the only auxiliary in Missouri where every member reads the Tidings. Are there not others? If not, shall there not be? The live, progressive auxiliaries report large Tidings' rolls. The live auxiliaries also hold regular executive meetings, where plans are made and prayers ascend for the increase of the auxiliary in strength and beauty, also for the quickening of the spiritual atmosphere of the whole church.

MRS. L. G. BANTZ.

St. Louis.

Church at Dayton, Washington.

LAND FREE! Send stamp for information. J. L. LOVERING, Agt., 118 4th st., St. Paul, Minn.

Bethany Assembly.

The board of managers of the Bethany Assembly, are making arrangements to make the coming encampment meetings the greatest and best in its history.

The Assembly will open on Thursday, July 21, and close on Monday, Aug. 16. This is the twenty-first year of the Assembly's existence. This year it is a full grown man, old enough to vote, and it will celebrate its twenty-first birthday by presenting to its patrons, by far the best bill of fare for its platform ever offered to a Bethany audience. Bethany is the only chauntauqua of the Christian Church.

It was organized by the largest state convention ever held by our brethren in Indiana, consequently it is a child of the church, and not a private institution owned and controlled by individuals. Arrangements are already made to repaint and repair all the buildings on the ground, as well as to put the grounds in the very best of order. Contracts will soon be let for the erection of quite a large number of assembly cottages, as well as several private ones. The grounds are brilliantly lighted with electric lights, and no pains will be spared to make the season of 1904 the crowning one in Bethany's history.

The calendar of the Assembly will soon be printed, and will be followed with the announcement of the great program that is now in process of preparation.

Please remember the dates, July 21 to Aug. 16.

Remember Bethany always gives all and even more than she promises.

Remember Bethany is national. Last year the attendance was from lakes to gulf, and from ocean to ocean; twenty-five states and territories were represented.

Wabash, Ind.

L. L. CARPENTER.

Canton (Mo.) Items.

Bro. E. M. Carr has accepted work at Lima, Ill. Bro. Chas. Hartard is building a church at Steffinsville, Mo.

Brother Krall will preach at Fowler, Ill.

Brother Bennett, of Malden, Mo., will preach at Kehoka, Mo., and Brother Williams will go to California.

There are now over 50 ministerial students in the university, and more CHRISTIAN-EVANGELISTS come than any other church paper. Through the preaching of students, more than 150 additions have been made to the churches the past year.

T. WALLACE.

THIS TESTIMONY

Will surely interest many readers of the Christian-Evangelist.

James G. Gray, Gibson, Mo., writes about Drake's Palmetto Wine as follows: I live in the Missouri swamps in Dunklin County and have been sick with Malarial fever and for fifteen months a walking skeleton. One bottle of Drake's Palmetto Wine has done me more good than all the medicine I have taken in that fifteen months. I am buying two more bottles to stay cured. Drake's Palmetto Wine is the best medicine and tonic for Malarial, Kidney and Liver ailments I ever used or heard of. I feel well now after using one bottle.

A. A. Feiding, Knoxville, Tenn., writes: I had a bad case of sour Stomach and indigestion. I could eat so little that I was "falling to bones" and could not sleep nor attend to my business. I used the trial bottle and two large seventy-five cent bottles and can truthfully say I am entirely cured. I have advised many to write for a free trial bottle.

J. W. Moore, Monticello, Mo., makes the following statement about himself and a neighbor. He says: Four bottles of Drake's Palmetto Wine has cured me of catarrh of Bladder and Kidney trouble. I suffered ten years and spent hundreds of dollars with best doctors and specialists without benefit. Drake's Palmetto Wine has made me a well man. A young woman here was given up to die by a Minneapolis specialist and he and our local doctors said they could do no more for her. She has been taking Drake's Palmetto Wine one week and is rapidly recovering.

The Drake Formula Company, Drake Bldg., Chicago, Ill., will send a trial bottle of Drake's Palmetto Wine free and prepaid to any reader of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. A letter or postal card is the only expense to get this free bottle of Drake's Palmetto Wine.

Barnes Business College

BOARD OF EDUCATION BUILDING., ST. LOUIS, MO.

Established 22 years. Eight expert teachers. May we tell you what a business course with us means? And we'd be pleased to say something about our shorthand and Touch Typewriting course. We give personal instruction, and can offer advantages not to be obtained elsewhere. Catalogue free.

Dedication at Corydon, Indiana.

Corydon was the first capital of the state of Indiana. At an early day the plea for a return to apostolic Christianity was made, a church was organized, and for many long years the gospel has been preached there, and many have accepted and obeyed it. They have worn out and outgrown one or two houses of worship, and now they have built another, modern, convenient and commodious. It has two entrances, each with a vestibule, a main auditorium, and lecture room that can be opened and made a part of the auditorium. It has a baptistery with two robing rooms, that can also be used for Sunday-school class rooms.

Above, it has a ladies' aid room, a ladies' parlor, and six Sunday-school class rooms. The pews, pulpit and furnishing are elegant. The entire floor is carpeted; it is brilliantly lighted with electric lights, artistically arranged. It is heated with a furnace; the whole making a beautiful house both in the exterior and interior. Brother Stanley Robert Grubb is the very successful pastor. He is a young brother of sterling worth, pure in life, and greatly devoted to the gospel of Jesus Christ, our common Lord. He has the confidence and respect of the people of the entire city, both in and out of the church. His work is being greatly blessed of God. On Lord's day, Jan. 3, we met with the church at Corydon, and preached the opening sermon, raised their money and dedicated the house. Although they had paid liberally, and even beyond their means, so that there was only a little more than $2,000 indebtedness to provide for, yet they came up to the dedication with joyful and liberal hearts, and freely provided for all their debts with a surplus of some $200 additional. It was a day of great rejoicing, generous giving and grateful thanksgiving.

Corydon is the home of Sister Sallie K. Jones, the efficient state organizer of the C. W. B. M. The church at Corydon is now in a condition to inaugurate a forward movement all along the lines. With this new and beautiful house, with all of its indebtedness provided for, with a pastor like Brother Grubb, with its Sunday-school, Christian Endeavor Society, ladies' aid society, and its missionary enterprises, there is a very bright future before it.

L. L. CARPENTER.

Wabash, Ind.

Dedication of the First Christian Church, St. Paul, Minn.

We dedicated our new church last Lord's day, Jan. 24, Bro. Z. T. Sweeney assisting.

It was a bitter day, the coldest for 16 years. The thermometer registered 36 below in the morning, 32 at noon. It almost suicided our hope of being able to raise the necessary money. We had to have $7,500, but because of the severe morning decided to ask for only $5,500, but we received $8,200. It was marvelous in our eyes.

We have a most beautiful building. It is Gothic both inside and out. It is built of red sand stone and brick; accommodates 500; cost $22,000. It is a poem in color in the interior; the wood work is all enameled with ivory, the decorations are green and cream with brown and gold Gothic designs in stenciling.

It is so joined to the old building that it forms perfect unity. The Sunday-school is in the basement, which with the old church affords plenty of room for a great work.

A. D. HARMON.

Arkansas Texas Louisiana

An ideal country for cheap homes. Land at $5, $10, $15 per acre and up; grows corn, cotton, wheat, oats, grasses, fruits and vegetables.

Stock ranges 10 months in the year.

Cheap rates—about half fare—via the Cotton Belt twice a month.

Dates are Jan. 5 and 19, Feb. 2 and 16, Mar. 1 and 15.

Write for descriptive literature, maps and excursion rates.

E. W. LaBEAUME, G. P. & T. A.,
Cotton Belt, ST. LOUIS MO.

CHURCH FURNITURE

Pews, Pulpits, Etc.

The best that money can buy.

Grand Rapids School Furniture Works

Corner Wabash and Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

WORLD'S GREATEST BELL FOUNDRY
CHURCH, PEAL and CHIME BELLS
Best Copper and Tin only
THE E. W. VANDERZEE COMPANY,
BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY, CINCINNATI, O.

UNLIKE OTHER BELLS
SWEETER, MORE DURABLE,
LOWER PRICE.
OUR FREE CATALOGUE
TELLS WHY.

Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

FOR SCHOOLS AND CHURCHES
American Bells
Sweet Toned. Far Sounding. Durable.
AMERICAN BELL & FOUNDRY CO.
FREE CATALOGUE NORTHVILLE, MICH.
41 Cady Street.

Send us your address and we will show you how to make $3 a day absolutely sure. We furnish the work and teach you free, you work in the locality where you live. Send us your address and we will explain the business fully; remember we guarantee a net profit of $3 for every day's work, absolutely sure.

SUBSCRIBERS' WANTS.

COMPLETE College Education by mail, highest degrees granted. Inductive University, Lisbon, O.

FOR SALE—A brand new upright piano at a bargain price. Address D, care Christian-Evangelist.

WANTED—Man or boy, by the month or year, on a poultry and fruit farm. Address Lock Box 131, Clear Lake, Ia.

MARIA MONK—Black Nunnery Exposed. New and complete edition by mail, 35 cents. Address J. D. Williams, box 330, Columbus, Ohio.

LEARN STENOGRAPHY—Send 50 cents to the Oliver Typewriter Company, 315 North 9th Street, Century Building, St. Louis, Mo., for self-instructor in shorthand and typewriting.

Ministerial Exchange.

W. F. Shearer, who is to hold a meeting at Carbondale, Ill., in February, has an open date for a meeting in March. Address him at Angola, Ind.

Harold Baldwin and wife are doing splendid work in Missouri. The membership of the church at Kingston has been almost doubled since they took charge of it nearly a year ago. Brother and Sister Baldwin are educated, cultured, refined, patient, persevering, and ought to be in charge of one of our strong churches.

FREDERICK F. WYATT, Evangelist.

Clarice Yeuell is located at Columbia, Mo., where he is taking studies in the university and Bible College. He is open to engagements for preaching on the Lord's day.

J. H. Bryan, Des Moines, Iowa, writes that he can put a number of preachers in correspondence with churches in the state, paying from $600 to $800 a year.

John Joyce has re-entered the field as an evangelistic singer, after being out of the work for the past two years. He is now assisting T. E. Winter in a meeting at Greenwich, Ohio, and can be secured for a meeting for February.

The church at Gold Field, Iowa, where T. A. Lindenmeyer recently resigned to accept a call to Pawnee City, Neb., wishes to secure a pastor. It is a good field and deserves a good man. Address B. W. McElhinney.

The church at Mariette, I. T., wishes to secure a pastor, salary $600. The church has 65 active members, but no building. Address B. B. Askew.

Trinidad, Col., wishes to secure a supply for the pulpit for four months, beginning March 1, while the pastor is abroad. A good opportunity for a capable man who wants a vacation in Colorado. Address David C. Peters, 116 N. Chestnut St., Trinidad, Col.

The churches at Corning, Iowa, and Prescott, Iowa, are both without pastors at present.

O. L. Adams, of Russell, Iowa, is open for engagements for pastoral or evangelistic work.

A young minister, unmarried, can be secured for $10 per week, by addressing 556 West 116th St., Chicago.

To Our Endeavor Societies.

I am just in receipt of a copy of the new exercise gotten out by the Foreign Society for Christian Endeavor Day. I have examined this carefully and am free to say it is one of the most attractive, and in my judgment, effective exercises the society has ever furnished. The title of it is "Our Own Boys," the special point of which is the orphanage at Damoh, India. The title page contains a cut of the uncompleted workshop of the orphanage, which has now about 350 boys in it.

The exercises are interspersed with readings, recitations and music, carefully selected and nicely arranged. In addition to the exercise itself, the society furnishes "Suggestions to the Presidents or Leaders," which contains an outline of the purpose of the exercise, and makes it very easy for those having the work in charge to arrange the program.

These, with the exercise itself, are furnished free in any quantity desired to as many societies as will send for them with a promise to produce the entertainment in the church and send the proceeds to the society for the orphanage work.

This is certainly a splendid opportunity for our young people to show their appreciation and faithfulness. I therefore make a special plea to every society in the land to send at once to Bro. F. M. Rains, president, Box 884, Cincinnati, O., for as many copies of the Endeavor exercise as will be needed to arrange a splendid program.

With very little effort on the part of our Endeavorers, it occurs to me that our societies could easily furnish $10,000 as a result of the special offering from this exercise.

If the date appointed does not suit, of of course you can choose one which will be satisfactory. While we would like for as many as possible to use the regular day, yet it is not so much the day as it is the spirit and the offering.

Trusting that at least three times as many societies will observe this day this year as did last, and with the heartiest good wishes to all our Endeavorers, I am

Fraternally yours,

Kansas City, Mo. R. H. WAGGENER,
National Supt.

"Got any oysters?" asked the guest in a restaurant. "No, sah," replied the sable waiter; "ain't got no shell-fish, 'cept eggs, sah."

Through Service to Florida.

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad in connection with the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad operates a through buffet drawing room sleeping car daily between St. Louis and Jacksonville, via Montgomery, Alabama. This car leaves from the Union Station, St. Louis, at 8:45 P. M., arriving at Montgomery next evening at 7:45 P. M., and Jacksonville the second morning at 8:30 A. M., and making direct connections with through trains for all points in Florida. No route to Florida offers more attractions for the sight seer than the route via Montgomery, traversing as it does the most populous and fertile section of the South. For rates, time tables, maps or sleeping car reservations, address, J. E. Davenport, Division Passenger Agent, Louisville & Nashville Railroad, 206 N. Broadway, St. Louis, Mo.

IT IS TOO BAD

That So Many of Our Homes

Are without good literature for the children, the husband and the wife and they are constantly reading all kinds of trash. We have therefore determined that we will

Give Away $10,000 Worth of Our Best Books

The following great books are absolutely free to you if you will write us at once. Ten thousand dollars' worth must be given away, and you and your neighbor's home might as well be blessed as others:

Heavenward Way. J. H. Garrison. Price . . . . .	$0.75
Queen Esther. M. M. Davis. Price . . . . .	.75
Half-hour Studies at the Cross. J. H. Garrison. Price . . . . .	.75
The Temptation of Christ. J. B. Briney. Price . . . . .	.75
Christian Baptism. A. Campbell. Price . . . . .	.50
Wonders of the Sky, or God's Glory. W. J. Russell. Price . . . . .	.50
Elijah. M. M. Davis. Price . . . . .	.75
The Bible Hand-Book. W. W. Dowling. Price . . . . .	.75
In the Days of Jehu. Breckenridge Ellis. Price . . . . .	.75
The Christian Minister's Manual. F. M. Green. Price . . . . .	.75
Soul Winning. E. H. Kellar. Price . . . . .	.75
Dr. Carl Brown, or True Success. Miss M. F. Miles. Price . . . . .	.75
Helpful Bible Readings. A. B. Moore. Price . . . . .	.75
The Young People's Prayer-Meeting. Cal Ogburn. Price . . . . .	.75

All we ask of you is to send one new subscriber to THE CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST with $1.50, the regular price for the paper, and we will send any one of the above books free, postage prepaid.

Or, if you have not paid your own subscription, send $3.00 for your subscription and the new subscriber and we will send you any one of the following books, postage prepaid. These books are absolutely free. All we ask of you is the above little bit of missionary work and place a first-class religious paper in your neighbor's home:

Lesson Commentary for 1904. W. W. Dowling. Price . . . . .	$1.00
Form of Baptism. J. B. Briney. Price . . . . .	1.00
Moses. D. R. Dungan. Price . . . . .	1.00
King Saul. Breckenridge Ellis. Price . . . . .	1.00
Walks About Jerusalem. Isaac Errett. Price . . . . .	1.00
Talks to Bereans. Isaac Errett. Price . . . . .	1.00
Campbell's Theology. W. E. Garrison. Price . . . . .	1.00
Life of A. Campbell. Thomas W. Grafton. Price . . . . .	1.00
Men of Yesterday. Thomas W. Grafton. Price . . . . .	1.00
Life and Works of James A. Garfield. F. M. Green. Price . . . . .	1.00
Jesus as a Teacher and the Making of the New Testament. B. A. Hinsdale. Price . . . . .	1.25
The Genuineness and Authenticity of the Gospel. B. A. Hinsdale. Price . . . . .	1.25
Young Folks in Bible Lands. B. W. Johnson. Price . . . . .	1.00
A Vision of the Ages. B. W. Johnson. Price . . . . .	1.25
The Man in the Book. H. S. Lobingier. Price . . . . .	1.00
Leaves from Mission Fields. N. M. Raglan. Price . . . . .	1.00
What Is Your Life? W. J. Russell. Price . . . . .	1.00
Mary Ardmore. J. H. Stark. Price . . . . .	1.00
Hugh Carlin, or Triumph of Faith. J. H. Stark. Price . . . . .	1.00
Tribble's Sermons. J. M. Tribble. Price . . . . .	1.00
Wheeling Through Europe. W. E. Garrison. Price . . . . .	1.00

Every one of the above books are first-class. Nicely bound in cloth and worth every cent of publisher's price in cash.

These Offers will last only till March 1, 1904.

Christian Publishing Company
1522 Locust Street St. Louis, Mo.

Evangelistic

We invite ministers and others to send reports of meetings, additions and other news of the churches for publication in this department. It is especially requested that additions be reported as "by confession and baptism" or "by letter."

Additions Reported Last Week.

Baptisms.....	1,924
Letters and statements.....	744
Denominations.....	170

Total.....2,838

M. L. BUCKLEY.

Harrison, O., Jan. 27, 1904.

Special dispatch to the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST.

ARCOLA, ILL., Jan. 31.—Charles Reign Scoville has been here eighteen days; one hundred and twenty added; nineteen to-day.—L. T. FAULDERS.

ARKANSAS.—Paragould, Jan. 29.—This year is the first time the congregation has employed a minister for full time. About one dozen have been added since our pastorate in full began. We have a fine Bible-school with John A. Morgan to push things, and Bro. L. C. Thompson to tell little stories for the children. We will have a protracted meeting here some time soon, and will try to move things in great shape.—R. O. ROGERS.

COLORADO.—Denver, Jan. 25.—Highlands Church, second week of meeting finished last night; 35 forward; 25 confessions. S. M. Bernard, of Boulder, preaching. Meeting continues.—J. E. PICKETT, Pastor.

Paonia, Jan. 26.—The writer was at this place Jan. 4-21, assisting Bro. G. W. Coffman in a meeting resulting in five confessions and five by letter and statement. The congregation is small and organization new. They have just purchased a good brick building, formerly the school property, and will soon have it in good shape for their work. Brother Coffman and his wife are sparing no pains nor cost to themselves to push the work and if they stay there we may confidently expect a prosperous church in the near future.—R. H. LAMPKIN, La Junta, Col.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.—Washington, Jan. 25.—Five additions in last week. One at prayer-meeting, one by letter last Lord's day morning, and three confessions at night.—W. L. HARRIS.

Washington, Jan. 25.—One yesterday from the Baptists; one baptized Thursday at the prayer-meeting from the Catholics. Large audiences and increasing interest at every service. Begin meeting Jan. 31.—J. MURRAY TAYLOR.

ILLINOIS.—Rock Island, Jan. 28.—Memorial Christian Church held its annual meeting Wednesday evening, Jan. 27. The church was without a pastor four months of the year, notwithstanding the reports showed an increase of 82 by additions to the church; membership now 510; Christian Endeavor 100, gain of 40 during the year; Sunday-school 450 enrolled, 288 average attendance, increase of 100; money raised during the year, $3,500. At annual meeting $1,000 was asked for to cancel an old debt of $675 and repair the church; $1,200 was raised in a few minutes.—O. W. LAWRENCE.

Moweaqua, Jan. 27.—Our meeting here is moving along nicely. Splendid audiences and good interest. Ten additions to date. State Evangelist F. L. Davis is preaching. Any church desiring the best work will do well to secure him.—F. HOWARD SWEETMAN AND WIFE.

Armington, Jan. 28.—Forty-four additions in the meeting here.—ANDREW SCOTT, evangelist; GUY B. WILLIAMSON AND WIFE, singers. Athens, Jan. 25.—I closed a three weeks' meeting here with my home church last night. There were four baptisms. The attendance was good.—GILBERT J. ELLIS.

Champaign, Jan. 25.—At our annual meeting of the congregation held early in January, reports were heard from all departments of the church work; all of these were most encouraging. The chief matter of interest centered in the report of the building committee, showing that within the year the new church had been completed, costing $23,000, and that it had been dedicated with all debts provided for and an overplus of good pledges sufficient to purchase a pipe organ. The clerk's report showed an increase in the church membership during the last six months of 66. The church is meeting all financial obligations promptly. We began a meeting last night with home forces; one added yesterday.—STEPHEN E. FISHER, pastor.

Armington, Jan. 21.—Thirty-one additions to date; 15 last Sunday. Rev. Andrew Scott is preaching great sermons.—GUY B. WILLIAMSON AND WIFE, singers.

Chambersburg, Jan. 22.—Bro. Thomas J. Shuey began a meeting with us three weeks ago to day. Forty-one additions, 11 confessions last night. Large crowds, intense interest, powerful preaching.—PAUL H. CASTLE, pastor.

Jacksonville, Jan. 21.—Annual meeting of Jacksonville Church held recently. Offerings to missions doubled over 1904. Additions are made nearly every Sunday. Five last Lord's day. Church has made substantial progress. Scoville will start a revival Feb. 8.—R. F. THRAPP.

Granite City, Jan. 20.—The church here held its first annual meeting on Jan. 10, the second Lord's day of this year. It was just one year on that day since the little band of Disciples here began work for the Lord. Reports from all departments of the church were very encouraging. An unprecedented flood last June put all church work out of the question for several weeks. They had no pastor until August, but in the five months since then 51 have been added and the membership doubled. The ladies' aid has only been organized and at work about six months, but during that time has raised over $85 in actual cash with other valuable work on hand.—M. M. McFARLAND, pastor.

New Boston, Jan. 18.—We closed a three weeks' meeting here last night, with 19 conversions. Bro. G. E. Shurer, of Monmouth, Ill., who two years ago organized the church here, did the preaching. Brother Shurer is a plain, fearless speaker, an earnest, consecrated man and a tireless worker. Besides the 19 conversions, his work has done much here to strengthen the church. He goes from here to begin a meeting at Table Grove, Ill.—JNO. G. QUINLAN, minister.

INDIANA.—Valparaiso, [Jan. 29.—Brother Vernon Harrington is in a great meeting at Adams Church, five miles south of this city, with 52 added—45 baptisms.—This church has not met for several years but will be one of the strong churches of the county. About 75 added here since last report.—J. H. O. SMITH.

Laport, Jan. 25.—We closed a two weeks' meeting here last night that resulted in 13 additions, 11 conversions. Mrs. Vernon Harrington, of Des Moines, led the music, and was greatly appreciated by all. There have been 24 additions to the church since I came to the work. The outlook for this church is brighter than it has been for some years.—GEO. E. HICKS.

Connersville, Jan. 27.—Began work as minister for the Springville Church Jan. 17 with bright prospects. We have a handsome new church building, with all modern improvements and 325 consecrated workers.—Z. J. TAYLOR.

Kewanna, Jan. 26.—Our meeting closed here Jan. 21—19 sermons, 11 additions, 6 by primary obedience, 5 by letter and statement. Also one confession Lord's day, making 19 accessions here since Dec. 13. Began meeting at Fairview last evening with storm and cold. J. F. Nutt, of Fairview, helps me in the singing.—J. G. SHAW.

Indianapolis, Jan. 25.—Six added at North Park Church yesterday. Will dedicate our remodeled building Feb. 7.—AUSTIN HUNTER.

Knightstown, Jan. 27.—The following is our report for the past year: Sermons preached, 121; lectures and special addresses, 8; funerals, 11; weddings, 2; total additions here and elsewhere, 35—22 baptisms; calls, 400; membership, 175. More money has been raised for missions than in any previous year of the church's history. All departments growing.—ALLEN T. SHAW.

Bedford, Jan. 22.—Results of twenty months co-operative labors of pastor and members with God's blessing: Additions, 83; losses, 67; weddings, 45; debt reduced, $4,000; present incumbrances, $11,000; raised from all sources, $8,419; missions $288. This item is not as large as we will make it. Harmony, hopefulness, progress are manifest. The future promises a joyous abundance of work.—E. RICHARD EDWARDS.

IOWA.—Corydon, Jan. 25.—Meeting three weeks old and 50 additions. We close next Lord's day evening. Promise City next.—HAMILTON AND WILKINSON, Evangelists; F. D. MACY, Pastor.

Urbana, Jan. 28.—We had our re-dedication services Jan. 24. Brother Wells, of Wisconsin, did the preaching and raised the necessary pledges and money. Over $400 in pledges and money was raised. The building repairs cost $1,400 and now we have a fine chapel that will stand for years. We are now in the midst of a meeting with James T. Nichols, of Vinton, Iowa; meeting three days old with two confessions and many more prospective. Brother Nichols is a good gospel preacher.—F. W. MUTCHLER.

Redfield, Jan. 25.—C. G. Stout, state evangelist, has just closed a great seven weeks revival at this place. The interest from start to finish was intense. After three weeks of persistent and untiring efforts, the seeds sown began to spring up, and during the remainder of the meeting, ninety-five took their stand for Christ. Suffering from a severe cold, Brother Stout went to his home in Des Moines for a week's rest, returning to conclude the meeting on the following Sunday, Jan. 24. At the evening service two more made the good confession. The final service will be held to-night, when it is more than probable that the number will reach one hundred. Churches in need of evangelistic work, will make no mistake in securing the services of C. G. Stout.—J. T. OVERSTREET, member official board.

Webster City, Jan. 22.—Nine more; seven by confession of faith in our meeting here last night. Thirty-two to date; meeting 19 days old. We continue.—WALTERS AND GARMONG.

Keokuk, Jan. 23.—Some weeks ago Brother C. O. Haskell supplied the pulpit here. A young medical student made the good confession, but was not baptized until last Wednesday evening at the close of our prayer-meeting service. He is a bright, intelligent young man, and goes "on his way rejoicing." All departments in good working order.—J. W. KILBORN, 716 Fulton St.

Mt. Ayr, Jan. 21.—We closed meeting here Jan. 18, with eleven additions, conducted by home forces. There was a good interest throughout the two weeks and all seemed to enjoy the services.—L. C. SWAN.

West Liberty, Jan. 23.—Our meeting here is developing a fine interest, being attended by large audiences that give most marked attention. There is excellent promise of good results, indeed they are already being realized. The singing, in charge of C. E. McVay, of Cotner University, Bethany, Neb., is an attractive part of the services. Brother McVay has been in this work but a few months, but is in every way well fitted for the work. He is a good chorus leader and an excellent soloist. His Christian bearing is in harmony with the beauty of his voice. He goes to Carbondale, Ill., for February, but is open to engagement after that. I heartily commend him.—F. W. COLLINS, Pastor.

KANSAS.—Augusta, Jan. 27.—W. E. Harlow and V. E. Ridenour, of Joplin, Mo., fame, closed a 24 days' meeting here last evening, resulting in 106 additions; 81 baptisms; 17 came from the denominations and two were reclaimed; 57 were men and boys. There were 12 or 15 children and the balance ranged from

WHY MOTHERS WORRY

Did you ever hear a mother worry over a plump child? There is no better bank of health for a child to draw from than a good supply of healthy flesh.

Scott's Emulsion not only gives a child weight and plumpness, but it feeds the brain, bones and nerves with strength and active power.

Fewer mothers would worry if they knew more about Scott's Emulsion.

We'll send you a sample free upon request.
SCOTT & BOWNE, 409 Pearl Street, New York.

18 to 30 years of age. Considering the size of the town (2,000 inhabitants) and other limited conditions this is a most splendid meeting. Our hearts are glad. God bless these men.—G. J. CHAPMAN, pastor.

Narka, Jan. 25.—Meeting eleven days old; 24 additions.—EDWARD CHITTER, Evangelist.

Hutchinson, Jan. 25.—Six additions at Nickerson, five baptisms, one by statement.—C. W. VAN DOLAH.

LaCygne, Jan. 30.—Meeting at this place now 20 days old with 24 accessions. Meeting conducted by Bro. J. Ira Jones, state evangelist.—BERT I. BENTLEY, Singing Evangelist.

Buxton, Jan. 27.—Three confessions here Sunday and Monday, all young men, who received especially warm congratulations from entire congregations. All branches of church work are being pushed by able workers.—S. F. WRIGHT.

Arkansas City, Jan. 25.—Meeting now 19 days old with 39 added. Nine reclaimed, seven by statement, two by letter, 16 by baptism, two from M. E.'s by baptism and one from M. E.'s by letter, two from Congregationalists. This has been a splendid meeting. We have all been greatly helped. Brother Barnett has preached clear, strong, scriptural sermons. Brother Shafer as singer has done excellent work, and we can heartily commend him.—The additions have mostly been adults.—M. LEE SOREY, pastor.

Hunnell, Dec. 22, closed one of the best meetings that has ever been held in our little church; 70 souls were added to the work, 67 grown people; this exactly doubles our membership. Sister Clara H. Hazelrigg was the evangelist, assisted by our efficient pastor, J. M. Morris. The church that has never had the services of this devoted sister in a meeting has missed hearing, in my judgment, the greatest living evangelist. The community was moved as never before in its history and the church at the close of four weeks was standing on the mountain top with God.—J. T. WARD.

MISSISSIPPI.—Aberdeen, Jan. 25.—Work starts well in the new field. Seven added yesterday, five in the morning and two in the evening; one from the Baptists. Was given a reception and the larder filled on the evening of Jan. 15. We start our Sunday-school revival next Sunday. Begin soon internal improvement on church building.—G. W. NUTTER.

MISSOURI.—Cameron, Jan. 26.—Since our last report there have been six accessions to this congregation—three baptisms, one by reclamation and two by letter. The work of the new year starts off under the most favorable auspices. January 1st we had our annual all-day meeting, when the men of the church served dinner to the ladies. Dr. J. H. Shields, pastor of the Presbyterian church here, gave us a very helpful and inspiring address in the morning, and at the evening meeting we had the pleasure of listening to Bro. W. Newton Briney, of Paris, Mo., who delivered, as he always does, a most excellent sermon. We hope to have Pres. Burris A. Jenkins here for a course of lectures during the summer.—RICHARD W. WALLACE.

Appleton City, Jan. 25.—Four additions since last report, one confession at La Due, and three by letter here. I have closed my work with the churches at La Due and at Center (one-fourth time each), and have accepted the work at Foster for one half time. The following is a statement of my year's work: Sermons, preached, 186; additions, 56; 28 by confession, 22 by letter and statement, three from denominations, three reclaimed; calls, 540; funerals, 10; weddings, two. Missionary offering 100 per cent larger than that of 1902. I begin a meeting with the Foster church Feb. 15.—FRANK JALAGEAS.

Galt, Jan. 27.—The end of my second year with this congregation is near at hand. This and the Tindall (Mo.) Christian church employed me one half time each, at my very beginning in the ministry; was ordained four months later by the Trenton Christian church. During the two years we have had 25 accessions, $375 raised for missions, $200 raised by Aid Society. Salary last year, $250; this year, $300. I resign the work here, to take effect in March, and go to Braymer, Mo., which will be the second year with them. I can most heartily recommend this congregation to a young minister. They have been very patient and loyal to me. The church at Braymer is weak in numbers, but wide awake and enthusiastic. Since the protracted meeting held early last fall, they have a splendid Christian Endeavor.—J. D. PONTIUS.

West Plains, Jan. 30.—I held a short meeting for this church. I was never treated better than here. During my short stay there I had one funeral, a wedding and two additions—one by letter and one by baptism. I left the church trying to raise subscription for my salary.—I. W. LAWMAN.

Bowling Green, Jan. 26.—One confession of faith on third Lord's day of this month.—E. J. LAMPTON.

Hannibal, Jan. 25.—The church has experienced a real spiritual uplift through the special meetings conducted by Prof. C. M. Sharpe. Though a man of unusual scholarly tastes and accurate expression, he has the true evangelistic fervor in marked degree. He deepened conviction in many hearts and won new friends for Christ. There were 19 accessions—11 of these by confession.—LEVI MARSHALL.

Mt. Grove, Jan. 27.—Closed a few nights' meeting with four confessions at Pleasant Valley, in Douglas county. Organized a Christian Endeavor Society at Fairview church, in Wright county, with 38 members. I expect to go to Norwood next Sunday.—E. W. YOCUM.

Savannah.—We had two additions here Sunday, Jan. 17.—A. R. HUNT.

Springfield, Jan. 25.—Four additions yesterday—three by letter and one confession, a son of the late well-known and gifted Kirk Baxter. Outlook full of hope.—D. W. MOORE.

Kansas City, Jan. 30.—Jan. 21 Bro. J. J. Lockhart closed a successful four weeks' meeting at Mayvern, Mo., where I preach one-half time. Twenty-six added—four by statement, one from Baptists, 21 by primary obedience. Brother Lockhart has had nearly 200 additions since Oct. 18.—J. W. COGGINS, pastor.

Huntsville, Jan. 18.—I have reorganized the Endeavor Societies since taking the work here the first of the year. Twenty-five at Junior Sunday; 100 at the Bible-school; this is a 25 per cent increase. Rally day and roll call next Sunday. Missionary rally in February.—J. R. PERKINS.

Isadora, Jan. 18.—One confession at regular service yesterday. Congregation has employed present minister, a Drake student, for third year.—C. F. WARD.

Higginsville, Jan. 17.—Three additions at our morning service. Bro. A. N. Lindsey will begin a meeting for us the first of February.—J. H. COIL.

Kingston, Jan. 24.—Evangelists Frederick F. Wyatt and wife are in their second meeting for this church. We have had thirty-two confessions during the two meetings, twenty-seven of these are by baptism. Any church desiring a good evangelist and singer may consider themselves fortunate in securing Brother and Sister Wyatt. They are truly servants of the Master. Sister Wyatt is a sweet singer and Brother Wyatt preaches the gospel in spirit and in truth.—MRS. HAROLD BALDWIN.

OHIO.—Painesville, Jan. 25.—Our three weeks' meeting has just closed with 43 additions: 34 by primary obedience, five by relation and three by letter. Bro. W. F. Rothenburger, of Ashtabula, O., did the preaching and J. Walter Wilson, of Indiana, led the singing. This gave us a strong force and much good was done beside the numbers added to Christ's kingdom. We are now at Ashtabula with the same force and the writer doing the preaching. Every indication points to a large gathering at this place.—J. P. MYERS, pastor.

Serado, Jan. 25.—Clarence Mitchell, of Lima, O., assisted by our pastor, J. D. Lawrence, just closed one of the best meetings in the history of this church: 29 additions, 23 baptisms.—JOSEPH HIGGINS, elder.

Bellaire, Jan. 11.—The minister's annual report showed that he made 2,183 calls, conducted 35 funerals, solemnized 22 marriages, preached in Bellaire pulpit 92 sermons and 25 elsewhere, besides about 100 prayer-meeting, Christian Endeavor and special addresses; 107 were added by baptism, 21 by statement, 11 reclaimed, 10 by letter, making a total of 149 additions. Lost by death, letter and withdrawal 42, leaving a net gain of 107. The number of additions added in the three months of my ministry before 1903 added to the above, makes a total of 352 added since I came in September, 1902. The Sunday-school has an enrollment of 500, with an average attendance of 291. Raised $901.51 for all purposes, $358.90 for missions. The total amount given by all departments of the church, for missions, benevolence, charity and education, $2,901.07. The treasurer's report shows total receipts of $4,508.33, about $1,000 of which went for improvements and repairs on the building, 437 persons supported the church by envelope offerings. Total amount of money raised for all purposes was $6,341.64, or an average of more than $10 per member. I am proud to be the minister of such a church.—SUMNER T. MARTIN.

[We have been compelled to condense the foregoing splendid report, for lack of space, but we congratulate the pastor and people upon the splendid showing they have made.—EDITOR.]

NEBRASKA.—Verdon, Jan. 28.—Began work in my new field at McPherson, Kan., last Sunday with three additions. Back to close my work at Verdon next Sunday. Will be located at McPherson, Kan., by Feb. 6.—W. A. MORRISON.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Sandy Lake, Jan. —We are in a meeting here; started last night. Daisy Kirk, of Clarks Mills, Pa., is leading the singing.—THOMAS MARTIN, pastor.

DON'T BUY AN OUT-OF-DATE MACHINE ON A WORN-OUT REPUTATION

NOR A WEAK ATTEMPT AT VISIBLE WRITING WITH
TANGLEFOOT TYPEBARS AND SLOT GUIDES.

The Standard Visible Oliver Writers and Billers with 10 in., 12 in., 15 in. and 18 in. Carriages

Are Rapid
Convenient
Simple
Durable
And have
The Best
Touch
Method
Key Board

Enable
The Operator
To do
The Most
Of the Best Work
The Easiest

Write upon any size or shape of paper from a postage stamp or druggists' label to an insurance policy or freight way-bill, lined or unlined.

Used by the Government and Largest Corporations

The OLIVER TYPEWRITER COMPANY

Century Building, 315 North Ninth Street,

ST. LOUIS, MO.

Current Literature

Any book reviewed in these columns (except "net" books) will be sent postpaid by the Christian Publishing Company, St. Louis, on receipt of the published price. For "net" books, add ten per cent for postage.

The Federation of Religions. By Rev. Hiram Vrooman. (The Nunc-Licet Press. $0.75 net.)

It is a matter of principle with us to treat respectfully any man's honest convictions on the subject of religion, and we hope it will not be considered a departure from this principle, when we express the opinion that "The Federation of Religions"—which is the name of an organization as well as the title of this book, expounding its principles and pleading for financial support—is, in the main, a compound of theological nebulosity, transcendental indefiniteness and words. We are told that its purpose is "not instruction, but investigation"—and that is good. Religious teachers everywhere might take that cue and investigate to a degree before they instruct. In insisting also that the actual phenomena of the spiritual life must be studied and taken account of in any adjustment of religious belief, another true note is sounded. But in lightly sweeping away "all historical claims and precedents" and proposing to base all religion upon a deduction from the observed phenomena of the spiritual life, the new organization lays a very sandy foundation for its edifice. The one or two references to Christ and Christianity are casual and inconsequential. The scheme evidently looks to either a syncretism or an eclecticism in which Christianity shall hold no higher place than Buddhism or Shintoism.

How England Averted a Revolution of Force. A Survey of the Social Agitation of the First Ten Years of Queen Victoria's Reign. By B. O. Flower. (Albert Brandt, Trenton, N. J. $1.25 net.)

Mr. Flower is, by nature and habit, an enthusiast and a reformer. If he were to write a book on quadratic equations, he would do it with a consuming and contagious zeal. It has been his purpose in this history of the social movement in England from 1830 to 1847, (for the scope of the book is somewhat wider than its sub-title indicates) to state and elucidate some principles which are needed to tide us over the transition period in which the opening of the twentieth century finds the American people. What is exceptional for an enthusiast and a reformer, is that Mr. Flower is really capable of writing history without twisting it out of shape in the interest of any pet theory. His convictions stand up like towers, but history is history and he neither mis-states the facts nor misinterprets their meaning. His history of the Reform Bill of 1831, and of the Corn Laws is accurate and informing, and the significance of those events for our own time is forcibly presented.

Are the Critics Right. Historical and Critical Considerations Against the Graf-Wellhausen Hypothesis. By Wilhelm Moeller. Introduction by Prof. C. von Orelli. Translated from the German by C. H. Irwin. (Revell.)

The author is one of the younger German scholars, who believes emphatically that the critics are not right—meaning by critics, those who support the analytical theory of the Pentateuch. In relating his personal experience, he states that he was once a convert to the views which he now combats, so the reader may know at once that he is free from inherited prejudice. The book is readable, and its arguments are clearly and cogently stated. He throws no stones at anybody and does not obscure the points at issue by accusations of bad faith and infidelity against those who disagree with him. He makes the date and authorship of Deuteronomy the starting point of his argument. It is a book which the honest seeker after truth can read with profit.

The Forerunner. By Neith Boyce. (Fox, Duffield & Co. $1.50.)

Daniel Devin was a promoter. He bought suburban property and sold it as town lots, and made money. He laid off town sites, the lots of which he could not sell, and lost money. He took up a mining proposition in Wyoming and spent some months in New York wooing timid capital to come out and be invested in the same. Meanwhile, his wife, who had been born poor and had acquired an abnormal hunger and thirst after luxury during their first period of prosperity, became estranged from him, partly because she yearned for a fixed abiding place, while his affairs kept him always on the wing, and partly for reasons less creditable to herself. It is a well written story which points out with true emphasis the fact—which perhaps scarcely needs pointing out—that when a man who is frank, honest, prosaic and devoted to the details of his business, marries a woman who is romantic, selfish, beautiful and blind to every exigency of finance, there is sure to be trouble.

Esarhaddon. By Leo Tolstoy. (Funk & Wagnalls. $0.40 net.)

This little book, which was written by Count Tolstoy for the benefit of the Jews who were impoverished by the riots at Kishineff and Gomel, contains three short stories. The first relates how Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, who was about to put to death a rival king, whom he had conquered and captured, was led to put himself in the other man's shoes and to see that he who injures another, injures himself. The second, entitled "Work, Death and Sickness," relates a legend, the moral of which is that these three things, which are sometimes considered curses, are rather blessings given to men to draw them together in love and sympathy. The third entitled, "Three Questions," shows how the theoretical questions which moralists raise about life are only to be answered by living a life of sympathy and mutual helpfulness.

The Finger of God. Studies and Suggestions in the Miracles of Jesus. By Rev. T. H. Wright. (Revell.)

It would require too much space to give a full and adequate review of this admirable volume, but we may say in brief that it is a sane, sober, reverent and reasonable treatment of a subject which many people have felt to be one of increasing difficulty in this age of science. Dr. Wright does not believe that science makes the miracles incredible. He denies nothing that is recorded, but he gives many helpful hints toward the understanding of the record and the right use of the miracles in Christian apologetics. The book is very well worth reading for those who are troubled by the miracles, and for those who want to help others who are troubled.

One of the World's Vexed Problems

Solved by
Mina Thomas' splendid work:

"The Reality and Evil of Spiritualism."

This great book, the result of years of labor and research, with its wealth of information, will prove invaluable to the student, while it furnishes the church the most powerful weapon with which to assail Spiritualism, the most dangerous foe to Christianity. An extensive reading of the book is highly recommended by the following distinguished clergymen of St. Louis:

Rev. Dr. John Mathews, Rev. Dr. W. W. Boyd, Rev. Dr. W. F. McMurray, Rev. Dr. F. W. Luce, Rev. Dr. Michael Burnham, Rev. M. Rhodes, Rev. Dr. J. H. Garrison, Editor Christian-Evangelist.

Retail price, silk cloth, $2.00
Buckram, $2.50 Half Morocco, $3.00
Agents wanted. Liberal discounts given.

Thomas Library Company,
1 013 Grattan St., St. Louis, Mo.

See review in this issue.

The World Almanac for 1904. (By mail, 35 cents.)

Everybody knows the World Almanac—or ought to. It is the most up-to-date of all encyclopedias, even to the point of containing the full text of the canal treaty between the United States and Panama, which is now awaiting ratification by the Senate. The volume contains 540 pages packed with information about everything, including an official guide to the Louisiana Purchase Exposition.

Self-Pronouncing Sunday-School Lesson Commentary for 1904. By Rev. J. M. Coon. (George W. Noble, Chicago, leather, 35 cts.)

A convenient vest-pocket book, giving the Scripture text of the Sunday-school lesson for each Sunday in the year, and about two pages of boiled-down exposition of each lesson. It contains also a list of the Endeavor topics. Convenient to carry and good to use.

Topical Illustrations. By James E. Denton. (Standard Pub. Co. $1 net.)

A collection of over seven hundred anecdotes and illustrations, arranged topically and conveniently indexed. Ministers and others will find it a useful volume.

Best Hymns, No. 3. (Evangelical Pub. Co., Chicago. 20 cts.)

A small collection containing a few good standard hymns and some gospel songs of average merit.

ELECTRIC BELT

IT IS YOURS

for the asking without one cent of cost.

This is no deposit scheme; no 30 days trial scheme. You simply send us your name and address and we send you the Belt. It is yours to keep forever and we under no circumstances ask for or accept any money for it either now or in the future. This is a plain, simple, positive statement of facts. We guarantee it THE BEST ELECTRIC BELT MADE. Five minutes' trial will prove to you its power, a week's wearing of it will restore to you all lost vigor, giving to you the strength and manhood which is your birthright. Many forms of such as Impotency, Varicocele, Spermatorrhea, etc., yield at once to its magic influence. We give it away free to all who can be cured by the one great curative agent, Electricity. After you are cured your friends will each want one and from these sales we will make our profit. Be a strong, vigorous man among men. This generous offer may be withdrawn at any time, so you should write today for the "Free Supreme Electric Belt."

NERVOUS, RHEUMATIC, KIDNEY AND LIVER DISEASES

IT WILL CURE YOU!

Address: PHYSICIANS' INSTITUTE,
2147 Unity Building,
Chicago, Illinois.

Marriages.

BAIN—BARLOW.—Married, at Breeds, Ill., Jan. 17, 1904, Earnest F. Bain and Nellie Barlow, both of Breeds, J. I. Judy, of Emden, Ill., officiating.

MANGAN—RIGGS.—Married, in the parlors of the Central Christian Church, St. Louis, Jan. 19, 4 p. m., J. H. Garrison officiating. Mr. John Mangan, of Detroit, Mich., and Miss Lillian Riggs, of St. Louis. After the usual greetings of the friends who had gathered to witness the wedding, the happy couple departed for Detroit, their future home, followed by the good wishes of a host of St. Louis friends.

NELSON—CHRISTIANSON.—Married, Jan. 20, 1904, by J. E. Denton, Vacaville, Cal., Julius Nelson and Miss Christine Christianson.

VOLL—WAGGONER.—Married, By J. E. Denton, at Vacaville, Cal., Jan. 17, 1904, Frederick J. Voll and Miss Maud Waggoner.

Obituaries.

Notices of deaths (not more than four lines) inserted free. Obituary memoirs, one cent per word. Send the money with the copy.

BRICKERT.

To-day we laid to rest all that was mortal of our blessed son Charles Sherwood. He was a rare son. He became a Christian when only six years old and lived an angelic life to the end. He was about nine and a half. He is now with the Lord and his sainted mother. The last few minutes he spent in reciting sweet passages of Scriptures.

E. N. BRICKERT.

Houston, Tex.

COOPER.

Joseph Cooper, a native of England, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. R. H. McCandless in Ukiah, Cal., Jan. 12, 1904, in his 77th year. Sober, grave, temperate, sound in faith, in charity, in patience, no corrupt communication ever proceeded out of his mouth. He looked forward to death but as to entering into life and rejoiced at the summons of the reaper. His body reposes in the beautiful cemetery here together with that of his beloved wife, who preceded him into rest some seven years. Two children, Collen J. Cooper and Mrs. Ruth J. McCandless survive him, also a brother and sister in England.

HARVEY.

Reuben Harvey was born in Jackson Co., Ill., May 6, 1840; moved to Bates Co., Mo., in 1844, where he resided until 1898, when he moved to Oakesdale, Wash., where he died Jan. 17, 1904. Bro. Harvey was married to Harriet L. Radcliff, Nov. 20, 1859, who still survives him. To this union were born 10 children, 9 of which are still living. He joined the Baptist Church when 20 years old; 6 years later he united with the Church of Christ and was a faithful Christian, filling the office of elder for a number of years. The funeral service was conducted by the writer.

A. C. VERNON.

Oakesdale, Wash.

KELSO.

Allen Poe Kelso departed this life Jan. 14, 1904, being 27 years old, a young man cut down in his strength. The funeral services were conducted by J. A. McKenzie.

MORRIS.

Levi Morris departed this life at the age of 61, for years a member of the Christian Church of Oxford, Mo.; he was laid to rest in Bethel Cemetery. J. A. McKenzie conducted the funeral services.

RIMMER.

Samuel B. Rimmer departed this life Jan. 12, 1904. A saintly man of God, elder of Mitchell Park Christian Church, St. Joseph, Mo., 59 years old. He has gone to a better home; we hope to meet him again in glory. The services were conducted by J. A. McKenzie and E. E. Denney.

WATERS.

J. W. Waters, one of the oldest and most respected citizens of Coffeyville, Kans., died at his home at that place. He was born in Kentucky, Jan. 11, 1819, and was married to Lydia Funk, Jan. 6, 1846. In 1859 they moved to Missouri, and thence in 1881 to Kansas. Eleven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Waters, 9 of whom, with their mother, survive him, and were present during his last illness. The funeral was conducted on Jan. 24, by W. A. McCausland, and six sons of the deceased served as pall-bearers.

WILKISON.

Elizabeth Wilkison, born in Ohio, reared and married in Illinois, the wife of George Wilkison, deceased, died at Ukiah, Cal., Dec. 30, 1903, aged 63 years, 28 days. She had lately moved from Oklahoma to California, with her son, Otha Wilkison, who is now minister of the church at Ukiah. Two other sons are left to mourn the loss of a devoted Christian mother. The body was sent to Oklahoma to rest in the family lot.

COME WEST! We turn your present property into cash and find you a new home in the West. Send description and price and learn our plan. We also furnish valuable information to prospective settlers. 25c. brings full information regarding any locality in the West desired.

PACIFIC ADJUSTING AGENCY,
Dept. C. 1210 First Ave., Seattle, Washington.

Our Western Letter.

(Continued from page 156.)

MAN IN AMERICA HAS A RIGHT TO EARN AN HONEST LIVING. The government ought to protect him in this right. In Colorado this is the issue. Governor Peabody has used the state troops for nothing else than the protection of men, union or non union, for the protection of men in their God given right to earn their bread in the sweat of the face. There is no conflict in Colorado between labor and capital. The conflict here is between organized and unorganized labor. The conflict between labor and capital in Colorado is, at least for the present, at an end.

What now is the duty of the church? The church must stand, on such an issue, where the Master stood when he was on the earth; where the Christ would certainly stand now were he on the earth a man among men. The church should stand for the man in need. The church should be the sympathizing friend and helper of the down trodden, the wronged, the oppressed. The protest against the oppressor and against oppression should be so emphatic as to be read of all men, heard by all, understood by all. The oppressor may be an employer: let him hear the protest. Make it clear, strong, emphatic. The church should leave no room for misunderstanding. The oppressor may be a man of influence, an officer, in a labor organization, head of a labor trust. The church ought, in an orderly way and with dignity, to speak against this oppressor and his oppression in tones that cannot be misunderstood. This is the present duty of the church. It is the business of the church to represent the Christ among the children of men. May she be faithful in this time of trial.

Denver, Colo.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL.

Few People Know How Useful It Is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly every body knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but, simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels: it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath, and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says: "I advise Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I got more and better charcoal in Stuart's absorbent Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

The Quiet Hour

"No time to pray!"

Oh, who so fraught with earthly care
As not to give to humble prayer
Some part of day?

"No time to pray!"

'Mid each day's dangers, what retreat
More needful than the mercy-seat?
Who need not pray?

"No time to pray!"

Must care or business' urgent call
So press us as to take it all,
Each passing day?

What thought more drear

Than that our God His face should hide,
And say, through all life's swelling tide,
"No time to hear!"

As things in nature, so the things of the Spirit grow up to their fullness and perfection by slow and insensible degrees. The famous and heroic acts of the most renowned believers were such as themselves could not once perform, or, it may be, think they ever should. Great things both in nature and grace come from small and contemptible things.—John Flavel.

Opportunities do not come with their values stamped upon them. Everyone must be challenged. A day dawns, quite like other days; in it a single hour comes, quite like other hours; but in that day and in that hour the chance of a lifetime faces us. To face every opportunity of life thoughtfully and ask its meaning bravely and earnestly, is the only way to meet the supreme opportunities when they come, whether open-faced or disguised.—M. D. Babcock.

Charles Kingsley bids us thank God every day that we have something that must be done, whether we like it or not. Our necessary duties may be distasteful and monotonous, but we may be sure that our very best growth will come along the line of faithfulness in them, just as the very best growth of a corn-field comes through the regular order of tillage, and not through the scratching of artistic diagrams into the ground.

Among the wise words of that wise father of the church, Saint Augustine, are these, that, if heeded, would contribute much to our growth: "Be always displeased at what thou art, if thou desirest to attain to what thou art not; for where thou hast pleased thyself, there thou abidest." Contentment is one thing, but a weak and slothful satisfaction is quite another.

"Thy will be done," is the keynote to which every prayer must be tuned.—A. J. Gordon.

We must be watching, especially in the beginning of the temptation; for an enemy then is more easily overcome. Do not suffer him to enter the door of the heart; but resist him without the gate at his first knock. An after remedy comes too late.—Chimes.

—H. E. S.

Often the most useful Christians are those who serve their Master in little things. He never despises the day of small things, or else He would not hide His oaks in tiny acorns, or the wealth of a wheat field in bags of little seeds.—Dr. Cuyler.

Memory stores up the bitter with the sweet. If we live negligently, sinfully, we lay up recollections which can cause only pain and sorrow. The secret of a happy life in old age is a well-watched career through youth and manhood.

Our Father, if in this quiet introspection, we have discovered any secret sins in our own hearts or lives, help us to-day to put these things far from us in the strength which Thou dost supply through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen!

Family Circle

Every Year.

By Albert Pike.

I feel 'tis growing colder,
Every year,
And my heart, alas! gets older,
Every year.
I can win no new affection:
I have only recollection,
Deeper sorrow and dejection,
Every year.
Of the loves and sorrows blended,
Every year,
Of the joys of friendship ended,
Every year,
Of the ties that still might bind me,
Until time to death resigned me,
My infirmities remind me,
Every year.
Ah! how sad to look before us,
Every year,
When the clouds grow darker o'er us,
Every year:
When we see the blossoms faded,
That to bloom we might have aided,
And immortal garlands braided,
Every year.
To the past go more dead faces,
Every year,
As the loved leave vacant places,
Every year.
Everywhere the sad eyes meet us;
In the evening's dusk they greet us:
And to come to them entreat us,
Every year.
Yes, the shores of life are shifting,
Every year:
And we are seaward drifting,
Every year.
Old pleasures, changing, fret us;
The living more and more forget us:
There are fewer to regret us,
Every year.
But the truer life draws nigher,
Every year:
And its morning star climbs higher,
Every year.
Earth's hold on us grows slighter,
And the heavy burden lighter,
And the dawn immortal brighter,
Every year.

In the Other Window.

"Ten days is a long time to be sick. You can keep pretty patient the first six of 'em, but the last six—"

Roberta stopped and reckoned. Were there two sixes in ten? She shook her head. It is not always easy to reckon when you are sick.

"The last fi—er—four of 'em you have a perfect right to be cross," she went on. So she was cross.

"I'm just the misa-blest little girl there is!" she scolded aloud. "There can't be anybody in the world as sick an'—unfortunat as I am; so there! Did I want to be sick at this house? Didn't I want to be sick at home, where there's room enough? Mercy! did I want to be sick anywhere? Did I do anything to be sick? No, I didn't."

She almost laughed at herself then—not quite. But perhaps it was that which made her look up just that minute and see the strange little girl at the other window. They had put up the curtain at last. For days Roberta had been wondering what was behind that curtain, but she had not once thought it might be a little girl—and a sick one, too!

The two windows were quite near together, just across a tiny back yard. She could see the strange little girl very plainly, indeed.

"She's thinner an' whiter than I am, an' she's got more pillows behind," thought Roberta. "I wonder if that's as straight as she can sit up?"

Suddenly the strange little girl nodded a shy little nod. Of course Roberta nodded back. If they could only have opened the windows, they would have been acquainted in a few minutes. But, of course, sick folks—

"I know what!" Roberta exclaimed, interrupting her own thoughts. "If that little girl knows how, we can talk deaf an' dumb! I'm going to try and see!"

She hitched up a little nearer the window, and held up her fingers in plain view. Then she made them spell out words, slowly.

"How do you do?" they spelled.

The strange little girl knew how. Her fingers began to spell.

"How do you do?"

After that, as Roberta said, they regularly talked.

"I've got the measles. What have you got?" Roberta said.

"Hip disease."

The strange little girl said very short things, as if her weak little fingers got tired very soon.

"I don't know what that is, but the measles are awful." I am afraid Roberta said "orful." "Ever had them?"

"No, I never."

"Then you ought to be thankful. I

For the Little Ones

To Keep Their Digestion Perfect Nothing is so Safe and Pleasant as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets

Thousands of men and women have found Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets the safest and most reliable preparation for any form of indigestion or stomach trouble.

Thousands of people who are not sick, but are well and wish to keep well take Stuart's Tablets after every meal to insure perfect digestion and avoid trouble.

But it is not generally known that the Tablets are just as good and wholesome for little folks as for their elders.

Little children who are pale, thin and have no appetite, or do not grow or thrive, should use the Tablets after eating and will derive great benefit from them.

Mrs. G. H. Crotley, 538 Washington St., Hoboken, New Jersey, writes: "Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets just fill the bill for children as well as for older folks. I've had the best of luck with them. My three-year-old girl takes them as readily as candy. I have only to say 'Tablets' and she drops everything else and runs for them."

A Buffalo mother, a short time ago, who despaired of the life of her babe, was so delighted with the results from giving the child these Tablets that she went before the notary public of Erie Co., N. Y., and made the following affidavit:

Gentlemen: Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets

were recommended to me for my two-months-old baby, which was sick and puny and the doctors said was suffering from indigestion. I took the child to the hospital, but there found no relief. A friend mentioned the Stuart Tablets and I procured a box from my druggist and used only the large sweet lozenges in the box and was delighted to find they were just the thing for my baby. I feel justified in saying that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets saved my child's life.

MRS. W. T. DETHLOPE.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 12th day of April, 1897,

HENRY KARIS,

Notary Public in and for Erie Co., N. Y.

For babies, no matter how young or delicate, the Tablets will accomplish wonders in increasing flesh, appetite and growth. Use only the large sweet tablets in every box. Full sized boxes are sold by all druggists for 50 cents, and no parent should neglect the use of this safe remedy for all stomach and bowel troubles if the child is ailing in any way regarding its food or assimilation.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have been known for years as the best preparation for all stomach troubles whether in adults or infants.

don't have my curtain up for days, sometimes."

"Weeks, I don't."

Roberta gasped a little.

"One day I ached."

"I always do."

"Mercy!" Roberta thought hard.

"I've had the misa'blest time!"

"Why, I haven't!"

"I didn't have a thing to do."

"Why didn't you sing? I do."

It was a long sentence for the weak little fingers, and they sank wearily into the strange little girl's lap. But the strange little girl was smiling.

Roberta tried again. This would surprise her.

"I've been sick ten days."

"Ten years," spelled the tired, little, thin, white fingers. And then someone came and drew down a curtain at the other window. There was just time to nod and spell "Good-by!"

Ten years! Ten years! Roberta sank back on her pillows and shut her eyes. She was trying to think how it would feel to be sick ten years—to ache always—and sing."

"Oh, I can't! I can't make believe it!" she cried, softly. "An' I thought I was the unfortunatist one in the world. Oh, that poor, that brave little girl in the other window!"—Exchange.

The PRAISE HYMNAL

The Ideal Church Music Book. Half leather binding, $70 per 100. Vellum cloth, $50.

THE FILLMORE BROTHERS CO.
CINCINNATI, OHIO.

Music Publishers and Dealers. Also Band and Orchestra Instruments and Music. Catalogues Free, Correspondence Solicited.

Wireless Prayer.

As the progress of our times has gone along, it has, however, furnished us with still more wonderful illustrations of the mystery of communicating with the world beyond, so that the modern wonders of the telegraph wire, of the ocean cable, of the telephone, of the wireless waves of electric vibration that can now cross the ocean from vessel to vessel—these become still higher types of the wonders of prayer.

A floating paragraph yesterday told us how a gentleman leaving Great Britain, suddenly found himself needing more cash to pay the duty on some valuable imports he was taking with him. He happened to know that his mother was sailing on another vessel of another line, and that this vessel was within a radius of fifty or one hundred miles. He sent a wireless telegram upon the ocean, requesting his mother to pay the purser of her steamer ten pounds, and have the purser communicate with the purser of his steamer. About an hour later a message came back over the sea saying, "Credit ten pounds to Mr. So and So." He had not seen the vessel, but received his answer in hard cash.

Now this little incident speaks of that other world in which some of us are permitted to live, and how we can breathe out upon the waves of ether the needs of this life; and though we cannot see them nor the place they reach, we see the things that come back to us, "grace to help in time of need."—St. Louis Christian Advocate.

Not Wasted.

One would not dare to say how much Mrs. Capen paid the musician for playing at her reception; it was some fabulous sum, but, as she remarked, one must furnish entertainment, and this pianist was all the rage. When the first notes of the instrument rang out, there was a hush for a moment in the brilliant rooms, then a buzz, and the chatter went on with renewed vigor. The pianist's heavy eyebrows came together in a scowl, but he presently forgot himself in the joy of his creation.

Hannah White had been scrubbing for Mrs. Capen that day. It was late in the evening when she left the house. As she passed the open windows of the reception-room the music burst upon her in all its thrilling beauty.

Hannah dropped on the grass in the shadow of a shrub. She was in no haste to get home: Jim was sure to be cross. It was not easy living with a man who had a temper. Hannah had about made up her mind to go back to her mother's. Jim could get along somehow. If he should miss her, so much the better; it would only serve him right.

"Life's hard on poor folks," thought Hannah, as she leaned her tired head against the piazza and listened.

At first the gay music came unmeaningly to her ears, then it deepened into fuller, richer tones.

"If there was only something real, like that!" sighed Hannah, out in the dark.

Suddenly the whole movement changed; a plaintive note crept in and grew into a wistful strain, which rose and fell with yearning tenderness, bringing a strange pain to Hannah's heart. She forgot everything but the longing of those searching notes. Then the sadness lost itself in a glad, sure chord, and the music stopped.

"Why," said Hannah, aloud, sitting up straight, "I didn't know I cared for Jim that way!"

The next day Mrs. Capen said it was money wasted to have music at a reception. Nobody ever listened to it. The musician thought so, too, only it was the music, not the money, he considered as thrown away. But Hannah sang over her wash-tub, and looked so like old sweetheart days, that Jim kissed her and called her "old girl," as he used to do.

"Not all that seems to fail has failed, indeed. What though the seed be cast by the wayside and the birds take it? Yet the birds are fed."—Youth's Companion.

Friendship.

Friendship is worth taking trouble about. It is one of the things about which we should remember the apostle's command, "Hold fast that which is good." Thoreau said, "The only danger in friendship is that it will end." Correspondence and conversation and social courtesies are the ways in which we throw guards around our friendships lest they end. A man who loses a friend for want of a letter now and then is like a man who loses his money for lack of a pocketbook. He is losing a very precious thing for lack of a very little expense and trouble. How carefully Jesus selected the close circle of his friends, and how watchfully he guarded their mutual friendship after he had selected them. The friend who sticketh closer than a brother is always one who has taken some trouble in the matter of his friendships. Let us be careful that we do not go through life with holes in our pockets through which our friendships slip.—S. S. Times.

EVERYTHING for the GARDEN

is the title of Our New Catalogue for 1904—the most superb and instructive horticultural publication of the day—190 pages—700 engravings—8 superb colored plates of vegetables and flowers.

To give this catalogue the largest possible distribution, we make the following liberal offer:

Every Empty Envelope Counts as Cash

To every one who will state where this advertisement was seen and who encloses Ten Cents (in stamps), we will mail the catalogue, and also send free of charge, our famous 50-Cent "Henderson" Collection of seeds, containing one packet each of Sweet Peas, Large Mixed Hybrids; Peas, Giant Fancy Mixed; Asters, Giant Victoria Mixed; Big Boston Lettuce; Early Ruby Tomato and Cardinal Radish in a coupon envelope, which, when emptied and returned, will be accepted as a 25-cent cash payment on any order of goods selected from catalogue to the amount of $1.00 and upward.

PETER HENDERSON & CO

35 & 37 CORTLANDT ST. NEW YORK CITY.

NEW INVENTION!

Write for new booklet, Special Offer this month. Our new Quaker Folding Vapor Bath Cabinets, Latest produced. Everybody delighted. Enjoy at home for 3c each all the marvelous cleansing, invigorating, curative effects of the famous Turkish Baths. Open the 5,000,000 ship pores, purifies the entire system. Beat Hot Springs. Prevents disease. Saves Dr. bills. Cured thousands. Nature's drugless remedy for colds, grip, rheumatism, aches, pains, blood and skin diseases, Kidney trouble children's diseases and female ills. Guaranteed. Sent on 30 days' trial, $100 to $300 a month, salesman, managers, general agents, (1015 1710) WORLD MFG. CO., 82 WORLD BUILDING, CINCINNATI, OHIO.

AMERICA FOR CHRIST

The American Christian Missionary Society calls attention to the vast need of our beloved country. Three-fourths of the land is missionary territory to us. Ours is the plea which presents the gospel as the power of God unto salvation. There never was a time when our plea was more gladly received or more productive of immediate results. In thirteen weeks, since the Detroit Convention, through regular channels. Add to this 1,459 who have come to us from the denominations, and we have a total of 22,688 additions in thirteen weeks, or an average of 1,745 per week.

21,229 Baptisms Have Been Reported

We can be said to have firmly established the cause in but eight states. In nearly all the other states our cause is still in its infancy and can not live without help. More than $50,000 additional appropriations have been asked for already this year. This in the face of the fact that but $56,000 of last year's income was available for mission work.

The Home Board is asking of the brethren $200,000 this year, for pressing needs.

The Corresponding Secretary asks that this great work shall be given its rightful place in the hearts and the help of the brotherhood. The Board is planning wisely and broadly. They ask the preachers to join with them in a mighty forward movement. May is the date of concerted action. Shall we prepare for it? Write us your heart.

BENJAMIN L. SMITH, } Secretaries
GEO. B. RANSHAW, }

American Christian Missionary Society

Y. M. C. A. Bldg., Cincinnati, O.

With the Children

By J. Breckenridge Ellis

The Green Witch.

CHAPTER III.

George Clayton began his week's work in high spirits. For the first time he was earning his living, and soon he would be able to add to the support of his invalid father. He looked upon his present position as temporary, thinking his father must soon be able to find a place for him in Florida. But even if he must stay in Burr City a long time, never for a moment did it occur to him to give up his ambition and his hopes. He was resolved to lift himself above the necessity of earning his livelihood by physical strength. If circumstances kept him from school, he would pursue his studies alone, and develop his mind as far as he might be able.

Each day's routine was pretty much alike, yet each offered variety in its sameness. At six he hurriedly dressed in his old clothes, and went to town, opened the store, and swept the floor and sidewalk. At first, Spot Stoner accompanied him in case of an early customer. But George soon learned the secret characters that told the meaning of the pricemarks, and after that he kept the store till Mr. Stoner and his son came down from breakfast. When they made their appearance, George went back to the Stoner residence, and hitched up the delivery-wagon. It was a light spring-wagon, with a big green umbrella fastened in an iron rod at the back of the seat. Mr. Stoner had three horses; two of them were for his carriage, and the third, "Old Poll," when she kept company with the splendid bay match-horses, looked like a poor country cousin. When the old mare was hitched up to the wagon, she was driven around to the side-gate. Then George went into the yard, circled around the house, and entered the spacious kitchen where, on a table in one corner, his cooling breakfast awaited him. The housekeeper was a tall, thin, dry lady of about fifty, who never ate but one biscuit for breakfast, and who boasted of this lonesome number. Her name was Mrs. Biniter. She had lived with the Stoners so long, that she had been able to arrange the new home just as she knew Mrs. Stoner would want it; that is to say, with all the best where people could see it, and the economical and uncomfortable where the family must spend most of their time. The parlors and the front halls were fitted up in rich luxury, but no one was expected to traverse the darkened carpets, or to step upon the front porch save in case of guests. The family crept up and down the back stairs, and bivouacked in the rear apartments, and were rather intimate with the backyard, which they shared with the chickens.

After a silent breakfast, during which Mrs. Biniter was always present, her keen eyes upon George, and her one-biscuit expression upon her puckered, sorrowful face, he returned to old Poll and drove to the grocery. Perhaps by that time there would be some parcels to deliver, or sacks to be hauled from the mill, or a trip to be made to the freight depot. If not, something needed dusting, or cleaning, or jugs or cans were to be filled; or there was something else; for the moment Mr. Stoner saw George standing on one leg with the other beginning to draw up under him in the attitude of repose, a job for George would flash upon the proprietor's mind. Mr. Stoner had a genius for thinking of work for his employees. He found his new "boy" always ready, always alert, but the grocer never expressed approval, or gave a word of encouragement. George could not tell from Mr. Stoner's manner whether or not he was giving satisfaction. Of course he made mistakes, for he was new to this business, and sometimes his mind would be in Florida when it should have been in Burr City. Mr. Stoner noticed the mistakes at once, and pounced upon them and aired them thoroughly. He seemed hardly to have finished complaining of one error before George would commit another.

"Tom," said his father-in-law, after George had been with them a few days, "how do you find the new boy?"

"He's all right, now," said Mr. Stoner, cautiously, "but they're all that way at first. I've learned not to put confidence in anybody. They all need watching. They'll skin you, the minute you turn your back."

"I don't believe," said Mr. Halway, "that George will ever take advantage of you. I don't believe he will change."

"I'm not going to believe anything about it," said the other dryly. "I'm going to watch him; they've all got to be watched. They're all alike. I have learned not to trust anybody. As soon as I learned that, I began to make money."

George's dinner was like his breakfast, only there was more of it; he saw no one but Mrs. Biniter, except once or twice, when Flora passed through the room. After a solitary supper, which was always cold, and very light, there was one more trip to be made with the wagon. Then Poll was turned out into the lot, and George walked back to the store where he remained until nine. He walked home with Spot. They always went straight to their room where Spot smoked a cigarette and George studied.

After a long day of driving, cleaning, walking and clerking, George found his mind distressingly heavy. In spite of his utmost endeavors, he began to be sleepy as soon as he caught sight of his school-books. He would read over each sentence several times without getting much of its meaning. In the meantime Spot would maintain a brisk conversation, forcing the student to answer occasionally, but, fortunately, content to do most of the talking. George believed when he had grown used to driving about town all day, he would become hardened, and better able to keep from feeling sleepy and exhausted. At last, when Spot had gone to bed, George found himself unable to profit by the silence, for his eyelids would not stay open.

There was another reason that made self-education a difficult matter with George. He had a great sorrow which intruded itself upon his mind insistently. He found that his work had changed him in the eyes of his little world. The fact that he wore a broad brimmed hat and blue overalls, and drove a grocery-wagon and delivered parcels from backdoor to backdoor, seemed, in the opinion of his former associates, to have made of him a totally different George Clayton. He felt that he was the same George; that this work was but for the time, and that one day he would be far above such obscure duties. But the world does not credit a man with a better coat than the one upon his back. Everybody knew Mr. Clayton had been obliged to mortgage his house after the death of his wife, but they had looked upon the house as his, mortgage or no mortgage, and the ownership of such a mansion meant respectability and moral worth. Now that Mr. Clayton had nothing in the world but a bare income to board him with his sister in Florida, and now that his son had become a delivery-boy, Burr City was not sure of his respectability or of his moral worth. One thing, however, was certain; a delivery-boy could not remain in the select set to which George had belonged. His former friends began to give him a slighting nod; then Fanny and Beulah and Linnie and Mary and Bertha with whom Flora had determined to become acquainted, had a new look for him, when they met.

Boys are naturally more democratic than girls, and George did not find that his old friends had ceased to be friendly. There was a spontaneous impulse upon their part to call him "Grocery-wagon," and to inquire after the price of vegetables with an appearance of the gravest interest; but this sprung rather from the natural cruelty of youth than from deliberate unkindness. George detected the greatest difference in his friends' sis-

SEED POTATOES
500,000 BUSHELS
FOR SALE CHEAP

Largest seed potato growers in the world!
 Elegant stock. Tremendous yields.
 From 400 to 1000 bushels per acre

FOR 10 CENTS

and this notice we send you lots of farm seed samples and big catalogue, telling all about Teosinte, Speltz, Peasat, Aerid
 Land Barley, Macaroni Wheat, Bromus,
 Earliest Cane, etc. Send for same today.

JOHN A. SALZER.
SEED CO. LA CROSSE, WIS.

ters. They placed him outside of their set, and ceased to take an interest in him. Linnie Greer, one of the leaders of his former companions, was about to give a lawn-party, but Jamie Greer, her brother, had not mentioned it to George. The invitations had been sent out, and next week there would be laughter and music and games and delight.

Saturday morning, as George ate his breakfast in the kitchen under the economical eye of Mrs. Biniter, the housekeeper, Flora Stoner entered the spacious apartment. George looked up, and answered her "Good morning."

"Are you going to the party, next Friday evening?" Flora inquired.

"No, I think not," said George.

"Well," said Flora, "I don't expect pa would want to let you off duty; but I'll beg him, if you say so."

"I'm not invited," he answered mournfully.

"Why! it's Linnie Greer's party!" exclaimed Flora, opening her eyes wide. "You said she was one of your best friends."

"Yes; I thought she was," George answered slowly. He looked over at the biscuit-plate and caught Mrs. Biniter's eye and paused abashed. He added, to hide his confusion, "But everything's different, now. I mean, my friends. It looks like, when I put on these blue overalls, I put off my friendships."

Flora looked at him in perplexity. In her flower-like apparel, she was not only a great contrast to the "new boy," but to Mrs. Biniter and the bright kitchen. She seemed strangely out of place beside the bare table and plain chair, and the row of cooking-utensils hanging above her head. She was dressed in lavender, with a lavender bow on her braid of golden hair. The delicate face with its soft curves and pure white complexion and rich blue eyes, and little mouth, and dainty, semi-transparent ears, reminded George of fairy-stories and the "Arabian Nights."

Suddenly she exclaimed, "Then I think it's a shame, yes I do! You're just the same in one kind of clothes that you'd be in another, and I'll never think of you any different. Linnie Greer must be just like ma! Well, I got an invitation last night. Isn't that nice?—and I haven't more than just met her. Maybe she'll invite you, yet."

"I expect not," said George gloomily. He could not conceal his bitter disappointment. It was the first time he had been overlooked; indeed, he had been a great favorite in his circle of acquaintances, and his name had always been one of the first mentioned, when a pleasure-party was proposed. The fact that he could be so soon ignored by the Greers, taught him what to expect in the future.

He rose abruptly. "I must hurry to the store," he said, trying to speak lightly.

"Yes," said Mrs. Biniter, "it's best to eat your victuals off-hand and forget about 'em, so you can get your mind on your business. Stomachs, not minds, are for food."

"Ma's coming home, Monday," said Flora, following George into the backyard. "George, don't you let ma discourage you. And don't you ever think I am any different from this minute. You haven't seen much of me, and you don't know me very well, but I expect you'll like to have a friend, won't you?"

"Will you be a friend to me," he asked soberly, "before the girls and boys—to be dressed as I am, and doing the work I do?" He looked intently at her, and thought of princesses and giants and dragons. If she were his friend, he would not care so much if he lost all the others. She answered: "You know I am a stranger in Burr City, and I've got to get in with the set, and to do that, you have to do as they do."

"I suppose that means," said George, his heart sinking as he walked toward the grocery wagon, "that when others are around, you intend to treat me as a stranger, but that when we are by ourselves, you will give me a little notice."

"That's pretty much what I meant," said Flora, standing by the fence as he passed through the gate.

For a moment George did not reply. He had been brooding for a day or two over the changed demeanor of his friends, and now Flora's frank avowal made him feel more bitter and more despondent than ever he had felt in his life. It also made him unreasonable and rude. He certainly had no right to expect Flora, his employer's daughter, and a comparative stranger, to treat him better than the young people he had known all his life. Yet this is what he seemed to expect, for just before unfastening Poll from the hitchpost, he turned about and said abruptly, "Then I don't care for the kind of friendship that is ashamed of itself before company!"

Flora turned very red, but all she said was, "I believe it is going to rain." She looked up at the clouds as she spoke, not at George.

"I hope it will," said George. "Whoa, there! can't you stand still?" This to Poll, who was not budging a leg. "I hope it will pour," he added. "I hope it will just flood!"

"Pa says," observed Flora, "that the crops won't need any more rain for some time."

George had not been thinking about crops. "Flora," he said suddenly, "I'm ashamed of myself, and I hope you'll forgive what I said."

She gave him a radiant smile and answered, "I thought you might like to know, that whatever happens, or however things seem, there are good thoughts for you in my mind all the time."

"I am glad to know it," said George, "and I am sorry for what I said. I didn't really mean it."

"If I am not always the same to you," said Flora, "maybe it's more other people's fault than mine. Anyway, I can't help being what I am, can I? And you know a half loaf is better than no bread."

"Flora," called Mrs. Biniter from the kitchen door, "what would your pa think of you keeping George from his work? And what would your ma think of you standing there?"

"Good-bye!" said Flora, and she ran to the house. George had scarcely seated himself under the big umbrella before it began to sprinkle, and by the time he reached Mr. Stoner's

FREE

Dr. Marshal Beatty, the Nose, Throat, and Lung Specialist, of Cincinnati, recently completed a series of trial treatments of his Antiseptic Medicated Air Cure on one hundred patients; some were consumptives in the lowest emaciated stages, others of a catarrhal, asthmatic and bronchial nature. The record of each patient kept by the Doctor as the home treatment progressed, was very interesting. The most remarkable and gratifying features in connection with the treatment was the rapid healing of the cavities and tubercles of the lungs and the raw, ulcerated surface of the mucous membrane of the entire breathing organs. This is phenomenal, and ample proof that this great discovery has solved the problem of a permanent cure for the thousands of sufferers from all catarrhal, bronchial and lung troubles. In his account of it, the Doctor says: "No germ of Catarrh, Asthma, Bronchitis or Consumption can live under the action of this powerful antiseptic. When taken internally and breathed and inhaled into the air passages, bronchial tubes and cells of the lungs, the germs are at once destroyed and expelled from the system, and the disease is arrested and cured by removing the cause."

To introduce and prove beyond doubt that this great treatment will cure Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, Catarrh and Weak Lungs, Dr. Beatty has decided to make another test offer to others of a Full Month's Treatment, Free, including Inspirator and all medicines complete, exactly as shown in illustration.

The Doctor will keep in close touch with all patients during the progress of the treatment, and will make no charge for his professional services, consultation, and the necessary correspondence.

When Dr. Beatty makes such a liberal offer as this, thereby saving patients the large sums they usually expend for medicine, advice, prescriptions, consultations, etc., there can be no excuse why sufferers should hesitate to put his treatment to the test.

Do not delay, but write at once, addressing Dr. M. Beatty, 294 West 9th St., Cincinnati, Ohio, and tell him the nature of your head, throat or lung trouble, and how long the disease has had a hold on you. This test course is intended to prove the genuine merits of the treatment and costs nothing.

store, his wish was gratified. It was "pouring." Mr. Stoner never allowed the weather to interfere with the duties of his employees, so the wagon was sent forth all morning on its usual rounds. A rubber cloth kept the rain off the vegetables, and George was protected, nominally, at least, by the big green umbrella with its white lettering. When the wind blew, as it did at first, the young driver became pretty wet; but later in the morning it settled down to a steady, straight-lined, corn-making August rain.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Bible College at Home.

Thorough courses by mail, leading to diploma and degree. Distance no hindrance. Students in every state and foreign country. Best testimonials. Catalogue free. Write C. J. Burton, President Iowa Christian College, Oskaloosa, Iowa.

Christian Publishing Company

1522 Locust Street

J. H. GARRISON, - - - - - President
 W. W. DOWLING, - - - - - Vice-President
 W. D. CREE, - - - - - Sec'y and Adv. Manager
 R. P. CROW, - - - - - Treas. and Bus. Manager
 G. A. HOFFMANN, - - - - - General Superintendent

The Aftermath of the Anniversary Number.

I consider the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST by odds our best paper, and will take pleasure in extending its circulation. * * * *

I have been a reader of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, so I feel that I cannot do without it.
 MRS. E. J. ELLIS.

Will do all I can for the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. I take a great deal of pleasure in reading it.
 MRS. M. E. OFFIELD.

"I like the liberal, loyal, loving spirit of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. You are giving us a clean, strong, wholesome paper."
 H. C. GARRISON.

I do not want to miss a number of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. I have taken it ever since it was published in Oskaloosa, and I wouldn't know how to do without it.
 MRS. MARIA STARK.

I have taken the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST ever since its first issue: in fact I have taken it through all its changes from D. L. Wright down to the present time, and cannot do without it.
 P. COURTNEY.

I send my best wishes to the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST and its worthy editor, J. H. Garrison. I earnestly hope that he may live many years that the brotherhood may be blessed by his pious example and wise counsel.
 C. E. HUNT.

I have been a reader of your excellent paper since the Centennial year, 1876, and cannot estimate the amount of good it has done me. I congratulate you upon your long service for the Master, and hope to see you at the helm for many years to come.
 J. F. FISHER.

We would very much miss the weekly visits of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, as it has been coming to our home for about 39 years. My parents began taking it in 1865, when published at Oskaloosa, Ia., by G. T. Carpenter and committee.
 O. W. CARPENTER.

My name is on the list of the Christian-Evangelist. It is there to stay. Don't know how to do without it. It is my one of my best friends. Its face is as bright as the morning, and its youth is renewed like the eagles. May it and its dear editor live forever.
 G. W. TERRELL.

The anniversary number is a "beauty and a joy forever," and the dear old CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST is "It." Long may she move.

Dr. Coffee Cures all Eye Diseases at Home 80-page eye book Free

Dr. Coffee wants to send his famous 80-page illustrated book on "Eye Diseases" Free to every reader of this paper, who is afflicted with Cataracts, Glaucoma, Granulated Lids, Sore Eyes, Ulcers, Scars, Spots on Eye, Weak Eyes, Failing Vision or any kind of eye trouble. This book tells how you can cure yourself and restore your sight perfectly, at your home. Very small expense. Big free book tells how to prevent blindness, gives rules of health, physical culture exercises, etc.

Dr. Coffee restored sight to Miss Lulu Tait, Emmetsburg, Iowa, after six surgical operations left her blind. He cured M. B. Powles, Jackson, Mich., after three surgical operations made one eye blind. Thousands of remarkable cures of all kinds of eye diseases. Dr. Coffee's professional opinion free to all who tell about their case. Write today—don't wait to go blind. Address,
 DR. W. O. COFFEE, 950 Good Block, Des Moines, Ia.

Fifty Years the Standard

DR. PRICE'S CREAM

BAKING POWDER

Improves the flavor and adds to the healthfulness of the food.

PRICE BAKING POWDER CO., CHICAGO.

Words fail me in expressing my love for it and dear Brother Garrison. In the thirty-five years, I have never seen anything from his pen but what I could give a hearty amen.
 J. D. NANCE.

I have read the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST from its birth, and it has always been my favorite paper. I wish I could place it in every Christian home, that all Disciples might imbibe its sweet spirit and receive that inspiration to a better life which it never fails to impart.
 R. E. MCKNIGHT.
 Cisco, Texas.

I wish to congratulate you on the thirty-five years of excellent service you have faithfully rendered to Christian journalism. Your work in connection with the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST is most praiseworthy. But your work has been much wider. You have written much that has been published in other papers, and even things which never have been published, but have borne much good fruit.

May you still have many happy anniversaries of your entrance into your chosen sphere of life.
 J. M. VANHORN.

Permit me to say a word for the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. I am more than pleased with it. Some times we change our opinions radically on certain points after we come in contact with them, and this has been my experience with the now beloved CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. It is a mighty force in the church of Jesus Christ, and is exerting a powerful influence throughout all America. I wish you God's blessing through all its course, and may it multiply its subscribers by the thousands.
 D. S. DORNER.

I never fail to bear testimony for the Christian-Evangelist. I am more and more impressed with the spirit of the paper, and I look for its coming each week. R. R. Burly asked me which paper I considered the best, and I answered the Christian-Evangelist. He subscribed at once. I hope to do more to help in the near future.

I rejoice in your long period of service for the Master and the brethren, and I pray God that you may be spared many years to lead us in the great struggle for truth and righteousness.
 J. R. GOLDEN.

I heartily wish the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST were in every home of the Cameron Church. It is truly an honor to our brotherhood. I want to thank you personally for the encouragement, inspiration, and breadth of outlook it brings to my own life every week.

It is a pleasure for me to speak a good word in behalf of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, for when I do so I know I am commending a paper which stands always for the highest interests of our Lord's Kingdom. With best wishes, I am
 RICHARD W. WALLACE.
 Cameron, Mo.

I have just been reading those splendid encomiums from our brethren on the Christian-Evangelist, and I want to say right here that I heartily concur in them all. I began reading the Christian-Evangelist with the beginning of my ministry over twenty years ago, and in all these years I have not found a time that I felt I could give it up with safety to my work. We have many good and helpful papers in our brotherhood and I like them all, but I like best and read most the Christian-Evangelist, because it helps me most in my work, and were I asked which part of it I liked best and read most, I should answer as did Sam Jones with reference to the Bible, I like it best and read it most "from kiver to kiver." With best wishes for your continued usefulness, I am respectfully, your fellow-laborer,
 S. J. VANCE.

THE CHRISTIAN- EVANGELIST

A WEEKLY RELIGIOUS NEWSPAPER.

Vol. XLI. No. 6.

February 11, 1904.

$1.50 A Year.

UNION AVENUE CHRISTIAN CHURCH, ST. LOUIS.

To be erected on corner of Union and Von Versen Avenues.

(Weber & Groves, Architects.)

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING CO. ST. LOUIS, MO.

St. Louis.

THE CHRISTIAN EVANGELIST

"IN FAITH, UNITY, IN OPINION AND METHODS, LIBERTY, IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY."

Vol. XLI.

February 11, 1904

No. 6

Current Events

Japan has taken the decisive step by breaking off diplomatic negotiations with Russia. The Japanese minister at St. Petersburg has called for his passports and the legation has been withdrawn from the capital. Russia's only reply to this as yet has been the inevitable one of withdrawing her diplomatic representative from Tokio. In view of the fact that Japan took this important step without waiting to receive Russia's reply to her last note, it will be generally assumed that Russia has succeeded in her obvious desire to throw upon Japan the odium and responsibility of making the first hostile movement. In placing the responsibility, however, public opinion will make due allowance for Russia's unwarrantable delay in making her reply. Russia's last note suggesting a modification of Japan's first demand was delivered on Jan. 6. Japan's reply was given on Jan. 13. During the three and a half weeks that have elapsed since that time, Japan has been unsuccessfully endeavoring to get an answer. Six times the Japanese minister at St. Petersburg has called at the foreign office to urge a prompt reply. The only result has been more promises and more procrastination. Meanwhile, Russia has been proceeding with her preparations, hurrying supplies to the far east and concentrating troops upon the Manchurian border. As the Russian base of supplies is far distant from the scene of the probable conflict, while Japan is close at hand, this delay is obviously to the interest of Russia. The limits of patience and prudence have been passed and Japan now insists that Russia must consume no more time in preparing for war under the pretext of negotiating for peace. It is reported that the Russian note was already in the hands of Russia's minister at Tokio and would have been delivered within a few hours had not Japan's decisive act necessitated its recall. This may be true, or it may be a report given out to throw further blame on Japan.

The breaking off of diplomatic relations is considered almost equivalent to a declaration of war. There are still ways of avoiding actual hostilities, but it must be admitted, even by those who have been arguing that the probability of war is much less than was popularly supposed, that the next dispatches from the far east are more than likely to tell of an actual clash either by sea or by land. The question of most interest now is not the probability of war, but the probability of victory for one side or the other. Only the rash prophets will be willing to venture a positive prediction on this point. The advantages are nicely balanced. Russia has more men, more money, the control of contiguous territory from which an invasion of Korea can be executed without recourse to ships, and the advantage of having her base of supplies and the centers of her national life absolutely safe from molestation by the enemy. Japan has the advantages of nearness to the scene of the conflict, of a stronger naval force than Russia can concentrate in Japanese and Korean waters, of having no long lines of communications to defend, of superior agility and shiftiness, of probably greater fighting efficiency man for man, and certainly superior qualities of endurance on the part of her troops. The Russian soldier, like any other European, must be fed. The Japanese is as independent of the commissary as it is possible for a human being to be. He will march and fight for a week on a handful of rice. This fact itself goes far toward offsetting Russia's superior financial resources. The fact that the Japanese are fighting near home and that defeat may mean national annihilation, will be a distinct advantage during the fight, though it will be a serious disadvantage in case of a Russian victory. Japan feels that she is fighting for her life. Russia is fighting only for political advantage. The weakest element of Russia's position is the Trans-Siberian railroad, upon which she must depend for the transportation of troops and supplies to the front. Here is a single-track railroad, five thousand miles long, running through a region very thinly populated. To guard the entire length of it will be an almost impossible task. To leave it unguarded will be to put every bridge, trestle and culvert at the mercy of any Japanese spy, disguised as a Chinese coolie, with a stick of dynamite under his blouse. The guarding of such a long line of communication will be an absolutely new problem in the art of war. Unless Russia can successfully solve it, her vast resources at home will do her but little good in the field.

Ed. Butler has been tried and acquitted on the charge of furnishing $47,500 to bribe members of the St. Louis House of Delegates to vote for the municipal lighting bill in 1899. It will be remembered that a few months ago Mr. Butler was convicted of bribery in the case of the garbage contract, was sentenced to three years' imprisonment and that the Missouri Supreme Court reversed the decision on purely technical grounds. In this second case, which was tried last week at Fulton, Mo., the jury saved the state further expense by bringing in a verdict of "not guilty." Six members of the former "combine" in the House of Delegates testified on oath that they received $2,500 apiece for their votes on the lighting bill. J. K. Murrell, who was at that time acting as agent and manager for the combine, reported in full his negotiations with Mr. Butler, told how their original demand for $75,000 had been scaled down to $47,500, and testified to receiving the latter amount from Mr. Butler and distributing it among the nineteen members of the combine. The other five corroborated the essential features of this testimony. The case against Mr. Butler rested chiefly upon this evidence. The defense impeached the evidence of these six men on the ground that the testimony of men so dishonest as to receive a bribe could not be relied upon. It has always been one of the acknowledged difficulties in securing convictions on charges of bribery that it is almost impossible to get convincing evidence of the giving of a bribe except from the person who received it. A few months ago, when the investigation of the Jefferson City scandals was in progress, members of the legislature who were supposed to know something about the distribution of one thousand dollar-bills, were allowed to refuse to testify on the ground that they would incriminate themselves. The very sort of evidence which was sought for then, and the lack of which most seriously embarrassed the prosecution, is now in the Butler case thrown out as unconvincing. The course of justice in Missouri is very, very strange.

Mr. Bryan's recent assertion that the only proper Democratic platform for the coming campaign is a reaffirmation of the platforms of 1896 and 1900, gives occasion for interest-

Ed. Butler
Acquitted.

Changing Issues.

ing speculation as to how many other Democrats cherish the same view of their party's present duty and opportunity. After all, it is not the opinions of Republicans or non-partisans that are most significant on this point, but the opinions of the men who claim to be loyal Democrats. A few days ago in a debate in the House of Representatives, the Democratic leader, John Sharpe Williams, was asked point blank what he thought of "16 to 1" as an issue. His reply was definite and significant. As a political issue he classed it with the doctrine of extreme state rights and the right of secession. As a matter of academic or historical interest, one might still conduct an argument in favor of them, but as practical issues they are dead, and those who were their strongest advocates are satisfied now to turn to other issues. They may not feel called upon to repent in sackcloth and ashes, and they may retain a sentimental attachment for the lost causes of secession and free silver, but they must be ready to leave these dead issues in the dead past and find new ones for the present. This is the opinion of the Democratic leader in the House. It no more carries with it the condemnation of Mr. Bryan's past course than the loyalty of a reconstructed confederate carries with it the renunciation of his admiration for Lee and Gordon. But it is saying with great clearness that if Mr. Bryan persists in treating a lost cause as a living issue, the party will have to commit its guidance to other hands.

But the question is whether the rank and file of the party is most adequately represented by this statement of Mr. Williams or by Mr. Bryan's declaration of renewed allegiance to the Kansas City platform. Some interesting light on this question is afforded by a canvass of the Democratic members of the Senate and the House by a representative of the New York Herald. Interviews were obtained with 104 Democratic members of these two bodies. Of this number only four came out squarely in favor of following the course which Mr. Bryan advises; 64 took the opposite stand and declared themselves in favor of new leadership and new issues; and the remainder, probably having friends in both places, declined to take sides. We are inclined to think that Mr. Bryan will develop more strength than this in the nominating convention. But however that may be, we have here the opinions of a large group of prominent Democrats who are representing their party at the national capital.

President Hadley, of Yale, in giving some advice recently to a group of Harvard students, urged them not to go into politics until they had acquired an independent means of livelihood. A good many criticisms have been passed upon this advice. It seems to some that to adopt it would be to rule all but rich men out of politics and would create the same conditions that prevail in Great Britain, where members of Parliament receive no compensation, and where poor men are thus shut out by sheer force of necessity. The critics should remember, however, that Dr. Hadley was not proposing a law, but was giving advice. He was not suggesting a plan for keeping poor men out of politics, however eager they might be to get in; he was urging them for their own good not to go in until they had other means of livelihood. And from that point of view the advice was unquestionably good. Corrupt politics may be a lucrative occupation at the present time, but honest politics offers a precarious livelihood. In no other legitimate occupation is a man so likely to be thrown out of employment after he has, by concentrated effort in one position, incapacitated himself for successfully doing anything else. Undoubtedly the country would have been vastly the loser if some men had stayed out of politics who had to depend on their offices for their living, but it would also be vastly the gainer if some others of the same class had devoted themselves to other pursuits. At any rate, we believe that President Hadley is giving sound advice when he suggests that, for the sake of his family and his honor, a man should not go into politics "until he has some independent means of support sufficient to keep him and his family from starvation, upon which he could fall back if he were defeated for office or felt that he could not honorably accept office under the conditions imposed."

The Sherman anti-trust law of 1890 has not shown itself to be such a drastic piece of legislation as to call for any moderation of its provisions in the direction of leniency toward the trusts. Mr. Foraker has, however, introduced a bill proposing to amend that law so that neither it nor any part of the interstate commerce law "shall hereafter apply to foreign commerce, or prohibit any act or contract in restraint of trade among the several states, if such restraint be reasonable." That any injury to legitimate business has resulted from the Sherman law, or could result from it, even if its enforcement were much more rigid and universal than it is likely to be, cannot easily be established. The Northern Securities case attracted no little attention, and the attorneys for the defendant in that case undertook to show what dire results would follow from a strict enforcement of the law. The least that can be said is that their demonstrators failed to demonstrate. They left the public more than ever convinced that the law is good as far as it goes, and that stricter enforcement of it, rather than relaxation, is desirable. Mr. Foraker's bill proceeds upon the opposite hypothesis. We hope it will not pass. At present the public has more to fear from the trusts than the trusts have to fear from the public, and we are opposed to any legislation which will increase the present inequalities.

Brevities.

William H. Taft, former governor of the Philippines, entered upon his new office as Secretary of War, on Monday, Feb. 1.

The Louisiana Purchase Exposition Company is attempting to secure from Congress a loan of $4,600,000, to be repaid out of the gate receipts.

Beginning Sunday morning, Feb. 7 a terrible fire has been raging in the city of Baltimore. Up to Monday noon the fire has swept forty blocks in the wholesale district of the city, and the flames were not yet under control. About twenty lives were lost, more than half of the victims being firemen, and the property loss is estimated at from one hundred to two hundred million dollars.

The trial of the charges against Senator Reed Smoot will begin March 1 before the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections. It is expected that before the matter is settled there will be a thorough examination of the present status of Mormonism with reference to the compliance of its officers and members with the requirements of the federal laws. The case of Mr. Smoot himself is not overwhelmingly important, but the investigation will be of great value if it throws light on the present conduct of the Mormon Church.

Gov. Odell, of New York, has refused to honor the requisition of Gov. Dockery, of Missouri, for the extradition of William Ziegler, the baking powder millionaire, who has been indicted for bribery in Missouri. Gov. Odell claims that the evidence does not show that Mr. Ziegler was in Missouri at the time that the alleged crime took place. This raises an interesting question. Suppose a man in New York bribes a Missouri legislator by mail. The crime is not committed in New York because no one is bribed there. It is not committed in Missouri, because there is no briber there. Perhaps this is a case for the federal courts.

The Panama Canal is the first proposition since 1776 in which Massachusetts has agreed with South Carolina.—The St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

General Greely thinks that automobiles will be generally used in future wars. No wonder the Powers are beginning to be timid about going to war.—The Chicago News.

"Shall the money changers rule this country?" demands Mr. Bryan. Judging from the result of his own efforts to change the money, they will not.—The Philadelphia North American.

Unconquered Land.—V.

The Creed, the Ordinances and the Life—2.

In our last article we defined, briefly, the nature of the New Testament creed, and pointed out some of the errors to be avoided, in our understanding of it and in our use of it. It is our purpose in this article to deal with the second item in the generalization, namely:

The ordinances. Christianity is pre-eminently a spiritual religion. In this respect it differs from Judaism and all other religions. Whereas Judaism was loaded down with ordinances, rites and ceremonies, Christianity contains but two simple ordinances—baptism and the Lord's Supper. It is worthy of note, too, that both these ordinances are monumental in their character, symbolizing, as they do, great fundamental facts in the gospel. They both relate directly to Jesus Christ, and derive their sole significance and value from this fact. Christian baptism, as Paul reminds us in more than one passage, symbolizes the burial and resurrection of Christ, which is the monumental and enduring proof of his divine character and mission. It thus associates the penitent believer with Christ, and signifies the end of his old life and his resurrection to newness of life in Christ Jesus. The Lord's Supper symbolizes, by its elements, the body and blood of the Lord Jesus, who died for our sins, and hence remains the enduring monument, through all time, of his sacrificial death.

There is, therefore, a very vital relation between the creed and the ordinances, the latter being an expression and embodiment of the former. The ordinances bear witness to the creed, and the creed gives value and meaning to the ordinances. Except as the soul's expression of faith and trust in the personal Christ, neither of these ordinances has the slightest value. But when conceived of and obeyed as the sincere expression of the soul's faith in and loyalty to the Son of God, they carry with them blessings of the greatest value. They meet, and were designed to meet, real needs of the soul that believes on Christ and is seeking some method of expressing its faith and love, and entering into relations with Christ as his disciple.

There have been two fundamental mistakes, as it seems to us, concerning these ordinances: one is that of the Roman Catholic Church, which makes of baptism an indispensable vehicle for conveying regenerative grace, and of the Lord's Supper a continual miracle in which the emblems are transmuted into the actual body and blood of Christ. This view disassociates baptism from faith, so far as the person baptized is concerned, and imparts to the external act alone, with its formula, the magic power of regeneration. The other extreme has been the losing sight of the direct relation between these ordinances and the Christ to whom they relate, and treating them as mere church rites or ceremonies. This remark applies more particularly to baptism, which, having been once separated from a personal faith in Christ, and ceasing to be an expression of the soul's surrender to him, easily became a sort of ecclesiastical football to be kicked hither and thither by any theologian whose particular theory was impinged upon by it. No wonder one religious body has ceased entirely to give any recognition to the ordinance, while others simply tolerate it as a venerable institution that has come down from the past.

The truth lies between these two extremes. Divine wisdom has united these ordinances with faith in Christ, and what God hath joined together, no man should part asunder. These ordinances do not generate life, but they express it and bring the penitent believer into such relation to God in Christ as to enable him to claim and to realize the remission of sins and the gift of the Holy Spirit. They are designed by infinite wisdom and compassion as helps to the struggling soul seeking its way to God and to the knowledge of peace and forgiveness. Baptism is the initiatory or confessional act in which the soul declares its allegiance to Christ, and enters into fellowship with his people. The Lord's Supper is the tender memorial of Christ's death, observed weekly in the primitive church by His disciples who gathered on the Lord's day for this purpose and to join in His worship. They are means, not ends.

God is not wholly dependent upon them for conveying the sense of His love and peace, but He has ordained them as helps to this end. No one, therefore, has the right to treat them as of little value, to neglect them, to so change their form as to destroy their significance, or to displace them from the position to which they are assigned in the New Testament.

On the other hand, to attach to any external ordinance a magic power to regenerate the soul, or any meritorious power to win God's favor and forgiveness, is to depart from the teaching of Christ and the New Testament, and to convert Christianity into a sort of improved Mosaism. There is probably a natural tendency on the part of men to attach undue importance to that which is purely external, against which we, who are seeking to restore the pure spiritual Christianity of the New Testament, should be on our guard. While we insist on the utmost loyalty to Christ in obeying these ordinances, this obedience is to be based on faith in Christ, and not in the ordinances themselves. The power, the merit, the saving grace, are all in Christ, and all that the ordinances can do is to help us in appropriating this grace and power. Nor must we permit ourselves to become wise above what is written, in seeking to make some philosophy of these ordinances which we believe we have discovered beyond the plain statements in the New Testament, a condition of acceptable obedience to them. If they are obeyed from the heart, out of love to Christ, the obedience is acceptable; otherwise there can be no acceptable obedience, no matter how correct our theory or philosophy may be.

So, if we steer clear of the two extremes mentioned, maintaining the ordinances as they have been delivered to us in the New Testament, using them for the purposes for which they are designed, and never separating them from faith in Christ, and never making them substitutes for a clean heart or a pure life, we shall best promote a pure Christianity, and that simplicity of the gospel which has made our plea so forceful and successful in the past.

"Surely He Hath Borne Our Griefs."

The Iroquois Theatre disaster has called forth many new statements of old theories respecting the problem of evil and suffering. Why does God permit men to suffer such disasters? But there is another side to the matter. Does not God suffer at the sight of such spectacles and in the foreknowledge of them? Does not the carelessness and folly of men bring sorrow to the loving Father? The following poem by Hugh Macnaghten was published in the London Spectator:

We might have spared Him this,
The worst of all the sorrows of the year,
The many children whom He held so dear,
The women and the men
Who shared His creed,
So wonderfully fashioned in the womb,
So wisely loved, and then
Through human thoughtlessness or greed
Condemned to this unutterable doom—
We might have spared Him this.

He has so much to bear;
In every pang of every stricken heart
Throughout His universe He claims a part,
And wanders up and down
By street and square,
And sees the travail of the souls of all
In every pitiless town
Or in the fields and makes it His;
He feels a wound when fluttering sparrows fall:
We might have spared Him this.

Think what it must have been
To love the children as He loves alone,
And this, through every day, to have fore-known,
And this, through every hour,
To have foreseen.
Is any other sorrow like to His,
Who, having boundless power,
Beheld our agony of need
And died again with all (O! hearts that bleed),
Yet could not spare us this?

Let the churches remember that Feb. 14 is the Day of Prayer for Colleges. And let them not forget to do something toward making their prayers effective. The churches are still saying to the needy colleges, "Depart in peace. Be ye warmed and fed."

Editor's Easy Chair.

A vase of violets setting on our desk this morning, shedding their fragrance on the wintry air, served to remind us of another anniversary, and one which comes too often of late. Did it ever strike you how many eminent men began their existence on this mundane sphere in the shortest month of the year? Two of them at least are world-wide celebrities—George Washington and Abraham Lincoln. How much poorer this world would have been without these two great benefactors of their race! Even the second day of February is not without distinction in the annals of time. Not only is it the day when the hairy weather-prophet in the woods emerges from his den to forecast the remainder of the winter, but it is also the birthday of Christian Endeavor—a movement of world-wide interest and blessing, which has already girdled the globe carrying with it new lines of light and life. But an event of far less note and value to the world gives the day special interest to the editor of this paper, as it was the day upon which he matriculated in the school of life and began to take lessons from some of its stern but beneficent teachers. Perhaps the best conception we can form of this world in its relation to human life, is to think of it as a great school, into which we enter to learn the great lessons of life, and to be disciplined and trained, and thus fitted for other and higher spheres. Thus conceived, the world seems admirably fitted for its purpose, and life takes on a deeper and higher meaning.

But what dull scholars most of us are! How difficult it seems for us to spell out the lessons God would teach us! Every page of human history contains lessons for our admonition and instruction, but how slow we are to read them aright! The past is crowded with examples of the evil consequences of wrong-doing, and with shining illustrations of the enduring rewards that come to the righteous; and yet men rush blindly on in paths of wrong-doing as if there were no warning voices in history, and no prophetic notes in our own experience, telling us what the end must be. Men hug their fatal delusions about what secures true happiness, and often learn too late, what Solomon found out in his old age, that it is not wealth, not learning, not high position, not the gratification of human pride, nor any of the lower appetites and passions, but in self-control, in reverence to God, in love of fellow men, in unselfish service for others, that the soul finds its truest happiness and its largest expansion. Yet one of the compensations for increasing years is that these delusions are dispelled, one by one, if we are facing the light and seeking to walk in the path of duty. The lessons seem easier to learn, and God's meaning in history and providence, and in our own personal experience, is more readily understood. Any thoughtful man who has sought to know the meaning of human life, standing on the heights of three score years and more, can see that the things for which the great mass of human beings are struggling and toiling as if everything depended upon their securing them, are of little worth, and that the chief good of life is largely overlooked.

We may set down here a few lessons which we have been able to spell out of God's handwriting in the school of life:

A well-trained mind, a good conscience and a pure heart, constitute an enduring form of wealth, with which the grosser forms of wealth for which men struggle are not to be compared.

To love God and one's fellowmen, and to seek to do good as we have opportunity, cherishing no malice toward any, but charity for all, is the true road to happiness and to enduring friendships.

It is better to be loyal to one's conscience, even though it involve the temporary loss of friends, than to sacrifice convictions of truth in the interest of one's own personal profit or popularity.

The home is the citadel of character, and we confide most in those who love their homes and cherish the sacredness of the family ties and relationships. There is no duty greater than to make the home the center of the purest and most wholesome influences for molding the character of the young.

The things which divide, which alienate, and erect barriers between brethren, are to be avoided, while the things that make for peace, for unity, for co-operation among those who love God,—these should be studied and practiced.

Love is mightier than logic, and life—larger and fuller life—is a better corrective of error than harsh criticisms and personal controversies.

But when we have studied hard as we may, here, there will be a great many problems which we shall not be able to solve in this present school. Many of the trials which shadow our lives here, must wait for their full explanation until after our graduation into that other and higher school, where we shall be under the direct tuition of the Great Teacher Himself. We may not know, and perhaps it is best we should not know, here and now, the meaning of these darker mysteries of life.

If you could push ajar the gates of life
And stand within, and all God's workings see,
We could interpret all this doubt and strife
And for each mystery find a key!

But not to-day. Then be content, poor heart!
God's plans like lilies pure and white unfold;

We must not tear the close-shut leaves apart;
Time will reveal the calyxes of gold.

And if, through patient toil, we reach the land
Where tired feet, with sandals loosed, may rest,
When we shall clearly know and understand,
I think that we will say, "God knew the best!"

In a few minutes a south-bound train will be carrying the Editor and his wife into the land of flowers and sunshine. The Easy Chair will tell you something about it—provided you will be good and raise $250,000 for foreign missions, $5,000 for our World's Fair Exhibit, and 10,000 new subscribers for the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST.

Questions and Answers.

What is the gift of the Holy Spirit, spoken of in Acts 19?—MRS. H. A. MASSEY.

It is the Holy Spirit Himself, promised to all obedient believers in Christ. The disciples at Ephesus had not learned of Christ except through John, and had not been baptized in his name. The Holy Spirit is Christ's gift to his obedient followers.

Having read the article in the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST recently, entitled "On the Journey to Unity," I would like to ask why the pilgrims returned to the City of Division instead of proceeding to the City of Unity? Surely there must have been some great obstacle that rendered their progress impracticable.—B.

The article by "Traveler" suggested what the "obstacle" was that prevented some of the pilgrims from continuing their journey to unity. Some were opposed to the idea of unity, as impracticable, others cared more for their particular "branch" of the church, than for the church as a whole. In a word, the spirit of ism was stronger than the spirit of unity.

What is meant by spiritually discerning truth, in 1 Cor. 2:14?—BIBLE STUDENT.

Just as art is discerned by some artistic taste or ability, just as music is discerned or interpreted by those possessing musical taste and ability, just as poetry is discerned or understood by one possessing some poetic insight and ability, so the spiritual world and spiritual realities are discerned only by those who are spiritually-minded. This is simply a universal law, that runs throughout God's universe. As well expect some untrained rustic, with no musical knowledge above that of the jews-harp, to go into ecstasies over one of the symphonies of Beethoven, as for a carnally-minded man to be enraptured with the Sermon on the Mount, or with the 13th chapter of 1st Corinthians.

Two statements were made in the pulpit here last night, concerning the truth of which I would like to inquire. It was said (1) that all our leading evangelists favor and recommend the Christian Standard above all other church papers, and prefer to hold meetings where the church read that paper. (2) It was said that Church Federation binds all that go into it to abide by the decision of the majority. Are these things true?—D.

(1) As to the first of these questions, we have only to say we do not think the statement is true, and do not know how the preacher could know it to be true. Much would depend upon whom he regards as our "leading evangelists." We had supposed that the evangelists, as a rule, were friendly to all our papers, and while they might have their personal preferences, would be too prudent to use their influence exclusively in the interest of one or to the injury of another. We are still inclined to that belief.

(2) By this time, all intelligent readers of our papers understand that Church Federation is the free, voluntary co-operation of churches along lines of common interest, and that it compels or forces no church to do anything against its wish. The idea that a majority can bind a church or individual to do anything without their consent or approval, is a pure figment, for the repetition of which there is no longer any shadow of excuse.

Notes and Comments.

No church should be content to simply enjoy gospel privileges. This should be remembered as we approach the March offering for Foreign Missions. The church's first and supreme concern should be to help Christ to seek and to save the lost.

The New Church is planning to erect at the St. Louis World's Fair a reproduction of the house of Emanuel Swedenborg. The latest map of the Exposition grounds shows the building of the Disciples of Christ as the only religious building in the entire Exposition. This will be the case unless the New Church succeeds in carrying out its plans.

If we reach a quarter of a million dollars for Foreign Missions this year the churches must make careful preparation. Indeed, without due preparation the offering will amount to little. There should be missionary sermons, earnest prayers offered for the work, ringing announcements, and the facts should be laid upon the hearts and consciences of the whole membership of the several churches.

In our agitation for the annual offering for Foreign Missions, let us remind ourselves that missions are primary and essential in Christianity. Behind the last commission of our Lord is his great heart's desire for the evangelization of the world. His last command to believers is recorded by his four biographers and repeated the fifth time in the first chapter of Acts. The obligation to preach the gospel to the whole creation was thus early stamped upon the heart of the infant church.

Principles and habits are two factors in the well ordered moral life. "The man of principle," says the Sunday-School Times, "may give way under a temptation which well-formed habits would have enabled him to resist, while a man of fixed habits in a particular line of activity may keep straight even though he thinks little about principles." The moral is: Embody your principles in settled habits, but don't assume that all of your habits are matters of principle by which others can be judged.

The late General John B. Gordon was not only a gallant soldier and a chivalrous gentleman, but was one of the most thoroughly reconstructed of all ex-Confederates. A correspondent in the Central Christian Advocate relates this incident of him:

He was just beginning his lecture at the Assembly at Havana, Ill., when some one in the audience asked that a small flag used in decorating be taken down, as it hid the speaker's face. General Gordon stepped to that side of the platform and raised his hand to remove the flag, but stopped and said: "No, I cannot take that flag down, for I spent four years trying to do that, and I promised not to do it any more."

Flippant church music and trashy song-books are a great evil under the sun. Good gospel songs are good. But it is as easy to imitate them as it is to caricature a man with strongly marked features. And vast numbers of our so-called "gospel songs" are only imitations and caricatures. Sometimes when neither the words nor the music is essentially bad by itself, the combination is incongruous. A writer in the Word and Way, describing one of these songs, says:

The words were put into the mouth of an alleged broken-hearted, penitent sinner coming to Christ, but the tune represented a half-grown boy with his hat on the back of his head, whistling snatches of tunes, answering the call of the dinner bell, playing leap frog with the posts on the way and ending up with a hand-spring just outside the dining-room door.

In that same connection, it occurs to us that a somewhat wider range of hymns might be utilized as invitation hymns than most of us employ. May not any hymn which presents Christ as a loving companion, a good master or a needed Savior, or which asserts the love and Fatherhood of God, be properly used to accompany the invitation of the gospel? The invitation hymn is an important factor in winning acceptance for the invitation itself. But if the message will only be received when accompanied by a jig-tune, something is wrong either with the message or with the way it is presented. The writer quoted above further says:

We need a revival of hymn singing. Our worship will become more vigorous, more beautiful, more satisfying and everywhere more helpful when we introduce more of strength, stateliness, dignity, reverence and sublimity into our singing. Some of us are weary of the everlasting I'll do this, and I've done that, I'm coming and I'm going, of the average song book. Away with it! Let us have hymns of adoration.

The following statement from Theodore Roosevelt, made when he was governor of New York, has a very direct application to the political situation in Missouri:

"The party man who offers his allegiance to party as an excuse for blindly following his party, right or wrong, and who fails to try to make that party in any way better, commits a crime against the country."

This worthy sentiment is commended to those who would lead Mr. Folk out of the Democratic party because he refused to support Mr. Butler, whom he is prosecuting for criminal offenses. One thing which President Hayes said, will live as long as our country endures as a free republic: "He serves his party best who serves his country best." That is as true religiously as it is politically.

The World of To-day prints the following religious statistics for the year 1903:

	Present membership.	Growth last year.
Congregational.....	652,849	6,855
Disciples of Christ.....	1,220,841	33,464
Evangelical.....	65,100	1,219
Friends (orthodox).....	93,289	1,675
Methodist (north).....	3,010,560	29,265
Methodist (south).....	1,518,854	41,674
Presbyterian (north).....	1,067,477	22,139
Presbyterian (south).....	235,142	5,500
Presbyterian, United.....	135,651	3,175
Presbyterian, Cumberland.....	185,113	620
Presbyterian (all bodies).....	1,664,926	31,552
Protestant Episcopal.....	773,261	15,209
Reformed, Dutch.....	113,499	601
Reformed, German.....	268,900	12,200
Unitarian.....	73,000	2,000
Universalist.....	54,102	594
United Brethren.....	294,314	4,697

We do not understand why the Baptists are omitted from the above table, unless statistics from that body were not available. In an editorial paragraph the same magazine says it has the impression that the Baptists of the North are "hardly more than holding their own," but that in the South, "several states report large additions to their numbers." The editor remarks that, "paradoxical as it may seem, the Baptists have the strongest educational institutions in regions where they are making the least numerical growth." In the per cent of increase during the past year, it will be seen that the Disciples of Christ are still in the lead, having a very close second in the Methodists, South, and a close third in the Presbyterians, (all bodies). And yet our increase last year was below the normal. We expect the present year's increase to excel it considerably. Every facility should be given to our statistician to enable him to secure full and accurate reports from the various states.

"The man who wears a smiling face and cheerful countenance when the shadows of life come upon him is a man whose friendship you should seek."

Theology Gone Mad By William Durban

Is the religious intellectualism of the twentieth century executing a topsy turvy maneuver? Where are we who thought that the great Protestant reformation in Germany and Britain had saved Christianity and established Evangelicalism, and that Luther, Melancthon, Zwingle, Wesley, Whitefield, Bunyan, Toplady, Calvin, Knox, Chalmers, Spurgeon, and such champions of all that is conventionally understood by orthodoxy, had firmly founded the Puritan system on a basis both wide and deep? I ask the question in real bewilderment. Where are we? Individually, some of us know exactly our location in regard to faith in the heart and conviction in the mind. But collectively, I fear that the symptoms in Protestantism are ominous.

An Episcopal Labyrinth.

Two men are just now standing in front of all others in the ecclesiastical sphere in England, for they are attracting eager attention, beyond all others. They are the Bishop of Worcester, Dr. Gore, and Hensley Henson, Canon of Westminster and vicar of St. Margaret's, the famous "House of Commons Church." These two brilliant dignitaries of the Established Church are fighting each other fiercely through the press over the case of the Rev. G. Beeby, an obscure Worcestershire vicar, who has emerged into notoriety by means of an article in a magazine on the Incarnation, in which he traverses the orthodox dogma of the Virgin birth. Now, Mr. Beeby of himself would have caused scarcely a ripple but for the action of his bishop in rebuking him for heterodoxy. The admonished clergyman took the admonition so much to heart, because his diocesan impugned his honor, that he resigned his living. Now, even this was not in itself an unprecedented kind of incident. But it is causing a commotion which threatens to grow into an ecclesiastical cyclone. Had one of the more Evangelical prelates attacked the latitudinarian cleric, the position would have seemed consistent. But, led by Canon Henson, the Liberal clergy, as the Broad Church clergy are now usually styled, are opening a furious bombardment on the Bishop of Worcester, and they are loading their cannon with ammunition from Dr. Gore's own armory.

It happens that the Bishop of Worcester is the most influential and the ablest of that modern and peculiar section of the English clergy who constitute the Broad High type. The very mention of such an extraordinary religious school of thought suggests the confusion, amounting to absolute chaos, which now prevails in the great Anglican communion, with its 25,000 clergymen and its vast membership. We used to be able to feel our way without growing dizzy between the divisions into Broad Church with its latitudes, High Church with its attitudes, and Low Church with its platitudes; but now all is hopelessly distracting as we find the wealthy, fashionable, proud and stately church playing at theological dissolving views. Truly the phantasmagoria of High Broads, High Stiffs, Old High and New Highs, Old Evangelicals and New Evangelicals, the latter meaning the Ritualists who would be simple High Churchmen but that they blend Evangelical doctrine very ingeniously with elaborate ceremonial—all this is unspeakably and distressingly perplexing.

Bishop Gore's Dilemma.

A few years ago Bishop Gore was a Canon of Worcester. In those days he edited a volume called "Lux Mundi," intended to represent the views of the section of the clergy identifying themselves with both the High Church views of Pusey and Liddon on the one hand, and with the Broad Church theories of Maurice and Kingsley on the other. That is to say, they attempted an amalgam of Roman Catholic ideas on the priesthood with the most liberal notions on the subject of theological doctrine. The first essay was on inspiration, and was written by Dr. Gore himself. It instantly raised a storm of protest, and when the writer was consecrated bishop, the late John Kensit publicly and vehemently protested. Dr. Gore is one of the most pronounced of Ritualists. He is also one of the most humane and enlightened of public men. During the Armenian atrocities he preached eloquently and constantly against the supine attitude of the government. He is one of the most popular ecclesiastics of the day, and therefore his present action is creating all the stronger sensation. He is insisting on the necessity that the clergy should stand by the three creeds—the Apostles', the Nicene and the Athanasian. But this position is utterly unjustifiable on his part, for his own writings would make it impossible.

The Great Crux.

As to whether the miracle of the Virgin birth should be held as an article of faith by an orthodox clergyman, this problem has been vainly discussed in the notorious case of the Dean of Ripon, Dr. Fremantle. He was the subject of a stormy attack from many quarters about a year ago, when, at the meeting of a society which he leads, he read an elaborate paper which seemed absolutely rationalistic. But he explained that he regarded the Incarnation as indeed a miracle, and yet he asked whether it might not be both supernatural and natural at the same time. Now, a very large number of the clergy, and not a few Congregationalist preachers in this country, certainly hold this very view. Their idea is that the Mother of our Lord, under the power of a mighty spiritual ecstasy, affecting body, mind and soul, entered into the state of motherhood, and so the promised Incarnation became a fact. Huxley, the great agnostic philosopher, pointed out that in nature there are in the lowest forms of life millions of virgin births. So the question is asked whether it is not conceivable that such a birth might not once by nature be accomplished under the impact of an overwhelming emotion. [I may note that I myself had a long conversation with the Dean of Ripon on the subject of his alleged heresy. He claimed that he was as reverent and orthodox as any man living, but he insisted that we should not separate unnecessarily between the natural in its highest possibilities and the supernatural—the latter being probably only a transfiguration of the natural.]

Now, all this is plausible; but the Bishop of Worcester sees in it a contravention of the creeds and of the declarations which the clergy subscribe in their ordination oaths. So he implied that Mr. Beeby was not acting honestly. It is this implication which Canon Henson so energetically takes up. He points out that the recent action of the Holy Office of the Church of Rome, in the case of the Abbe Loisy, and that of the Bishop of Worcester in the Church of England, has suddenly forced on the public notice the urgent and difficult question of the competence of the formularies to express conviction and to govern teaching. The Canon claims that a literal acceptance of theological standards is incompatible with that distinctive glory of the Anglican Church—its theological tolerance. He claims for the clergy the prerogative of liberty to interpret in a wide and liberal sense the most venerated traditional creeds.

Another Bishop on Another Subject.

It is pleasant to turn from this confusion to the utterances of Dr. Ryle, Bishop of Winchester, who in a very able article in the "Expository Times," sets forth his personal convictions on the Higher Criticism, not with regard to his opinions on the valid or invalid nature of the conclusions of the Higher Critics themselves, but rather with reference to the use which preachers should make of the Old Testament. Bishop Ryle takes no narrow view. He assumes that certain results of research in the Old Testament subjects have been definitely ascertained. But what is to be their effect on the preacher and teacher? The assured results are of a literary and historical character. They are not subjects which the

(Continued on page 199.)

As Seen From the Dome

By F. D. Power

"In the twentieth century," said Victor Hugo, "war will be dead, royalty will be dead, and dogmas will be dead; but man will live. For all there will be one country, that country the whole earth, for all there will be but one hope, that hope the whole heaven. All hail, then, to the nobler twentieth century which shall own our children, and which our children shall inherit." But Victor Hugo was a poet.

No matter where one travels in Europe there are soldiers, soldiers, soldiers, dead soldiers in bronze and marble, living soldiers lazily walking the streets, or lounging in the parks, while women and dogs do the work; miles and miles of canvas with soldiers fighting and dying and triumphing over their enemies—flags and guns and every show of glorious war. One has but to visit Napoleon's tomb, Waterloo Place, or Trafalgar Square to see what class of men have the foremost place in the thought of the people. We Americans are of the same mind. Here at the capital of the nation one can not turn without seeing these memorials of what one of the chief fighters called "hell." Historians, poets, scientists, philanthropists, statesmen, jurists, presidents, who had some part in the making of the nation, are not remembered, but men skilled in the art of war are glorified on every hand. Washington has more bronze hacks, mounted on lofty pedestals, with second rate men astride of them than any city in the world, and the man who is coddled here above all others is the soldier. Even in this atmosphere, however, there are optimistic gentlemen who talk of abolishing war, though Congress is voting several hundred millions yearly for this barbarous purpose. Recently the man on the dome looked in upon a great meeting gathered in behalf of arbitration which proposed to put an end to this relic of barbarism. Resolutions asking Congress and the President to enter into a treaty with Great Britain to submit all differences to the Hague tribunal, and urging all other nations to enter into similar treaties were presented and passed with enthusiasm. It was a very distinguished assembly. President Cleveland was to have presided, but could not come. Former Secretary of State, John W. Foster, took his place, and many of the most prominent men in the country shared in the deliberations. College presidents were there, heads of great universities, leaders in Congress, members of the bench, ministers of the gospel and ministers of the state, authorities from all the walks of life. The resolutions were presented by the secretary, Thomas Nelson Page, and carried with a swing. The flags of the United States and Great Britain, joined together by a silken streamer with the legend in letters of gold, "Peace to all nations," hung above their heads. A group of interesting men made the speeches.

First came Cardinal Gibbons, a slender, ascetic-looking gentleman with a bit of a red cap on the back of his head. He might readily pass for an ordinary preacher, devout, studious, and not in robust health. He is no orator, but a plain spoken man, as his books would indicate, and delivers himself without notes. Four reasons he gave for a close alliance between England and America. We speak the same language, have the same literature, are connected by closest ties of commercial intercourse, are practically under the same form of government. He referred to the Alaskan tribunal as a striking illustration of the blessings of arbitration, showing "that peace hath her victories no less renowned than war."

General Miles came next and was received with a good deal of hand-clapping, probably because he was the only son of Mars who ventured to appear in such a gathering. The general was not gorgeously apparelled as Washington has been accustomed to see him, but in plain citizen's raiment. When Prince Henry was here he was not "in it" for a moment with either our Corbin or our Miles. They would wear five buttons to his one, and excite the most terrible envy of the small boy and undying admiration of the sentimental maiden. Now, alas! we have neither. The general who carried Porto Rico so gracefully, in July, '98, without the loss of a single man, and with the people tumbling over each other to surrender, shouting: "Viva los Americanos! Viva Puerto Rico libre!" is after all a very modest man, "no orator as Brutus is, but a plain, blunt man." He thought there is every reason why governments, which are of human creation or toleration, should be controlled by the same code of morals that governs individuals. Arbitration has a double benefit: assures impartial justice and suspends and avoids the horrors of war. One of the most gratifying events of modern times occurred when the imperial head of a mighty nation of 130,000,000—the autocrat of all the Russias—called a world's peace congress and advocated the reduction of the burdens of war and the adjustment of controversies between nations in a way that would tend to promote the universal peace of the world. Americans should be most earnest and active in their efforts to promote the humane and glorious principles of arbitration.

Edward Everett Hale is now a well known figure in sight of the dome. He is always interesting. Tall and angular, with a shock of hair like Tolstoi and not much better fitting clothes, a wretched voice, and a delivery as uncouth as that of Dr. Talmage, he is always heard, if you can hear him, with pleasure. Though an old man of four score his gray matter works well. Here he spoke with unusual vigor and keenness. Arbitration is no experiment. When Virginia and Massachusetts united and made a United States we had a great example of it. They agreed to leave local government to the state, and national to the central government, and from that time to this the hyphen has been growing stronger. Those thirteen states determined to unite and merge their interests. Only once have they been at war in all these years, and that because of a clause which they left out of their treaty of arbitration. We have gotten along peaceably because of the great tribunal, the Supreme Court. Before that Presidents have bowed; Massachusetts and Virginia have had to bow. Massachusetts and Rhode Island were as near war as Russia and Prussia and escaped it by being brought before the Court. The pessimist will say the Emperor of Russia is a humbug, a dreamer, a hypocrite. No person who has done so much in the interest of peace deserves to be spoken of in that tone. He called for the formation of a tribunal of peace. We have the Hague, a Supreme Court among nations.

Rabbi Joseph Silverman is of the great Temple Emanuel, New York. He proved no better speaker than those who went before, but he had a peculiar sliding scale and an occasional explosion which gave variety to his manner. A youngish man, bearded, under-size, without the physiognomical mark of Abraham in any pronounced way, but with the evident legal mark of Moses and exclusive tone of Ezra, he told us Israel had always stood for peace by peaceful means. He prayed for a universal republic, but a reference to Kishineff came near breaking up the meeting. "I beg your pardon, but right here I must impugn the motives of a man who advocates peace on the one hand and permits thousands of his subjects to be butchered on the other." The demonstration of the audience indicated the direction of their sympathies, and the readiness of the blue-eyed Anglo-Saxon to spring to the firing line. It reminded me of the last arbitration meeting I attended sometime in December, '95, when Cleveland's electrifying message on the Venezuelan question was up, and England's earth hunger was about to be rebuked; and a slight reference to the Monroe doctrine set the audience wild and came near precipitating war right then and there. How frail we are!

J. M. Dickinson, one of the factors in the Alaskan arbitration, next spoke, as representing the south, one who in his "immature youth carried a Con-

(Continued on page 199.)

Better Than Strikes

BY CHAS. E. UNDERWOOD

The United Mine Workers of America have adjourned their annual convention recently assembled in Indianapolis. Speeches of more than ordinary moment and ability rang through Tomlinson Hall. Items of vital interest to this great organization and its constituency passed into definite resolutions and legislation. The battle against socialism in its ranks brought victory to the conservatives. But the battle royal is now on.

Following the convention, 353 operators and 557 miners, representing the Central Competitive District (bituminous coal) of Illinois, Ohio, Indiana and Western Pennsylvania assembled for conference on the 1904 scale. John Mitchell is here, and Frank L. Robbins, of Pittsburg, and many other leaders among the coal operators and miners. Jacob C. Kolsen, operator, of Terre Haute, presides at all sessions. W. B. Wilson, of the United Mine Workers, keeps the records. Employers and employes share offices equally. The following rules govern conference:

Rules.—The hours of the conference shall be from 9 A. M. until 5 P. M., with a recess from 12 o'clock to 2. The miners' representatives shall occupy the right side of the hall, the operators the left side. Each state shall be permitted the same number of votes on the floor of the convention—four votes on behalf of the operators and four votes on behalf of the miners of each state. No motion shall be declared carried except on the affirmative vote of the miners and operators of each state. Each state shall have four operators and four miners on the scale committee. Sessions shall be open to the public except where otherwise ordered. The use of tobacco in the convention hall is prohibited.

Operators demand a 15 per cent reduction in wages; miners, the present scale with run of mine basis and differential of seven cents. The conference continues until an agreement is reached. Sometimes the contest waxes earnest as a political campaign. But when all differences are adjusted, the participants shake hands and go cheerfully home to their work. The miners frankly recognize organization among employers, and the operators as frankly recognize the miners' union.

This fraternal spirit came only after years of struggle, culminating in the wasteful and bitter strike of 1897. For three weeks a conference, called in Chicago, wrestled in vain with the propositions to end the struggle. Theodore Lampart, a Pittsburg reporter, quoted in the Indianapolis News of Jan. 27, describes vividly the crisis in the negotiations:

"Patrick Dolan, of Pittsburg, walking down the aisle to the front said: 'It is time something be done. There are many women and children in the little mining villages in all the states here interested who are waiting to hear something good from Chicago. They are wondering if their sufferings are to continue. You operators say you have education and intelligence. Why do you not have common sense? In the name of justice, let us get together and do something. We miners are a unit, and ready and willing to treat with you."

"These words made a wonderful impression. The utmost silence prevailed. Francis L. Robbins, of Pittsburg, moved that eight hours constitute a work day for the miner. This was the entering wedge. The motion carried unanimously. Horace L. Chapman, of Ohio, moved that the mining rate be based on 66 cents a ton for screened coal. This was carried with a hurrah. Walter S. Bogle, of Indiana, moved that the mine-run system be given Illinois, screens to be used in other states. A committee was appointed to put the agreement in writing."

From that day to this peace reigns in the bituminous mines of the Central Competitive District. No contract has been broken. Once temptation came to the miners. In the midst of the anthracite struggle of 1902, hot-headed enthusiasts urged the bituminous miners to strike in sympathy. But such a strike would have given the lie to the statement made by the state labor commissioners everywhere, that labor unions have their contracts. John Mitchell threw all the weight of his powerful influence against the agitation and won the day.

Stimulated by success in this district, district no. 13, comprising the state of Iowa, now makes similar trade agreements, and this year applied for membership in the Central District.

Thus crystallizes into fulfillment, one dream of the American Federation of Labor. For years this organization has stood for industrial peace—peace on the basis of mutual recognition of needs and aspirations; peace that shall build up American manhood. The older labor organizations heartily second the movement, and many of them (the most powerful) have trade and arbitration agreements with employers. The Civid Federation, under the practical leadership of Marcus A. Hanna, stands for the same principles. (Mistakes, grievous mistakes, yes, even crimes blot the records of both organized capital and organized labor, but in the trade agreement, with its mutual recognition, lies the amelioration of many an apparently hopeless labor condition.

WELL TOLD.

Doctor Explains Feeding Without Medicine.

"It is a well substantiated fact," says a Maine physician, "that a very large per cent of the ailments of humanity are due to errors in diet causing indigestion and the myriad affections following in its train. It was Dr. Abernathy I believe who said 'One-fourth of what we eat keeps us, the other three-fourths we keep at our peril.'"

"Loss of flesh from whatever immediate cause is due primarily to nutritional disturbances involving defective assimilation. With these prefatory remarks I wish to relate briefly a case of mine, (not the only one by any means), in which Grape-Nuts was the connecting link between disease and health.

"It was a case of chronic gastritis where the patient had seen the rounds of much stereotyped treatment and where there was much depression caused by long persistence of distress at the stomach,—pain, gas and burning soon after eating.

"Though I had been regulating the diet considerably while giving medicine it occurred to me that I would try regulating it without medicine and in looking about among the foods I soon found Grape-Nuts was the best adapted to my purpose. Starting in with Grape-Nuts alone I allowed my patient to take it first with hot water and a very little sugar at intervals of three hours. After a few days I instructed the patient to use it with warm milk. (It should have been served with cream on the start.)

"Improvement was marked from the first. The eructations of gas were at once greatly diminished and the terrible burning and distress were lessened in proportion while the spirits brightened. At the end of two weeks my patient had so far improved that she was allowed some chicken broth which digested perfectly. It has been over two months and she has gradually increased her diet in variety until it now includes all that is needed to avoid monotony and maintain relish.

"Grape-Nuts, however, still holds a prominent place on her table as it will continue to do so for she realizes that it is a sheet anchor." Name of the physician given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Look in each pkg., for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

He is There.

By Walter Scott Whitacre.

When I'm in the lowest valley,

He is there;

When upon the plain I sally,

He is there.

If I speak, he's there to hear me,

Waiting anxiously to cheer me;

Should I doubt that he is near me,

He is there.

When the valleys grow darker, deeper,

He is there;

When the mountain way grows steeper,

He is there.

When the storm clouds override me,

When the shining heavens hide me

He is ever there beside me,

He is there.

When I walk upon the mountain,

He is there;

Like a cool, refreshing fountain,

He is there.

Lord of life and glory, lead me

Through the wilderness and feed me

On thy manna. When thou need me

I'll be there.

When my pilgrimage is ended,

I'll be there;

When my soul with his is blended,

I'll be there.

Where the tree of life is vernal,

Everlasting and eternal,

On the mount of God supernal,

I'll be there.

The Worry Habit By Cephas Shelburne

Accosting me, a gentleman said: "I wish you could preach a sermon on Worry. I will worry over my work." The sermon is unpreached, but it is a faithful and profitable theme for pulpit discussion, supported by many beautiful texts—for instance the sixth chapter of Matthew and the fourteenth of John. Mr. Beecher was wont to say to his people: "It is not work that kills men; it is worry. Work is healthy, worry is killing. It is the rust on the blade. It is not the revolution that destroys the machinery, but the friction." This is eminently true of Americans. They are slaves of the worry habit. It has become our national vice. So truly is the disease, worry, American that it has been called "Americanitis." Business! Business! the one predominant and all-consuming thought of the American, has led to brain exhaustion and nervous prostration.

Life has become so complex, business so feverish, social duties so multiplied! Everything in modern life breeds worry and anxiety. Going into a lawyer's office I read: "Be back in three minutes. Phone No. 312 will reach me." Passing into a doctor's office were the instructions: "Gone to dinner. Be back in ten minutes." These are not extreme cases. So alarming is the disease, "Americanitis," that our wisest physicians are beginning the study of diseases from their mental causes as truly as they reckon with microbes; and our authors, such as William George Jordon, Theodore F. Seward, Newell Dwight Hillis, Ralph Waldo Trine, are giving us books on "Don't Worry." These authors and medical authorities tell us that worry is the enemy of health, that it is the rust that consumes the blade, the moth that cuts into the vital threads of life, the worm that grows into the heart of the tree and strips it of its vitality and leaves. "The time has come for us to recognize that worry can poison the mind as fatally as prussic acid can poison the body."

Mr. Hillis tells us in his characteristic way that "The average householder of to-day has double the income of Shakespeare when he wrote his *Ira*mas; fourfold the income of Dante when he wrote his "Paradiso"; ten times as much to live on as had Socrates when he perfected his great arguments and essays; a score times larger income than Homer, and two score that of Milton, when these gentlemen wrote their immortal poems." Even the simplicity of life for children has been destroyed. There is more of dress, flurry, parties, plays, presents at one Christmas time than our good and great grandmothers experienced in a lifetime. Children's toys have so accumulated that they have become sources of worry on Christmas eve. A lady remarked, pointing across the street from her window, "There is a family that will get so many presents that they will hardly appreciate them, and the children will be so loaded down with toys and things that they will hardly look at them." Yet you can, some of you, look back to the blessed time when a tin toy, a little china doll and a stick of candy made you happy.

Business, this feverish desire to get on, is the Alpha and Omega of American life. Profit is the one standard of the American; he exists only for business; he is rated as worth so many dollars.

Even in religion, we have come to discuss matters and hustle and push things from the American standpoint. Organizations have increased, meetings multiplied; and there is no longer that quiet, calm, reposeful worship, with the "peace that passeth understanding;" but the "day of rest and worship," like all the rest of the days, tends to develop and increase worry and anxiety. We no longer sing

"When peace like a river
Attendeth my soul."

We are told that at the World's Parliament of Religions in Chicago no one could fail to be impressed with the calm, reposeful manner and dignified carriage of the oriental delegates in contrast with the nervous, intense, high pressure personality of the Americans. Whether in the home, the church, social circle, business, on the stock exchange, in halls of congress—everything is flurry, hustle, worry, anxiety. Like the bidders on stocks, both hands are up, and we are on tip-toe, with necks craned and two fingers up, and shouting at the top of our voices, as if heaven and earth depended upon the next moment's issue. Certainly it is not larger income, better houses, finer equipage, horses and carriages, stalled ox and servants, spiced wine and all that that we need. But what we need is plainer living, the "dinner of herbs" with less worry and anxiety. With wealth, fame, honors, power, influence, prosperity and triumph—the greatest statesman of the nineteenth century closed his days of eighty-three years on earth with this sad strain: "During my whole life I have not had twenty-four hours of happiness."

It were better by far to reside in the "Cabbage Patch" with the calm, sweet philosophy of Mrs. Wiggs: "If you want to be cheerful, jis set yer mind on it and do it. There ain't no use cryin' and frettin' over things. There ain't no hole so deep can't somebody pull you out, and there's always somebody ready to give you a hist. Can't none of us help what traits we start out in life with, but we kin help what we end up with. When things first got to goin' wrong with me I says: 'O

Lord, whatever comes keep me from gittin' sour!' The way to git cheerful is to smile when you feel bad, to think about somebody else's headache when yer own is most bustin', to keep on believin' the sun is shinin' when the clouds is thick enough to cut. Some people appears to enjoy bein' low spertered; but since the Lord took me and I give myself to him, I've made it a practice to put all my worries down in the bottom of my heart, thin set on the lid and smile."

That is the philosophy of the Sermon on the Mount—take no thought saying, What shall we eat? or, what shall we drink? or, wherewithal shall we be clothed? Or the fourteenth of John—let not your heart be troubled, ye believe in God. And as a philosopher, Christian and man of faith, that ought to settle the matter of worry, close

(Continued on page 199.)

SURE

The Robust Physique can Stand More
Coffee Than a Weak One.

A young Virginian says: "Having a naturally robust constitution far above the average, and not having a nervous temperament, my system was able to resist the inroads upon it by the use of coffee for some years, but finally the strain began to tell.

"For ten years I have been employed as telegraph operator and typewriter by a railroad in this section, and until two years ago I had used coffee continually from the time I was eight years old, nearly twenty years.

"The work of operating the telegraph key is a great strain upon the nerves, and after the day's work was over, I would feel nervous, irritable, run down, and toward the last suffered greatly from insomnia and neuralgia. As I never indulged in intoxicating liquors, drugs or tobacco in any form, I came to the conclusion that coffee and tea were causing the gradual break-down of my nervous system, and having read an article in the Medical Magazine on the composition of coffee and its toxic effect upon the system, I was fully convinced that coffee was the cause of my trouble.

"Seeing Postum spoken of as not having any of the deteriorating effects of coffee, I decided to give up the stimulant and give Postum a trial. The result was agreeably surprising. After a time my nerves became wonderfully strong, I can do all my work at the telegraph key and typewriter with far greater ease than ever before. My weight has increased 35 pounds, my general health keeping pace with it, and I am a new man and a better one." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason.

Look in each package for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

India Letter.

This is the campaigning season in India, and though we cannot show as a result of our labors any meeting whose fruit is the addition of a hundred or more converts to the church, still we are doing something. Brother Adams reports four more converts in Bilaspur. Six had been reported previously, so that the total is now ten for the last few weeks. These last baptisms were in a village about ten miles from Bilaspur.

Bilaspur has been threatened with plague, and there have been a few imported cases, but so far it has not become indigenous there. It has been very bad in Kamtee, a city on the railway to the west of Bilaspur. A short time ago some persons affected with the disease came to Bilaspur from this place, and presented themselves at the Mission Compound. Though the ladies had never seen plague before, they recognized the disease, and had the people sent to the government quarantine, where the entire family of seven persons subsequently had the disease. It was quite a narrow escape for the orphanage.

Brother Gordon has had fifteen baptisms lately at Mungeli. The Christian community there is making steady and constant growth. The most of these converts were directly from heathenism, though a few of them were the children of Christian parents. There is a farm in connection with the work at Mungeli, on which a small number of orphan boys are employed and taught in agriculture. This is reported to be doing nicely.

Brother Elsam reports seven baptisms lately at Jhansi. They were all people who had been living at Bina, Brother Elsam's station, or the servants of persons who had formerly lived at Bina, and so were acquainted with our work and the gospel as we present it. An interesting case reported by Brother Elsam is that of an inquirer who has been in the employ of the native king of Indore state. He is a Mohammedan, and when in Bina on some work connected with Indore, he for the first time heard the gospel preached in the Bina bazaar. He immediately became interested and asked to be baptized. He is now under instruction preparatory to being immersed. Just now he has gone to his home to resign his post that he may become a Christian, for he cannot hold his present position after entering the church.

Damoh is at present experiencing some trouble and change. Mrs. Rambo has been ill for some time, and it seems that she cannot hope for ultimate recovery until she returns home. Along with her illness, Brother Rambo too has been having fever, and in consequence the orphanage, of which they have been in charge, has had to suffer. It was thought best to put Brother Rioch in charge of the orphanage. To do this he had to be recalled from his work at Hatta. This is not only a distinct loss to the work in that part of the field, but is a severe blow to the hopes of Brother and Sister Rioch. They had only got fairly started in their new work at Hatta, which they had come to love very dearly. People were listening readily to the gospel. Many were coming to Mrs. Rioch to be treated for their diseases, and at the same time to hear something of the word of life. The field promised well. But it had to be sacrificed to provide for the present needs of the orphanage, for in it is wrapped up the welfare of over 300 boys. Oh that we had more workers here who might help us to take advantage of the opportunities and open doors which are offered!

Dr. Longdon is not keeping well at Deoghur. Her work is a large one, and there is never any rest or slack season for a physician. The evangelist finds certain seasons of the year when the people simply will not listen to him, but the doctor is always in demand.

Brother Menzies has his new bungalow at Rath about completed. I have not yet seen the bungalow, but judging from the photograph which I have seen, it is not only a good substantial one, but the most handsome one in the mission from an architectural standpoint.

Brother Grainger has had one more baptism in Harda lately. Here we are in the midst of Christmas festivities. Nearly all of our native helpers and their families are in spending Christmas week. As is customary, we are having picnics for them. This is the only time in the year when they are all together in this way. On New Year's day we are to have in the Hindustani Church a special Thanksgiving service. The English congregation celebrated Thanksgiving on the same day that our American brethren did. Plague has about ceased in the town here, but is very bad in the villages, interfering seriously with the evangelistic work.

There are now four young men in the evangelist's training class in Harda. When the fund for the new Bible College is completed, and the new and larger school opened, we hope to have many more. When our number of evangelists is properly increased, then we may hope to conquer our share of the country.

Harda, Dec. 31, 1903. GEO. W. BROWN.

An Interesting Conference.

The conference of the field workers of the First District International Sunday-school Association has just closed a two day's session in the city of Portland, Maine.

The First District of the International Sunday-school Association is a big district. It is composed of the six New England states, and the Canadian Provinces of Quebec, Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. All of these states and provinces were, I believe, represented in this gathering. Visitors from outside territory were present also. Some of the brightest and most devoted and useful men and women of the different religious bodies led in the instructions.

It has not been in my power in the last few years to attend the meetings of the International Convention as I formerly did. I observed the proceedings of this body, therefore, closely, to see whether there has been any advancement in the methods of doing things. I was gratified in a high degree to note a marked progress beyond the ideals, forms of speech, methods of work, etc., which prevailed up to a short while ago. This is as it should be. Every other great agency of Christian effort is advancing; why not the Sunday-school also? The exercises of this conference displayed a purpose on the part of the present leaders of this work to deal with the problems of Bible study, teacher training, etc., in a scientific way. This could not always be truly said of the old regime. Let us thank God for the better day.

The workers who had this conference in charge are peculiarly well fitted to develop the scientific tendency in Sunday-school work, being many of them, the heads of departments in the International Association: Marion Lawrence, International secretary; our own W. C. Pearce, of Chicago, secretary of Teacher Training; Mrs. Flora V. Stebbins, of the Home Department fame; Dr. Frank Woodbury, Halifax, N. S., who presented one of the most feasible schemes for supplemental graded lessons I have ever heard of, and many others no less worthy of mention.

The work presented fell into the following groups: Educational work; organization; departments; the International Association—its purposes, methods and evangelism. A session of the conference was devoted to each one of these subjects with competent instructors and under the direction of the proper leaders. All the territory covered by the great Association is divided into districts similar to this First District, and conferences of the same kind have been, or will be held in each of the districts for the consideration of the above subjects. The results ought to be tremendous in the betterment of the Sunday-schools everywhere. If such efforts are kept up, a great change for the better must be seen before many years. These leaders ought to be cheered on in their good work, by every earnest heart and voice. I send this notice to tell of the great pleasure and profit this conference has been to me, and to call the attention of my brethren to a great work in which they ought all to have a part.

Boston.

J. H. HARDIN

Program of the Sixth Congress of the Disciples of Christ,

TO BE HELD AT CHICAGO, ILL.,
MAR. 22 24, 1904.

TUESDAY, MARCH 22.

- Chairman, W. F. Richardson.
9:00 A. M. Address of welcome, Pres. W. R. Harper, the University of Chicago.
Response, W. F. Richardson, President of the Congress, Kansas City, Mo.
9:30 A. M. Paper, How far is Primitive Christianity an authoritative precedent, I. J. Spencer, Lexington, Ky.
10:30 A. M. Review, J. M. Lowe, Galesburg, Ill.
Review, Jabez Hall, Irvington, Ind.
11:00 A. M. General Discussion.
Chairman, Hon. Oliver W. Stewart.
2:00 P. M. Paper, What should be the relation of the church to social reform movements, S. M. Cooper, Cincinnati, Ohio.
3:00 P. M. Review, F. G. Tyrrell, St. Louis, Mo.
Review, Bruce Brown, Chicago.
3:30 P. M. General Discussion.

- Chairman, J. H. Garrison.
7:30 P. M. Paper, The Need of a new apologetic, Prof. George B. Foster, the University of Chicago.
8:30 P. M. Review, Prof. B. J. Radford, Eureka, Ill.
9:00 P. M. Questions in writing answered by Prof. Foster.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 23.

- Chairman, Pres. R. E. Hieronymus.
9:00 A. M. Paper, The relation of the interpretation of Scripture to the problem of Christian union, H. D. C. MacLachlan, Shelbyville, Ky.
10:00 A. M. Review, Prof. Sherman Kirk, Des Moines, Iowa.
Review, Prof. Geo. A. Peckham, Hiram, Ohio.
10:30 A. M. General Discussion.
11:15 A. M. Session of the American Christian Education Society.
Chairman, Pres. E. B. Wakefield.
2:00 P. M. Paper, The doctrine of retribution in the light of New Testament teaching and modern thought, A. B. Philpott, Indianapolis, Ind.
3:00 P. M. Review, G. B. Van Arsdale, Peoria, Ill.
Review, Geo. Darsie, Frankfort, Ky.
3:30 P. M. General discussion.
4:30 P. M. Business.
6:00 P. M. Joint reception and banquet of the Disciples' Social Union of Chicago and the delegates to the Congress.

THURSDAY, MARCH 24.

- Chairman, Z. T. Sweeney.
9:00 A. M. Paper, What is the distinctive mission of the Disciples of Christ? T. W. Grafton, Anderson, Ind.
10:00 A. M. Review, C. H. Winders, Columbia, Mo.
J. E. Lynn, Springfield, Ill.
10:30 A. M. General Discussion.
11:45 A. M. Business.
Chairman, H. O. Breeden.
2:00 P. M. Paper, The present state and outlook of the union movement among Protestants, M. E. Harlan, Brooklyn, N. Y.
3:00 P. M. Review, Pres. T. E. Cramblett, Bethany, W. Va.
Review, L. E. Batman, Philadelphia, Pa.
3:30 P. M. General Discussion.
W. F. RICHARDSON, Pres.,
B. A. JENKINS,
J. H. GILLILAND,
W. E. GARRISON,
ERRETT GATES, Sec.,
Program Committee.

Bible College at Home.

Thorough courses by mail, leading to diploma and degree. Distance no hindrance. Students in every state and foreign country. Best testimonials. Catalogue free. Write C. J. Burton, President Iowa Christian College, Oskaloosa, Iowa.

Missionary Notes.

Miss Emma Lyon reports the baptism of six of the girls in the school at Nankin, China. P. A. Davey reports two baptisms at Tokio, Japan.

Walter M. White, pastor of the West Side Church, San Francisco, is hoping to enter their new building at no distant day, and the day they enter they hope to make that church a living link church in the Foreign Christian Missionary Society by supporting Dr. A. L. Shelton in Tibet. This is a brave step, and we congratulate the church and minister.

At the last monthly meeting of the executive committee of the Foreign Society, D. E. Dannenberg, late graduate of Hiram College and now secretary of the student volunteer movement, was appointed a missionary to China to go out next September. It is believed that he is one of the best equipped men for the foreign service ever appointed by the Society.

The evangelization of the world is the supreme Christian purpose for which every other Christian purpose exists. It is the only adequate object for so amazing a life and death as that of Jesus Christ. It is the only result that will give Christ to see the travail of his soul and be satisfied.

Foreign Missionary Rallies, March offering supplies and missionary sermons are now the order throughout the churches. Great preparation for the annual offering is being made. Let the good work go on until every church is enlisted.

A. McLean, president of the Foreign Christian Missionary Society, reports the attendance at the Missionary Rallies much larger this year than ever before. He believes the missionary sentiment among our people is widening and deepening.

F. M. Rains, corresponding secretary, conducted a Missionary Rally in New York, January 15, and also one in Washington, January 17. The attendance was larger than in the past and the interest and enthusiasm was boundless. From every source comes words of encouragement concerning the growing interest in world-wide evangelism among our people.

If you have not ordered March offering supplies, do so at once. A postal card to F. M. Rains, Cincinnati, O., will bring all needed helps.

A quarter of a million dollars for Foreign Missions this year is the least with which our people will be satisfied. And even double that amount would not impoverish us.

Missionary Methods and Motives.

"A dash for the pole" described the old method of reaching that goal of the world's explorers. The new plan has less dash, but more surety. It contemplates a chain of stations from civilization to the pole itself.

Such seems to be God's plan for evangelizing the world. When the Jerusalem church was persecuted into missionizing, stations were established in radiating steps from the mother church. When the Spirit moved Antioch church took up God's supreme work, Paul's method was to cordon Western Asia and Southern Europe with depots for propagating ever expanding circles of evangelism.

If this method be the true one, then each congregation is not self-centered. Its ultimate purpose is not self-preservation. It is not the center of a circle, but a link in a chain. Its force is not centripetal, but centrifugal. It is not a Dead Sea, but a Jordan-fleeting Galilee.

For its purpose four things are necessary: a field, time, men and money. The field is supplied; the time will be; the men wait upon the money. The problem is one of money-getting. This again resolves itself into methods (which are many) and motives. This latter is vital.

"Reaction is always equal to the action and in the opposite direction," is just as true in money-raising as in shooting a shot gun. I mean that if one of the two co-ordinate purposes of the church is Christly character-building, and character depends supremely

All Stuffed Up

That's the condition of many sufferers from catarrh, especially in the morning. Great difficulty is experienced in clearing the head and throat.

No wonder catarrh causes headache, impairs the taste, smell and hearing, pollutes the breath, deranges the stomach and affects the appetite.

To cure catarrh, treatment must be constitutional—alterative and tonic.

"I was afflicted with catarrh. I took medicines of different kinds, giving each a fair trial; but gradually grew worse until I could hardly hear, taste or smell. I then concluded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and after taking five bottles I was cured and have not had any return of the disease since." EUGENE FORBES, Lebanon, Kan.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Cures catarrh—it soothes and strengthens the mucous membrane and builds up the whole system.

upon motives, then a saint may be eternally injured by the "why" he gives.

This being true, can we appeal to anything less than the purest motive? But dare we appeal to that? Has the love for Christ among his saints sufficient power to move them to the greatest things? Is it (basely put) worth $250,000? In comparison to His priceless love, does not such a comparison shame us? And yet our March offering for the cause in which he sacrificed all, will be the exactest measure of our love for him.

A. HOLMES.
Philadelphia, Pa.

Hiram College Annuity Fund.

I believe that Hiram College was the first to pay annuities among the benevolent associations of the Disciples of Christ. For fully thirty years it has received gifts on this plan, and during its whole history of fifty-four years, it has never defaulted a dollar. All told it has received in this way fully a hundred thousand dollars, and the largest single gift on this plan ever given among the Disciples of Christ. Peter Butts, who was familiar with the workings of the college from the time of its incorporation, gave to it on this plan nearly thirty thousand dollars, and thus became the executor of his own will. The endowments of the college have been conservatively managed, and less than a thousand dollars of principal has been lost in the history of its funds. No banking institution in the country can claim a better showing. The Board of Trustees are business men of the highest commercial honor and business integrity, many of whom are known throughout the brotherhood, and some have a national reputation. The college owns more than a hundred thousand dollars' worth of real estate, and has fully two hundred thousand in endowments and no debts. It can therefore offer gilt-edged security for all moneys received on the annuity plan. These annuities are paid semi-annually, the college giving a bond through its Board of Trustees for the payment of the same. Seven different states are represented by those who have contributed to this fund, and one gift of ten thousand comes from a Presbyterian, and another of two thousand from a Baptist, and these were given chiefly as investments, and because the parties knew the men connected with the financial management.

Let the following considerations be fully weighed: The law of self-preservation demands that the church shall provide itself with the best leadership possible, and that it provide the young people of the church the best opportunity to qualify themselves for success in life, whether in the ministry or other callings. No Christian people have ever survived that did not foster education and a thoroughly trained and equipped ministry. The pioneers of the Disciples of Christ planted Bethany, Hiram, Lexington, Christian, Eureka, Butler and other schools. The same zeal for the college with our increased wealth, and numbers would endow every college among us in five years. Our colleges should be radiating centers of influence and power, and receive the support of all the churches and papers of the brotherhood. They are the source of supply for the ministers and missionaries of the church, and through these channels their voice has gone out throughout the world. The college is a great propaganda, and is the mightiest missionary force extant. It is the ground floor in Christian benevolence, and the people who ignore the college will perish. The philanthropists have wrought through educational forces, and have blessed the world and won for themselves the gratitude of the people, and built enduring monuments. There will always be young people to educate, hence the college will always be a necessity. The endowed college is the longest lived corporation in the world's history. The college should be tied to the church by an indissoluble bond, the church furnishing both students and money, while the college should train its minister and missionaries and Christian workers. It is a great missionary work to prepare the missionary, and this was the first and most important work that Jesus did while on earth. When we have selected and trained the right men, our churches will become strong, and readily support all of our missionary enterprises.

O. G. HERTZOG,
Hiram, Ohio. Fin. Sec. Hiram College.

Helps the Preachers.

DEAR BROTHER GARRISON:—Thirty five years an editor! Can you measure the great and good influence you have had during all these years? Can any one tell what influence has gone out from thousands of written pages on whose lines and words the minds of our preachers and leaders in the churches have dwelt from week to week? Because of the nature of my work I presume that I have been in more preachers' and elders' homes than any man among us during the last 15 years. Hundreds of our preachers and elders have told me that they read the editorials in the CHRISTIAN EVANGELIST on Saturday night to get themselves into a good frame of mind for the work of the Lord's day. They have doubtless written you the same thing many times, but, I wanted to tell you this for your encouragement. It will make you stronger for your future work to know this. It will help you to measure the good you have done in developing spiritual life in a great and swiftly growing brotherhood. For, what does great numerical strength count for if this strength be not of the Lord? As a great leader of thought among the ministers of our congregations you have been, through these pastors, preaching to millions. The influences for Christ and his church which you have set in motion will go on and on as long as the church militant shall stand. This power, militant, will move on in silence even when God has called you hence.

And it will almost be useless to express, for our Board of Church Extension, what you know so well. You have given your space freely to the building up of this young missionary enterprise. Nearly every week of the year some good word appears in behalf of Church Extension. You have had great joy and satisfaction in doing this, and you have done it without money and without price.

No one has been helped by you more than I have, and I claim the right to say no one loves you more. May your last days be your best days, and may they be many. I pray that the snows of age which never melt shall rest lightly on your brow.

Faithfully and affectionately yours,
GEO. W. MUCKLEY.

No Substitute

not even the best raw cream, equals Borden's Peerless Brand Evaporated Cream for tea, coffee, chocolate, cereals and general household cooking. It is the result of forty-five years' experience in the growing, buying, handling and preserving of milk by Borden's Condensed Milk Co.

The Sunday-School.

Feb. 21.

JESUS AND THE SABBATH.—
Matt. 12:1-13.

Memory Verses 6-8.

GOLDEN TEXT.—It is lawful to do well on the Sabbath Day.—Matt. 12:12.

The healing of the paralytic who was let down through the roof was a picturesque and striking event which doubtless greatly increased the fame of Jesus among the common people, while His significant utterances in that connection about forgiveness of sins and the distinct claim that He had power on earth to forgive sin, marked the beginning of the hostility to Him on the part of the priests and scribes. Whatever may have been the case before, they now saw that it was impossible to use this strange and wonderful Teacher for their own purposes. His language was becoming more unequivocal. They could no longer believe that He would be serviceable to them in stirring up the common people against Rome, or in effecting such a revival of religion as would include a revival of the priestly authority.

The events which followed the healing of this paralytic, showed quite as clearly as His statement about forgiving sins had done, that Jesus was quite independent of the old order, and that the effect of His teaching would be not an increased punctiliousness in the observance of the precepts of the law, but something new and strange and dangerous—a transfer of emphasis from the value of the law to the value of man, from outward observance to the disposition of the heart. No wonder the scribes and priests looked askance upon Jesus. Would it not discredit the idea of scribes and belittle the function of the priests to have one going about proclaiming his ability to forgive sins without sacrifice and without the mediation of the priests? Would it not reduce all religion to a nebulous nothing if the emphasis were shifted from overt and visible deeds to the desires and passions of the heart? So it seemed to the scribes and pharisees.

The question of fasting came up (Mark 2:18-22; Matt. 9:14-17). In explaining why His disciples did not fast, Jesus hinted at the wide difference between the old order of things and the new which He had come to establish, in His words about the new patch on the old garment and the new wine in old bottles.

The observance of the Sabbath was even a more vital matter than fasting, and when the suspicions of the pharisees were aroused—the idea had become current among them that Jesus was not quite "sound" on questions of Jewish ceremony and practice—they watched Him carefully. And, as usual, those who were seeking evidence of unsoundness soon found them. The disciples passing through a field of grain on the Sabbath day, and being hungry, plucked some heads of wheat or barley, rubbed them in their hands to separate the

— JUST ISSUED! —

Devotional Songs

EDITED BY THREE FAMOUS COMPOSERS AND COMPILED

W. H. DOANE, MUS. DOG.

WM. J. KIRKPATRICK AND HUBERT P. MAIN

It contains a larger variety of songs than any other hymn book of its kind ever published.

256 pages. Full Cloth Bound, 276 hymns.
$25 per 100; 30 cts. per copy, postpaid.

A returnable copy for examination will be sent on request.

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York—Chicago.

grain from the husks and ate. The pharisees were upon them in a moment upbraiding them for this breach of the law of the Sabbath. The answer which Jesus gave is wonderfully comprehensive. There are four distinct arguments in six verses, beginning with one which even the most loyal Jew could not well controvert, and ending with one which would be convincing only to those who admitted His claim to authority. This was the argument:

(1) David, when he was hungry, ate of the sacred shew bread, although this was contrary to the letter of the law, and yet God was not displeased with him. Surely one cannot be blamed for following so good an example as that of David.

(2) The law of the Sabbath is not universally binding, because the priests in performing their duties in the Temple on the Sabbath are compelled to do things which are usually considered a profanation of that day.

(3) If it is allowable to set aside the law of the Sabbath merely for the sake of sacrifice, as the priests do, how much more is it allowable to set aside this law in the interest of a work of mercy like feeding the hungry, since the old prophets themselves declared that Jehovah preferred mercy to sacrifice. Mercy is more important than sacrifice; sacrifice is more important than the Sabbath; therefore, mercy is more important than the Sabbath.

(4) In addition to these arguments from precedent and from the law itself, this great truth is enough to justify all that Jesus and His disciples had done: "The Son of Man is Lord of the Sabbath." This statement was probably not expected to be convincing to the pharisees, but it at least let them know what He thought about His own authority.

Whether or not the pharisees made any answer to these arguments, we are not told. Probably they did not, but they followed Him when He went into the synagogue, as was His custom. There was a man there with a withered hand and this offered an opportunity for renewing the discussion. They knew it was the custom of Jesus to heal the sick, even on the Sabbath day. He had done it on that notable Sabbath in Capernaum and no one had offered any criticism. But now they ask, Is it lawful to heal on the Sabbath day? His reply was: Your law permits you to lift a sheep out of a pit on the Sabbath. Is it not right then, for Me to lift a man out of the pit of misfortune, "how much then is a man of more value than sheep?" This utterance was highly characteristic. It was in fact a large part of the mission of Jesus to show the worth of a man. He saw the divine image in man, marred and mutilated, but not destroyed. He saw in the worst sinner a child of God who might be brought back to the Father's house. He estimated the value of men, not by their possessions or their worldly position, or by any of the other accidental things, but by the essential qualities that made them men. Because he placed so high a value upon men, He was willing to sacrifice the old law whenever man's interest required it, and more than that, was willing to sacrifice Himself for man's salvation. There can be no true understanding of the work of Jesus, and no real enthusiasm for carrying on that work in the saving of men, until we have learned from Him rightly to estimate the value of men.

Midweek Prayer-Meeting.

Feb. 17 1904.

THE GODLY AND THE UNGODLY.—
Psalm 1.

This Psalm emphasizes the eternal distinction between the righteous and the unrighteous, or the godly and the ungodly. It is characteristic of the Bible that it treats of individuals, not from the point of view of their wealth or position or talents or accomplishments, but of their relation to God—their characters.

1. The Godly. The godly man is pronounced blessed, both because of what he does not do, and of what he does do: (1) He walks not in the counsel of the ungodly; (2) stands not in the way of sinners, (3) sits not in the seat of the scornful. But the godly man not only abstains from that which is evil, but he cleaves to that which is good: (1) he delights in the law of the Lord; (2) he meditates on it day and night; (3) therefore, he is like a tree planted by the river—fruitful, enduring, successful. The godly man is planted by the river of God, the streams whereof render fruitful, beautiful and enduring, the life thus lived.

2. The Ungodly. "The wicked are not so." There is a distinction between right and wrong, and between the right-doer and the wrong-doer. Let no one deceive himself with the thought that all are alike, and that the end of the wicked and the righteous is the same. The wicked "are like the chaff which the wind driveth away"—they lack weight and enduring qualities. "They shall not stand in the judgment, nor in the congregation of the righteous." Their character is not such as to meet the approval of God or of good men, nor bring them into the councils and fellowship of the righteous. "The Lord knoweth the way of the righteous, but the way of the wicked shall perish." The word "know" here seems to be used in the sense of approval. It frequently has this sense in the Bible. The Lord approves the way of the righteous, but the way of the wicked shall perish, because He condemns it. What the Lord approves will endure. What the Lord disapproves must perish. That is an eternal law of conduct and of character. Not what man approves, not what the world applauds, but what God approves, that it is that makes a man blessed, and crowns him with immortality. On the other hand, no amount of learning, or energy, or effort can make that permanently succeed which has the disapproval of God.

Prayer. Oh God, our Father, we thank Thee for the line which Thou hast drawn in Thy Word between the righteous and the unrighteous, and for the light which Thou hast shed upon the way of the righteous, that we may walk therein all our days, and be glad. Give us, day by day, strength to do as Thou wouldst have us do, and to avoid what Thou wouldst have us avoid, that we may find at last eternal fellowship with Thee and with the righteous, through Jesus Christ our Lord! Amen.

A CHANCE TO MAKE MONEY

I have been selling "Non-Alcoholic-Flavoring-Powders" for the past six months, and have made $815.00. Every family buys three or four boxes. The flavoring-powders are better in every respect than the liquid extracts, and are lovely to sell. I do not have to canvass. People send to me for the powders. Any intelligent person can do as well as I, and average $30.00 per week. I get my flavoring-powders from the California Fruit & Chemical Company, St. Louis, Mo. Write them, and they will start you in business. E. C.

Barnes Business College

BOARD OF EDUCATION BUILDING, ST. LOUIS, MO.
Established 22 years. Eight expert teachers. May we tell you what a business course with us means? And we'd be pleased to say something about our shorthand and Touch Typewriting course. We give personal instruction, and can offer advantages not to be obtained elsewhere. Catalogue free.

10,000 Plants for 16c

More gardens and farms are planted to Salzer's seeds than any other in America. There is reason for this. We own and operate over 5000 acres for the production of our warranted seeds. In order to induce you to try them, we make you the following unprecedented offer:

For 16 Cents Postpaid

1000 Early, Medium and Late Cabbages,
2000 Delicious, Carrots,
2000 Blanching Celery,
2000 Rich Nutty Lettuce,
1000 Splendid Onions,
1000 Rare Lucious Radishes,
1000 Gloriously Brilliant Flowers.

Above seven packages contain sufficient seed to grow 10,000 plants, furnishing bushels of brilliant flowers and lots and lots of choice vegetables, together with our great catalog, telling all about Flowers, Roses, Small Fruits, etc., all for 16c in stamps and this notice. Mammouth 140-page catalog alone, 4c.

JOHN A. SALZER SEED CO.,
R. La Crosse, Wis.

Christian Endeavor.

By H. A. Denton,
Feb. 21.

SOME GOOD WAYS OF USING THE SABBATH.—Mark 1:21-34.

For the Leader.

"Sabbath" is a term taken from the Jewish Scriptures, the Old Testament. It is used so often in the New Testament because the New Testament is a history of things that transpired in a Jewish country and among Jews. It is a shallow fallacy to argue that, since the Sabbath is mentioned so much more frequently in the New Testament than the Lord's day, therefore, there is more warrant in the New Testament for keeping it than the Christian's day, the Lord's day, or Sunday, using the secular designation. The New Testament references to the Sabbath are historical statements of what the Jews were doing, and not doctrinal injunctions of the Lord's will. The Sabbath was the religious rest day of the Jews, and it perished with the Jewish economy. It expired by limitations when Jesus nailed the statutes that made it binding to the cross. Not that we are without a day. We have a day, and a better day. Because it has a better meaning. It was appointed under a better covenant. It is the Lord's day, or Sunday. It is a day of religious activity, not rest. A day of good service. Jesus used the Jewish Sabbath in this way, and it was for this that He got into trouble. Let us see into this more fully tonight.

For the Members.

1. We call the Christian's day the Lord's day because it is the day established by the Christian's Law-giver and Leader, Jesus, or the Lord, as He is often called in the New Testament. The record of the vision seen by John as recorded in the book of Revelation says, 1:10, John was "in the Spirit on the Lord's day." The plain reference here is that the spiritual occupations of that day and holy meditations put him into a fit condition to see the beautiful things God had in store for His people.

2. We get the proper distinction between the Sabbath and the Lord's day by properly distinguishing between the Old and the New Covenants: the Jew's Scriptures and the Christian's Scriptures. We are not living under the Law of Moses, but under Christ. That means nothing else than that the way of God through Moses has been abrogated, and that the way of God through Christ has taken its place. We are not under the law, but under the gospel. Paul spent a large part of his time given to writing trying to get the Jews to see this, not only with respect to one ordinance—the Sabbath—but with respect to them all. The old is gone—all gone. The new is perfect. It is to all intents and purposes an independent plan of salvation.

3. Now am I to jump at once to the dangerous conclusion, that, since the Sabbath is gone I no longer have any restraints placed upon me as to the one day in seven? By no means. There is no sense in that. Nothing at all has happened. The Gentiles—the non-Jews of the world—were never under the Law of Moses, and hence never under the Jewish Sabbath. I have only found out my Master; my Savior; my Lord; He to whom I must render the service of my heart and my life. What is His day? What does it mean? How did the Christians keep it? The first day, not the seventh, is His day. He arose from the dead on that day. The Christians of the New Testament times met on this day to celebrate the Lord's Supper, to preach, to make their offerings to the Lord's work. See Acts 20:7; 1 Cor. 16:2; Gal. 3:24-29; 5:1-4.

4. If we would get a hint of how Jesus would have us use the Lord's day, let us look at the way He uses the Jewish Sabbath as recorded in our lesson. If the followers of the Lord are to do anything after the religious service of the day, let the deeds be religious, benevolent, humane, as were the works of Jesus on the Jewish Sabbath. I would not go

ARE YOUR KIDNEYS WEAK?

Thousands of Men and Women Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It.

To Prove What the Great Kidney Remedy, Swamp-Root, Will Do for YOU, Every Reader of the Christian-Evangelist May Have a Sample Bottle sent Absolutely Free by Mail.

It used to be considered that only urinary and bladder troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all diseases have their beginning in the disorder of these most important organs.

The kidneys filter and purify the blood—that is their work.

Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected, and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys are getting better they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

I was a constant sufferer for a number of years with weakness of the kidneys and back and frequent desire to urinate, but after using Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, I am entirely cured and cheerfully recommend this wonderful remedy to any who may suffer from these common complaints. Most truly yours,
W. C. Baily, 2d Lieut. of Police,
Columbus, Ga.

Weak and unhealthy kidneys are responsible for many kinds of diseases, and if permitted to continue, much suffering with fatal results are sure to follow. Kidney trouble irritates the nerves, makes you dizzy, restless, sleepless and irritable. Makes you pass water often during the day and obliges you to get up many times during the night. Unhealthy kidneys cause rheumatism, gravel, catarrh of the bladder, pain or dull ache in the back, joints and muscles; makes your head ache and back ache, causes indigestion, stomach and liver trouble, you get a sallow, yellow complexion, makes you feel as though you had heart trouble; you may have plenty of ambition, but no strength; get weak and waste away.

The cure for these troubles is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the world-famous kidney remedy. In taking Swamp-Root you afford natural help to Nature, for Swamp-Root is the most perfect healer and gentle aid to the kidneys that is known to medical science.

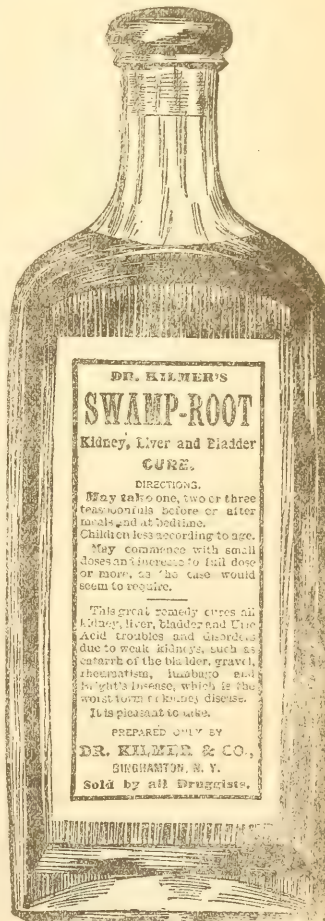

If there is any doubt in your mind as to your condition, take from your urine on rising about four ounces, place it in a glass or bottle and let it stand twenty-four hours. If on examination it is milky or cloudy, if there is a brick-dust settling, or if small particles float about in it, your kidneys are in need of immediate attention.

Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is used in the leading hospitals, recommended by physicians in their private practice, and is taken by doctors themselves who have kidney ailments, because they recognize in it the greatest and most successful remedy for kidney, liver and bladder troubles.

If you are already convinced that Swamp-Root is SPECIAL NOTE—You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful remedy, Swamp-Root, sent absolutely free by mail, also a book telling all about Swamp-Root, and containing many of the thousands upon thousands of testimonial letters received from men and women who owe their good health, in fact their very lives, to the great curative properties of Swamp-Root. In writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure to say you read this generous offer in the St. Louis CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST.

skating on Sunday. I would not go fishing on Sunday. I would not go on an excursion on Sunday. I would not attend base ball games and such sports on Sunday. I would cut all this out. Why? Because they are not in keeping with the significance of the day. They make me think less, not more, of my Master. I feel out of place there. I would not want the angels that the Lord will send to gather together from the four corners of the earth His chosen to find me at such a place on Sunday. And that is enough.

(Swamp-Root is pleasant to take.)

what you need, you can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at the drug stores everywhere. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address—Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

Quiet Hour Thought.

Am I worthy of the exalted plane upon which my Master places me when He rules me by love instead of law?

DAILY READINGS.

M. The Sabbath Commanded. Exod. 20:8-11.
T. Jesus and the Sabbath. Matt. 12:1-12.
W. Lawful Work on the Sabbath. Lu. 13:10-17.
T. The Sabbath Observed. Mark 15:42-47.
F. The First Lord's Day. Mark 16:1-13.
S. The Lord's Day at Patmos. Rev. 1:9-20.
S. The Sacred Sabbath. Matt. 12:9-13.

News From Many Fields

Ohio's Capital.

The citizens of this town have been leading a rather strenuous life the past few weeks. First came the opening sessions of the 76th General Assembly of Ohio. The occasion was much like its predecessors. At ten o'clock on the morning of Jan. 4 the work began. There were very few visitors in either the Senate or the House. The real lively times came on the day of the inauguration of Governor Myron T. Herrick. This was on the 12th.

By a resolution of the Ministerial Alliance, pastors in the city, were chosen to act as chaplain for one day in the Senate and the House, instead of having a scramble for this position, and also saving the state the salary of one elected. It fell to my lot to be chaplain of the Senate on the 12th. After discharging that duty I remained to witness the vote on United States Senator. Judge Shellenbarger, of Cleveland, in a speech of great brilliancy, nominated Marcus A. Hanna. Another one of the senators, in a short but eloquent address, nominated Judge Clark, of Cleveland. When the roll of the Senate was called by the clerk, the vote stood 29 for Hanna and four for Clark. In the House the vote was 86 for Hanna and 21 for Clark.

Adjournment was then had in order to witness the inauguration of the governor, which took place in the magnificent rotunda of the State House. This had been most artistically decorated with smilax, reaching from the top of the dome to the floor, while plants, palms, ferns and cut flowers were everywhere, the temporary platform where the governor, his staff and invited guests were seated, being banked with American Beauty roses, carnations, etc. Thousands of electric lights, in the form of stars, together with American flags, gracefully festooned about the dome, made a lasting impression.

Shortly after twelve o'clock the ceremonies began, the band playing patriotic airs, and the Apollo Club singing appropriate songs. After an invocation the oath was administered to the Governor by the Chief Justice, and then came the inaugural address, brief, but in good taste and highly complimented. Promptly at 1:30 P. M. the inaugural parade began, and it was said to be the most gorgeous ever seen in Columbus at an inaugural. It was two and a half hours in passing the reviewing stand, on which were ex-Governor Nash, ex-Governor Bushnell, whose sudden death the next day cast such a gloom over the city, the new Governor Herrick, and many others.

Two of our churches are in protracted meetings, the Franklin Avenue Church, Brother Dodd, the minister, doing the preaching and singing, with a number of valuable additions to date, and the Central, with Sister Princess C. Long helping the preacher in song, and with 28 additions to date. The meeting will go on until the last of the month, and many more are expected to unite with us. Brother Wesley Hatcher, of Chicago Avenue, is to begin next week, himself doing the preaching, and he will have a good meeting.

Bro. Samuel H. Forrer, of the West Fourth Avenue Church, has taken hold of that work with vigor, and already several additions have been gained and a new auditorium, to cost about $8,000, will be built this year.

A temporary organization of the brethren at Linden Heights will be effected the third Lord's day in February. When this work is placed upon a permanent basis, giving us the fifth congregation in the city, we will turn our eyes toward the south part of town, where we have about thirty or forty brethren, start a Bible-school there and let it grow into another church. We hope to have at least four new churches in this rapidly growing city within the next four or five years.

The writer expects to help Brother Harp in a meeting at Springfield during February, going over and preaching on week nights, and returning to Columbus for his work on the Lord's day. We anticipate a good meeting.

We are to have a foreign missionary rally here in the Central Church on the evening of Feb. 2. Brothers McLean, Wharton and Bentley will be here and others will speak, and we cordially invite preachers within reach of Columbus to come to this meeting. Free entertainment will be given to all who come.

Will the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST please to accept my most hearty congratulations on the rounding out of such a long and honorable period of time in the service of the brotherhood? I need not say how thoroughly I enjoy reading the paper. For twenty-five years it has been coming to my table, and there are many things I would do without before I would cut it from the list of my necessities. May the Lord bless its editor, its managers, its business affairs, and may it long be what it always is—an inspiration to higher, better and more Christ-like living!

Columbus, O. WALTER SCOTT PRIEST.

Northern California.

In my travels I run across various kinds of weather. Occasionally a fog or a frost causes one to hear complaints from those who have never experienced blizzards or 40-below-zero weather. Beautiful sunshine, green fields, grazing cattle and sheep appeal to our sense of gratitude when we pick up the papers and read of the frigid weather east.

Writing this at Vallejo, thirty miles from San Francisco, where I have just picked and eaten a half-dozen pears, sweet and nice, from a tree in the dooryard this the 26th day of January.

Bro. S. S. Murphy, at Vallejo, is doing good work in a hard field.

Brother Stafford, of Lexington, Ky., is to take the Hanford work, exchanging with Bro. A. P. Finley.

Bro. R. L. McHatton begins a meeting at Red Bluff, Feb. 7, which promises well. Bro. D. A. Russell, the efficient pastor there, is working faithfully.

Chico is getting ready for a meeting soon and the evangelist should be a strong man. This is one of the important cities of California.

Marysville will soon be ready for a meeting. Sutter City, an outlying point, is also about ripe for an ingathering.

By the way, I visited a point on one of our trunk lines of railroad last Lord's day, a community of 500 people where no Sunday-school nor any religious services are being held. I advertised myself and in the morning spoke to nine women and four girls and "broke bread." At night we spoke to thirty-five people. Three to one in this community I am told are in sympathy with the Christian Church. What a ripe field! Wonder if Brother Raines or McLean couldn't send a foreign missionary to such a place, and if it wouldn't be money well spent?

I might tell you that I was on a ten-acre alfalfa field last week which produced one hundred tons of hay in 1903, and the crop sold for $1,500, but I fear my truthfulness would be questioned, so I won't tell it.

Gallahann and Carroll begin a meeting at Galt this week, having just closed at Paso Robles. They have need of the Lord's help in these difficult fields that have been well nigh abandoned, but which are rejuvenating again.

Since last state meeting 17 meetings have been held and concluded; four are now in progress and twelve more are arranged for before next state meeting, and still we are negotiating. This is a long step in advance. Twelve ministers have been imported, and yet we have some vacant pulpits. Four more will be vacated Feb. 1. Of this number two go to southern California, one has not decided where to go, and one leaves the ministry.

We look for a feast at San Francisco Feb. 2 and 3, when the Evangelistic Conference, Bay District Convention and northern California ministers meet in a joint session.

J. P. DARGITZ, Cor. Sec.

Healdsburg, Cal.

Iowa.

Roy Polly, late of Larrabee, will preach for the churches at Kent and Cromwell.

Lewis Goos, of Illinois, will preach for the church at Long Grove instead of L. W. Spayd, as was stated in my last notes. Brother Spayd was at Brooklyn last Lord's day and it is hoped that he will remain there during the year. Brother Spayd is one of our worthy ministers and deserves a good field.

Evangelist C. G. Stout closed his meeting at Redfield with 97 additions. His next meeting will be at Collins.

Evangelist M. L. Anthony is expected to go to Castana for his next meeting.

John H. Swift is in a meeting at Akron and is expected to hold his next meeting at Manning. Brother Swift has made an excellent record as an evangelist and should be kept busy in Iowa.

There were 28 accessions in the Kellerton meeting held by Jesse Coffin, and the meeting still continues.

P. H. Green is in a good meeting with his home congregation at Oakland.

J. L. Smith held a good meeting at Mondamin resulting in five additions to the church. He is now at Lossing.

Loren Howe and pastor, A. L. Criley, held a meeting at Sheldon in which 34 were added to the church.

T. A. Lindenmyer, late of Goldfield, has gone to Pawnee City, Neb., to accept the pastorate of the church.

I would like to have a list of the churches in Iowa that are in need of meetings. I have the names of good evangelists that can be secured at reasonable figures. I also have the names of competent singing evangelists and will be glad to do anything in my power to help have a meeting held in every church in Iowa. I can help a few good men secure locations as pastors. Pastors desiring locations will save time by being explicit as possible in the letters of inquiry.

I was at Jefferson last Sunday and preached both morning and evening. The evangelist Sunday union meetings were followed with a two weeks' campaign by Brother S. G. Griffith in which 91 new members were brought into the church; about 70 of the number were converted in the union meeting. I was entertained at the pleasant home of Brother and Sister John Downing.

The new church at Atlantic is nearing completion and your secretary has an invitation to assist in the dedicatory services February

ARE YOU AGEING?

Dr. Holmes used to say he was "seventy years young." Some men are old at half that figure.

Age is not in years. It is in the blood. Scott's Emulsion helps to keep you young by keeping your blood young; by supplying it with an abundance of rich, pure, vital nourishment; carrying constant life and renewal to every fibre of your body. It will help you to rob advancing years of half their sting.

We'll send you a sample free upon request.
SCOTT & BOWNE, 409 Pearl Street, New York.

21. I have dedicated 45 churches in the last five and one half years.

Our state convention will be held at Albia, June 20-23. Before that time we hope to have statistics and an offering from every church in the state, and the sooner the better. We were never doing better work than now and we are needing money badly.

B. S. DENNY, Cor. Sec.

Maryland, Delaware and District of Columbia.

While your correspondent now has his address at Waynesboro, Pa., it is just over Mason and Dixon's line, and he is still corresponding secretary for the Christian Missionary Society for the above territory. Waynesboro is a mission of the American Society and our state society. We closed a meeting here last night. W. S. Hoyl preached eight days and the writer nine. Two were added from the First Church, Hagerstown. Tracts were distributed and our position taught from platform and through the city papers and in private conversation. We met in a hall; did not have a large hearing at any time.

German Baptists, Mennonites, River Brethren, Lutherans and Reformers are strongly entrenched, and they do not change rapidly. When the people of the community do take a stand they are not easily moved. So we hope for the future and are planning for another siege in the spring or summer with a regular evangelist.

H. C. Kendrick held his own meeting in Hagerstown. In two weeks he had eighteen baptisms, one from the Dunkards, two received who had been previously baptized and one yet to be baptized.

J. Murray Taylor's work is starting well at H. Street, Washington; large attendance, one confession Jan. 17.

W. L. Harris had eight confessions recently at Whitney Ave.

W. R. D. Winters has been seriously ill and unable to attend to his work at Fulton Avenue, Baltimore. J. A. HOPKINS.

Waynesboro, Pa., Jan. 29.

Indian Territory.

The writer began the first of February the work of corresponding secretary and evangelist of the Indian Territory. As this is the third of the month, we have not had time to learn much respecting the situation, other than in a general way. From what we have learned, it appears that the outlook is most hopeful, and we are encouraged and led to look forward to a great work.

We traveled over the Indian Territory about 19 years ago, visiting many villages in the Choctaw, Creek and Cherokee nations. Even at that time, though a youth of 18 summers, and the country little more than a wilderness, we felt that at no distant day the Indian Territory would become the garden spot of America. We are now more convinced of that fact than ever before. The development of the past few years have been marvelous, and the future is big with promises. Now is the time to lay the foundation in this rapidly developing territory. Much has been accomplished through the liberality and wise management of a few consecrated brethren. But the time has come for a forward move. We must plan greater things. It would be criminal for us to fail to do this. With a broader foundation, a larger membership, increased funds, years of experience, the simple truth of God, and last but not least, the help of the American Home Board, we would be unfaithful stewards, and unworthy of our high and holy calling, did we not plan greater victories than we have yet undertaken. We have established headquarters at South McAlester. All correspondents will address us at this place,—and don't fail to enclose stamp for reply.

We trust we may have the sympathy and co-operation of all the brethren, for "we covet your fellowship in furtherance of the gospel."

S. R. HAWKINS, Cor. Sec.

Texas.

The writer of these notes recently held a meeting in Bay City resulting in 21 additions, a Sunday-school and ladies' aid society organized and a lot secured on which to build a church house in the near future. Bay City is a beautiful city of some 2,500 inhabitants, situated in the heart of perhaps the best rice growing country in the south, and is growing rapidly. Bro. J. W. Gates preaches for this church one-fourth of his time, a young man of promise, full of energy and enthusiasm, and no doubt will soon place our church there in the front rank.

At this writing I am engaged in a meeting at El Campo, another new town with perhaps 1,500 inhabitants, situated in the western portion of Wharton county. The chief industry of the surrounding country is the cultivation of rice, which has proven quite profitable to the farmers. During the meeting there have been 29 additions, a church has been organized, also a Sunday-school and ladies' aid society, a lot has been secured on which to build a church house, a building committee appointed and about $800 has been raised for the building fund. The committee has gone to work in earnest and have set the 19th of June to dedicate their new church house. Brother Gates has been employed to preach to this church one-half time and will make El Campo his home as soon as he can build a residence.

Bro. M. M. Davis has recently held a successful meeting at Corsicana where J. F. Quisenberry ministers. Bro. Davis is not only one of our most successful pastors, standing at the helm of the largest church in the Texas brotherhood, but give him a chance and he proves himself one of our most successful protracted meeting men also. He is good any where he works, and never fails in anything he undertakes. Texas needs many more such men.

The church at Greenbury, where V. R. Stapp ministers, has recently built a new church house out of the old one, and the church and pastor are happy over their success. Our corresponding secretary, Bro. J. C. Mason, preached the sermon at the dedication, and like he always does things, it was well done.

The church at Ladonia, where V. R. Spicer ministers, is taking steps to rebuild their church house which was destroyed by fire a few months ago. The church will be rebuilt, though at quite a sacrifice on the part of the members.

G. W. Terrell has done a fine work at Hillsboro, and through the protracted meeting recently held, the church has taken on new life, and every department of work is prospering. Austin, Tex. B. B. SANDERS.

Dedication at Weatherford, Oklahoma Territory.

The congregation of Disciples in the new and growing city of Weatherford, O., T., has just completed an elegant house of worship. On Lord's day, Jan. 17, it was formally opened for worship, and dedicated to Almighty God.

The house is a beautiful pressed brick edifice; is modern in all of its appointments, and will make a beautiful and convenient home for the church for many years to come.

Weatherford is the seat of the Southwestern Oklahoma Normal College, making it an important point for a congregation of Disciples. Several of the teachers in the college are members of the Christian Church. With this new and commodious house, many of the students will attend services there, and no doubt will accept Christ and obey the gospel, and go to their respective homes carrying with them the truth as it is in Jesus Christ our Lord, so that it will be a great missionary church. Brother Frank L. Van Voorhis is the pastor of the church. He is a man of sterling worth, great piety, and thoroughly devoted to his chosen work. Bro. J. M. Monroe, of Oklahoma City, the territorial evangelist, was at the dedication, and rendered valuable assistance. He reports that there are fourteen

WHAT SULPHUR DOES

For the Human Body in Health and Disease.

The mention of sulphur will recall to many of us the early days when our mothers and grandmothers gave us our daily dose of sulphur and molasses every spring and fall.

It was the universal spring and fall "blood purifier," tonic and cure-all, and mind you, this old-fashioned remedy was not without merit.

The idea was good, but the remedy was crude and unpalatable, and a large quantity had to be taken to get any effect.

Nowadays we get all the beneficial effects of sulphur in a palatable, concentrated form, so that a single grain is far more effective than a tablespoonful of the crude sulphur.

In recent years, research and experiment have proven that the best sulphur for medicinal use is that obtained from Calcium (Calcium Sulphide) and sold in drug stores under the name of Stuart's Calcium Wafers. They are small chocolate coated pellets and contain the active medicinal principle of sulphur in a highly concentrated, effective form.

Few people are aware of the value of this form of sulphur in restoring and maintaining bodily vigor and health: sulphur acts directly on the liver, the excretory organs and purifies and enriches the blood by the prompt elimination of waste material.

Our grandmothers knew this when they dosed us with sulphur and molasses every spring and fall, but the crudity and impurity of ordinary flowers of sulphur were often worse than the disease, and cannot compare with the modern concentrated preparations of sulphur, of which Stuart's Calcium Wafers is undoubtedly the best and most widely used.

They are the natural antidote for liver and kidney troubles, and cure constipation and purify the blood in a way that often surprises patient and physician alike.

Dr. R. M. Wilkins while experimenting with sulphur remedies soon found that the sulphur from Calcium was superior to any other form. He says: "For liver, kidney and blood troubles, especially when resulting from constipation or malaria, I have been surprised at the results obtained from Stuart's Calcium Wafers. In patients suffering from boils and pimples and even deep seated carbuncles, I have repeatedly seen them dry up and disappear in four or five days, leaving the skin clear and smooth. Although Stuart's Calcium Wafers is a proprietary article, and sold by druggists, and for that reason tabooed by many physicians, yet I know of nothing so safe and reliable for constipation, liver and kidney troubles, and especially in all forms of skin disease, as this remedy."

At any rate, people who are tired of pills, cathartics and so-called blood "purifiers," will find in Stuart's Calcium Wafers a far safer, more palatable and effective preparation.

other churches in the territory that have houses nearly ready for dedication, and that the Christian church is in the lead of all other religious organizations in the territory.

The rich, fertile soil of Oklahoma seems to be congenial for primitive Christianity.

The brethren had all paid very liberally on their beautiful house. But they asked us to try and raise $2,000 more. During the day and night service the full amount was raised, and the next morning a good brother-in-law, who could not be at the dedication, came around and gave another hundred dollars; so they all felt that the work was well rounded up, and the dedication a great success.

It was a brave and noble thing for these people to do, but they are brave, noble Christian men and women.

The Oklahoma country is an exceeding beautiful and rich one. It will, no doubt, soon be admitted as a state, and will rank among the best in that part of our great country.

Our visit was a very pleasant one. We will not soon forget the great kindness of these brethren.

L. L. CARPENTER.

Wabash, Ind.

Our Budget

—A quarter of a million for Foreign Missions this year.

—This means the enlistment of many non-contributing churches and individuals in the March offering.

—It means, also, that all the "occasional" contributors shall be heard from this year, and that the "regulars" will be a little above their best.

—Let there be no delay in sending in subscriptions to the World's Fair building. The work should be begun soon, and the money ought to be in sight to pay for it. In no other way is it possible for the Disciples to do as much profitable advertising for the same amount of money.

—Brother Hoffmann says the agents and preachers are responding nobly to his appeal to them to assist in that 10,000 increase in the circulation of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. A united effort will win the day. Let every friend of the paper join in the movement and lend a helping hand.

—Carl Barnett has been called to succeed O. E. Tomes at Rockville, Ind.

—Louis A. Hopkins has been called for half-time each to Broad-Ripple, Ind., Christian Church and to Manilla.

—Orlando E. Tomes has resigned his work at Rockville, Ind., to accept the pastorate of the Olive Branch Church in Indianapolis.

—C. B. Newman, the popular pastor of the Third Christian Church, Indianapolis, left last week for a tour of Palestine.

—Stacey Phillips, of Independence, Mo., visited the church at Golden City, Mo., Jan. 31 and accepted the call for three-fourths time.

—L. E. Murray read a most excellent paper before the Indianapolis Christian ministers' meeting on the subject of Authority in Religion. An interesting discussion followed.

—John T. Owens, after four years of mission work in Oklahoma, has accepted the pastorate at Chandler, O. T., a thriving county-seat of 4,000 inhabitants.

—Miss Eliza Williams, of Arkansas, has just given our National Benevolent Association $200 on the annuity plan. Geo. L. Snively, 903 Aubert Ave., St. Louis, will gladly answer all inquiries concerning the annuity plan.

—R. A. Smith, for three and a half years pastor of Kensington Christian Church, Philadelphia, Pa., and now doing post-graduate work in Butler College, has been called to the pastorate of Hillside Avenue Church, Indianapolis.

—Samuel H. Farrer has completed his work in Boston, Mass., and accepted the pastorate of the West Fourth Avenue Church, Columbus, O. The congregation is in good condition and expects to build its auditorium in the spring.

—T. J. Legg has just organized a new church in Terre Haute, Ind., to be known as the College Avenue Church. It starts with 50 charter members from a Sunday-school mission. A house of worship will be built this year. Brother Legg goes shortly into another meeting at Epsom.

—"Most heartily I join my congratulations with the great host of friends who have expressed their appreciation of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST as one of the best among the religious papers of our country."—E. B. SANFORD.

—J. M. Rudy's recent sermon at the First Christian Church, Sedalia, Mo., on "Young Women in their Relation to Young Men," attracted considerable attention, and was published in the Sedalia Sentinel.

—"Twenty-four hours out of St. Louis," the Editor writes from his south-bound train, "and lo! the winter is past! Instead of snow, a warm sunshine bathes the land, and the negroes and the mules are in the fields doing their spring plowing. The grass is looking green, and everything wears a spring-like appearance."

"To Err is Human"— Not to Err—Elgin.

The man who is always right on time is the man who carries the

ELGIN WATCH

Every Elgin Watch is fully guaranteed. All jewelers have Elgin Watches. "Timemakers and Timekeepers," an illustrated history of the watch, sent free upon request to

ELGIN NATIONAL WATCH CO., ELGIN, ILL.

—A friend in Missouri turned over a thousand dollars to the Foreign Society on the annuity plan.

—A. McLean, president of the Foreign Society, makes a contribution of $500 for the India Bible College.

—The churches of St. Louis have decided to support three missionaries on the foreign field the current missionary year, making three living links.

—The church at Mayfield, Ky., Roger L. Clarke, minister, has determined to link itself to the foreign field by supporting a missionary.

—The officers of the Central Church, Youngstown, O., have decided to make that church a living link this year. W. S. Goode is the pastor.

—The Richmond Avenue Church, Buffalo, N. Y., and also the Jefferson Street Church, the same city, have decided to become living links in the Foreign Society by raising $600 each.

—The Missionary Association of Drake University has decided to support Charles S. Settlemyer in China, through the Foreign Society. He is a graduate of Drake. This makes the association another living link.

—The church at San Diego, Cal., just concluded the best meeting in its history. J. P. McKnight, our evangelist, assisted the pastor, W. E. Crabtree, and 46 souls were admitted to the membership, 21 being by confession.

—H. E. Wilhite is in a splendid meeting at Glendora, where L. O. Newcomer ministers. The whole town is aroused to a study of the word. About 50 have already come into the fellowship, and the meeting continues.

—The church at Corona, Cal., served by S. W. Hawkins as pastor, has called Geo. Ringo from his busy field at Riverside, to lead them in an evangelistic campaign. Great interest is reported.

—Early in December, J. P. Ralstin was sent to Santa Maria, Cal., and the territory adjacent thereto, to call back to the activities of life two or three isolated congregations. He reports progress.

—The ladies of the Christian Church at Doniphan, Mo., will have a bazaar during the latter part of March to raise money for their church building. Donations of fancy and useful articles for this bazaar will be gratefully received. Address Mrs. J. P. Campbell.

—D. Y. Donaldson, who has recently gone to Colfax, Wash., writes: "The church here held a reception in honor of Mrs. Donaldson and myself on the evening of Jan. 28. It was a royal welcome. Over 200 friends were present, representing the various churches of the city. Very bright prospects are ours, and while we have but 50 members, they are of a chosen kind. Bro. R. M. Messick, now of Cheney, did a splendid work here during the closing months of last year, and left all in good order for our coming."

—T. B. Larimore called at this office on Thursday on his way to San Angelo, Texas. The editors regretted that their absence on that day caused them to miss his visit.

—James N. Crutcher, of Moberly, Mo., will visit all the churches in Randolph Co., during February in the interest of foreign missions. He will also conduct a Bible-class for the railroad Y. M. C. A. in Moberly. A fine pipe organ is soon to be installed in the Moberly Church.

—The Trinidad, Col., Church desires a supply for four months from March 1, during the pastor's absence in the Orient. Anyone desiring a trip to Colorado linked with work, write at once to the pastor, David Cary Peters, 116 N. Chestnut St., Trinidad, Col.

—On Feb. 1 there was $402,578.92 in the Church Extension Fund. The receipts for January amounted to $6,765.58, which is a gain of $4,806 over January, 1903. There was a falling behind of $92 in offerings from the churches, and $102 in individual offerings, but there was a gain of $5,000 in annuities.

—A dispatch from the daily papers says: "Logan, Ia., February 7. Fire in the First Christian Church, which broke out just after service began to-day, created a panic. The flames communicated to the bell tower, which fell in a few moments after the congregation had gotten out. None of the members were hurt, but several had narrow escapes. The loss is $10,000."

—The church at South Chicago, where N. G. Buckley has been ministering until recently, has been hearing trial sermons and expects to be in working order soon with a settled pastor. This is a new congregation and has only 32 members and a Bible-school of about 60. An endeavor society was organized two weeks ago.

—Last week the Board of Church Extension received $500 on the annuity plan from a friend in Detroit, Mich. This is the 105th annuity gift to the Church Extension Fund. The board pays 4 per cent on the annuities from persons from the age of 21 to 39 inclusive; 5 per cent from the age of 40 to 49, inclusive, and 6 per cent from the age of 50. Write G. W. Muckley, Cor. Sec., 600 Water Works Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

—Oscar P. Spiegel has resigned as minister of the First Christian Church in New Orleans, and may re-enter the general evangelistic work for which he has diligently prepared himself and in which he has been eminently successful. During the year the New Orleans church made a gross gain in membership of 74 per cent, a net gain in resident membership of 44 per cent, and raised more than three thousand dollars for the work. John A. Stevens, of Chickasha, I. T., has been asked to take up the work in that important city. Brother Spiegel will remain on the ground till his successor arrives and do what he can to have the work continue without a break. His address will be 1532 Camp Street —Iowa leads in the number of contributing churches on Education Day and in the amount contributed. Some of the churches which have planned and promised to observe the day were prevented from doing so at the appointed time. Let them not fail to observe it and send all monies to Harry C. Hill, general secretary, Box 111, Indianapolis, Ind., specifying whether they wish the money to go to some particular college or to the general fund of the education society.

—The Christian Temple which is now being erected in Baltimore, Md., by the congregation of which Peter Ainslie is pastor, is to be "an every day church" with all up-to-date facilities for doing practical Christian work under the modern conditions imposed by city life. Contributions for this work have come from all parts of the country, and the enterprise has attracted favorable notice from persons and papers in Baltimore which are not accustomed to take much interest in the mere erection of a new church. The enterprise is in many respects unique and is deserving of help.

—T. Wallace, of Christian University, Canton, sends us the following item of news about the doings of Canton boys: "B. J. Revis has been called to preach at Santa Fe and Salt River Churches. Bro. Daniel Dungan will begin work first Sunday in February. He will sing and play the cornet for the Quincy Church in their revival to be held in April. We have now about 40 Bible students in the University and nearly 600 students in attendance. There will be 15 in the graduating class in June. About ten of the graduates will locate here and in the far west.—T. WALLACE.

—L. D. Andrews, of Leavenworth, Kan., writes: "Your sketch of Bro. E. L. Craig in last issue of CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST is of peculiar interest to me. It may interest many others to know that along in the 80's E. L. Craig came from Illinois to El Dorado, Kan., in company with his brother-in-law, A. B. Young. Their home was near the city and the little band of Christians organized there were often encouraged and strengthened by each of these men. Brother Craig's mind was clear and active until dropsy caused bodily infirmities, and we laid him to rest when his patient suffering ended."

—The foreign mission rallies that have been held during the past few weeks have been exceptionally well attended and helpful. Reports of them are coming in from all quarters. The one at Akron, Ohio, was said by President McLean to be the largest up to that time, with the exception of the one at Lexington, Ky. The rally at Columbus, Ohio, was as W. S. Priest says, "Like a section of one of our national conventions." Such gatherings as these ought to have a powerful effect in increasing the offering on the first Sunday in March. They are quite well worth while even for their educational and spiritual value to the home churches.

—On Tuesday, Jan. 26, in the Bellaire, Ohio, Christian Church, Pres. A. McLean conducted a fine rally. The awful flood here cut off the lower end of town and trains and street cars were put out of business. But McLean, Wharton and Miss Kelly managed to get here over the B. & O. The walls of the church were covered with maps and charts, eloquent and informing. These missionary experts were at their best. H. H. Moninger, Steubenville, J. N. Scholes, of Wheeling, J. M. Streater, of West Liberty, W. Va., made good speeches. About eight came from Steubenville, some from Martin's Ferry, O., Wheeling, W. Va., Cameron, W. Va., and about 20 from Bethany College. Great good will come of the rally.—SUMNER T. MARTIN.

A Good Climate.

In this day of many ailments,—catarrhal disorder and bronchial disturbances especially, there are numerous seekers after a salubrious and congenial climate. The immeasurable importance of a proper mental and spiritual atmosphere should not be overlooked, for while physical distresses are deeply to be lamented, incomparably more serious is the soil and impoverishment of character, which is not alone for time, but eternity.

Parents earnestly desire for their children in the formative period of their lives, an environment above suspicion in the matter of character safe-guards and encouragements.

Here at University Place may be found much that is very desirable in all respects. We do not claim perfection, but can certainly maintain "without fear of successful contradiction," a superior climate and most helpful moral, mental and spiritual environment.

More than two miles from the center of the little city of Des Moines, and but a few blocks from wood and pasture lands, we enjoy the delightful combination of urban and rural advantages.

The late lamented General Drake has done great things for this community. The staff of Drake, trustees and teachers, have the interests of the young deeply at heart.

The best of homes are open to roomers. Young ladies are especially safe-guarded by the most efficient oversight of Miss Mary Carpenter, dean of women. While young enough to be delightfully companionable to the young women, Miss Carpenter is of most refined and dignified deportment, but cheery and wholesome and altogether ideal for the office she fills. The Young Women's Christian Association is well organized and carried on with enthusiasm and energy. There are various Bible classes conducted on different days of the week, providing different courses of study and sufficiently varied as to times of meeting, methods, etc., to provide ample scope for all needs. The Sunday meetings of the Y. W. C. A. are interesting and helpful.

Last, but by no means least, comes the great churches of Des Moines, principally, of course, for the students, the University Place Church. The necessity for the beloved Dr. McCash to resign because of failing health is deeply regretted. The church is to be congratulated, however, upon securing so valuable a substitute as Charles S. Medbury. He will be most congenial to the student body, exceedingly attractive in every way, and of so deep spiritual power, yet thoroughly practical withal, that parents may well covet his splendid influence for their growing children.

Surely if one's tendencies are not almost hopelessly evil, the influence of Drake and vicinity must greatly facilitate and almost insure the highest and truest development in every way. LAURA DELANY GARST.
De Moines, Ia.

POPULAR HYMNS No. 2

By C. C. CLINE

Now used by

Thousands of Churches Everywhere
in the land.

The Popular Song Book with the People.

PRICES:

SINGLE COPIES, POSTPAID.
Limp cloth, - 25 cents	Boards, -	25 cents
Cloth, -	30 cents
PER DOZEN, NOT PREPAID.
Limp cloth, - $2.00	Boards, -	$2.50
Cloth, -	$3.00
PER HUNDRED, NOT PREPAID.
Limp cloth, - $15.00	Boards, -	$20.00
Cloth, -	$25.00

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING COMPANY
St. Louis, Mo.

A Personal Letter.

We take the doubtful liberty of publishing the following personal letter which the editor has just received from Mrs. T. A. Abbott, of Kansas city, wife of the devoted state corresponding secretary for missions. Many hearts will be grieved to learn the sad news which it conveys, and many sympathetic words will be spoken. Let there be also some sympathetic acts. There is such a thing as sacrificial and vicarious suffering even to-day. All that Brother Abbott would ask of us is that we do what we can at once for the work which is as much ours as his. This is the letter:

Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 7, 1904.

REV. J. H. GARRISON, St. Louis, Mo. Dear Brother Garrison:—That which I have been dreading for some time past, has, I fear come.

Mr. Abbott has completely broken down. The work and worry of the last four months, and especially of the last two, have taxed his strength far beyond endurance. Days of unremitting toil have been followed by nights of sleepless anxiety, till nature could stand no more.

Last Friday evening he returned from an exceptionally trying board meeting, almost delirious with pains in his head. The physician was hastily called, and as the pain was relieved, he passed into a state of semi-stupor in which at this writing, Sunday evening, he still lies.

Nature is forcing that which is needed, an absolute rest. The physician says this period will be followed by one of excessive weakness, in which strong stimulants will have to be used, but I am sure that the best stimulants would be a number of letters from his brethren in the state, either containing the offering for state missions or else assurance that it would be immediately taken.

Three weeks ago he sent fifty personal letters to as many of the leading brethren in the state, setting forth the imperative needs of state work. One brother replied by sending a partial offering, three others said they would take it soon, one said he could take a better offering next November than he could now, the other forty-five ignored the letter entirely—this is what kills.

How soon he will be able to get to work again, the dear Lord alone knows. He is a very sick man. I am consumed with anxiety. Pray for us.

Yours sincerely,

3314 Charlotte St.

MRS. ABBOTT.

RAPIDLY GROWING

in Popularity and Circulation
the Indispensable Companion of Young Men and Women
Everywhere

Our Young Folks

Began its Fourteenth Volume with the First Issue for 1904. As an Aid to the Sunday-School and
C. E. Worker
IT IS UNSURPASSED

Subscription Price, 75c. a year
(52 Numbers)

Christian Publishing Co.
St. Louis : : Missouri

PISO'S CURE FOR
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup, Tastes Good. Use
in time. Sold by druggists.
CONSUMPTION

Correspondence

Kentucky Mission Work for January.

We had, during the past month and in December, 17 students at work: Gayle Spencer, R. L. Mobley, B. H. Duncan, U. Chase James, R. E. Alexander, Walter Carter, G. Garfield Alexander, J. S. Mill, S. M. Bedford, Lord and Wilson, C. M. Summers, J. Q. Biggs, E. S. Lewis, I. Paternoster, J. W. Conkling, S. P. Pittman, are the names of the young brethren who went out for volunteer work during the holidays. They preached the gospel to many people, added 34, and did much to help the cause in various counties. Nearly all of this was done in the mountains of Kentucky. The state board paid the expenses of these brethren.

T. S. Buckingham was at Chatham in January, and reports good results. H. K. Berry who goes to Augusta, will preach at this mission during 1904.

Robert Kirby was at work only three days in the last month of the year. Was crippled and could not do more.

D. G. Combs has been in the Big Sandy Valley 26 days, preached 27 sermons, added 15. He will hold meetings at Paintsville and Prestonsburg, two important county seats.

A. T. Felix has been at Bardstown and Springfield all the month, and reports the outlook as bright with promise of success.

J. K. Osborne was in Harlan Co., 13 days, preached 12 sermons, added six, $25.85 for self.

H. C. Runyon was all the month at Latonia, added two, did much general work. Prospects flattering in this town of 4,000 people.

Erlanger dedicated an $8,000 house, raising in cash and pledges nearly half that amount, and thus providing for payment of debt. L. B. Haskins is at work with this new and vigorous mission.

W. E. Sutherland in Nelson and Washington Co., was at work five days, preached two sermons. Expects good results.

W. L. Lacy half time, 21 sermons, 18 added, $9.25 for self, $25 for local work in Morgan Co.

A. K. Brooks began work at Jackson, Breathitt Co., for half time. He is much encouraged. Thinks they can build a stone house of worship, and plans for its completion in the summer. Good audiences and interest.

Jas. C. Ogden, at Chesnut Grove, Boyle Co., reports good progress.

Jas. E. Thomas follows Horace Kingsbury at Beattyville, an important mountain town. Preached there two Sundays in the month, and thinks the work in good condition, and that much can be done.

Ben Harris reports in Cumberland Co., three days, three sermons, two baptized.

W. F. Rogers was at work all the month. His hands are full for the year. A new building in South Louisville and one soon to be finished at Munfordville, beside other work, give him a heavy load to carry.

R. A. Hovious was at work 14 days, preached 15 sermons, added one, aided two places, located one preacher, $2.05 for self and $241.50 for local work. This was in Casey and Russell counties.

H. W. Elliott collected for Kentucky missions $694.64. This exceeds the collections for January, 1903, by more than $200, and we have gained since the convention, as compared with the same date last year, more than $500. This kind of increase until the convention would mean much for the present and future work of our state. We beg our friends to remember that we have entered upon the most difficult period of our year. Other interests rightly demand the attention of the churches. We urge all who have taken the offering and have not forwarded same to do so at once. We ought and must keep our workers paid. We trust that some of our friends may help the work by individual gifts. Remit all money to Sulphur, Ky.

H. W. ELLIOTT.

C. W. B. M. in Missouri.

Holiday, one of the new auxiliaries, was apportioned $7 by the state board, but the auxiliary pledges $15, more than double. This is a splendid band of faithful workers.

Mrs. H. A. Denton has been requested to inaugurate a Tidings campaign. That the plans will be good is a foregone conclusion, but no one can work out co-operative plans without the co-operation of all concerned. The success of the campaign will rest with the auxiliaries. What shall it be, my sisters?

Some auxiliaries, especially old established ones, feel they need something besides the Tidings' program in order to interest their members. This is especially the case when all members are Tidings readers—that ideal condition. Our ways and means committee, at the last convention, felt this need, and one recommendation was that "our officers lay special stress upon the prayerful study of missions, our own C. W. B. M. work in detail; also the work of our F. C. M. S. and A. C. M. S. We should know all our missionaries and workers by name and location, and remember them daily in prayer." One auxiliary is trying the plan. The regular program cannot be ignored, so one woman will be asked to give a digest of the Tidings' topic, culling the telling points. Then will follow a 'study' on some other missionary topic, such as work and workers in any one field of F. C. M. S. or A. C. M. S.—the review of the biography of a noted missionary, a topic from the united mission study. If the efforts of our own church shall be exhausted, those of other religious bodies may be studied with great profit.

All auxiliaries are urged to magnify and dignify the devotional period of every program. It is the source of all strength and inspiration.

St. Louis.

MRS. L. G. BANTZ.

Missouri Christian Endeavor.

Dear Endeavorers: Since my last letter the reports have begun to come in. Stanberry, Aurora and Independence were the first to report. They sent on the one dollar for the expenses of the state superintendent's office. Miss Mollie Sitton wrote from Stanberry, Miss Bessie A. Bagby from Aurora, and Miss Wiley Gossett from Independence. They report a growing interest in the work. New societies have been reported from Richards, Mrs. E. R. Koontz, Cor. Sec., and from Elizabeth Chapel, Miss Bertha Seelinger, Cor. Sec. Remember, any society organized since last September is a new society. If you know of any society that you think has not been reported to the state superintendent, write me at once. Always state membership, active and associate, and give the name of corresponding secretary. Tell me about your work and I will tell the Endeavorers of the state. We must report more. We must let one another know what is going on.

Are you thinking of that Carrollton convention? Several places have written that delegations were being made up already for the meeting. Get ready. It is not too early to make plans. Great things are planned long before hand. I would like to see 300 Endeavorers get acquainted at Carrollton and begin a new interest in the work of Christian Endeavor in the great state of Missouri. We are big enough in Missouri. But size does not always carry with it a succeeding enthusiasm. We must come to Carrollton thawed out. The time of year will help toward that desired end. We must practice the Chautauqua salute for our speakers. Come. Come with a zeal and enthusiasm that is contagious. It will be a great convention. It will be, properly speaking, a state meeting. All our church conventions meet and hold their sessions following each other. The date is June 17-22 coming.

The Endeavor program will be announced in due time. It is now almost ready. We want to bring a man of national reputation to Carrollton for the night address. He will be an Endeavorer who is in demand the nation over for Endeavor addresses. And he will be a member of the Christian Church. Some

A Start on the Road to Riches is always made by saving. One dollar or more will start a savings account with us. We pay 3 per cent per annum, compounded twice a year. Write for leaflet on instructions in regard to depositing by mail.

Capital, Surplus and Profits..... $8,200,000

MISSISSIPPI VALLEY TRUST CO.

FOURTH & PINE STS. ST. LOUIS

GEO. KILGEN & SON

BUILDERS OF HIGH GRADE

Pipe Organs

ST. LOUIS, MO.

Best of References.

Correspondence Solicited.

This "Home Bible Study,"

FREE if you write and enroll at once. Course covers the whole Bible and leads to diploma and degree. You can take this course at home by mail. Terms easy. Best testimonials. For free catalog write C. J. BURTON, Pres. Iowa Christian College, Oskaloosa, Ia.

new features will be introduced into our convention work this year. Get you a note book and make arrangements to enjoy the best Endeavor convention our people ever held in the state. See that your society is represented. It would be well for you to begin in time to send some bright Endeavorer to the convention to represent your society. Then when your delegate returns hold a meeting at which the entire Endeavor convention will be reported. This will give your whole society the next best thing to attending in person, hearing from some one who was sent there to see and hear for you as well as for himself.

Missouri must head the list of societies kept by our national superintendent of Christian Endeavor, R. H. Waggoner, Kansas City, Mo., as having more, and more active societies than any other state in the Union. We are not quite at the top, but we can get there. Are you willing to help toward that end? If you are, let us hear from you.

H. A. DENTON, Supt., of C. E. in Missouri.

Cured to Stay Cured.

Mrs. S. T. Roberts, Clinton, La., sent a postal card request for a trial bottle of Drake's Palmetto Wine to Drake Formula Company, Drake Block, Chicago, Ill., and received it promptly by returned mail without expense to her. Mrs. Roberts writes that the trial bottle of this wonderful Palmetto Medicine proved quite sufficient to completely cure her. She says: "One trial bottle of Drake's Palmetto Wine has cured me after months of intense suffering. My trouble was inflammation of Bladder and serious condition of Urinary organs. Drake's Palmetto Wine gave me quick and entire relief and I have had no trouble since using the one trial bottle."

Drake's Palmetto Wine cures every such case to stay cured. It is a true, unflinching specific for Liver, Kidney, Bladder and Prostate Troubles caused by inflammation Congestion or Catarrh. When there is constipation, Drake's Palmetto Wine produces a gentle and natural action of the bowels and cures Constipation immediately, to stay cured. One dose a day does all this splendid work and any reader of this paper may prove it by writing to Drake Formula Company, Drake Building, Chicago, Ill., for a trial bottle of Drake's Palmetto Wine. It is free, and cures. A letter or postal card is your only expense.

Dedication at New Castle, Pa.

The Third Christian Church in New Castle, Pa., was dedicated by the writer, Lord's day, Dec. 31. The new church building is located in the Mahoningtown district in the sixth ward of the city of New Castle. It is surrounded by a population of five or six thousand people and it is in the most rapidly increasing portion of the city. A splendid corner lot was purchased some three years ago under the ministry of Bro. Earl Wilfley. Upon this lot a neat and attractive house of worship, costing a little more than $4,000, has been erected. Thos. W. Phillips, well known to our brotherhood, has been interested in this new work from the beginning and has given more than one-fourth of the funds required to buy and erect the building. Brother Wilfley, during his pastorate, started the movement and it was seconded by a number of the good people of Park Church. To their labors is largely due the splendid outcome of the work. The house is supplied with a baptistry, is neatly carpeted, has oak pews, and, in all respects, is suited to the needs of the community. On dedication day eighteen hundred dollars of indebtedness remained unprovided for. This sum was subscribed at the services so that the new congregation starts on its career under very favorable circumstances. A. H. Chisholm is the minister in charge. F. C. Bright, our Western Pennsylvania evangelist, was present and assisted in the dedicatory services, and is following the dedication with a series of meetings and we confidently expect good results.

T. E. CRAMBLET.

Missouri Bible-school Notes.

C. A. Baird has just begun work with Mt. Zion, near Hannibal, and the outlook can not be bettered. He gave fine satisfaction at the first service. Mt. Zion is one of the schools and congregations always ready to assist and when I told them what I had promised Belle, where R. B. Havener has done such good work, they immediately joined me in it.

No work of the church of Missouri is doing more good than Christian University in educating the youth of the state, but especially young men for the ministry, there being at this time, about forty, and all of them average way up in their work among the churches of northwest Missouri. With great sacrifice, Carl Johann, D. R. Dungan and others are doing this work. The new building is near completion and is handsome, and some good brother or sister can honor themselves and the Master, while advancing the kingdom of God by putting at least $25,000 into this most worthy, Christian enterprise. God bless the men that are doing it and the young men thus toiling and sacrificing to prepare themselves for this great work of the Son of God.

H. R. Trickett has but opened up his work in Macon City, but all departments are beginning to quicken under his watchcare. My reception was most cordial as it always is in Macon, more so, with H. R. Trickett, and the co-operation of that school and congregation with me happiness the heart of your servant. The school means to undertake the campaign right this spring and you will hear from it.

The campaign at Memphis is now well on and the growth is wonderful. They have added the Home Department, Cradle Roll and all; having increased their button and card order three times. Some people do that way, others are too tired. J. W. Davis is on his fifteenth year with one congregation, on his fifth with another, and is held in high esteem with both.

The increase in the New Haven school was not so good as your secretary reported, but was fine for the school just the same.

The Endeavorers of the state are enjoying H. A. Denton's expositions from week to week in the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, for his work is such as all enjoy and use.

R. B. Havener after doing such good work at Bland, organizing congregation, Bible-school and raising nearly $1,000 for a new house, is now at Dixon, helping get ready for the dedication and also holding a meeting and you will hear well from this effort. R. B. Havener is one of our worthy men.

T. J. Head, whose excellent summary appeared last week, has been in the field without a break since last November. Think of that? Not a halt during all the holiday season, but constant labors for Christ and the church.

W. A. Moore is now at Harris, doing such a work for the brotherhood as will likely result in something good and permanent and joyful. 1522 Locust St., St. Louis. H. F. DAVIS.

The Juliette Fowler Home.

I have now been in this home for one month and we have eleven children. Two others have been accepted and others are applying, so we will soon have our house full. This institution is under control and the fostering care of the Churches of Christ in Texas. Mrs. Juliette Fowler, before her death some years ago, bequeathed about $20,000 for the purpose of founding an orphans' and widows' home in Dallas, Tex., but nothing definite had been done until last June at our state convention. Sister Harwood, as executrix of the will of her sister (Mrs. Fowler), turned over all the property and the charter to the Home to a board of brethren chosen to take charge and found and build up an institution according to the purposes of the donor, that the helpless ones in Texas and the regions round about might be cared for. Our board have purchased 200 acres of land ten miles west of Dallas on the International Railroad, and secured a lease for three years on a large residence with orchards, barn and such other improvements as are needed for the Home. We hope to build this year at least one of our buildings. I was chosen by our board of directors as superintendent and financial agent of the Home, hence we live in the Home and hope to make this a life work. Our people seem ripe for such an enterprise.

The purpose is the establishing not only of a home, but an industrial school where all will be trained to useful labor, so that all who go forth from here will go prepared for useful citizenship. Another important feature of our work will be the placing of children in Christian homes. I believe that good, private homes which are childless are better for a child than any large orphanage can be made, but there are many children for various reasons can't be placed in homes thus, and hence the necessity of the Home. Our literary training will be equal to the public high schools of Texas. Our industrial feature will be made prominent. We desire the co-operation of all good people in this enterprise. Anyone who desires further information regarding our work and plans write me at Grand Prairie, Tex. "It's no trouble to answer questions."

A. J. BUSH.

Through Service to Florida.

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad in connection with the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad operates a through buffet drawing room sleeping car daily between St. Louis and Jacksonville, via Montgomery, Alabama. This car leaves from the Union Station, St. Louis, at 8:45 P. M., arriving at Montgomery next evening at 7:45 P. M., and Jacksonville the second morning at 8:30 A. M., and making direct connections with through trains for all points in Florida. No route to Florida offers more attractions for the sight-seer than the route via Montgomery, traversing as it does the most populous and fertile section of the South. For rates, time tables, maps or sleeping car reservations, address, J. E. Davenport, Division Passenger Agent, Louisville & Nashville Railroad, 206 N. Broadway, St. Louis, Mo.

DIVIDEND

PAYING MINING, OIL, TIMBER, SMELTER, AND INDUSTRIAL STOCKS making possible LARGE INTEREST AND PROFITS, listed and unlisted, our specialty. Booklets giving full information mailed free on application.

DOUGLAS, LACEY & CO., Bankers & Brokers, 96 Broadway, New York

RHEUMATISM Cured Through the Feet

External Remedy so successful that the makers send it FREE ON APPROVAL to anybody.

TRY IT.

If 100,000 men and women, suffering with every kind of rheumatism, acute or chronic, have been cured by a harmless draft on the foot, isn't it worth a trial?

Send your name to the Magic Foot Draft Co. They have so much confidence in the merit of the drafts that they send them to every sufferer in the world they can hear of—without a cent in advance. You pay One Dollar when satisfied with the benefit you receive—otherwise you pay nothing—you decide.

The Drafts are worn on the soles of the feet because the entire circulatory and nervous systems are most easily reached through the extremely sensitive skin at this point; but they cure rheumatism in every part of the body, to stay cured, by drawing the acid poisons out of the blood through the foot pores. Write today to the Magic Foot Draft Co., SI 13 Oliver Bldg., Jackson, Mich., for a pair of Drafts free on approval and valuable free booklet on rheumatism.

A Chinese Story-Teller

By WM. REMFRY HUNT.

Yellow Cloth Binding; Black Ornamentation; 167 Pages.

75 cents, Postpaid.

A Unique Book. Distinctly Chinese in binding, illustrations and in the stories it contains.

It affords a glimpse here and there of the actual every-day life and thought of one of the most remarkable and interesting races of people on earth. Not dry or prosy, but bright, interesting and enjoyable.

Christian Publishing Company

1522 Locust Street

St. Louis, Mo.

Ministers' Pastoral Record and Memorandum.

Fits nicely into your vest-pocket.

This Record and Memorandum was prepared by G. HOFFMANN, who understands the needs of preachers. Send 50 cents or a nicely Morocco-bound copy. You will be delighted with your purchase.

Christian Publishing Company

1522 Locust Street

St. Louis, Mo.

Home Missionary Notes.

The aim of our Sunday-schools is "$15,000 for national home and state missions in 1904."

Many schools have sent in their offerings, until now the total sum is $7,074.22. We rejoice in this healthy increase in the receipts over last year, and would urge upon those schools that have not yet remitted, to do so at an early date.

We feel sure you want to be enlisted among the schools observing "Boys' and Girls' Rally Day for America." It is not too late to observe the day now. We shall gladly supply superintendents with exercises if they will write to the home office. Come join the ranks of those who would help to win our beloved land for Christ and his Church.

J. N. Smith, missionary under the employ of the American Christian Missionary Society at Whatcom, Wash., writes as follows:

"This is my final report to you as one of your missionaries. I am glad indeed that the church here is able to relieve the board of further help. While I remain with this church, I shall do my best to keep it in close touch and sympathy with you. You will remember that this is the only church in north-western Washington. We are seventy miles from the nearest church. We must attempt very soon to establish another church or two in this county—one of them here in the port of Bellingham, which was formerly Fairhaven. We will have to do this work with but little help from the State Board. If we do it, we will be heavily taxed, but we will do the best we can."

J. Frank Green, missionary in the employ of the American Christian Missionary Society at Mt. Pleasant, Mich., sends in the following report:

"My report is a little late this time. I have been sixty-three miles north of here at Cadillac, gathering together the scattered Disciples. I found twenty-one, and they are very anxious to organize, and that I should hold a meeting for them. But no suitable place of meeting can be secured at the present time. I will make another trip to Cadillac next week. There are lots of Disciples there—a city of 8,000 inhabitants."

Southern California and Arizona.

An urgent call from Phoenix sent the writer to the fertile valley of the Salt River for ten days' labor. He found the pastor, W. H. Bagby, in an interesting meeting with his splendid church. It was a pleasure to know and to preach to these appreciative people. Nine were added to the membership in these special meetings, four by confession. The good seed of the kingdom was abundantly sown. The harvest time will come. Let Paul plant and Apollos water, for God will give the increase.

Brother Bagby and his estimable wife are doing a great work at Phoenix. They have proved the possibility and advisability of a continuous pastorate. They have harmonized the varied elements until perfect unity prevails. They have put order and beauty and dignity into the public worship until the people delight to attend the services and go away edified. By grace, tact, fraternity and ability they have raised our church and plea to a place in a great and growing community, where it commands the respectful attention of the public. The church is small, having but about 150 resident members. It realizes its opportunities and, Atlas like, bends its back to accept its responsibilities. Phoenix is the capital of a great empire. Its resources are agricultural, mineral and climacteric. The soil is very fertile and abundant water for irrigation is found in the Salt River. This valley is the first to receive help from the irrigation legislation of the national government. Uncle Sam is putting $3,000,000 in a great reservoir here. The Lord also has taken a great interest in the quality of sunshine and atmosphere he provides for this valley. Invalids come from the east and the west and the north and the south and sit down to the invigorating feast of ozone and sunshine. Surely a country in which the Almighty and Uncle Sam take such a substantial interest ought not to be neglected by the Disciples of Christ.

Here I was delighted to come to know our dear brother, that choice spirit and devoted Disciple, J. M. Philpott, from New York. Accompanied by his good wife, he is spending the winter in this sunny clime. His many friends will be glad to know of his steadily gaining strength and returning health. The southwest hopes to keep him in its fellowship and service for Christ.

The regular monthly meeting of preachers in Southern California assumed the character of our evangelistic rally. It was entertained by the First Church in Los Angeles, and that is enough to say it was well done. In addition to the reports from all the churches, a splendid program held the attention of the people. L. O. Newcomer told of "A Preacher who is after a Soul;" M. J. Ferguson spoke about "The Evangel of a Christian Life;" J. P. McKnight conducted a "Round Table" upon Evangelism, and at night R. P. Shepherd addressed a large audience on the subject of "Evangelism and the Sunday school," which was followed by F. M. Dowling on "A Passion for Souls." Great enthusiasm prevails.

GRANT K. LEWIS.

Easter Help for Our Own Poor.

Our National Benevolent Association is performing a ministry toward helpless old age and orphanhood and the friendless sick that is having immense influence in popularizing the church with the masses. A beautiful account of this ministry is given in the new Easter cantata—The Little Philanthropist—that is being furnished free of cost to all Bible-schools that will present it and send an offering to the national treasury. The world should know the church is engaged in this ministry, and we heartily commend this cantata to all our Bible-schools everywhere. For the past eleven years Easter has been the day appointed for making contributions to this department of our church work, and we note with pleasure the steadily increasing number of schools and churches having fellowship with this work so near the Lord's heart. The cantata will be sent to all applicants addressing the undersigned at 903 Aubert Ave., St. Louis.

G. L. SNIVELY.

Program of the Missouri Christian Lectureship, Fulton, April 11-14.

MONDAY, APRIL 11.

8:00 P. M. Lecture, "Citizenship in the Republic," E. L. Powell, Louisville, Ky.

TUESDAY, APRIL 12.

9:00 A. M. Lecture, "The Doctrine of the Atonement," Dean W. J. Lhamon, Columbia.
Review, J. J. Morgan, Kansas City.
2:00 P. M. "Preacher Problems." W. T. Moore, Columbia.
General Discussion.
3:00 P. M. "Authorship of the Book of Hebrews," D. R. Dungan, Canton.
General Discussion.
8:00 P. M. Lecture, "Was the Ideal of our Fathers in the Current Reformation Practicable?" E. L. Powell.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 13.

9:00 A. M. Discussion, J. H. Garrison, St. Louis.
10:15 A. M. Lecture, "The New Psychology," Levi Marshall, Hannibal.
Review, J. M. Rudy, Sedalia.
2:00 P. M. Book Review, "Outline of Clarke's Theology," first-half, F. N. Calvin, St. Louis; second-half, L. S. Cupp, Platte City.
8:00 P. M. Lecture, "The Ethics of Wealth," F. G. Tyrrell, St. Louis.

Annual Clearance Book Sale

A thirty-two page, double-column catalogue free. Send for it at once.

UNUSUAL BARGAINS.

THE PILGRIM PRESS
175 Wabash Ave., Chicago

What Is Federation? And What Should Be Our Attitude Towards It?

An Address delivered before our last Congress, Des Moines, Ia., by

J. H. GARRISON.

together with questions to and answers from Dr. E. B. Sanford, Secretary Church Federation.

Price of pamphlet, in paper cover, 15 Cents, postage prepaid. Address

Christian Publishing Company
1522 Locust Street St. Louis, Mo.

An Endeavorer's Working Journey Around the World

By JNO. F. ANDERSON.

Linen Cloth Binding; Inset Illustration on Front Cover; 313 Pages.

$1.50, Postpaid.

A HANDSOME BOOK.

TWENTY-SEVEN FULL-PAGE ILLUSTRATIONS.

A story of an energetic young American, a Christian Endeavorer, who started on a journey around the world, without money, and who succeeded by working his way in accomplishing the task in five years. Living among the people of various lands, he became possessed of a knowledge of their habits of life impossible to the ordinary traveler. The story is told in a simple, unassuming way which is very refreshing to the reader.

Christian Publishing Company
1522 Locust Street St. Louis, Mo.

THURSDAY, APRIL 14.

9:00 A. M. Discussion, R. G. Frank, Liberty.
10:00 A. M. Sermon, "Deepening the Spiritual Life," B. T. Wharton, Marshall.
E. M. SMITH,
J. B. BRINEY,
A. W. KOKENDOFFER,
Committee on Program.

A Fine Kidney Remedy.

MR. A. S. HITCHCOCK, East Hampton, Conn., (The Clothier), says if any sufferer from Kidney and Bladder Disease will write him he will direct them to the perfect home cure he used. He makes no charge whatever for the favor.

A world-renowned remedy for the relief and cure of Hoarseness and Sore Throat. Exceedingly effective; not injurious.

Avoid Imitations. John S. Brown

Theology Gone Mad.

(Continued from page 184.)

preacher ordinarily or even necessarily handles. The sermon is not a literary lecture. The preacher may be interested and even fascinated by archaeological inquiry, by Assyrian and Egyptian researches, and by literary criticism. It may all help, when studied in due proportion, to widen the human interest and to cultivate the intellectual powers. But the pulpit is not the lecturer's desk. The preacher is set apart to preach the Word of God, and he is primarily the preacher of a spiritual message. The preacher is occupied with spiritual, doctrinal, moral, and practical questions, not with the results of research.

It seems to me that this position is a safe one, for it is not narrow, it is not either conservative or liberal; it is simply sensible, and appropriate to the duty of the preacher, who may profitably learn whatever is actually demonstrated by any school of students and investigators, but should beware of making his pulpit an exhibition stand of brilliant but fancied hypothetical speculations. For instance, Wallace and Darwin simultaneously announced the discovery of the evolutionary doctrine. But they disagreed in toto concerning most essential conditions of that theory. Let the Evolutionists go on controverting. They will be at it for a long time. But, oh! do not let us as preachers feel that we are in the pulpit to take sides with the semi-atheistic development theory of Darwin, or with the semi-atheistic evolution of Wallace. We may be interested in listening to the contentions of each, but we have other matters to deal with.

I have been looking at the fourth monthly part of Dr. Cheyne's Critica Biblica, just out. It is occupied with First and Second Kings. It is truly marvelous! There was no prophet of the name of Nathan! For myself, I do not yet intend to part with Nathan, for I am surprised when I go on to read why Dr. Cheyne tells us of his conclusion. It is too ridiculous to quote. But also I read that Naaman was not a leper. As for Abana and Pharpar, it appears we have all been deluded, for "Abana is the river Jerahmeel, and Pharpar is the Ephrath that has been mistaken for Euphrates and both were in Negeb!" If any of my readers can make any sense of this, they possess real genius.

London, England.

The Worry Habit.

(Continued from page 187.)

the door once for all against anxious thought, and in the chart and compass of your life set the soul's needle toward the polar star—the Infinite Christ who is with us in shadow as well as in sunshine. Worry can never abide where God is. God is the Infinite Father of us all. He not only forms the crystal in the rock and snowflake; paints the lily, the violet and the blue sky above; not only guides the worlds of stars and systems. But, an Infinite Father! What a thought is this to dispel worry, care and anxiety! My Father! He clothes the grass of the field, watches the sparrows when they fall, numbers the hairs of our head, takes minute and infinite thought of us, his children; he has made us out of himself, we share his mind, we are a part of his spirit, manifest his love, live because he lives. And not alone so, but my life is a plan of God; he has a definite course for each of us to pursue. Along this way, the way he leads me, there is no room for worry and taking of anxious thought. "Let not your heart be troubled, ye believe in God." This thought is slowly but surely taking possession of the world, and leading it to deeper, profounder peace and joy,—then trust in God.

"Have you lifted anchor and hoisted sail?
Does your ship stand out to sea?
Do you tremble at peril and dread the gale
Where the waves and winds are free?
Then trust in God!

"Is your old sail salt with the frozen foam?
And grey as the sea-gulls wing?
Do you long for land and native home,
When the great waves clutch and cling?
Then trust in God!

"O, the Sea of Faith hath storms, God knows;
And the haven seems very far,
But he is the true child o' God who goes
With his eyes on the polar star.
Then trust in God!

"With his hands on the canvas, his foot on the ropes,
Filling each sail with wind and glee,
With dauntless courage and quenchless hopes
Sail the ships o'er the infinite sea.
Then trust in God!"

And the Infinite Christ who stilled the waves
On the sea of Galilee,
Speaks a message of peace to each troubled heart

That sails o'er the infinite sea.

Then trust in God!
Huntington, Ind.

As Seen From the Dome.

(Continued from page 185.)

federate musket." He declared it will be a hundred years before the southern states will recover from the destruction of manhood brought by the civil war. That has suffered more than anything else. The men who would be the south's leaders to-day went down in that struggle. The south is more interested in arbitration than any other country on the face of the earth. He came near being a good speaker.

Mr. Andrew Carnegie came finally as "the apostle of arbitration." The little, old gentleman speaks by his deeds. The author of "The Gospel of Wealth" and "The Empire of Business" talks like a business man and gives business reasons for things. Honor, he thought, the most dishonored word in the English language to-day. Would it not be more honorable to abolish the duel among nations and permit tribunals to settle questions of honor? There has come to the earth in this twentieth century something it never had before, a permanent tribunal for the settlement of international disputes, the high court of international peace. Let us rejoice that it was through the advice of our President that five of the principal powers now await the verdict from that court which will peaceably settle their disputes.

It was a great meeting, if there was not an orator in it, and now for the muzzling of the dogs of war. The best way is to draw their teeth.

FREE

This Genuine

Oxford BIBLE FREE

Does not cost You a cent—We Send it Postpaid.

Your Name printed in Gold on Front Cover if You Wish.

This is a genuine Oxford Sunday School Seniors' Bible bound in finest French Seal, Divinity Circuit Gold Edges, Silk Headband and Marker and printed on extra superfine Bible paper. We give this elegant Bible as a premium for selling at 10 cents each 21 pieces of our well Art Jewelry, consisting of Richly Jeweled Hat Pins, Dainty Sterling Gibson Girl Brooches and Genuine Mexican Fire Opal Scarf Pins. Each and every article is a big bargain at 10c, and therefore, fast sellers. Don't try to sell trash. Order what your friends will gladly buy. YOU NEED NO MONEY. WE TRUST YOU. Send name and address and we will send pins and big premium list, postpaid. When sold send us the $2.40 and we will send your Bible, postpaid, with your name printed on front cover in gold if you wish it. Order pins today. If you do not care for our Bible, we are sure to have plenty of desirable premiums on our big list. Remember we take back any pins you cannot sell and give a premium for ones you do. Dept. 131, STAR MFG. CO., Star Bldg, Chicago

CHURCH FURNITURE

Pews, Pulpits, Etc.

The best that money can buy.

Grand Rapids School Furniture Works

Corner Wabash and Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

WORLD'S GREATEST BELL FOUNDRY
CHURCH, PEAL AND CHIME BELLS
Best Copied and Tia Only
THE E. W. VANDUZEN COMPANY,
BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY, CINCINNATI, O.

UNLIKE OTHER BELLS
SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE.
CURTIS CATALOGUE TELLS WHY
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

FOR SCHOOLS AND CHURCHES
American Bells
Sweet Toned. Far Sounding. Durable.
AMERICAN BELL & FOUNDRY CO.
FREE CATALOGUE NORTHVILLE, MICH.
41 Cady Street.

$3 a Day Sure

Send us your address and we will show you how to make $3 a day absolutely sure; we furnish the work and teach you free, you work in the locality where you live. Send us your address and we will explain the business fully, remember we guarantee a clear profit of $3 for every day a work, absolutely sure. Write at once today. HART FACTURING CO., Box 1825 Detroit, Mich.

SUBSCRIBERS' WANTS.

Miscellaneous wants and notices will be inserted in this department at the rate of two cents a word, each insertion, all words, large or small, to be counted, and two initials stand for one word. Please accompany notice with corresponding remittance, to save bookkeeping.

MISSOURI FARMS—Nice land, $30.00 an acre. Address M. Wight, Iantha, Barton Co., Mo.

COMPLETE College Education by mail, highest degrees granted. Inductive University, Lisbon, O.

FOR SALE—A brand new upright piano at a bargain price. Address D, care Christian-Evangelist.

MARIA MONK—Black Nunnery Exposed. New and complete edition by mail, 35 cents. Address J. D. Williams, box 330, Columbus, Ohio.

FOR SALE—At a reasonable reduction, a pair of baptismal pants that have been in use only a few months and are as good as new; boot No. 7. Address J. G. Creason, Cleburne, Texas.

LEARN STENOGRAPHY—Send 50 cents to the Oliver Typewriter Company, 315 North 9th Street, Century Building, St. Louis, Mo., for self-instructor in shorthand and typewriting.

WANTED—Parties to write to me who have as much as $1,500 to invest in a business that will pay more than 100 per cent profit. Will pay R. R. fare one way to responsible parties who will investigate this. Address F. E. Gilmore, Hills Hotel, Bloomington, Ills.

Evangelistic

We invite ministers and others to send reports of meetings, additions and other news of the churches for publication in this department. It is especially requested that additions be reported as "by confession and baptism" or "by letter."

Additions Reported Last Week.

Baptisms.....	2,447
Letters and statements.....	637
Denominations.....	89

Total.....3,167

M. L. BUCKLEY.

Harrison, O., Feb. 4, 1904.

Special dispatch to the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST.

MCMECHAN, W. VA., Feb. 7.—Ninety-two additions in nine nights. Clarence Mitchell our evangelist.—J. W. UNDERWOOD, pastor.

ARIZONA.—Phoenix, Feb. 4.—Just closed a meeting here in which I was assisted part of the time by Grant K. Lewis with 11 additions to the local church; four by baptism and the rest by letter and statement; all fine material.—W. H. BAGBY.

COLORADO.—Denver, Feb. 1.—Highland Church.—Meeting continued three weeks. S. M. Bernard, Boulder did the preaching except last Sunday; 33 confessions, 11 by letter, etc. A splendid meeting in every way.—J. E. PICKETT, Pastor.

Longmont, Feb. 3.—Our meeting here, conducted by L. H. Humphrey, of Delta, Ia., closed last night after 23 days' duration, with 31 additions. Brother Humphrey has been engaged for the year and will commence his pastorate duties March 1. W. S. Hayden, Jr., resigned Dec. 1, 1903, and has moved to Chadron, Neb. He is a scholarly, earnest, godlike man, and our prayers follow him for great good in his new field.—BRYANT C. BEGERSTAFF.

Denver.—Highland Church.—S. M. Bernard of Boulder, assisted in a most successful revival in which 43 persons were reached, 32 by confession. Membership strengthened spiritually.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.—Washington, Feb. 6.—Meeting one week old with home forces with four additions, two confessions and two by letter. Prospects bright for a good meeting.—J. MURRAY TAYLOR.

ILLINOIS.—Normal, Feb. 1.—Closed meeting at Armington, Ill., last night with 56 additions, mostly by primary obedience. Guy B. Williamson and wife led the singing. The meeting has opened the way for a new church building and the church board took the first step looking to this end before we left.—ANDREW SCOTT.

Jacksonville, Feb. 1.—There were 15 additions to the Church of Christ at Jacksonville during the month of January. Charles Reign Scoville begins a series of gospel meetings with the church here Sunday, Feb. 7.—WALLACE BROCMAN.

Windsor, Feb. 1.—There were 13 additions in my regular work in January. I have been called for the sixth year at Humbolt and for the fourth year at Oakland, for part time at each place. The churches are harmonious and we expect a prosperous year.—A. H. HARRELL.

Mt. Carmel, Feb. 1.—We closed our meeting here last night with 32 accessions. Bro. L. H. Stine, of Lawrenceville, Ill., helped us in the meeting. Brother Stine's sermons were strong and helpful and his service while here has done much good for the church. There is a very bright future for the church here.—LEE TINSLEY, pastor.

LaHarpe, Jan. 26.—We have just closed our meeting of a little more than three weeks' duration. Fine weather as we could ask; fine audiences at every service. On the second Sunday night our large building was packed; 26 additions in all—15 baptisms, 3 from M. E.'s, 1 from New Lights, 6 by statement, one reclaimed. I was assisted by Mrs. Millie Mason. At the close of the meeting she was ordained as an evangelist by the writer.—W. H. WILLYARD, pastor.

London Mills, Jan. 30.—Elder J. Orville Walton and his wife, Belle Ford Walton, of Bloomington, Ill., just closed the most successful meeting held here in years. This field is difficult, but they added 19 members, 12 of them being men and boys. And the membership is built up in a solid and substantial way. No effort was made to raise money except that the baskets were passed, but the collections amounted to $41.90. In spite of bitter cold weather a crowded house was the rule. Mr. Walton preaches first principles in a way which convinces and without sarcasm or bitterness. He uses the stereotypical in part of his work. Mrs. Walton's matchless voice and skill on many instruments is a great factor in reaching the masses, and her consecrated Christian spirit does much in leading them to Christ. They will be at Ellsville during February.—W. W. VOSE, elder London Christian Church.

Champaign, Feb. 1.—Our meeting one week old with excellent interest and 14 added—nine confessions, one reclaimed and four by statement of relation.—STEPHEN E. FISHER, pastor University Place Christian Church.

Monmouth, Feb. 5.—I began a meeting here Feb. 1. Good crowds and splendid interest. In my 28 days' meeting that I closed last Sunday night at East Galesburg, we had 92 additions, 80 baptisms. There were nine additions the last night. Raised about $800 for preaching all of the time, and B. H. Sealock, who has been preaching for them half of his time, was called for full time, and will take up the work at once. He is the man for the place.—JOHN T. STIVERS.

Chambersburg, Feb. 5.—Meeting closed Monday night, Feb. 1, with 71 additions, having continued 31 days. Thomas J. Shuey, of Rock Island, Ill., who did the preaching, draws large audiences and arouses intense interest. His preaching appeals strongly to men, 34 having turned to Christ during the meeting. This is one of the greatest meetings Chambersburg ever had and is considered by many as the best.—PAUL H. CASTLE, pastor.

Camp Point, Feb. 5.—Our meeting at Eureka, Kan., which was flooded and cycloned last spring, has just been closed, resulting in 62 accessions, mostly heads of families, many of them the most representative people in the city. Bro. G. F. Bradford is making this one of the best churches in the state. Next meeting at Savannah, Mo.—R. A. OMER.

Flanagan, Feb. 4.—Our meeting here closed Feb. 2 with 19 additions: 14 by confession and baptism, five by statement. Mrs. J. E. Powell, of Wabash, Ind., proved not only an artist in music, but also a valuable personal worker. The church is in fine condition for further success.—O. L. SMITH.

INDIANA.—Attica, Feb. 1.—Meeting at Williamsport, Ind., two weeks old; 14 additions. Interest in meeting growing. Meeting being conducted by Evangelists Clarke and Stevens. These brethren may be secured for a few weeks' meeting.—ELDER AMOS K. CLARKE.

Brazil, Jan. 31.—Two added recently; one by letter and one baptism. Our men gave a banquet to men recently. Great good was done in promoting interest in the church on part of the men. Began a meeting Thursday night, H. A. Northcutt, of Missouri, preaching. He is stirring the town with his powerful appeals. We expect and pray for great things.—E. L. DAY.

South Bend, Feb. 1.—Bro. Robert Sellers, of Greencastle, Ind., was with us twelve days in a short meeting at the Indiana Avenue Chapel. There were 14 additions, although the meeting was hindered greatly by bad weather.—ROY L. HANDLEY.

INDIAN TERRITORY.—Pryor Creek, Feb. 1.—One confession at regular service last night. This makes 32 additions since beginning here last June. Indian Territory is ripe for our plea, and what we need is more reapers. Wagoner, Muskogee, and other strong churches are calling for preachers.—F. HOOKER GROOM.

Fairland, Feb. 1.—We are here engaged in a glorious revival. Have had 27 additions by confession and otherwise; five last night. Interest increasing; house just packed to its utmost capacity. We go from here to Grove, I. T., to hold a meeting.—ELD. J. S. HANER.

IOWA.—Murray, Feb. 1.—We closed a meeting of 25 days on the evening of Jan. 28. The immediate results are 11 confessions and one by statement from the Baptists.—C. E. POMEROY.

Corydon, Feb. 2.—Evangelists Hamilton and Wilkinson closed a four and one-half weeks' meeting for us last night; 42 by confession, 17 by letter and statement, three reclaimed. The greatest storm known to this country since 1864 broke upon the meeting when the interest was greatest. Otherwise results would have been larger.—F. D. MACY, minister.

Colfax, Jan. 30.—One confession last Sunday night.—THOMAS H. PAPPLEWELL.

Mason City, Feb. 1.—Mason City church has just closed a four weeks' meeting with home forces, Brother Burks doing the preaching. The church is greatly strengthened and built up in the faith of the gospel. Our pastor is a strong gospel preacher, and the old truths presented will never lose their charm to lovers of truth. Thirty were added during the meeting, and the church is active in all departments.—H. I. PRUSIA.

Brazil, Feb. 4.—Our meeting here is one week old, 14 additions to date.—H. A. NORTH-CUTT, evangelist; E. L. DAY, pastor.

Sac City, Feb. 4.—Thirty-one added in the past month: twenty-eight confessions, one restored, two by letter, one from the M. E.—E. N. TUCKER.

Webster City, Feb. 2.—We recently closed a four weeks' meeting here with 54 accessions to the church, 47 by baptism. At a critical time the severe weather hindered much. Eight to nine hundred people were in attendance nightly up to that point. Five confessions the last Sunday night. Bro. J. P. Garmong, now of Des Moines, led the music. He is a good all round helper in a meeting. The brethren here consider the meeting a great victory from many standpoints.—J. WILL WALTERS, minister.

Anita, Feb. 3.—Bro. B. B. Burton is with us in a five weeks' meeting which began last Lord's day. Great interest is being manifested, even though but three services have been held. We are expecting great things and will not be disappointed. House filled each evening.—JOS. N. HARKER, pastor.

Boone, Feb. 4.—We began a meeting here last Lord's day with Bro. H. C. Patterson at the helm. Weather has been anything but favorable, but our audiences are continually increasing and the evangelist is pleasing so well that the other preachers are planning to get their congregations to enter into a united effort with us. The Boone Church has had a hard struggle, but was helped materially when J. M. Hoffman raised the money to build, free of debt, the best building in the city, so that for some time we have been slowly coming to the front.—S. G. GRIFFITH.

Castana, Feb. 1.—We began a meeting here yesterday with a full house at first service, 7:30 p. m. We believe we will have a good meeting, as all seem anxious for a meeting. Bro. Grant Hanni, a young man, a student at Lincoln, Neb., is their pastor, and will be with us during the meeting. We will be open for engagement after this meeting. Address me at 810 East 3rd Avenue, Oskaloosa, Ia.—M. L. ANTHONY, evangelist.

Keokuk, Feb. 3.—A fine day last Sunday. A young man reclaimed at night service. Two of our leading members move to Houston, Texas, this week, a heavy loss to the church, but the ranks will close up and move on to victory.—J. W. KILBORN.

Nora Springs, Feb. 1.—Three additions yesterday, two by statement, one by baptism.—G. A. HESS.

Villisca, S. M. Perkins, of this place, reports having closed a very satisfactory meeting at that point, with 17 additions. He was assisted by E. H. Boyd, of Creston, singing evangelist.

KANSAS.—North Lawrence, Feb. 2.—One more accession to the church here since last report. A lady from the Baptists.—F. H. BENTLEY.

Narka, Feb. 1.—Meeting at Narka three weeks' old, with 28 additions up to date.—EDWARD CLUTTER, evangelist.

Narka.—Meeting at this place continues with good interest; 28 additions.—EDWARD CLUTTER, evangelist.

KENTUCKY.—Walton, Feb. 1.—At my last appointment at Republican Church two most excellent people took membership by letter. Will preach again for these good people. All lines of church work in a fine condition.—J. W. ROGERS.

Somerset.—We have just closed a very successful meeting here, resulting in 22 accessions, 17 baptisms. Bro. F. M. Linder, of Lancaster, assisted. He is a great and good man, an excellent preacher and won the hearts of all.—O. P. MCMAHAN.

Dayton, Feb. 4.—Sixty-six additions last year, and lost three by letter and one by death.—R. D. HARDING.

MINNESOTA.—Rochester, Jan. 30.—Just closed a four weeks' meeting. We were assisted by J. H. Bicknell, Minnesota's state evangelist. There were 27 additions and the church greatly revived. The last week was not what it would have been if it had not been for the cold weather, (30-40 below) and also the illness of the pastor. We were not able to be out at all this week. Brother Bicknell begins at Redwood Falls to-morrow.—GEO. W. WILE, pastor.

MISSOURI.—Springfield, Jan. 28.—The work at Central Church appears to be in a very healthy condition at present. Quite a number have been added since Bro. J. M. Kersey became our pastor last November. Last Sunday's services were exceptionally

DON'T EXPERIMENT!

Some experiments are necessary for the advancement of civilization; and although frequently lives are lost and much damage done, the ultimate results and benefits are the cause of much good to humanity. Others result in loss of life from no apparent cause other than the obstinacy of the experimenter, who will not heed the advice of friends, and refuses to see that his experiment is impossible or impracticable for the results aimed at or intended.

As all experiments are dangerous, so it is a dangerous thing to experiment with worthless patent medicines and nostrums of the kind that springs up in the night, and "none know from whence they came" or what their origin. It is seeking after an impossible result to look for health in a bottle of alcohol and sarsaparilla, or a package of senna and straw; and such experiments are often disastrous to the experimenter.

VITAE-ORE, Nature's Remedy, is not an experiment, and the sick and suffering person who seeks its aid is not experimenting. It has stood the test of the American public, a critical judge, for a generation of time, and is growing in popularity and selling more rapidly from year to year, and has fully substantiated our claim to being the best thing in, on, or out of the earth for afflicted people. Beware of experiments in medicine, and when you need a remedy let the experience of others be your guide. Vitae-Ore will not fail you. Its Nature's Specific for all ailments.

Read Our Special Offer

WE WILL SEND to every subscriber or reader of THE CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST or worthy person recommended by a subscriber or reader, a full-size One Dollar package of VITAE-ORE by mail postpaid, sufficient for one month's treatment to be paid for within one month's time after receipt, if the receiver can truthfully say that its use has done him or her more good than all the drugs and dopes of quacks or good doctors or patent medicines he or she has ever used.

Read this over again carefully, and understand that we ask our pay only when it has done you good and not before. We take all the risk; you have nothing to lose. If it does not benefit you, you pay us nothing. Vitae-Ore is a natural, hard, adamant, rock-like substance—mineral—Ore—mined from the ground like gold and silver, and requires about twenty years for oxidation. It contains free iron, free sulphur and magnesium, and one package will equal in medicinal strength and curative value 800 gallons of the most powerful, efficacious mineral water drunk fresh at the springs. It is a geological discovery, to which there is nothing added or taken from. It is the marvel of the century for curing such diseases as Rheumatism, Bright's Disease, Blood Poisoning, Heart Trouble, Dropsy, Catarrh and Throat Affections, Liver, Kidney and Bladder Ailments, Stomach and Female Disorders, La Grippe, Malarial Fever, Nervous Prostration, and General Debility, as thousands testify, and as no one, answering this, writing for a package, will deny after using. Vitae-Ore has cured more chronic, obstinate, pronounced incurable cases than any other known medicine and will reach such cases with a more rapid and powerful curative action than any medicine, combination of medicines or doctor's prescription which it is possible to procure.

Vitae-Ore will do the same for you as it has for hundreds of readers of this paper, if you will give it a trial. Send for a $1 package at our risk. You have nothing to lose but the stamp to answer this announcement. We want no one's money whom Vitae-Ore cannot benefit. You are to be the judge! Can anything be more fair? What sensible person, no matter how prejudiced he or she may be, who desires a cure and is willing to pay for it, would hesitate to try Vitae-Ore on this liberal offer? One package is usually sufficient to cure ordinary cases; two or three for chronic, obstinate cases. We mean just what we say in this announcement, and will do just as we agree. Write to-day for a package at our risk and expense, giving your age and ailments, and mention this paper, so we may know that you are entitled to it as a liberal offer.

This offer will challenge the attention and consideration, and afterwards the gratitude of every living person who desires better health or who suffers pains, ills and diseases which have defied the medical world and grown worse with age. We care not for your skepticism, but ask only your investigation, and at our expense, regardless of what ills you have, by sending to us for a package.

Address

Theo. Noel Company, Evangelist Dept. Vitae-Ore Bldg., CHICAGO, ILL.

fine, resulting in two confessions. There were also two confessions last night at prayer-meeting. Brother Kersey has endeared himself to the hearts of not only his own congregation, but likewise to many belonging to other churches in North Springfield. A public reception was given in his honor at the church on Jan. 14. A hearty welcome was extended to himself and family, and words of greeting were spoken by a number of visiting brethren, after which Brother Kersey responded in his usual happy vein. We are expecting great things as a result of a united effort on the part of pastor and people in the interests of Christ's kingdom in this part of our city.—R. FRANK MCGLOTHLIN.

Pickering, Feb. 1.—Three confessions yesterday morning; good meeting last night. Will begin our meeting Thursday, the 4th. Bros. D. W. Conner and G. A. Butler will be with us the 7th. We are expecting a great meeting. The church is in fine condition, and we are indeed ready for the harvest.—M. L. COTTRELL.

Savannah, Jan. 31.—One baptism Wednesday night; three confessions to-day. We begin our meeting next Sunday.—A. R. HUNT.

Richland, Feb. 3.—We have just closed a three weeks' and two nights' meeting at the Christian Church at this place with 43 accessions. Bro. F. M. Hooton did the preaching to crowded pews through the entire meeting, save a few stormy nights. I led the song service, and the church worked as she had not done before in a meeting for a long time. On Jan. 29 we lost our senior elder, James Lee, aged 97 years, 7 months, and 5 days, 80 years a servant of God, honored and loved by all who knew him.—J. R. BLUNT.

St. Louis, Feb. 7.—There were eight additions here to-day, five by statement, two by letter, and one by confession.—FRANK J. NICHOLS, Hamilton Ave.

Kansas City, Feb. 2.—Meeting closed at Fairview, Mo., with 26 additions, nine confessions. Church reorganized and a ladies' aid started that will help the church.—F. W. COTTINGHAM.

Bosworth, Feb. 4.—Meeting continues here with increasing interest; 18 to date, four last night. J. B. Lockhart, evangelist, Prof. G. A. Butler, of Mound City, Mo., singer.—J. M. CROCKETT, pastor.

Sedalia, Feb. 2.—Just returned home from a splendid meeting at Anadarko, Okla. We found them greatly discouraged and without a pastor; left them with 15 additions and greatly encouraged. Anadarko is a good opening for the right man.—J. C. ORRISON.

Jefferson City, Feb. 3.—We are in a good meeting with Arthur N. Lindsey, of New Franklin, as evangelist. The gospel is having a good effect upon the community as well as within the church. Lindsey is one of the clearest and most forceful preachers I have heard. Twelve have been added to the church.

Our music is led by Miss Pearle Crump, of this city. Our evangelists would do well to keep her busy in the field. She is a vocalist of rare power and has had experience in evangelistic work as a soloist and leader of song.—CRAYTON BROOKS.

NEBRASKA.—Arapahoe.—We just closed a two week's meeting with 12 additions. J. S. Miller assisted part of time. Five under his preaching.—F. S. WHITE.

Beatrice.—The church here has just closed one of the most successful meetings in the history of the church. Bros. Lawrence Wright and Lewis R. Smith, evangelists. Results, 49 additions, 44 of the number baptisms. I can most heartily commend the evangelists as true men of God, true to the gospel in life and in teaching.—EDGAR PRICE.

NEW YORK.—Buffalo, Jan. 27.—Jefferson Street Church of Christ decided at its annual meeting to-night to become a living link. We are all happy, since it means much for the future of our work in Buffalo. We had the presence of a former beloved pastor, Brother McPherson, whose work here will abide while time lasts.—B. S. FERRALL.

Buffalo.—At the annual meeting of the Richmond Avenue Church here, Jan. 13, 1903. Miss Grace Taber, chairman of the missionary committee read an interesting and encouraging comparative missionary report. It showed a total for missions from all departments of $1,645.42. foreign missions, $974.82; home missions, $86.50; New York state missions, $376.81; this was a gain over last year of $325.71; the per cent for missions of total expenditures, 36 per cent; it was resolved to increase this to 50 per cent for 1904.—R. H. MILLER.

OHIO.—Ravenna, Feb. 1.—I succeeded Dr. Fred Kline as pastor of the Ravenna church six weeks ago. We are planning for a meeting with home forces, beginning Feb. 21. Twelve new members added to the Christian Endeavor Society. The Society has decided to support a boy in India. The church had just been frescoed, recarpeted and otherwise repaired and we now have the prettiest auditorium in the town.—M. E. CHATLEY, Pastor.

Steubenville, Jan. 27.—There have been 64 additions to date in our revival meetings. The audiences have been good and the interest splendid. Brother Percy Leach, of Iowa City, Iowa, is doing the preaching. His well trained mind, keen sense of fitness and clear conception of the gospel truths make him a man of power, Miss Blanche Harris, our leader of song, has a splendid voice and is doing us good.—H. H. MONINGER.

Steubenville, Feb. 1.—Closed three weeks' meeting here last night. There were 70 additions; 31 were heads of families; 40 by obedience, 18 from sister churches, two reclaimed, 10 by letter and statement. Miss Blanche Harris was leader of song. Brother Moninger, the pastor here will hold a meeting for me during March.—PERCY LEACH.

Bellefontaine, Feb. 1.—We have lately closed a good meeting with sixty-eight additions, under the leadership of Brooks and Kendall, of Indiana. They have left us stronger in every way and we are sure that much of the fruit of their work is yet to be gathered in. Bellefontaine is gathering strength continually, and we are yet to be a strong congregation.—W. T. GROOM.

Shreve.—Just closed a three weeks' meeting here with 31 additions. Brother Darsie, Jr., of Massillon, assisted me the greater part of the time. We have a splendid working church of over 400. We will have a missionary rally before the March offering is taken.—E. C. HARRIS.

Akron, Feb. 5.—Closed a three weeks' meeting at the First Church, this city, Sunday, Jan. 31; 51 additions. The pastor, J. G. Slayer, preached, assisted by choir and young men's glee club. On Monday, Feb. 1, we had a grand missionary rally for this district, in charge of Brother McLean. Outlook good for a large offering, March 6. Brother Slayer goes to the Lennox Avenue Church, New York City on Feb. 15 to hold a meeting.—WILLIAM SPANTON.

Columbus, Feb. 5.—Our splendid meeting running through the month of January, closed Jan. 31. There were 29 who made the good confession, and 28 came by letter and statement. More than 25 people have assured me they are coming into the church as a result of the meeting. Many new families were reached. Sister Princess C. Long, of national fame, assisted the preacher of the church. Any church will be blessed in having her help. I have received 75 persons into the fellowship of this church in the four months and a half I have been here.—WALTER SCOTT PRIEST.

Akron, Feb. 3.—Perhaps the finest demonstration of the absolute power of the gospel, pure and simple, that has been seen for many years, was witnessed at the First Church, this city, during the last three weeks in January. The meeting was conducted entirely by home forces. This is the fourth year of the present pastorate, and the fifth revival meeting conducted by the present pastor, yet 51 were added to the fold. During the previous year 130 were added without special revival. Never have we seen a finer example of how an excellent spirit in a strong body can reflect honor upon his Creator than in our good Brother Slayer. He has been only a "voice" in our midst, but God seems to have given him a wonderful insight into the needs of the human heart, and the ability to show how Christ supplies all these needs.—B. C. CAYWOOD.

Collinwood, Feb. 4.—Our meeting which began Jan. 3, closed Sunday evening, Jan. 31. It was an excellent meeting and the church greatly helped thereby. Bro. C. A. Freer, pastor of the church, did all the preaching. Brother Hackleman, of Indianapolis, Ind., singing evangelist, was with us till Wednesday evening of the fourth week. Total number of additions during the meeting, 30; 27 by confession and baptism and three by letter.—D. R. KING.

Harrison, Feb. 1.—I began a meeting here yesterday with Bro. M. L. Buckley. The outlook is very encouraging indeed.—BYRON BURDITT, Singing Evangelist.

Columbus, Jan. 25.—Our meeting began the fourth week yesterday. Sister Long is doing some magnificent singing. We have had audiences that pack our large auditorium, and there were 13 additions yesterday, making 41 so far. For as a difficult a field as this, and with the pastor doing the preaching, this is a fine result. There have been some substantial additions among the number. The old Central seems to be taking on new life. We will soon organize the fifth congregation in this city. I am simply building the successful foundation so well laid by the brethren who preceded me.—W. S. PRIEST.

East Palestine, Jan. 25.—Closed a three weeks' meeting last night. Bro. Walter Mansell, of Salem, O., did the preaching and did it well. Mrs. Carrie Warnock, of Elyria, O., assisted us much with her sweet gospel solos. Eleven were added to the church. Nine of these were by baptism and two by statement. The church was strengthened in all departments.—J. N. JOHNSTON, pastor.

Bays, Jan. 27.—Closed our meeting with Mungen Christian Church Sunday, Jan. 24 with four accessions, three confessions, one from the Baptists. The third week opened with great promise, but the flood surrounded us, compelling us to stop. Miss Margaret Van Winkle is a good leader of song. Churches would do well to secure her services as singing evangelist. Address her, Middletown, Ind., R. R. 3. She goes to Milton Centre, O., from here. Our new church at Cygnet, O., will be dedicated about the middle of March. I will begin a meeting there when the church is completed.—E. K. VAN WINKLE.

OKLAHOMA TERRITORY.—Ingersoll, Jan. 25.—Four confessions, one from the Presbyterians, two from the Baptists, two from United Brethren at this place.—M. B. INGLE.

Ingersoll, Feb. 1.—Six confessions, five by statement, one from Baptists, at this place since last report.—M. B. Ingle.

Perry, Jan. 28.—The church here has just closed a great meeting. Bro. C. H. White, the pastor, did the preaching, and your humble servant conducted the song service. There were 48 accessions to the church, and much good seed sown.—F. D. WHARTON.

Perkins, Feb. 1.—We had a union meeting conducted by the Oliver brothers, in which they claimed about 300 converts, about one-half of the number taking membership in the different churches of our city and country; about 43 went into the Christian church. We sent to Kansas City for Bro. T. L. Noblitt, and he continued the meeting for three weeks and closed with 83 additions to the church. He is soon to locate with us and take the pastorate of the church here for the coming year. I shall go into the evangelistic work, which will be quite a relief after a five years' pastorate.—J. W. GARNER.

OREGON.—Athena, Feb. 1.—Sixteen additions last night; 112 in all, and others yet to come.—W. A. MOORE.

Athena, Feb. 2.—Our meeting is in its eighth week, audiences good and interest great. Eleven confessions last night. One hundred and thirty to date. The meeting will continue over Lord's day. W. A. Moore is preaching the gospel plainly and lovingly.—J. W. JENKINS, Pastor.

Portland, Feb. 1.—I began work with the First Christian Church of this place, the first day of 1904. Am very favorably impressed with the field here. There is a splendid outlook. A splendid people are rallying around me. A royal welcome was ours. About forty people were at the depot to greet us. During January there were six additions to the church, two by letter and four by confession.—E. S. MUCKLEY.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Philadelphia, Jan. 29.—One baptism Lord's day, Jan. 17, at Kensington Church. Church work prospering. Sunday-school flourishing with average attendance of 150. Y. P. S. C. E. supporting boy in India; also assisting in Port Rican work. Junior Christian-Endeavor growing and enthusiastic. Election of officers was held by the C. W. B. M. auxiliary on Thursday evening, Jan. 28, with the following selections: President, Miss Nellie Austin; vice-president, Mrs. M. H. Garrigues; secretary, Mrs. Mary Sheperla; treasurer, Miss Clara Dennell. Four minute talks and papers on woman's work "In the

TOPIC CARDS FOR 1904

Uniform Prayer-Meeting Topics for the year, per hundred	$0.25
Midweek Prayer-Meeting Topical Outlines for the year (a booklet of 52 pages), per hundred	1.50
Y. P. S. C. E. Prayer-Meeting Topics for the year, per hundred	1.00
Y. P. S. C. E. Prayer-Meeting Topics for three or six months, with list of Officers, Committees and Leaders, per hundred	2.75
The Topical Hand Book, containing Mid-Week Topics, Y. P. S. C. E. Topics and Sunday-School Topics for the year, per hundred	3.00

AND ALL OTHER CHURCH SUPPLIES

Christian Publishing Co., 1522 Locust St. St. Louis, Mo.

Home," "In the Church," "In the World" were given by Mrs. E. Kainath, Miss Austin and Mrs. Garrigues. An appropriate recitation was given by Miss Etta Lueckel. Mrs. D. C. France, vice-president of Pennsylvania State C. W. B. M., gave a helpful and most interesting address, subject, "Why Have an Auxiliary." Thirteen new members were added.—CASPAR C. GARRIGUES, pastor.

Wilkinsburg, Feb. 4.—A baby girl arrived in our home last evening, Feb. 3. We have had 35 accessions to our church here during the month of January, all these at our regular Sunday and Wednesday evening services. Brother Tharp, of Allegheny, is preaching for us every evening of this week. He is among our very best.—L. N. D. WELLS.

SOUTH DAKOTA.—Arlington, Feb. 5.—J. K. Shellenberger, of Mankato, Minn., with Miss Pearl Wiley, of Carthage, as singer closed a three weeks' meeting for us last night. That their messages were stirring ones is shown in the fact that 63 persons responded to the invitation. Brother Shellenberger is a strong man intellectually, doctrinally, spiritually.—A. H. SEYMOUR, Pastor.

TENNESSEE.—Nashville, Feb. 1.—Woodland Street Church has authorized the purchase of a corner lot for a new house of worship. Two additions at services yesterday, one by confession. Your anniversary number of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST was inspiring. It has surely been tired as by fire, and is today a monument to bravery, wisdom and loyalty to Christ.—JOS. DARDEN ARMISTEAD.

TEXAS.—Austin, Jan. 20.—Recently eighteen persons have been added to the Central Christian Church of this city. Six were by confession and baptism, one from the Baptists, two restored and the rest by letter and commendation.—J. W. LOWBER.

Fort Worth, Jan. 24.—There were five additions to the Tabernacle Church here yesterday and eleven the Sunday before; twelve confessions. There have been over one hundred additions since Dec. 1, including the seventy in the Fannon meeting. Our Sunday-school is averaging about six hundred in regular attendance.—JAMES S. MYERS.

Cleburne, Feb. 1.—We had a good day yesterday; two added by letter—a doctor and his wife. They are splendid people and are said to be excellent church workers.—J. G. CREASON.

WASHINGTON.—North Yakima, Jan. 30.—The revival here has been in progress four weeks with 50 additions to date; 34 of the 50 are confessions. The pastor, A. C. Vail, is doing the preaching. He is now in his third meeting here. Brother Vail is evangelistic in his pastoral work. Is one of the few that can keep his audiences up winter and summer. Meeting will continue indefinitely.—GEO. A. WEBB, singing evangelist.

WYOMING.—Sheridan, Feb. 3.—Our meeting closed with 14 additions; one baptized Thursday evening at prayer-meeting and one added at regular service Sunday, making 16 additions for January; six baptized, two from the Baptists and eight by letter and statement. Good word comes from New Castle to the effect that Brother Mower, of Iowa, has located there and in a short meeting had 15 baptisms besides others by letter and reclaimed.—F. E. BLANCHARD.

Changes.

A. M. Chamberlain from Middlesboro, Ky., to Logmont, Ky.
Lewis Goos from Blandinsville, Ill., to Long Grove, Ia.
W. S. Cash from Tarkio, Mo., to Tulsa, I. T.
J. H. Jones from LaBelle, Mo., to Bolivar, Mo.
E. S. Conner from Pomona, Cal., to Los Angeles, Cal.

A Modern Plea for Ancient Truth

By J. H. GARRISON

An epitome of the plea for a restoration of primitive Christianity in doctrine and in life.

94 Pages—Bound in Pretty Oxford Gray.

Price, 35 Cents, Postpaid.

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING CO., St. Louis, Mo.

A. M. Harral from Tablequah, I. T., to Welletka, I. T.
W. A. Morrison, Verdon, Neb., to McPherson,
Kas.
J. J. Taylor from North Vernon, Ind., to Con-nersville, Ind.
Daniel J. Elsea from Abingdon to Watseka,
Ill.
E. F. Randall from Swampscott, Mass., to 111
Broad St., Tonawanda, N. Y.
T. J. Alford from Leanna to Savonburg, Kan.
John J. Diggs from Payson, Ill., to Harvey,
Ill.
W. F. Hamann to East Broadway Church, Sedalia, Mo.
Abraham B. Markle from Eureka to Anaheim,
Cal.
G. W. Tomson from Shawnee, Okla., to Kirksville, Mo.
G. E. Williams from Kahoka, Mo., to Butte
City, Cal.
S. H. Givler from Eureka Springs, Ark., to Cerre Gordo, Ill.

Happiness.

What is your opinion of happiness?

What are the essentials upon which you think it depends? Money, love, health—nine out of ten persons would say. Reverse the order of the three and you'll have them as they should be. You cannot be happy if your health is bad. Neither can those around you. Ever notice how grouchy a man or woman is who has dyspepsia or any form of stomach trouble? They cannot help it. It's the result of weakened nerves. Don't judge him too harshly. You cannot expect to find a sunny disposition where pain is gnawing away the body, mind and nerves.

Some of them try to get cured—try hard, but finally give up in despair. Vernal Palmettona (formerly known as Vernal Saw Palmetto Wine) has restored more of these people to health and happiness than any other remedy on earth.

It is a purely vegetable remedy which roots out the cause of the trouble at the very start. It is a positive and permanent cure for ailments of stomach, liver, bowels, kidneys, heart and blood. It doesn't act like harsh purgatives and cathartics. It does its work gently, thoroughly and with no shock to the system. We want you to try this grand remedy at our expense. Write for a free sample bottle to-day. Gladly sent postpaid. Learn for yourself what it will do, before you buy. We know what it has done, what it will do. You do not. We take this way of showing our confidence in it. Address, Vernal Remedy Co., 506 Seneca Building, Buffalo, N. Y.

On sale at leading drug stores.

People's Forum

DEAR BRO. GARRISON.—May I add my word of congratulation to the many you have received since beginning the agitation of the question of a revival of religious worship in the home? We may, it seems to me, expect that your efforts in this direction may be of as great a benefit to the cause of Christ as any one thing you have done in the thirty-five years of service as editor—and I am not disposed to value that work lightly. I expect, when the discussion has gone a little further and I am fully decided as to how to present the matter, to first preach two or three sermons on this subject, then in some way induce as many families as possible to begin the practice of regular, daily worship.

H. F. BURNS.

5488 Greenwood Ave., Chicago.

Concerning Church Letters.

There is a growing laxity among churches in the matter of church letters. I am pastor in a railroad town. People are moving here continually. They are members in Illinois, Missouri or some other point in Kansas. Of course we want them to unite with us while here. They neglect to send for church letters. After much importunity they consent that their letters may be sent for. I write to the pastor of the church where their membership is located, enclosing a stamp for reply. About one half of such letters are never answered.

Why cannot brethren, especially preachers, be more courteous in this matter? We wait a long time. The letter does not come. The member feels an aversion towards making a statement. He feels as though his statement will be viewed with suspicion. The result is he drops out and the church loses many a valuable member.

F. M. McHALE.
Herington, Kan.

The Passing Years.

To-day I am forty-four years old! Rather, forty-four years young! I have rounded out nearly twenty-three years of active ministry without being out of employment a single day. I think I am good for twenty-five years more. The "dead-line" is not in sight yet. It may be just around the corner, but I'll keep it there for a score of years more I hope! I have never studied harder, read more good books, nor done better preaching than at the present moment. Never was preaching more of a passion with me than now. I can scarcely wait from one Sunday to another, indeed, I do not wait for Sundays, but preach from house to house, on the streets, in my study, everywhere that I can get an audience of one or more. One of the most effective sermons I have preached in many a day was to an audience of one during the past few weeks. A conversion resulted from that sermon, and it will be a lasting one, too! God grant to give me the bodily strength, the mental attainments and the spiritual power to preach the glorious gospel of the son of God for the remainder of my time here on the earth. The time is short. So much is to be done. No time to be wasted to-day!

WALTER SCOTT PRIEST.

Central Church, Columbus, O.

"Sectism Among the Disciples"

Sectism among the disciples has apparently gone to seed among our English brethren in South Africa, and like a good, healthy Canada thistle, is scattering itself to the four winds of heaven. The sympathy of the writer goes out to Brother Spayd, who, actuated by a motive that stirs so few, went to that distant land, only to find himself disfellowshipped on the ground of a mere opinion. The Britisher held the reins and whip, and therefore Bro. S. was unceremoniously compelled to get out.

Wasn't that brotherly? Their action simply proves that narrowness among Disciples is just as mean and hateful as it is among other people. Yes, yes, let them have that great field, and work it if they will. Thank God, they may go to heaven and hold their opinions intact. But how queer they will feel when they meet Brother Spayd up yonder and find that their test of fellowship debars him from nothing in the Celestial City. I admire Brother Spayd's generous spirit that will "suffer long and be kind," even to the extent of drawing upon our American missionary bank for their particular benefit. At this point I agree with Brother Garrison—not a copper from us for the dissemination of their narrow, unbrotherly sentiments. Let them paddle their own canoe. Some men make the mistake of supposing pigheadedness to be loyalty. I respectfully submit, in a fraternal spirit, that this is characteristic of those brethren in Boerland. I wish it understood that I write that ugly word, pigheadedness, smoothly, calmly, courteously, smilingly, and without a particle of venom. I much fear they are like the Pharisees of old. They have closed their eyes and ears, and hardened their hearts, lest they should become converted. In other words, they shut their teeth and, right or wrong, hold on in true John Bull fashion. The writer speaks advisedly, because he happens to be an Englishman, born on the old sod, and lived there nearly twenty-three years. Now I am not only an American citizen, but also an Americanized, civilized, Christianized follower of Jesus Christ. None of our money for them, Brother Spayd. I hope this article is not very wicked.

Goshen, Ind.

J. H. LACEY.

"An Important Mission Field."

In the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST of January 14 Bro. H. A. Northcutt, alluding to his long and fruitful pastorate at Kirksville, Mo., which he has recently resigned, expresses the wish "that either the State Board or the Home Board might see the importance of this work and assist the church in employing an assistant pastor." Now, I fully appreciate Bro. Northcutt's enthusiasm over Kirksville. I have been there, and know its importance. I am in favor, too, of churches that need such, and can afford the expense, having assistant pastors. But I am sure that as long as we have whole states in which we have no congregations at all, while here in New England in a population of 6,000,000 we have only twenty-three churches, with a membership of 2,500, and some of these churches no ministers at all, and those that have ministers unable to give them much more than half a support, while good, true men are serving for $600, $700, $800, etc., in order to do even the small work being done, it is almost certain that neither the Missouri State Board nor the General Board will enter very largely upon the employment of assistant pastors for churches like Kirksville. If Brother Northcutt could see the conditions here, his good heart, which I know full well, would, I believe, prompt him to ask Kirksville for from $100 to $500 for our Home Missionary Society, to be sent at once to help the struggling brethren in New England.

No, brethren, you in states like Missouri must learn to see the field more clearly than to imagine that our Missionary Society can furnish money to employ assistant pastors for your churches, even though they be headquarters for osteopathy!

J. H. HARDIN.

5 Fountain Hill, Boston.

A Mild Treatment for Cancer.

There is suffering and horrible death in this country from cancer, but thanks to human skill and perseverance, there is a remedy for it. After twenty-five years of patient labor and experiment, the celebrated Cancer Specialists, the Dr. D. M. Bye Co., of Indianapolis, Ind., have originated and perfected a combination of soothing, balmy oils, which act specifically on the diseased tissue. They have cured many hundreds, and have the endorsement of highest medical authorities as well as ministers of the gospel who have been cured. The doctors are always pleased to answer inquiry about the remedy, and will send free books and papers on application in person or by letter. Address Dr. D. M. BYE Co., Drawer 505, Indianapolis, Ind. (This is the home office.)

we are going to stop at the

Christian Endeavor Hotel, World's Fair, St. Louis

And so are we, because

It will be the headquarters during the Exposition for Christian Endeavorers, Baptist Young People, Sunday-Schools, Educators, etc. Adjoining the Fair Grounds, with street cars direct from Union Station to hotel. Built for perfect safety, and comfort. Capacity, 3,000 daily; auditorium, 3,000. Backed by men of highest standing; endorsed by St. Louis clergy. Charter Certificates, Series A, issued on receipt of $1.00, entitle holders to reduced rate of $1.00 per day for lodging or $2.00 per day for lodging and board. For full particulars address at once,

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HOTEL and AUDITORIUM CO.,

Chemical Building, St. Louis, Mo.

For Over 60 Years

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup

has been used for over SIXTY YEARS by MILLIONS of Mothers for their CHILDREN while TEETHING, with perfect success. IT SOOTHES the CHILD, SOFTENS the GUMS, ALWAYS all pain, CURES WIND COLIC, and is the best remedy for DIARRHŒA. Sold by Druggists in every part of the world. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup and take no other kind. 25 Cents a Bottle.

An Old and Well-tried Remedy

Arkansas Texas Louisiana

An ideal country for cheap homes. Land at $5, $10, $15 per acre and up; grows corn, cotton, wheat, oats, grasses, fruits and vegetables.

Stock ranges 10 months in the year.

Cheap rates—about half fare—via the Cotton Belt twice a month.

Dates are Jan. 5 and 19, Feb. 2 and 16, Mar. 1 and 15.

Write for descriptive literature, maps and excursion rates.

E. W. LaBEAUME, G. P. & T. A.,
Cotton Belt, ST. LOUIS MO.

He died just 25 years later, in 1929.

Family Circle

The Heart of the Home.

Her face is all freckled—this girl whom I know,

And her nose has a tilt in the air;
And not even her mother, with mother-love blind,

Can truthfully say she is fair;
Her hair is the color that may be called red,
And straight as a ruler hangs down;

Her eyes are pale blue, and her forehead is low—

Though it never is drawn in a frown.

Her sisters are graceful and bonny young things,

And her brother is handsome and bright,
And all of them think in their innermost hearts,

That their sister is truly a sight.
But the soul of this girl is a beautiful thing,
And her voice is as sweet as a bird's,

And her goodness of heart and her wisdom of mind
Are seen in kind actions and words.

And the mother has ever a fond word and smile

For this child of her daily delight,
And the father's eyes glisten with tenderest love

As he kisses and bids her good-night.
And, oh! they would miss, and miss her full sore,

If out in the world she should roam,
For the girl with no beauty of face or of form
Is most truly the heart of the home.

—Emma A. Lentz, in Visitor.

An Automobile Tongue.

"An automobile tongue is so called," observed a newspaper jester, "because it is always running people down."

If this was written to provoke a smile, it also furnishes matter for serious thought. Somehow it seems hardly fair to the awkward looking vehicle that goes blundering and tooting along our streets and roads to compare it to the mischievous member that, from Adam's time till now has been the cause of so much wreck and ruin; nevertheless, the automobile on account of the record it is making for itself as a source of danger, may, by a play of words, be made to suggest that other dangerous factor that makes mischief by running people down.

We may take it that not once since the invention of the automobile has anyone been hurt by it except through accident. Although it has been compared to the car of Juggernaut, and although its owners have occasionally been fined for exceeding the legal rate of speed, the latter are not suspected of murder when this unlawful speed has caused loss of life. In the case of a tongue that goes too fast, the excuse is often made: "Oh, she was only talking to hear herself talk. In saying what she did about this one or that one she had no intention of doing them an ill turn." For instance, there is the case of Miss A—, who, speaking to some afternoon callers of Mrs. B—'s housekeeping, remarks:

"Manage? I should say she does manage! Why, that woman can get as much work out of two servants as I could out of six. I understand that she takes Solomon's wise woman as her model in housekeeping, routing up her servants before daybreak, and keeping them at their work till late at night. And, judging by the appearance of the girl who answers the door bell, I judge that there is not much me allowed for meals; I never in my life saw a thinner creature."

Now all this is said without the least feeling of unkindness toward Mrs. B—, whom the speaker had not visited more than twice since they became neighbors. She knows that there are eight children in the B— family, and that lights are to be seen in the house (which is just across the street from her own), sometimes late at night and sometimes very early in the morning, and that Mrs. B—'s cake took the prize at the county fair. With this to go on she made a statement which, when it was repeated to Mrs. B—'s cook by the waitress of one of Mrs. A—'s callers, who had heard her mistress repeat it at dinner, was contradicted with much vehemence.

"Why, Mrs. B— has been a mother to me," remarked that functionary, who, it may be observed, will never see forty-five again, while her mistress is ten years younger. "It's her that has had a rocking chair put into the kitchen for me, and who keeps the little children out of my way while she sends the big ones in every day to help me all they can by preparing the vegetables and such like. In most families it is just the other way; its the little ones that's always under your feet, while the big ones won't stir a step to help you. The two oldest girls take it by turns to cook their father's steaks and omelettes for him in the morning, as he has to go off early to his factory, and the missis herself sets up at night to give her brother his supper when he gets back from his printing office. As for Sarah being skinny, Miss A— ought to have seen her when Mrs. B— first took her away from her own folks. Of course, there is a lot of work to be done, with all of them children, and the washerwoman coming in only one day in the week, but all the same I wouldn't leave a lady like Mrs. B— not to have my wages raised, and Sarah would say the same thing."

"I can't understand it at all," remarks another tongue of the same make as Miss A—'s, and one that goes quite as fast. "We all know just what salary Mr. C— receives and yet there isn't a girl in our set who makes a better appearance in public than his daughter. I only hope he can pay her bills at the dressmaker's and milliner's"

This is said in the hearing of a large circle of interested listeners, and forthwith the report goes abroad that Miss C—'s extravagance in dress is keeping her father in financial difficulties. Miss C— naturally does not wish to parade the fact that she receives her hats and gowns as a present from an aunt in a distant city, who gets wonderful bargains from the dealers in second-hand clothing, but if she knew what the automobile tongues were doing for her she would, probably, "speak up" for herself as vigorously as Mrs. B—'s cook does for her employer.

We read somewhere of a good mother, who, in helping her children to beef tongue, would remark, impressively, "Have a slice of a tongue that never told a lie." She might have added, "and one that never ran down anyone after the fashion of automobiles and human tongues."—Christian Intelligencer.

AULT & WIBORG

COMPANY

Manufacturers of Printing Inks.
CINCINNATI, NEW YORK,
CHICAGO, ST. LOUIS.

This Paper Printed with Ault & Wiborg Ink

DON'T BUY AN OUT-OF-DATE MACHINE ON A WORN-OUT REPUTATION

NOR A WEAK ATTEMPT AT VISIBLE WRITING WITH
TANGLEFOOT TYPEBARS AND SLOT GUIDES.

The Standard Visible Oliver Writers and Billers with 10 in., 12 in., 15 in. and 18 in. Carriages

Are Rapid
Convenient
Simple
Durable
And have
The Best
Touch
Method
Key Board

Enable
The Operator
To do
The Most
Of the Best Work
The Easiest

Write upon any size or shape of paper from a postage stamp or druggists' label to an insurance policy or freight way-bill, lined or unlined.

Used by the Government and Largest Corporations

The OLIVER TYPEWRITER COMPANY

Century Building, 315 North Ninth Street,

ST. LOUIS, MO.

How the Liquor Traffic Robs Laboring Men.

In $100 worth of boots and shoes, $20.71 is labor.

In $100 worth of furniture, $23.77 is labor.

In $100 worth of hardware, $24.17 is labor.

In $100 worth of clothing, $17.12 is labor.

In $100 worth of cotton goods, $16.91 is labor.

In $100 worth of men's furnishings, $18.34 is labor.

In $100 worth of worsted, $13.55 is labor.

In $100 worth of woolen goods, $12.86 is labor.

In $100 worth of liquor you buy, $1.23 is labor.

One dollar and twenty-three cents as against $12.86, $13.55, $18.34, $16.91, $17.42, $20.71, $23.77, $25.17! What an object-lesson!

In the above goods, in each $800 lot, is $147.73 labor employed.

For one year, 30 cents a day for drinks, will make $109.50. Call it $100. If eight laboring men spend $800 for furniture, hardware, boots and shoes, clothing and other good things, they and their families are made happy, but $147.43 goes to labor. Thus business is stimulated, labor is in demand and wages are likely to rise.

If the $800 is spent in the saloon, only $9.84 goes for labor. The man and his family get no benefit. He is made weaker for his work. He is less pleasant and affable in his home. Comforts are not there. Wife is not cheerful. Children do not love the home. He is more likely to lose his job. Everything is against him.

Suppose 100 laboring men in a town, spending 30 cents a day in saloons, quit the saloons, and spend the money for clothing, houses, furniture and good things, how quickly would the town put on a new face. New stores and new factories would be needed. The saloon is the greatest pauperizer. Close it, and as by an electric torch the poor-houses would close also.—National Advocate.

A Pause in the Prayer.

"'F I should die 'fore I wake," said Donny, kneeling at grandmother's knee, "'f I should die 'fore I wake"—"I pray"—prompted the gentle voice. "Go on, Donny."

"Wait a minute," interposed the small boy, scrambling to his feet and hurrying away down stairs. In a brief space he was back again, and, dropping down in his place, took up his petition where he had left it. But when the little, white-gowned form was safely tucked in bed, the grandmother questioned with loving rebuke concerning the interruption.

"But I did think what I was sayin', grandmother; that's why I had to stop. You see, I'd upset Ted's menagerie, and stood all his wooden soldiers on their heads just to see how he'd tear round in the mornin'. But 'f I should die 'fore I wake,' why—I didn't want him to find 'em that way, so I had to go down and fix 'em right. There's lots of things that seem funny if you're goin' to keep on livin', but you don't want 'em that way if you should die 'fore you wake."

EVERYTHING for the GARDEN

is the title of Our New Catalogue for 1904—the most superb and instructive horticultural publication of the day—190 pages—700 engravings—8 superb colored plates of vegetables and flowers.

To give this catalogue the largest possible distribution, we make the following liberal offer:

Every Empty Envelope Counts as Cash

To every one who will state where this advertisement was seen and who encloses Ten Cents (in stamps), we will mail the catalogue, and also send free of charge, our famous 50-Cent "Henderson" Collection of seeds, containing one packet each of Sweet Peas, Large Mixed Hybrid; Fanpet, Giant Fancy Mixed; Alibi, Giant Victoria Mixed; Big Boston Lettuce; Early Ruby Tomato and Cardinal Radish in a coupon envelope, which, when emptied and returned, will be accepted as a 25-cent cash payment on any order of goods selected from catalogue to the amount of $1.00 and upward.

PETER HENDERSON & CO. 127 COMMERCE ST. NEW YORK CITY

"That was right dear; it was right," commended the voice, with its tender quaver. "A good many of our prayers wouldn't be hurt by stopping in the middle of them to undo a wrong—Well-spring.

Merry Jibes.

Lawyer: Do you swear positively that you know more than half this jury?

Witness: Yes, sir; and now that I have taken a good look at 'em, I'll swear that I know more than all of 'em put together.

Johnny was a small boy, the son of a popular preacher. One day his teacher said to him, "Johnny, does your father ever preach the same sermon over again?"

"Yes, ma'am," said Johnny, "but he hollers in different places."

"You are in my pew, sir," said Mr. Upjohn, stiffly.

"Then I am sitting in the seat of the scornful!" replied the stranger, getting out of it with alacrity, and taking a seat further back in the church.

"Another one of those lobbyists approached me to-day with an insulting proposition," said Congressman Graphter. "O, John," exclaimed his wife, "then you can afford to buy me that sealskin sacque now, can't you?"

Hadn't Missed It.

"There is an old negro living in Carleton," relates the Bosworth (Missouri) Star-Sentinel, "who was taken ill several days ago and called in a physician of his race to prescribe for him; but the old man did not seem to be getting any better, and finally a white physician was called. Soon after arriving, Doctor S—— felt the ducky's pulse for a moment, and then examined his tongue. 'Did your other doctor take your temperature?' he asked.

"I don't know, sah," he answered, feebly; "I ain't missed anything but my watch as yit, boss."

Individual Communion Cups

Why do you permit a custom at the communion table which you would not tolerate in your own home? The use of the individual communion service grows daily. Are you open to conviction? Would you like to see a list of the churches in which it is used and know the satisfaction it gives?

Send for our free book—it tells all about it. A trial outfit sent free on request. SANITARY COMMUNION OUTFIT CO., Dept. A Rochester, N. Y.

BIG PAYING BUSINESS For MEN, WOMEN.

Write for names of hundreds of delighted customers. Make $20 to $50 weekly. Do business at home or traveling, all or spare time, selling Gray outfits and doing genuine gold, silver, nickel and metal plating on Watches, Jewelry, Tableware, Bicycles, all metal goods. Heavy plate. No experience, quickly learned. Enormous demand. No towns or hummers. Outfit all sizes. Everything guaranteed. Let us start you. Write for free book. Write today. H. GRAY & CO., CINCINNATI, O.

AMERICA FOR CHRIST

The American Christian Missionary Society calls attention to the vast need of our beloved country. Three-fourths of the land is missionary territory to us. Ours is the plea which presents the gospel as the power of God unto salvation. There never was a time when our plea was more gladly received or more productive of immediate results. In thirteen weeks, since the Detroit Convention, through regular channels. Add to this 1,459 who have come to us from the denominations, and we have a total of 22,688 additions in thirteen weeks, or an average of 1,745 per week.

21,229 Baptisms Have Been Reported

We can be said to have firmly established the cause in but eight states. In nearly all the other states our cause is still in its infancy and can not live without help. More than $50,000 additional appropriations have been asked for already this year. This in the face of the fact that but $56,000 of last year's income was available for mission work.

The Home Board is asking of the brethren $200,000 (this year, for pressing needs.

The Corresponding Secretary asks that this great work shall be given its rightful place in the hearts and the help of the brotherhood. The Board is planning wisely and broadly. They ask the preachers to join with them in a mighty forward movement. May is the date of concerted action. Shall we prepare for it? Write us your heart.

BENJAMIN L. SMITH, Secretaries
GEO. B. RANSHAW,

American Christian Missionary Society

Y. M. C. A. Bldg., Cincinnati, O.

With the Children

By J. Breckenridge Ellis

The Green Witch.

CHAPTER III. - CONCLUDED.

About eleven o'clock, he found himself in the outskirts of Burr City, whither he had driven to deliver a pound of butter, which Mr. Stoner had declared fresh and good. Mr. Stoner was naturally suspicious of men and women, but he trusted in his butter; perhaps if he had kept men and women to sell, he would have thought well of them, also. By this time the roads were extremely muddy, and the wheels sank deep and gathered great slippery, chocolate-colored heaps upon their tires. They also picked up long straws, and bits of paper, and mingled these with the chocolate, offering an everchanging view. And it must be confessed that George's eyes were upon the front wheels most of the time, because when one broods over one's slights and wrongs, he does not care to look the day squarely in the face. Presently his attention was attracted by a forlorn figure in front of him. A girl of about sixteen, tall, thin, and miserably dressed, plodded along the road,—there were no sidewalks here,—each foot disappearing to the ankle as she stepped. She did not have to hold up her skirt to protect it, as it scarcely reached her knees. George thought he had seen her before, and when she stopped and looked over her dripping shoulder, he recognized the girl whom he had seen chased by the drunken father. It was the daughter of Tuck Hootin, the former delivery-man of Mr. Stoner.

"Wait," called the girl. "Say, can't I ride to town in the end of your wagon?"

For a moment George hesitated. She was such a disreputable figure, he preferred not to associate with her, even at opposite ends of the wagon.

"I have to go to town," said the girl, "and it's a mile from here, and—can I ride?"

Her jet black hair was loose, and the pouring rain had plastered it about her back and shoulders like an inverted mop. Streams trickled from all sides of her shapeless dress, which wrapped itself tightly about her meager form. Her legs were streaked with black mud; so were her arms; so was her face, only it showed where ineffectual knuckles had sought to rub away the mire. Her face was long and thin, and high cheekbones gave it an unhealthy effect. Her eyebrows were black and heavy, and as she stared at George, she drew them down till her eyes showed only as glittering points.

"All right," said George, ungraciously.

He stopped old Poll, and the girl splashed around to the end of the wagon, put one hand and the other elbow on the endgate, leaped and caught a place of security with her knee, and said, "Go ahead!"

"I guess," said George slowly, "you'd better get on the seat, where the rain can't reach you."

"All right," said the girl. She climbed along the edge of the wagon, and seated herself on the other side of the big green umbrella. George clucked at Poll. It would be necessary to let her go her favorite gait—which was a slow, painstaking walk—the entire mile to town. George inwardly groaned.

"I've ridden on this seat lots of times," said the girl. "Pa drove this wagon for years."

George remembered how Tuck Hootin had threatened to "get even with him," and to "trim him," because the younger had entered into the right of driving old Poll. No doubt the daughter shared the revengeful sentiments of the drunkard father. George felt more uncomfortable than ever. He knew she was watching him, and he kept his eyes fixed upon the front wheel of his side of the umbrella.

"Do you know my name?" asked the girl.

"Your uncle, Mr. Teeney, called you Maggie," replied George with careful reserve.

"My name is Marget," returned the other, "and Uncle Bob Teeney knows it. But they all hate me and they hate my very name. But if every one of 'em gets to be old gray-headed Methuselahs, they won't drive me one step."

George thought there was small credit to Marget in this peculiar phase of independence. He made no reply. They rode on for some time in silence, save for the downpour of the rain, and the sucking sound of the mare's hoofs in the yielding muck. Then Marget announced in a hard, bitter voice, "But I don't care!"

He stirred restlessly, and transferred his eyes from the wheel to his feet upon the restboard. There he discovered her bare toes also perching, her feet entirely black, with black stripes running up the legs.

"I guess you know what people call me," she said after awhile, still in the resentful voice, as if she wanted to quarrel with him.

"No," said George, taking his eyes from the foot-rest.

There was another silence and then she said, "I went to the public when you did" (she meant the public school.) "Don't you remember me there?"

"No, I don't remember ever seeing you before," said George, "except about a week ago, when—"

"You had no right there," said Marget resentfully.

"I was just passing," he retorted in justification.

"You stopped outside our tent," said Marget, "and you stood there and watched to see it. And you wanted to see what would happen. And I can tell you, if pa ever catches you alone, when nobody else is near enough to help you, he'll pay you for taking his job away from him!"

"I am going to take you to town," said George, "because you are a girl, and you oughtn't be in this soaking rain. But I will not talk to you, and if you talk to me, I will not listen."

Still not looking at her, he drove steadily on, with an increased respect for the Good Samaritan. At last the girl spoke again, but now her voice was changed, "George Clayton,"—He started, for it sounded like a new voice,—that of a stranger. There was

OH! THAT BACKACHE.

NINE TIMES OUT OF TEN
IT'S CAUSED BY CONGESTION.

Stop the Pain

WITH AN

Allcock's
POROUS PLASTER

The simplest, easiest and most effective remedy for this most common complaint. It's cured millions during the past half century. It will cure you.

REMEMBER—Allcock's Plasters are guaranteed not to contain belladonna, opium or any poisonous ingredients. They are made of healing vegetable gums which soothe, strengthen and cure.

no suggestion in it of the Marget Hootin from whom he had been inwardly shrinking. He looked about quickly, thinking some one must have approached the wagon. Seeing no one but the girl on the other side of the umbrella, he looked away again, somewhat startled.

"I want you to listen," said Marget, and then she began to sing very softly.

"Ah, how I sigh to rest me,

Deep in the quiet grave.

There I will play with fairies

And in a dream-sea, in a dream-sea bathe."

Her voice was so mellow and rich, so surefooted at every step, as if conscious that nothing could shake its power—as if sure of its right to command attention and respect, that George was borne beyond his reserve and dislike. He looked at her as she softly sang the strange words. Her eyes were fixed upon the distance, and he saw no change in the forlorn, ragged creature, no dawn of beauty in the long, lean profile. But he was deeply stirred, and his impression of her was rudely shattered. He knew not what to think.

She was not singing for effect, or to win admiration, as he supposed; for as soon as the last note died away, she said abruptly, "Do you remember that tune?"

"Yes, it is from 'Il Trovatore;' but

These trade-mark crisscross lines on every package.

Gluten X Grits AND
BARLEY CRYSTALS,

Perfect Breakfast and Desert Health Cereals.

PANSY FLOUR for Biscuits, Cake and Pastry.

Unlike all other goods. Ask Grocers.

For book of sample, write

FARWELL & RHINES, Watertown, N. Y., U.S.A.

how you have mixed up words! Only the two first lines are right."

"Never mind the words—it's the music I'm after," she returned impatiently. "I don't get it right—there at the end, in one place."

"Yes," said George, "for the song is in 'g' and it goes to b-flat in that place."

"What is a flat?" asked Marget, eagerly. "Oh, do tell me! I have so wanted to know." Now he saw her eyes, and they transformed her face. It was no longer ugly, but, in spite of the soiled skin and wretched condition of wet hair, possessed a certain dignity which somewhat abashed him. It was the dignity of conscious power.

"I don't know how to tell it," said George. "If I had a piano here, I could show you."

"Show with your voice," she said; "sing a b-flat, and then I'll know."

"I can't sing," said George; "I never could, and I'd hate to try it after you. Oh, what a voice you have!"

"Yes," said Marget, simply, "isn't it good! It's the only good thing about me—and nobody knows but you. It's the only thing that can make me feel happy like others."

"Don't people know you sing?" asked George in surprise.

"Oh, they know it—yes; but they don't like it. That's what makes people call me what they do—children, I mean. I hate children."

"That's strange," returned George, "for are you not a child?"

"Oh, I hate myself," said Marget, "generally. Not when I am singing, but when I can't. There are times when I can't sing; whole weeks at a time!"

George began to feel very uncomfortable once more. "Well, we are getting near town," he said with relief.

"I want you to sing a b-flat," said Marget, "I beg you. I'll do what you ask of me, if you will. I don't care whether you sing good or not, I'm not caring about your voice, it's music I want to learn!"

George hummed the air from "Il Trovatore." She sang it after him, and triumphantly gained a b-flat. "Now," she said, with a radiant smile which startled him, for it made the face almost beautiful, "ask what you please of me!"

At first he was unable to remove his astonished gaze from her face. In the brilliancy of her smile, the high cheek bones gave an effect of refinement, and the very thinness of the face lent spirituality. The deep glow in her autumn-brown eyes reminded him of October sunbeams straying through forest masses of colored leaves. "I have nothing to ask of you," he said, bewildered. "Oh, yes! Then—I will ask you to tell me where and how you learned that tune."

"Oh, don't ask me that!" cried Marget, pathetically.

"Oh! very well," said George, with sudden coldness.

"Something else!" said Marget.

"No," was the reply, "I don't care about it. It is nothing to me."

There was silence between them, and when she spoke it was in a still different tone from any he had heard her use. It was like a third Marget, neither bitter and resentful, nor calm and assured in the consciousness of a great talent, but timid and humble.

"I must do what you ask of me," she said, "since I owe you a great deal for that b-flat."

"No," said George, mollified by her tone, "I don't ask anything of you, and a b-flat is nothing to be grateful for."

"I think it is," said Marget. "It is a great thing to me; and if you don't ask me to tell you,—you have asked, and I am ashamed that I hesitated even for the second—it's because I am so proud that I didn't want to tell." It struck George as grimly humorous that poor Marget could have pride, but he made no answer.

"I learned that tune, and other tunes," said Marget, still speaking in a subdued, hesitating voice, "under your window. I mean the house your father sold afterwards to Mr. Stoner. It was the parlor-window. I used to come there at night in the winter-time, and listen and listen while your mother sang and played, and afterwards, while you played with her. And I have learned other tunes under other people's windows; in winter, when no one is outdoors to see me."

"If we had known!" cried George. "We would have asked you to come in."

"I wouldn't have come," said Marget, sharply. "But when the music was made, it was free. It belonged to the air it mixed with, and I had a right to it, so I took it."

"You must have got very cold!" George exclaimed.

"It was so cold and dark!" said Marget, "but I never once thought of the cold till the music stopped. Oh, I love music! I would love to sing forever! I would love to sing and have people hear me,—people that could understand."

"You said a strange thing a little while ago," said George, "that there are weeks at a time when you can't sing at all. That sounds real creepy,—it makes me think of witches!"

Marget's great eyes blazed. "You do know what they call me, you do know!" she cried out furiously. "You didn't tell the truth, and now you want to insult me. I will not ride any farther!"

"Stop, Marget," cried George in distress, catching her hand as she prepared to leap over the front wheel into the mud. "I know, now, what you meant, but I didn't before; indeed, what I said was just an accident. I've heard the boys talk about the 'Green

EXTRAORDINARY MERIT

Of a New Catarrh Cure.

Physicians are slow to take up new and untried remedies, until their value has been established by actual experiment, and they are naturally skeptical of the many new preparations constantly appearing and for which extravagant claims are made.

The most liberal and enlightened physicians are always ready, however, to make a fair trial of any new specific and get at its true medical value.

A new preparation for the cure of catarrh has attracted much attention in the past few months and has met with great favor from the medical profession not only because it is remarkably successful in the cure of catarrh, but also because it is not a secret patent medicine; anyone using it knows just what he is taking into his system.

It is composed of blood root which acts on the blood and mucous membrane, hydrastin for same purpose to clear the mucous from head and throat, and red gum of eucalyptus tree to destroy catarrhal germs in the blood.

All of these antiseptic remedies are combined in the form of a pleasant-tasting tablet or lozenge, and are sold by druggists under name of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, and many recent tests in chronic catarrh cases have established its merit beyond question.

Dr. Sebring states that he has discarded inhalers, sprays and washes and depends entirely upon Stuart's Catarrh Tablets in treating nasal catarrh. He says: "I have had patience who had lost the sense of smell entirely, and whose hearing was also impaired from nasal catarrh, recover completely after a few weeks use of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets. I have been equally successful with the remedy in catarrh of the throat and catarrh of stomach. I can only explain it on the principle that catarrh is a constitutional disease, and that the antiseptic properties in these tablets drives the catarrhal poison completely out of the system."

Dr. Odell says, I have cured many cases of catarrh of stomach in past four months by the use of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets alone without the use of, any other remedy and without dieting. The tablets are especially useful in nasal catarrh and catarrh of the throat, clearing the membranes and overcoming the continual hawking, coughing and expectorating, so disgusting and annoying to catarrh sufferers.

Witch,' but I didn't pay any attention. I didn't know whom they meant. I never dreamed it was you. Marget, don't go away like that!"

She recognized the ring of sincerity in his tone and turned about, and pressed the hand which detained her. "Now that you know," she said, "you ask me not to leave you? I think the music your mother used to sing, must have got caught in your heart. But, good-bye. I will not ride with you into the town."

As George drove on, he looked down the side street she was following; her back was toward him. The charm of her wild nature was lost, and he saw only a shabby daughter of the poor, draggled, wretched, beaten by the unsparring rain. He saw her now as the world saw her,—a child to be pitied, perhaps, but to be shunned.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

RESTORES EYESIGHT.

"Actina," a Marvelous Discovery that Cures All Afflictions of the Eye Without Cutting or Drugging.

There is no need for cutting, drugging or probing the eye for any form of disease. There is no risk or experimenting, as thousands of people have been cured of blindness, failing eyesight, cataracts, granulated lids and other afflictions of the eye through this grand discovery, when eminent oculists termed the cases incurable.

Mrs. A. L. Howe, Tully, N. Y., writes: "Actina removed cataracts from both my eyes, I can read well without glasses. Am 65 years old." Robert Baker, 80 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill., writes: "I should have been blind had I not used 'Actina.' Actina is sent on trial postpaid. If you will send your name and address to the New York & London Electric Association, Dept. 203, 929 Walnut Street, Kansas City, Mo., you will receive free, a valuable book, Prof. Wilson's Treatise on the Eye and on Disease in General, and you can rest assured that your eyesight and hearing will be restored no matter how many doctors have failed."

Christian Publishing Company

1522 Locust Street

J. H. GARRISON, - - - - - President
 W. W. DOWLING, - - - - - Vice-President
 W. D. CREE, - - - - - Sec'y and Adv. Manager
 R. P. CROW, - - - - - Treas. and Bus. Manager
 G. A. HOFFMANN, - - - - - General Superintendent

Publishers' Notes.

"The More the Merrier" is not true of a good book, but the more you know of it, the happier you are. Test it with "Helps to Faith," one dollar.

Supplies of all kinds for use by Christian Endeavor Societies can be secured from us. Books for all the officers, and topic cards, etc. We will send catalogue giving list on receipt of request.

Your Sunday-school may be needing maps. We have a four-page circular giving full description of a number of maps. We will be glad to send this circular to those wanting maps for use in their Sunday-school.

Do you need a baptismal suit? We handle these made by one of the most responsible manufactures in this country. Write us when you are needing a baptismal suit. We will be glad to give full information and prices.

Your church or Sunday-school may be needing new song books. We publish several different music books and will be glad to furnish list and prices of our song books on receipt of request. Write us when you are needing new song books.

You can always have the Sunday-school lesson, the prayer-meeting topics and the Christian Endeavor topics if you will supply yourself with cards or booklets published by us. They do not cost much and are very handy.

The Bethany Christian Endeavor Reading Course Books consist of nine books by representative men of our church. These books should be read by the young people of our Christian Endeavor Societies. A catalogue of these books sent on receipt of request. The books are sold at the low price of 35 cents each.

Send to us for our catalogue if you want to know what books have been written by our people from the time of Alexander Campbell to the present time. We publish a large per cent of the writings of our people and in our catalogue will be found a list of their books. Our catalogue mailed free on receipt of request.

"Helps to Faith," the new book by J. H. Garrison, is divided into two parts. Part One is "Some Facts on Which Faith Rests," and Part Two, "Some Obstacles to Faith." There are eighteen chapters in Part One and twelve chapters in Part Two. The book contains 245 pages, bound in cloth binding. Price, $1.00, postpaid.

The contents of our new book, "The Christ in Modern English Literature," by Geo. H. Combs, is as follows: The

Fifty Years the Standard*DR. PRICE'S CREAM*BAKING POWDER*Improves the flavor and adds to the healthfulness of the food.

PRICE BAKING POWDER CO., CHICAGO.

New Feeling for Christ; The Literature of Silence; Voices of Revolt; Il Penseroso; Poets of Paganism; Redemptive Ideals; The Plight of the Pessimist; Echoes of the Orient; The Vision; Faith's Chorus; The Outlook. The price is $1.00, postpaid.

"A Chinese Story Teller or The Changed Story," is a new book from our press, written by Wm. Remfry Hunt. The author of this book has been a representative of the Foreign Christian Missionary Society for several years. The book will give the reader a pen picture of the Chinaman in his every day life. The book is made attractive by 16 illustrations made from photographs taken on the ground. It is a book of 167 pages, handsome cloth binding, price, $0.75.

Our new book, "An Endeavorer's Working Journey Around the World," by John F. Anderson, will tell you how a man went around the world visiting all the important countries of the globe, working his way all the time during the period of five years. The author is a young man, a member of a California church and Endeavor Society. He saw peoples of the world in all walks of life, from the lowest to the highest. One will gain a true knowledge of world-wide geography and history by reading this book.

Many illustrations are found in the book, and its more than 300 pages are full of interest. Price, bound in cloth, $1.50.

Are you acquainted with the writings of Alexander Campbell? If not, you should read his works, a list of which will be found below. Any of the list sent postpaid at prices given. A special price made on the entire list.

The Christian System.....	$1 00
Christian Baptism.....	50
Campbell-Purcell Debate.....	1 00
Campbell-Owen Debate.....	1 00
Lectures on the Pentateuch.....	1 00
Popular Lectures and Addresses.....	2 00
Living Oracles.....	50
Living Oracles (large edition).....	1 50
Christian Baptist.....	2 00
Symposium on Holy Spirit.....	30
Letters to a Skeptic.....	06
Life and Death.....	10
Sermon on Law.....	10

Our Sunday-school Supplies.

We will not take much space to mention our supplies. We can better satisfy you that we publish an excellent series of Sunday-school supplies by letting you see a sample copy of each kind. If you are not using our supplies in your schools we will take pleasure in mailing a full set of samples to your address. With the samples at hand you will be able to judge of their merits.

Let us send you sample copies if you are not using our literature in your Sunday-school.

Address Christian Publishing Company, 1522 Locust St., St. Louis, Mo.

— $250,000 FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS —

THE CHRISTIAN- EVANGELIST

A WEEKLY RELIGIOUS NEWSPAPER.

Vol. XLI. No. 7. February 18, 1904. $1.50 A Year.

THIS GRACE ALSO

INTEMPERANCE has slain its thousands, but covetousness its ten thousands. This is one of the most deceitful as well as one of the most damning of all sins. It is a sin of which very few suspect they are guilty. It is a respectable sin. None the less is it a sin. None the less is it idolatry, and no idolater shall inherit the kingdom of God. Luther used to say that one needed a threefold conversion, that of his head, his heart, and his pocketbook. As a people, we have had a marvelous history. Our growth in numbers is without a parallel. Our prosperity in the future will depend to some extent upon our liberality. We may have all knowledge, so that we can fathom all mysteries; we may be able to vanquish in the arena of debate all who differ from us; but if we are not willing to give of our means as the interests of the cause of Christ may require, we cannot continue to prosper. While we seek to abound in everything—in faith, in utterance, in knowledge, in earnestness, and in love—shall we not see to it that we abound in this grace also?

A. McLean.

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING CO. ST. LOUIS, MO.

The Christian-Evangelist

J. H. GARRISON, Editor

W. E. GARRISON, Assistant Editor

F. D. POWER, }
E. B. TYLER, } Staff Correspondents.
W. DURBAN, }

Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year

For foreign countries add $1.04 for postage.

Remittances should be made by money order, draft or registered letter; not by local cheque, unless 15 cents is added to cover cost of collection.

In Ordering Change of Post-office give both old and new address.

Matter for Publication should be addressed to the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. Subscriptions and remittances should be addressed to the Christian Publishing Company.

Unused Manuscripts will be returned only if accompanied by stamps.

News Items, evangelistic and otherwise, are solicited and should be sent on a postal card, if possible.

Entered at St. Louis P. O. as Second Class Matter.

What We Stand For.

For the Christ of Galilee,
For the truth which makes men free,
For the bond of unity
Which makes God's children one.

For the love which shines in deeds,
For the life which this world needs,
For the church whose triumph speeds
The prayer: "Thy will be done."

For the right against the wrong,
For the weak against the strong,
For the poor who've waited long
For the brighter age to be.

For the faith against tradition,
For the truth 'gainst superstition,
For the hope whose glad fruition
Our waiting eyes shall see.

For the city God is rearing,
For the New Earth now appearing,
For the heaven above us clearing
And the song of victory.

CONTENTS

Current Events.....	211
EDITORIAL:
Unconquered Land—VI .....	213
National Christian Bible-school Association.....	213
The Religious Weekly .....	214
Editor's Easy Chair.....	214
Notes and Comments .....	215
CONTRIBUTED ARTICLES:
As Seen from the Dome. F. D. Power..	216
The Dignity of the Missionary Enterprise. Richard W. Wallace.....	217
Greater Things Than These. W. A. Bellamy .....	217
The Christian Church in China. W. Rem-fry Hunt.....	218
Opening Doors. Anna M. Gordon.....	219
Books Worth Reading. W. T. Moore.....	219
THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.....	220
CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.....	220
MIDWEEK PRAYER-MEETING.....	221
NEWS FROM MANY FIELDS:
Baltimore Letter.....	222
New England.....	222
South Dakota.....	222
Hiram House .....	222
Nebraska.....	222
Virginia.....	223
In and Near Buffalo.....	223
Ohio Letter.....	223
Illinois Notes .....	224
Iowa .....	224
Kansas .....	225
Founders' Day at Eureka College.....	225
Rededication at Fairview, W. Va. ....	225
Would We Do Likewise? .....	225
OUR BUDGET.....	226
CORRESPONDENCE
Our Western Letter.....	228
Jottings by the Way .....	229
MARRIAGES AND OBITUARIES .....	231
EVANGELISTIC.....	232
CURRENT LITERATURE.....	235
THE QUIET HOUR.....	235
FAMILY CIRCLE.....	236
WITH THE CHILDREN.....	239
PUBLISHER'S NOTES.....	240

When an expensive and beautiful garment has become soiled and you doubt whether the color will stand washing, don't put it away without trying Ivory Soap. If water will not cause the color to run, Ivory Soap will not. Avoid extremely hot water, hot sun and a too hot iron. Give this suggestion a trial—even experienced housekeepers are surprised.

Canton University Notes.

We have a mission class of fifteen, and three in volunteer band.

Brother Rains has been called to preach at Salem, Ill.

Bro. Daniel Dungan began his year's work at Woodland Church last Lord's day.

Oscar Ingold preached a funeral sermon on last Monday at Lewiston of a man who was killed by a drunk man who soon after shot himself, but the saloon that sold the drink is doing business at the old stand.

I was informed that sixteen church members signed a dram-shop license at this place. If the men would help the women in the work this would not occur.

Many of our prospective graduates are being called out of the state to locate after June.
T. W.

Kansas Ministerial Institute.

The brethren of the state are hereby notified that the Ministerial Institute of Kansas will be held at Hutchinson, Kan., April 5-7, 1904. A. O. Breeden, of Des Moines, has been secured for a series of lectures upon church government and pastoral efficiency. T. P. Haley is expected to deliver a series of practical lectures born of his long experience as the father of our churches in Kansas City, Mo. A pleasant and profitable time will be had at Hutchinson, and it is hoped by the program committee that there will be a large attendance of the preachers of Kansas.

Send your dues at once to F. E. Mallory, Secretary, 1307 East Sixth Street, Topeka, Kan., at once. If you intend to come write and let him know, but especially inform Bro. Elmer Ward Cole, pastor of the Hutchinson Church, that you are coming.

C. A. FINCH, Pres. K. C. M. I.

THE CHRISTIAN EVANGELIST

"IN FAITH, UNITY, IN OPINION AND METHODS, LIBERTY, IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY."

Vol. XLI.

February 18, 1904

No. 7

Current Events

However tedious and protracted the diplomatic negotiations between Russia and Japan may be, events have been moving with kaleidoscopic rapidity since the beginning of actual hostilities. Within three days after recalling her minister from St. Petersburg, Japan had thrown an army into Korea and had made two spirited naval attacks upon the detachments of the Russian fleet. On Tuesday, Feb. 9, actual hostilities were begun simultaneously at Port Arthur and Chemulpo. The former, which is the Gibraltar of Manchuria and the terminus of the southern branch of the Siberian Railway, was the rendezvous of Russia's principal squadron in eastern waters. A night attack by Japan's torpedo boats upon the Russian vessels in the harbor was followed by a bombardment from the Japanese fleet on the following day. The result was the disabling of seven Russian vessels, including two battle ships and one first-class cruiser. The Japanese losses have not been definitely reported, but it is rumored that one of their vessels was sunk. The loss of life was not considerable on either side. Upon the same day a Japanese squadron blockaded the harbor of Chemulpo, which is the sea port for Seoul, the capital of Korea, and is about forty miles distant from that city. Two Russian warships which were found in the harbor were destroyed. The Russian torpedo transport Yenisin was blown up in the harbor of Port Arthur by accidentally striking a mine, and ninety-six lives were lost. The latest reports tell of a similar accident to the second-class Russian cruiser Bayarin, with a loss of 197 lives. So far as naval operations are concerned, the honors easily rest with Japan. Russia's most notable exploit by sea has been the sinking of an unarmed Japanese merchantman, which was caught and surrounded by the Vladivostok squadron. This act has aroused great indignation, as about thirty lives were lost and no opportunity was given for surrender.

The reports of fighting on land are less explicit and less trustworthy. It appears that a Japanese landing party at Dalny was repulsed with a loss of 410 men. Japanese troops have been landed at several points on the Korean coast with the intention of proceeding overland to Seoul or engaging the Russian army at the Yalu river, or both. It is reported that there has already been fighting along the Yalu River which forms the boundary between Manchuria and Korea, but the reports are vague and unconfirmed.

Secretary Hay has requested all the neutral powers to join in a note to Russia and Japan notifying them that they will be expected to preserve the integrity of China whatever may be the issue of the war. This suggestion has been well received, and there has been added to it the demand that there shall be no fighting in neutral territory. This, however, is not to be construed as including Manchuria, although that is technically Chinese territory, and therefore neutral. Since Russia is actually occupying Manchuria, it would not be practicable to exclude hostilities from this region. This concession will not be considered as an admission of Russia's right to the occupancy of Manchuria, but only of the fact.

The fact that Japan began hostilities without a formal declaration of war has given occasion for some criticisms. The Czar's declaration of war, which was issued on Feb. 10, comments unfavorably upon this feature of Japan's course. Experts in international law, however, assert that there is no impropriety in beginning hostilities without a formal declaration of war, and that the breaking off of diplomatic negotiations is all the warning that custom requires.

Senator Marcus A. Hanna, of Ohio, died of typhoid fever at Washington Monday, Feb. 15. His condition was not considered serious until within a few days of the end, and even yet it seems almost impossible to realize the death of one who, whatever may have been his faults, was always superabundantly vital. It is well for Mr. Hanna's reputation that he did not pass away four years or even two years sooner. Until 1896 he was only a business man, able, energetic and wealthy, interested in politics only in an amateur way, and scarcely known outside of his state. In that year he entered politics in earnest, as campaign manager for his life-long friend, William McKinley. It was a campaign of unusual acrimony. As it was hard for even his political enemies to speak or think ill of Mr.

McKinley, his manager became the target for all those personal flings which seem to be essential to the discussion of political questions in this country. Mr. Hanna was portrayed as the enemy of the laboring man, with the brutality of a slave-driver, bent only on grinding the poor for the benefit of the rich. The fact that, in his own vast business, he treated his employes generously and never had a strike, was not taken into account. In the campaign of 1900 the money question was less prominent, but still Mr. Hanna bore the brunt of the battle. But the events of the past three years have gone far to remove this feeling of personal hostility. He advocated measures like the ship subsidy bill, which we believe would have operated against the interests of the country, but it is impossible to believe that he advocated them with other than the best motives. By his fairness toward organized labor and his efforts to establish industrial peace, he has won the confidence and respect of the vast majority of his fellow-countrymen. When the heat of political conflict has passed away, it will be realized by men of both parties, as it is already recognized in considerable measure, that in Mr. Hanna the country has lost not only a great political organizer, but also a great and useful citizen.

Canada has recently set up a claim to exclusive sovereignty over the waters of Hudson Bay, and now that her attempt to secure the most important part of the panhandle of Alaska has failed, she is threatening to close the strait by which American whaling vessels have for generations had access to these far northern waters. As Hudson Bay is about one thousand miles long by six hundred miles wide and the strait which forms the entrance to it averages about one hundred miles in width, it will be seen that the proposal to consider it as an inland body of water is rather strained. If custom and usage amount to anything in establishing a claim, some account must be taken of the fact that the United States began to occupy and develop this region before Canada did, and has up to the present time done far more in that direction. Of recent years there has been considerable interest in the building of railroads to Hudson Bay so that the wheat from the great northern prairies may be shipped to England by that route.

Another Canadian Claim.

This is not a natural line of commerce, but one artificially fostered by the sense of obligation to encourage trade with Great Britain. Canada's best commercial development lies in the closest possible alliance with the United States. Only an imaginary political boundary separates the two countries, and we have no anxiety to see it removed, but it will be to the advantage of both to put into effect such treaties of reciprocity as will prevent this political boundary from being a commercial barrier.

Again there has been brought to our attention a certain publication which seems to be devoting a large amount of time and energy to disseminating the idea that, during the period of the World's Fair, St. Louis is going to be a very sink-hole of iniquity and the rendezvous of all abominations. Unfortunately, it is highly probable that there will be more than the usual amount of criminality and immorality in the city at that time. A great exposition always brings with it exceptional opportunities both for good and for evil. The people who will be here by thousands attending the Fair will, for the most part, be in that holiday mood where the conventional restraints of everyday life are thrown off and all temptations have redoubled power. There is no doubt, either, but that the purveyors of all doubtful and dangerous amusements will be ready to take advantage of this condition. A World's Fair city is no place for boys and girls to come alone, unless they have unusual maturity of character. But, although all this is true and some such warning is necessary, we cannot but believe that such highly colored statements as those in the publication above mentioned are inaccurate, unjust and unnecessarily alarming. There will be plenty of wickedness in the city, as there always is; there will probably be more than usual; but it is pure guess-work, and fantastic and hysterical guess-work at that, to say that the city is to be given over bodily to the most debasing influences. The suggestion is further being made in some quarters, that petitions should be sent to Pres. Francis urging him to put a stop to all this. Such suggestions are quite beside the mark. Mr. Francis is president of the World's Fair Company, but he is not dictator of St. Louis, and has nothing whatever to do with the preservation of order or the prevention of crime in this city. He has enough troubles without being inflicted with petitions bearing upon matters entirely out of his jurisdiction. It would be more to the point for anyone who has influence with the political leaders who control the police department of this city to exercise that influence in behalf of law enforcement.

It has been proposed to erect in Shanghai, as a memorial to the missionary martyrs who have fallen in China during the hundred years of Protestant missionary effort in that land, a building which shall serve as a home for all the co-operative work of the various boards, furnish a large hall in which great Christian assemblies can be held, and be in many ways a visible sign of the fundamental unity of the various bodies which are laboring for the Christianization of China. The building should have a central location, such as will cost probably $100,000—for land values in Shanghai are almost as great as in New York and London—and the building itself should cost not less than $150,000. It is believed that with the unanimous co-operation of all missionaries and their boards, this amount can easily be raised. The expectation is that half of it will be subscribed in America. We commend to our readers the following appeal which is issued by Bishop Graves in behalf of the Memorial Committee:

The Missionaries of China to their brethren of the West:

To worthily commemorate the 212 adults and children of eighteen societies, who died martyr deaths for Christ in China during the century, and also the thousands of natives who shared the same fate, not accepting deliverance, we, the missionaries of over sixty societies, desire to erect a fruitful memorial to the glory of God in Shanghai, the center of China. We are agreed that this should be a long and much-needed hall, in which living witnesses may carry on the testimony of the martyrs. Bible and Tract Societies will rent the offices attached, and so provide for many forms of Christian activity in behalf of the Chinese. This will be a centenary thank-offering, an expression of the unity of the church, and a perpetual witness at the entrance to China that China has a Martyr Church. Rev. Arthur H. Smith, D. D., the greatest living authority on China, says: "It will embody and prove that unity which must be the note of the triumphant missionary movement of the twentieth century. It will accomplish a maximum of good with a moderate outlay."

One hundred and twenty five thousand dollars is asked from America. Subscribers of $10 and over will receive a specially prepared souvenir volume. Cheques and postal orders should be made payable to Rev. D. MacGillivray, 250 W. 44th St., New York, who will forward all donations to Shanghai through the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, 50 Wall St.

THE RIGHT REV. BISHOP GRAVES,
Shanghai, Ch'm of Memorial Com.

We cannot too often remind our readers of the important reform measures which are now pending in Congress. The enemies of these measures have a personal and financial interest in seeing them defeated and they are fighting them with all the forces of their immense capital and compact organization. The friends of temperance have no selfish interests to serve, and there is always danger in such cases that their efforts will be less persistent than those of the opposition. The Dolliver Bill in the Senate and the Hepburn Bill in the House are, as we have stated before, intended solely to prevent the nullification of prohibition laws in those states which have adopted them. We take pleasure in publishing the following appeal which is sent out by the Legislative Department of the American Anti-Saloon League.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 12, 1904.

To Temperance Friends throughout the country: The liquor trade has worked up a strong opposition to the Hepburn-Dolliver bill among the so-called liberal element of the country. The Turn-Vereins, Maennenchors, and other similar societies are petitioning against the measure very largely. They claim that over six thousand of these societies are to be heard from in this way. They have been at it for weeks. The Congressional Record daily gives the record of many referred to the Committee on the Judiciary. From one hundred to one hundred and fifty and more are frequently presented in a day.

By this time our friends know what this bill is, realize its importance and our need for it, and are, I trust, ready to act promptly in its behalf. We want every church, temperance society, lodge or union, etc., to indorse the bill and have the proper officers immediately send in a memorial to the House and Senate urging the early consideration and speedy passage of the bill.

In addition to this and the voters' petitions referred to, if you have not already done so, write at once a brief letter to both of the Senators from your state and to your own Congressman, respectfully urging them to aid by influence and vote in passing the measure. Let this be done everywhere, and particularly in states and districts represented on the Judiciary Committees. The following form of memorial is suggested for organizations, churches, etc:

To the U. S. Senate (or House of Representatives):

Believing in the principle of Home Rule—in the right of each state to exercise its police powers for the regulation and control of the liquor traffic in its own way—without outside interference under the guise of interstate commerce, the _____ church of city or town _____, county of _____, state of _____, and composed of _____ members, hereby respectfully urges the early consideration and passage of the Hepburn-Dolliver bill to this end by your honorable body.

All that the Hepburn-Dolliver bill will do and all we urge its enactment for is to give full scope to the legitimate exercise of the police powers of the states in dealing with this question. It will not make an unconstitutional law valid; it will not set up one policy of the state above another; it does not invade the so-called personal liberty of the people; it will simply give the states jurisdiction over liquors shipped within their own borders before as well as after delivery. It is in line with the present attitude of the federal government as expressed in the Wilson law which it is designed to amend, and in the Internal Revenue law (Sec. 5243—Edition of 1900) in which the paramount rights of the states in dealing with this subject are recognized and conserved.

Signed on behalf of the congregation:

_____, Pastor.
_____, Secretary.

Senate Committee on Judiciary: C. F. Hoar, Mass.; O. H. Platt, Conn.; C. D. Clark, Wyo.; C. W. Fairbanks, Ind.; K. Nelson, Minn.; L. E. McComas, Md.; C. M. Depew, N. Y.; J. H. Mitchell, Ore.; A. O. Bacon, Ga.; E. W. Pettus, Ala.; C. A. Culberson, Texas; J. C. S. Blackburn, Ky.; T. M. Patterson, Colo.

House Committee: J. J. Jenkins, Wis.; R. W. Parker, N. J.; D. S. Alexander, N. Y.; V. Warner, Ill.; C. E. Littlefield, Me.; L. Thomas, Ia.; S. L. Powers, Mass.; R. M. Nevin, O.; H. W. Palmer, Pa.; G. A. Pearre, Md.; J. N. Gillette, Cal.; D. A. DeArmond, Mo.; D. H. Smith, Ky.; H. D. Clayton, Ala.; R. L. Henry, Texas; J. S. Little, Ark.; W. G. Brantlet, Ga.

Unconquered Land.—VI.

The Creed, the Ordinances and the Life—3.

We come now to the third and last item in the foregoing generalization of the things we are seeking to restore, namely:

The Life. The reader will bear in mind that in this group of articles we are seeking to indicate in what respects there is need for a clearer grasp of what is involved in the accepted principles of our movement, and for greater emphasis upon some of these neglected features. We think it would be generally admitted that of the three cardinal features of New Testament Christianity mentioned above, the last is the most important, and on that very account, perhaps, has received least emphasis, because less questioned. We have taken for granted, too much, that the people would understand the supremacy of life, as the final test of the value of the creed and the practical usefulness of the ordinances. If it has resulted that some among us have been vastly more concerned about the correctness of doctrinal opinions, even, than about the life which men live, it is time for a change of emphasis.

In what sense are we to understand the term life in the above formula? It ought to be understood, we should say, in its broadest New Testament sense—in the meaning in which Christ used the word when he said, "I came that they may have life, and may have it abundantly." This is our Lord's own statement of His mission to this world. He did not come to give the world a creed, ordinances, and doctrines, but to give men life, and the creed, the ordinances, the doctrines, are important only as means to that supreme end. Life, science tells us, is harmony with environment. The plant lives so long as it remains in harmony or vital touch with the soil in which it is planted, and with the sunshine, air and showers. So of animal life, even of man's physical life—it continues as long as the human body, through its organs, maintains harmony with its physical environment. When this is broken up, death ensues. What does Christ mean by the life which He gives to men, but that spiritual power and activity which come to man when he is brought into harmony with his spiritual environment, which is God, "in whom we live, and move and have our being," and "who is over all, and through all, and in all?"

All man's woes and spiritual poverty have come from his being out of union with God, who is his life-source. To restore that fellowship with God, that sin has broken, and so to bring men to newness of life—to the real life of the spirit—was the purpose of Christ's mission, and the mission of the church is to co-operate with Christ in carrying forward that divine enterprise. This life of God in the human soul, waking all the dormant powers of the spirit and attuning it with the infinite, is man's supreme need and God's supreme gift. Creeds, ordinances, systems of doctrine, organizations and institutions—all these, in the final analysis, must be tested by their relation to, and their bearing upon, this supreme consummation.

Any adequate definition of life, whether physical or spiritual, must include, not only the life-principle or power, but the activities growing out of such life-principle or power. Hence we speak of men living a good life or a bad life; an easy life, or a strenuous life. In the same way we speak of our social life, our political life, or our national life, meaning, in each case, the conduct, or actions, springing from interior life-forces. There is no way of judging the quality of this internal life so accurately as by the conduct or actions which spring from it. This is just as true of the church, and of each separate religious body, as it is of the individual. In each case, the law is, "By their fruits ye shall know them." Christ meant that his religion would be subjected to that test, and he asked for no other. Nor can we, if we would, substitute any other test of the real value of the truths we hold and teach. That is the crucial test by which many theories, systems and movements in the past have been tried and discarded. Others, no doubt, await the same inexorable doom.

Coming now from these general principles and truths to their application to our own religious movement, to what conclusions are we led as to the dominating life-force which animates it? There is much here to assure us and encourage us, even if there remain some things to be desired. The marked zeal and activity in winning men to Christ, and the remarkable success attending our efforts, argue the existence, within the body, of a good degree of that same life that marked the apostolic era. This identity of life with that which characterized the apostolic age is further attested by the fact that the same means, the same evangelistic program, used in the first century are employed by our evangelists in the present century. Only life begets life. If there were no spiritual life in our churches and ministers, there could be no spiritual children begotten; and unless it existed in a good degree, these children would not be multiplied so rapidly. This life further manifests itself in churches organized, in a growing ministry, and in ever-increasing activity in all lines of religious work.

Many other evidences could be given of the existence of a growing and expanding life in the churches of the Reformation, such as our missionary and benevolent work, and our educational interests. But these interests, especially the last mentioned, indicate a lack in the life—perhaps not in kind, but in quantity. It is the fullness of life, the abundant life, to use the word of Jesus, that is needed to supply all the varied needs of the church. But this means Christian growth, spiritual culture, the deepening of the spiritual life—and this is the work that needs new emphasis now, without any relinquishment of zeal in those directions which have made us strong and victorious. This enlargement of life will bring increased zeal in the work of missions, benevolence and education, a larger application of Christianity to the problems of our time and the needs of the world, and the highest types of individual Christian character.

National Christian Bible-School Association.

It will be remembered that at the Detroit Convention a mass meeting was held to consider the pressing problems of our Bible-School work, and to formulate plans for the organization of a National Association of Bible-School workers. At that time a plan of temporary organization was agreed upon and a Board of Managers composed of twenty-one members was appointed with power to take such steps as might be necessary, and to report at the St. Louis Convention in October, 1904, a plan for a permanent organization and a program for work.

This Board of Managers held its first meeting, in St. Louis, Feb. 11 and 12. In addition to the business sessions of the Board, three well attended public sessions were held, at which addresses on various phases of Bible-School work were delivered by visiting members of the Board, and by such eminent specialists as Prof. H. M. Hamill and W. C. Pearce.

The Board of Managers were not disposed to take up at this time the vexed question of graded lessons, but were unanimous in their agreement that the first thing was for the better training of teachers and a fuller use of those facilities which already exist for rendering Bible-Schools more effective as schools, without breaking with the International system of lessons.

Teaching is a function of the church not subordinate to preaching but co-ordinate with it. The ordinary church does not recognize its obligation to the fullest extent, nor does it take the same pains to provide good teaching as to provide good preaching. Our Bible colleges do not make any sufficient effort either to train teachers or to train preachers to be effective leaders in Bible-School work. Because the Bible-School is less effective than it should be as a school it is less effective than it should be as an evangelistic agency; and this is still true, although it is probably even now the most potent evangelistic agency in the world.

These considerations are not disparagements of the Bible-School; they are only plain statements of facts that everyone must recognize when the tremendous importance of thorough Bible teaching is compared with the inadequate methods which we are now employing in that department of work.

As the outcome of this meeting of the Board of Managers, the following statement was prepared and adopted as the #### Report of the Board.

'Realizing the immense importance and value of our Bible-School work, and recognizing also its present limitations and imperfections, the Board of Managers of the National Christian Bible-School Association has decided upon the following definite lines of work, and committees have been appointed to have oversight of these several activities:

1. An Information Committee is charged with the duty of collecting and disseminating all available information in regard to our organized Bible-School work in the various states; methods of work which have been tried, with notable success in local schools; the present facilities for normal courses and correspondence Bible courses; the best books on various phases of Bible-School work, etc.

2. A Committee on Reading Courses shall formulate and recommend definite courses of reading on Bible-School work, Bible study and the religious training of children, for Bible-School teachers, preachers and parents.

3. A Committee on Teacher Training and on Teaching, shall have oversight of such means as may be adopted for promoting the more adequate training of Bible-School teachers. This committee shall be expected to keep in touch with the teacher-training work which is now being done under the auspices of the International Sunday-school Association, and shall, if it is deemed wise, establish standards for teacher-training courses of our own, to be conducted either through local circles or by correspondence. It may also give attention to the preparation of supplemental courses for the pupils and to the preparation of examination questions with a view to giving of certificates or diplomas to pupils whose written answers show the required degree of excellence.

4. A Ways and Means Committee shall, by such methods as it may devise, secure the necessary funds to meet the expenses of the work of this Association. It is understood that the employment of a general secretary or superintendent to devote his whole time to these interests is contemplated.

5. A Committee on Organization shall prepare plans for the permanent organization of this body and its department of work, to be submitted to a mass meeting in connection with the General Convention of the Disciples of Christ at St. Louis, in October, 1904.

W. E. GARRISON.

G. P. COLER.

D. N. WETZEL.

Committee.

The following Committees were appointed:

Information: Robert M. Hopkins, Louisville, Ky.; P. Y. Pendleton, Cincinnati, Ohio; and T. J. Legg, Indianapolis.

Ways and Means: Howard C. Rash, Salina, Kan.; W. H. McClain, St. Louis; E. B. Scofield, Indianapolis.

Teacher-training: Prof. G. P. Coler, Ann Arbor; J. H. Hardin, Boston, Mass.; J. H. Bryan, Des Moines, Ia.; Burris A. Jenkins, Lexington, Ky.; B. H. Hayden, Bowmanville, Ont. Can.

Reading Courses: Charles M. Fillmore, Cincinnati; H. F. Davis, St. Louis; A. C. Roach, Kewanee, Ill.

Plan of Work and Organization: W. E. Garrison, St. Louis; Prof. G. P. Coler, Ann Arbor; and D. N. Wetzel, Footville, Wis.

The Religious Weekly.

Luminously suggestive is a recent editorial utterance of The Church Economist under the head of "The Denominational Weekly." The editor does not observe in this class of papers those signs of decay which are so gleefully hailed by those who do not know or care much about religious literature. He thinks that the papers show no lack of virility, but that in many cases the pastors are failing to make the best and wisest use of this powerful agency for good.

On that point, the relation of the pastor to the religious press, the Church Economist says some things which are well worth quoting and equally well worth thinking about:

Just here comes in the opportunity of the public-spirited minister. If he feels that it is a good thing for a denomination to have a reasonable and vigorous organ, let him help make it so. We venture to suggest, in a quiet aside, that he will not lose his reward.

Ministers can engage in works of journalistic supererogation in two ways. They can help the paper to get circulation in their congregations and they can report matters of local moment for the news columns.

"Oh, but this is puffery, self-advertising, etc." Well, that depends. Perhaps you remember the servant that didn't advertise or hustle but hid his talent in a napkin. This, however, is another story. What we wish to say just now is that the wide-awake, go-ahead minister can yoke up with his denominational organ to their mutual welfare, and can do so with a clear conscience.

That leads us to remark that the greatest and best journalist that ever lived could not go off by himself and make a good newspaper, because a newspaper is, more than almost any other human institution, a co-operative enterprise. Its character and strength are determined by the editor and the readers jointly. The two factors must work together, each helping the other, each depending upon the other.

And if, as the Church Economist says, the denominations should be prompt to use and support their respective denominational newspapers, how much more ought those who have at heart a cause which they believe transcends all denominationalism be eager to make the best possible use of the powerful agency of the press. We believe that the Disciples of Christ are doing so in increasing measure.

Editor's Easy Chair.

The wonders of Aladdin's lamp, are discounted by the marvels of modern forces. A little water in an expansive condition, properly confined by a machine that directs its expansiveness to the turning of wheels, above which are attached elongated sitting-rooms and parlors, kitchen, dining-room and sleeping apartments, two long lines of steel rails running parallel with each other, a sufficient amount of the coin of the realm, or its equivalent to make one welcome to these accommodations, and presto! the land of snow, ice and chilling winds fades from view, and you have left winter behind while you slept! The next day you are in early spring, you see the men in the field behind their plows and hear the notes of the early spring birds. The next day it is May, with its peach blossoms, its green grass and its balmy breath. Another day, southward of course, all the time, and you have a June climate with ripe strawberries, tomatoes, and other delicacies of summer. You seek the shade, and all around you are the palm, the palmetto and the pine, with roses blooming in the gardens, and orange groves laden with their golden fruit. What did Aladdin's lamp, with the two genii which it commanded, that was more wonderful than this? But we get used to these modern miracles, and regard them as commonplace; whereas if the real facts and achievements of our day had been foreseen and foretold by some prophet of a century ago, he would have been regarded either as insane, or at best as an idle dreamer.

It is interesting to note, as one passes southward, the changes in scenery, climate, soil, occupations, style of architecture, manner of life, etc. As we were hurrying through a section of Middle Tennessee, a young man from Chicago, looking out of the window through the smoke of his cigar, remarked that he didn't see what people could do to make a living in such a country. "Young man," replied the conductor, with a pronunciation that marked him as a native of that region, "You don't seem to know that you are passing right now through the garden spot of the United States! I know what I am saying, for I have been all over this country." The young Chicagoan looked skeptical. We said to the conductor, "You were born in this region, were you not?" "Yes, sir," was his prompt reply. We quoted Walter Scott's lines: "Breathes there a man with soul so dead?" etc., but added our hearty agreement with him that this was at least one of the garden spots of the world. What a blessed thing it is that the inhabitants, and especially the native population, of every section of the country, believe that their particular "neck of the woods" is the most desirable place in which to live, all things considered! How much wiser are they than the exceptional few who spend their lives roaming around the world in search of some ideal country which they never find! As we pass on into Alabama, the negroes are plowing in the fields, and the smell of burning brush and corn-stalks is in the soft spring air. In northern Florida the peach trees are blooming, the sun shines warmer, and we find the city of Jacksonville basking in a summer climate.

Two years had passed since our last visit to Jacksonville—the gateway to Florida—and these have been decisive years as to the future of that city. The question which some were asking two years ago, would the city recover from its great fire and go forward to a future of increasing greatness and prosperity? has been answered in the new Jacksonville that has arisen out of the ashes of the old, and in the increased volume of business which the city is now doing. The churches there seem to have shared in this rejuvenation. This is particularly true of the First Christian Church, of which J. T. Boone is the pastor. When we passed through the city before it was meeting in temporary quarters ill-adapted to its purpose, and was struggling with the problem of building on the foundation which had been laid, on their elegant lot, a stone structure adapted to the uses of the modern church. With the aid of their brethren from abroad through the American Christian Missionary Society and the assistance of citizens of Jacksonville outside their own membership, but especially by the liberality and unusual sacrifices of its own members, that building is now so far completed as to permit it to be used. The Sunday-school room has been used for a good while, and a few months ago they moved into the main auditorium. The doors, the sliding partition between the Sunday-school room and auditorium, the upstairs rooms for the social life of the church, are yet unfinished, and the building could not be used with comfort except in a mild climate like this. But it is an elegant white stone building, with one of the best auditoriums we have ever spoken in. We remained with them over Lord's day, and preached morning and evening to audiences that filled the main auditorium. As we sat on the pulpit, looking over the fine audience containing visitors from many states, and noted the unfinished doors, the rough board sliding partition, these seemed to us to make a mute but eloquent plea for further assistance from the brotherhood at large. It will require about $3,000 to complete the building. They were compelled to build not for themselves alone, but for the hundreds of visitors that meet with them during the winter and spring. We have never spoken to a more responsive audience, and greatly enjoyed the fellowship of the brethren there during the two days we were there. Bro. Boone has wrought a notable work and is appreciated by the church and community.

As many of our brethren know, we have a second congregation in Jacksonville, known as the Church Street Christian Church, of which Bro. T. H. Blenus is pastor. It occupies a small frame building on a leased lot,—leased with the privilege of buying—located five blocks from the First Church. The church has forty or fifty members, and was also burned out, with its pastor, at the time of the great fire. Brother Blenus called on us at the hotel where we stopped and we had a long interview on the situation. Our advice to him was to at once take steps to bring himself and congregation in accord with the brethren of the state and of the brotherhood at large, by inviting representative brethren of the state and of our home missionary and Church Extension boards to visit Jacksonville, look over the whole field, and advise him what course to pursue, and for him and his brethren to act on that advice. There is plenty of room in Jacksonville for two congregations, representing the plea of the Disciples of Christ, if properly located and working in harmony. Brother Blenus expressed himself as being favorable to that plan of procedure, and as being unwilling to continue to work under what he felt was a misconception of his spirit and aim. We promised to do what we could to bring about a better adjustment and understanding between him and the brotherhood. Brethren of the First Church promised, in case of such adjustment, to do all they could to assist in building up a second church in the city. We have thought it due alike to Brother Blenus and to the brethren of the First Church, that the brotherhood should know these facts, since the brethren everywhere have manifested so much interest in the success of our work in Jacksonville.

But here we are at Coconut Grove, seven miles south of Miami, the southern terminus of the Florida East Coast Railway, 366 miles south of Jacksonville, and a mile south of the village of Coconut Grove, on a pine ridge overlooking Bay Biscayne, whose calm emerald waters, seen through the tall, straight pines, present a scene of repose and restfulness which it would be difficult to excel. Here, in the home of our old-time friend, Mrs. Florence Powers Haden, whose honored husband, Capt. John J. Haden, has been mustered out of service here and called to higher service beyond since our last visit, we hope to rest a while from the rigors of winter, if not from tasks of pen, and recuperate in vital force for the work that lies ahead of us.

Notes and Comments.

Sometimes the "intelligent compositor" makes a typo-graphical error which is not all a mistake. In an article in a recent issue of this paper the writer meant to speak of the influence of the church upon "legislation, the press and education." The printers put "purse" for "press." Well, the church ought by all proper means to control the press and make it truly an agency for enlightenment and an instrument of civilization, but ought it not also to have more influence over the purse than it has? We think it ought. It ought to teach men to spend their money for the things of real value, and that means for the advancement of the kingdom of God. It ought to teach them not to worship the God of Mammon, nor to worship God and Mammon, but to worship God with mammon. We still stand with the compositor on that point.

Was Jesus a carpenter? According to Mark 6:3, the people said of him on one occasion, "Is not this the carpenter, the son of Mary?" The parallel passage in Matthew (13:55) says: "Is not this the carpenter's son." Justin Martyr says that Jesus "was deemed a carpenter, for he was in the habit of making plows and yokes." A writer in the Craftsman suggests that this was perhaps the work of a farmer rather than of a professional carpenter. The argument is, as Bacon would say, "rather ingenious than substantial," but it is not without interest for it calls attention to the method which our Lord employed in his teaching and to his use of familiar things in enforcing spiritual truths. If, in his illustrations and parables, he showed more familiarity with the details of one calling than of all others, it may be agreed that this was the occupation which he followed in his early years. The writer above mentioned says:

Jesus in his sayings shows familiarity with domestic, commercial, professional and agricultural life. The grinding of grain, the making of bread, the mending of clothes, the washing of dishes, are used by him as illustrations. He knows the ways of the banker and the money lender, of judges, lawyers, policemen, criminals and physicians. But the references to these things are rather those of an observer from the outside than of an expert from the inside.

But when we come to the farmer's, fruit grower's and shepherd's life we have details that show the expert. The works of sowing and harvesting are described with minuteness. So is the work of the vineyard. So is especially the work of the shepherd. Furthermore, he knows the signs of the weather. In fact, everything indicates that Jesus in his early life had kept sheep and worked on a grain-growing farm, and also in the vineyards and about fruit trees, especially the fig.

On the other hand, allusions to building operations of any kind are almost entirely wanting. In only one place does he offer any comment upon the work of architecture. That is when he goes forth from the magnificent temple of Herod at Jerusalem and replies to the invitations to admire it with a prediction of its overthrow. He tells of the building of a tower, but only to point the moral of counting the cost in advance, lest it be left unfinished. In the parable of the houses built on the rock and on the sand no details are given of the work of man. Attention is fixed upon the forces of nature, which preserved one house and destroyed the other.

As Seen From the Dome

By F. D. Power

Our neighboring city of Baltimore has been sorely stricken. The hearts of all men have gone out to her in sympathy during the past week. The glare of her burning buildings by night and the smoke by day, have been seen far and wide. It is not in the power of language to describe the calamity which has overtaken her people. It is not measured by millions. It is one of those catastrophes which simply dazes and overwhelms. Our peaceful Washington, Sunday was disturbed by reports that the monumental city was burning, and then came the extras thick and fast attempting to tell the sad story, how the heart of the city was in flames and the fire-fighters were powerless to cope with it. For twenty-eight hours the flames had their way through one of the world's greatest marts of trade and at last were checked by an army of firemen from many cities aided by a foul-smelling and muddy little stream known as "Jones Falls" which has always been thought an eye-sore and a disgrace to the city and which to-day deserves the most splendid and enduring of all its monuments. The end of the horror shows seventy-five blocks burned over, or a hundred and forty acres, and over $100,000,000 gone up in smoke, and a city of over half a million staggered as by the blow of a giant.

This ranks among the great conflagrations of history. We think of the burning of Rome and of London of Moscow, and of Chicago. Any reader of John Evelyn's quaint and delightful diaries will remember his story of the Great Plague and the Great Fire. It was in September 1666. The Great Plague broke out in December, 1664, and ravaged the city through the year 1665 and until September 1666, destroying 100,000 people in London alone, and then came the Great Fire which raged from September 2-6, which began in a baker's shop in Pudding Lane and destroyed 89 churches, including St. Paul's and 13,200 houses, laying waste 400 streets, covering 438 acres; and rendering 200,000 people homeless. "Oh the miserable and calamitous spectacle! such as happily the world had not seen the like since the foundation of it, nor be outdone till the universal conflagration of it. All the skie was of a fiery aspect, like the top of a burning oven, and the light scene above forty miles round about for many nights. God grant mine eyes may never behold the like, who now saw above 10,000 houses all in one flame; the noise and cracking and thunder of the impetuous flames, the shrieking of women and children, the hurry of people, the fall of Towers, Houses, and Churches, was like a hideous storm, and the air all about so hot and inflamed that at the last one was not able to approach it, so that they were forced to stand still and let the flames burn on, which they did for neere two miles in length and one in breadth. The clouds also of smoke were dismall and reached upon computation neer 56 miles in length."

So writes Evelyn. The United States holds the record for destructive fires in modern times. New York in 1835 had 52 acres burned over with a loss of $15,000,000; and ten years later 300 acres were laid waste at a loss of $7,500,000. San Francisco in 1851 suffered a ten million dollar blaze. Portland, Maine, in 1866, lost by fire over half the city, and Boston in 1872 had 65 acres of brick and stone business houses destroyed, valued at $75,000,000. Seattle in 1899 suffered a loss of $30,000,000, and Jacksonville in 1901 had a fire which cost $12,000,000. Chicago in 1871 had the greatest, when Mrs. Leary's cow caused a conflagration covering 2,124 acres entailing a loss of many lives and $106,000,000 in money. That was the year I graduated at Bethany and I well recall the thrill of horror which went through the land. Since then there has been no such fire as we have seen from the dome in our sister city forty miles away.

It has always been a passion with me to run to a fire. If the bells ring when I am in the pulpit a mighty impulse comes over me to follow the engine with the other small boys. It may be a little streak of the old Aryan blood that calls for the recognition of the Agni of our forefathers. Any way I went over to see the stricken city in the hands of this mighty force of nature. It was a sickening spectacle to view the ruins and an appalling one to witness the still raging conflagration. No words can picture it. All business suspended and the streets thronged with thousands of anxious people. Block after block, where once stood palatial, up-to-date, so-called fire-proof structures, showing nothing but a chaos of smoking ruins, twisted wires, warped beams and tumbling walls. A great metropolis desolate. A mighty people paralyzed. The whistle of engines, the thunder of falling walls, detonations of dynamite, roar of the flames, great columns of smoke rolling up toward the heavens with vivid tongues of fire leaping as with an air of triumph from the gloom, the sun like a great red ball as seen through the smoke, the ceaseless throngs of silent troubled faces—all united to make a thrilling and harrowing scene that could never be forgotten. It was a battle royal between nature and human agencies.

We hurried along the densely packed streets. At every opening to the fire zone stood a police officer or a soldier with gun and bayonet. We viewed the fireswept territory from every corner. Scores of engines were still playing upon the ruins, but both men and machines seemed worn out with the long struggle. We made our way past the post-office and city hall and across the despised little sewer-like stream known as Jones Falls, into Old Baltimore, through the Ghetto and past the old Shot Tower, the thickly settled eastern part of the city toward which the fire was making gigantic strides to lick up the homes of our people. Here was "the firing line." A hundred fire companies were fighting to keep the destroyer on the western side of the dirty little creek which is about one hundred feet in width. Great lumber yards lay along this stream and beyond them the thousands of homes. This was strictly the last ditch, Hongomont, "Little Round Top," and unless the awful element was beaten here, the city was indeed doomed. Again and again, the fearful heat or flying fire brands driven across the Falls ignited buildings and lumber piles. Furious hand to hand encounters occurred which fortunately were won by the firemen. For hours the fire-fighters watched every ember. Bucket brigades were formed to prevent the flames from leaping across the little stream and men with hose were throwing great streams everywhere on the lumber piles. We stood upon the lumber and watched until it seemed as if no power on earth could hinder the onslaught of the fierce element, but at last it yielded, and the rest of the city was saved.

The lessons of this calamity are many. There are reasons for thankfulness that it came on Sunday, when the section which fell a prey to the flames was depopulated, and that with all this vast destruction of property not a single life was lost. Chicago's recent theatre horror cost nearly seven hundred lives, but here there is not one person even dangerously injured. Not a single home was burned. Merchant princes lost millions and thousands of men and women are out of employment, but not one life is sacrificed, nor one man, woman or child made homeless.

We see how important after all is man in the contest of natural forces. With all his genius for invention by such conditions he is baffled. He builds his cities: the earth trembles and Lisbon and Charleston yield before it; the volcano pours forth its lava floods, and Herculaneum and Pompeii and St. Pierre are buried; cyclone strikes, and St. Louis and Kansas City are helpless under its blow; flood comes, and Johnstown and Galveston are swept away; the blizzard smites with its icy breath and New York and Washington are powerless in its grasp; the flames are let loose, and Rome and London centuries ago, and Chicago and Baltimore with all our modern de-

(Continued on page 235.)

The Dignity of the Missionary Enterprise.

Richard W. Wallace.

He who enters the school of the Great Teacher not only has as his fellow-disciples the best and noblest of earth, but he also adopts, as the paramount enterprise of his life, the most important work to which men have ever been called upon to devote their attention and their talents. There is that adhering to the mission of the Christian appealing to him as being worthy of his highest thought and most consecrated effort.

The true dignity of the missionary enterprise—which is but another expression for the Christian's mission—is impressed upon us when we consider the fact that it derives its chief authority from the will of Christ. For the Christian there is no incentive to action half so great as the simple commandment of his Lord.

One of our own preachers has truly said: "Although the subjects of this empire have never seen the face of their Emperor, they face his presence; they hear in the quiet sanctuary of the soul the music of his voice; they respond to his commands as soldiers to the blast of bugle, or the roll of drum, they are sustained by his spirit, and count it joy to die in his service." It was of this enterprise that Jesus spoke when he said, "All authority hath been given unto me in heaven and on earth. Go ye, therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit."

Only by bringing to all men the good news of salvation, are we making possible the accomplishment of the purpose of Christ. His coming into the world; his life of suffering and sacrifice; his death of unequalled ignominy find their explanation in the great commission.

And if our Lord commands us to undertake the conquest of the world, our hearts respond with gladness to his injunction. The Christian conscience—the voice of God in the soul—makes missionary work a necessity. The demand within is as imperative as is that from without. It is as true of Christians to-day as it was in the apostolic age that "we cannot but speak forth the things which we have both seen and heard." If we preach the gospel, we have nothing to glory of. On the other hand, necessity is laid upon us.

The essential dignity of the missionary enterprise is perceived again when we think of the character of its aim. Although the heralds of the gospel enter lands where they are not welcome and seek to bring their message to hearts which are not open to its reception, yet they go as friends and not as enemies. Love—the noblest of motives—is the constraining influence of their lives. The gospel which they proclaim is "profitable unto all things having promise of the life which now is, and of that which is to come." In his "Outline of Christian Theology," Dr. Clarke says, "So far as religion becomes a vital and uplifting experience, it becomes such because the living God himself meets the religious nature of man and manifests himself to it according to man's ability to receive him." It is the glory of the religion of Christ that it comes to men who are seeking God, "if haply they might feel after him and find him," with the object of their anxious quest—the revelation of God's true nature, and the assurance that "He is not far from every one of us."

This beneficent mission of the Christian is world-wide in its scope. Herein is seen another indication of its greatness. Paul declared that the reason for his not being "ashamed of the gospel of Christ" was that it is "the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." The servant of Christ is called upon to give himself to the doing of a work which concerns itself not with a certain portion of men only, but with the whole world. If his Master declared that if he were "lifted up from the earth," his magnetism would be boundless, the true Christian would fain convey to all a knowledge of this love divine and of its crowning proof.

Surely, also, that is an enterprise clothed with supreme dignity, upon which the favor of God has ever rested, and to whose advocacy the noblest and most heroic of men have gladly consecrated their lives. It is to the support of no insignificant work that the churches are called upon to rally on the first Lord's day in March. The evangelization and conversion of the world is the paramount enterprise of the age.

Greater Things Than These.

By W. A. Bellamy.

Is it not imperative that we do greater things than these? We may congratulate ourselves that we have done fairly well. You say, "Is not $200,000 a large offering for foreign missions?" That is very good and a glorious harvest of eternal souls will be reaped with its wise distribution. But how much better ought we to do when we consider that three-fourths of the members of the Christian Church are doing nothing and many of those who are doing something are doing very little. A few large-hearted people are giving generously, while the many are giving a mere pittance. Among those who do give, what, think you, is the average given for all missionary purposes? Just one penny a week. We can't palm off on the Lord the widow's two mites, for he knows where we dwell, how we live, what we eat and what we put on.

We ought to do greater things than these because we're amply able. We often plead poverty; yet, if the truth were known, would not the shameful fact be revealed that at the glad Christmas time more money was spent for needless things, for luxuries, for worthless pretty nothings by the Christian people than was given all last year to evangelize the world? It is estimated that $38,000,000 are laid away annually by the Disciples of Christ after all living expenses are paid. We cannot worship God and mammon, but we can worship God with our mammon.

We ought to do greater things than these because of the greatness of our plea. What a noble plea we have: The restoration of primitive Christianity, the returning to Scriptural names, Scriptural practices, Scriptural guidance, and the union of God's people. Do not these worthy themes call forth our heartiest support?

What do ye more than others? The Old South Church (Congregational), Boston, Mass., recently took its annual offering for foreign missions which amounted to more than $9,000. Last year the St. Bartholomew Church (Episcopalian), New York City, gave $280,000 for missions. It spent only about $34,000 on its local work. That is, it gave more than eight times as much for missions as it spent on itself. Almost all our churches spend ten times as much on themselves as they give to missions. Some of them spend four or five times as much for music as they give for missions.

We ought to do greater things than these out of gratitude. Are we to be the recipients of all God's blessings, are we to enjoy his boundless love, his matchless grace, his tenderest mercy, and do little or nothing in return?

I have heard of misers. I knew one once, a mean, little, shriveled-up soul he had, his fingers like the tentacles of a devil-fish, always taking in, greedy, grasping, accumulating, but never giving out. Yet there is something worse than a money miser, and that's a spiritual miser. A man who comes to the church and enjoys the services, takes in the gospel with its message of love and peace and good will, takes in the blessed news of a Savior born who can save from sin and redeem from death, the shedding of whose blood will atone for his sins, takes in the thrilling stories of the blood of martyrs shed for their Christ and the stirring tales of the adventures of missionaries who have left wife, children, home, friends, to carry the joyous gospel to them that sit in darkness, takes in all of this, and yet in his little, niggardly soul gives out nothing in way of service, of love, of talent, of money. What base ingratitude is that! In view of the untold blessings in a Christian land, is a quarter of a million too much to ask? Let us make a noble, earnest, persistent, faithful effort to do greater things for our Master to the end that the gracious gospel may be heralded "to every creature," that "all may know him from the least to the greatest," that "the knowledge of the Lord may cover the earth as the waters cover the sea."

The Christian Church in China

W. Remfry Hunt

The present status of the Christian Church in the far East, its general standing with the native faiths, and its relations to the home churches total up into a volume of interest and variety compared with which the early days of Christianity are as promise to fulfillment and as shadow to substance.

Staggered at the audacity of the Christian propaganda, and indignant at its universal claims, those who were once its coldest critics and fiercest assailants are now won to admit the fact and force of its divine origin. Even among the most conservative devotees of pagan religious science are those who, if not arrested and fascinated by its doctrines, declare its fruits to be in harmony with the "will of heaven" and the highest ethical teaching of men.

The present attitude of Chinese newspapers towards Christianity is diametrically opposite to what it was before the rise and fall of the "Boxer" movement. A recent leading article in the vernacular press, comparing the religions of the east and west says: "These nations are opulent, their armies powerful, their populace well instructed, and wealth abounds; and all this without any idea of dependence upon gods and ghosts. . . . Who can really know anything about these gods and ghosts? What proof is there in prayer to them? . . . . Westerners with their science investigate everything to its ultimate causes."

Was it not China's ablest statesman, H. E. Chang Chih-Tung, who recently sent out a circular remonstrating with a patriotic league known as "The Shanghai Parliament," ended his warning with these words: "Don't cause our China to become like Judaea."

These represent but a fragment of what is expressed day by day in the street, court, temple, school, and tea-shop alike concerning the new life which is showing itself even among the debris of fallen systems and dead religions. It is the consensus of opinion among the leading missionaries that at no previous time has the mind of the Chinese nation, in its best representatives, been so accessible to instruction as to the character, aims and exhibits of Christianity as at the present hour.

Aided by national, civil and moral ministrants there has been a peril lest the church should forget its high spiritual place and its temporal limitations. Lured to the dignity of "official status" and imperial recognition, the Romanists have well nigh gone to ruin on the quicksands of so-called temporal power. The lesson, warning and demonstration is our endowment.

Not less interesting and instructive has been the flirtation of the Confucian coterie with the missionaries. "Come into an alliance with us and we will give Jesus a place among the immortals," is the oriental offer, couched in the most chaste and condescending language! From all over the land come the most inviting calls to the missionaries to teach in the new schools, control new schemes and push new industries.

The work before the missionaries in China to-day is no mere "excursionist business." We need and demand the strongest and best equipped men. A merely pious man on pagan battlefields is like a western yacht in an eastern typhoon. It needs the fire of spiritual life and the dynamic and moving power of knowledge to enable a man or woman to be a burning as well as a shining light in these nightlands of heathendom.

It has been asked, and not prematurely, "Will there be danger lest the Chinese churches may develop forms of organization with too much of orientalism and too little of New Testament precedent?" This is a very vital question. While we cannot expect the new converts to apprehend at a bound all that is required of them as disciples of the Lord Jesus Christ, it is still true that they must be taught sincerity, righteousness and the beauty of speaking the truth. Under the recent baptism of blood and fire the church did not come out of the catechism unscathed, but it did emerge purified of much of its dross.

The new impulse which is now energizing the entire missionary enterprises of the church is surely the inspiration of the Spirit of God. What is the significance of the new movement among the missionaries in China calling in a united effort among all the Christian homelands for continued and united prayer that in the "three years' enterprise" the entire missionary force in the field will be doubled? This is surely a grand and glorious purpose, and one which is a worthy crown with which to greet the first centenary of missionary achievement in Sinim.

Viewed from the high vantage ground of the field of missionary conflict, it is universally agreed that the work of the evangelization of China, Japan, Manchuria, Mongolia, Korea and isolated Thibet must be regarded chiefly as an Asiatic enterprise. In order to bring about this splendid consummation, the native church must have leaders. Several wise and able native leaders could at this present moment, if they were in evidence, render noble and lasting service to the cause by emphasizing the necessity of good citizenship, and proving to the government that they are not "dangerous revolutionary cult."

After a century of heroic effort in the hardest and costliest fighting-ground of all the Christian centuries, there stands to-day a church of two hundred thousand native Christians, pleading, praying and looking for a man—an apostle, born of their own people, who will champion the faith in China as did Ulfilas, Augustine, Columba and Boniface, whose service among the Goths, Saxons and Angles supplied the western world with its basic principles of religion, prestige and civilization.

The field of operations in China is unlimited. Four hundred millions of people are about to embrace a new religion. The attitude of the imperial government is becoming more and more tolerant, and this by conviction rather than by force. The development of the internal resources of the country is aiding its external influence. The whole empire is being thrown open by railways. Science is utilizing the wing of fire and showing the masses that what they worshiped as a god is now their letter-carrier. International relations are better understood. The mutual relations of missionary, merchant and magistrate are clearer and afford the most efficient guarantee against commercial antagonisms, political jealousies and religious animosities.

"Ply the lever, pioneers!
Many a waiting angel cheers;
Christ above is interceding,
Here the Holy Ghost is pleading,
And the promise of Jehovah
Stands upon his blessed book!"

FOUND AT 70 The Power of Food.

An Illinois lady who never knew what health was until she reached her 70th year, presents an unusually convincing case of the power of proper food. She says:

"I am 74 years old this fall, and I never had good health that I can remember since I was a child until I commenced to use Grape-Nuts four years ago.

"From the very first I could feel a vast improvement, and now in four years I have gained so that I do all my own work, and feel I cannot say too much in favor of Grape-Nuts and what this grand food has done for me as old as I am.

"I have recommended Grape-Nuts to several and they all have been benefited by it." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

The power of proper food (which means food that the stomach will digest and at the same time yields the all necessary nutriment) is almost unlimited, and that's the reason 10 days' trial of Grape-Nuts often works a wonder.

Look for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville" in each package.

Opening Doors.

By Anna M. Gordon.

Three weeks ago came an urgent call to attend a woman in a town twelve miles away. The history of the case was pathetic. Six long days of pain and suffering without any intermission and I felt I must go although it meant much physical discomfort not only to myself, but to my "wee daughter" who is always by my side.

We started in our tonga, and after a drive of three hours we saw the outline of the houses in the distance. As we neared the village I left the tonga and little Doris under a grove of trees and having crossed the river in a boat was soon at the side of my patient. I had to find my way through about fifty men in the first room and then met the inquiring gaze of a dozen women before I reached the sick one. The room in which she lay was dark and dismal, so dark that I could not see her face—there was no window in that heavy mud wall and my heart went out to that little woman who was in such great pain. I felt her warm hand and knew by her flagging pulse and weakened frame that there was no time to lose. She was quickly carried to an adjoining room and we did our work. A child was born, a beautiful boy who never breathed. The woman was relieved. The last directions were given and then we walked out to face the anxious crowd—such a sea of faces. The whole town had gathered to hear the result, for the patient was the daughter of the leading man in their midst. It required nerve to do the work inside and it required nerve to find our way out of that crowd, but they treated me with great respect and one man of the town thanked me publicly in a loud voice for having hurried to render assistance. A fee of twenty-five rupees was handed to me, for the family was wealthy.

It was refreshing to meet Doris who had waited so longingly for my return on the other side of the river. But she was tired and hungry. It was near noon so we started for a ride of two miles to our out-station and had our breakfast at Pendridih. I rested here for an hour, for I was very exhausted after the morning's work. Just as I was stepping into the tonga to go home there came another call to see a woman in a similar condition of distress. Unconsciously I sighed at the thought of delay and further exertion. One of our Christian men standing by said that it was a cause for gratitude that I was sent for to this house as the woman was a bigoted Hindu and had tried in vain to get aid from her own people.

As I sat in the tonga going over the rough roads homeward, I pondered the remark of that Christian who expressed gratitude at the open doors on account of the help we can render physically. Yes, indeed, I praise God that with the help of Western science we can open heathen doors. I praise

God that the opportunities are so great and that there are now "no doors closed except by our own hands, no limiting horizon of vision except to eyes that are shut or short sighted." But if God writes opportunity on one side of these doors he writes responsibility on the other side. In what spirit shall we go up to enter in. With oneness of heart and lovingness of thought and word let us enter these open doors in India. Let the enlightened ones in Western lands give of their means and sympathy. Let us who work give of our strength and lives, till that great day comes when every one shall know Jesus from the least to the greatest in this beautiful but darkened land of India.

Mungeli C., P., India.

Books Worth Reading.

By W. T. Moore.

Shall we encourage the reading of our own literature? Perhaps some one will answer this query by saying that our own literature is not worth reading. I have heard this cheap wail until I am somewhat tired of it. Considering the origin and progress of the Disciples, it is rather remarkable that they have produced a literature as respectable as that which now exists.

The time was when the books that are worth while of their making could be counted on the fingers. But that day is past. We have not yet reached the scholarly period, where writers produce works of permanent value in certain special departments of literature. But for freshness, vigor, insight and practical value some of the books written by Disciples will compare favorably with any books of their kind to be found anywhere. For instance, "The Life of John Smith," by the late John Augustus Williams, is a classic among biographical works. It is Boswellian in style, and is, in some respects, as entertaining as a novel. "The Life of W. K. Pendleton," by F. D. Power, is another example of interesting and valuable biography. The best commendation of the book is in the fact that it enables every old student of Bethany College to live over the scenes of his college days. It is a lifelike picture of "days that are no more," and yet of days that may be revived by reading this volume.

It also has a value for all classes of readers. W. K. Pendleton was a typical man, representing a class which is rapidly passing away. He was an old time gentleman. He belonged to a school which will soon live only in memory. Modern commercialism is rapidly destroying the possibility of the growth of gentlemen of the Pendleton type. Certainly the least we can do is to enshrine their memories in books so that our children may not entirely lose that ideal of manhood.

Another book of a different character is not only worth reading but worth study. I refer to "Helps to Faith," by J. H. Garrison. It is not altogether easy reading, if one will read the book so that it will be profitable. Its chapters are short, but in this age of rapid transit, both in matter and in kind, the shortness of its chapters will not be generally regarded as an unpardonable fault. But these short chapters are decidedly suggestive. They do not exhaust the subject, nor the reader's patience. They leave room for thinking, and certainly stimulate a very high class of thinking. It is a book to be read chapter at a time, with a considerable interval between. It not only supplies helps to faith, but also helps to profitable reflection.

THE OLD PLEA.

He "Didn't Know It Was Loaded."

The coffee drinker seldom realizes that coffee contains the drug Caffeine, a serious poison to the heart and nerves, thereby causing many other forms of disease noticeably dyspepsia.

"I was a lover of coffee and used it for many years and did not realize the bad effects I was suffering from its use.

"At first I was troubled with indigestion, but did not attribute the trouble to the use of coffee, but thought it arose from other causes. With these attacks I had sick headache, nausea and vomiting. Finally my stomach was in such a condition I could scarcely retain any food.

"I consulted a physician; was told all my troubles came from indigestion, but was not informed what caused the indigestion, so I kept on with the coffee and kept on with the troubles too, and my case continued to grow worse from year to year until it developed into chronic diarrhea, nausea and severe attacks of vomiting so I could keep nothing on my stomach and became a mere shadow, reduced from 159 to 128 pounds.

"A specialist informed me I had a very severe case of catarrh of the stomach, which had got so bad he could do nothing for me, and I became convinced my days were numbered.

"Then I chanced to see an article setting forth the good qualities of Postum and explaining how coffee injures people, so I concluded to give Postum a trial. I soon saw the good effects—my headaches were less frequent, nausea and vomiting only came at long intervals and I was soon a changed man, feeling much better.

"Then I thought I could stand coffee again, but as soon as I tried it my old troubles returned and I again turned to Postum. Would you believe it I did this three times before I had sense enough to quit coffee for good and keep on with the Postum; the result is I am now a well man with no more headaches, sick stomach or vomiting and have already gained back to 147 pounds." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Look in each package for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

The Sunday-School.

Feb. 28.

HEARERS AND DOERS OF THE WORD.
—Matt. 7:21-29.

Memory Verses 24, 25.

Golden Text: Be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only.—James 1:22.

The Period of Organization.

The first period of the Galilean ministry of Jesus has been largely preparatory. It has been devoted to miscellaneous preaching through the cities and towns of Galilee, the announcement of certain fundamental principles, and the working of miracles which gave him wide reputation and popularity among the people. There had as yet been scarcely any attempt to gather a body of disciples, except the four who had been called from their boats by the Sea of Galilee, and there was nothing which could in any sense be called an organized movement. We come now to what may be called the beginning of organization. It is marked by the calling of twelve men (including the original four) who are to be the chosen companions of Jesus through the remainder of his ministry, and the medium through which his teaching is to be communicated to the world; by an increased announcement upon the kingdom; and by a clear announcement of the spiritual qualifications which are essential to participation in it.

The Calling of the Twelve.

The calling of the Twelve (Mark 3:13-19; Luke 6:12-16) was the overt act which marked the beginning of this new period. Henceforth the most important part of our Lord's work was to be the training of the Twelve. He knew that his own earthly ministry would be brief, and that he must rely upon these men to carry his message to the world. The two years of their discipleship had need to be crowded full of the wisest teaching and the most apt eager learning to fit them for this great task.

The Sermon on the Mount.

The Sermon on the Mount, the most wonderful and comprehensive statement of moral and religious truths ever uttered, was delivered shortly after the calling of the Twelve, and was addressed primarily to them. It is a sermon which defies analysis, not because it is disorderly in its arrangement, but because it is so comprehensive and concise. It states all the fundamental principles which Jesus came to teach: the paradoxes of the spiritual life in the beatitudes; the true nature of righteousness; the importance of a right heart as distinguished from mere perfunctory correctness of conduct; the duty of love to all men as the mainspring of all right conduct; the relation of men to God; the way to pray; the comparative value of things material and things spiritual; and fruit-bearing as the criterion by which men are to be judged.

The Test of Discipleship.

In the closing paragraph of the Sermon on the Mount, we find the words of the lesson. Their purpose was to assure his hearers that if they wished to follow him on the basis of the principles which he had been laying down, no half-way allegiance and no mere nominal discipleship would be permitted. It was not enough that they should admit the truth of what he said. It was not enough that they should be willing to hail him as Lord and concede all that he claimed in regard to himself. There must be an actual embodiment of these principles in conduct. Perhaps some of his hearers, who sat under the spell of that wonderful discourse, were ready on the spot to acclaim him as Lord. To such he would say: Think a moment. It is not enough to feel a momentary enthusiasm. It is not enough to confess with the lips a faith which does not take hold of the life. The kind of discipleship that is needed is the kind that is strong enough to build on. Faith is not an ornament or a luxury; it is a foundation, a necessity.

The Two Builders.

And then, to illustrate, Jesus told the story

Aching Joints

In the fingers, toes, arms, and other parts of the body, are joints that are inflamed and swollen by rheumatism—that acid condition of the blood which affects the muscles also.

Sufferers' dread to move, especially after sitting or lying long, and their condition is commonly worse in wet weather.

"It has been a long time since we have been without Hood's Sarsaparilla. My father thinks he could not do without it. He has been troubled with rheumatism since he was a boy, and Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine he can take that will enable him to take his place in the field." Miss ADA DOTY, Sidney, Iowa.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills

Remove the cause of rheumatism—no outward application can. Take them of the two builders. One built his house on the sand, or without a foundation, as Luke says. It was a good-looking house, no doubt. No fault was found with its symmetry or its decorations. The builder congratulated himself that he had gotten such a showy house at so little expense. The other builder spent more money on the foundation of his house and less on the frescoing. It took more expense and more effort to make his house look as well as his neighbor's. But presently a storm came. The houses were in the valley. The rain came with tropical violence. The little stream that ran through the valley became a torrent. The first house was swept from its frail underpinning. The second stood safe upon its firm foundation.

Faith and Life.

So, said Jesus, faith is like a foundation. A house cannot stand without it, and it is of no value unless a house is built upon it. One may, under the spur of sudden impulse, or from prudential motives, or through mere compliance with current customs, profess to be a follower of Christ and hail him as Lord. But the only way to make that faith count is to build it into life and to build life upon it. That may require some radical changes in the plans of our lives, for the house must fit the foundation. The changes may cost us something. But the result is a life established upon a foundation which cannot be moved, even in the day of storm.

One of the World's Vexed Problems

Solved by
Mina Thomas' splendid work:

"The Reality and Evil of Spiritualism."

This great book, the result of years of labor and research, with its wealth of information, will prove invaluable to the student, while it furnishes the church the most powerful weapon with which to assail Spiritualism, the most dangerous foe to Christianity. An extensive reading of the book is highly recommended by the following distinguished clergymen of St. Louis:

Rev. Dr. John Mathews, Rev. Dr. W. W. Boyd,
Rev. Dr. W. F. McMurray, Rev. Dr. F. W. Luce,
Rev. Dr. Michael Burnham, Rev. M. Rhodes,
Rev. Dr. J. H. Garrison, Editor Christian-Evangelist.

Retail price, silk cloth, $2.00
Buckram, $2.50 Half Morocco, $3.00
Agents wanted. Liberal discounts given.

Thomas Library Company,
1013 Grattan St., St. Louis, Mo.

See review in this issue.

BIBLE STUDY COURSE
At home by mail. This book "Home Bible Study" free if you enroll now. Terms easy. For free catalog write C. J. BURTON, President Iowa Christian College, Oskaloosa, Iowa.

Christian Endeavor.

By H. A. Denton.
Feb. 28.

CHRISTIAN HEROISM.
Acts 14:19-23.

For the Leader.

Heroism has won the important victories of the world's wars. Heroism makes the histories of the peoples of antiquity readable. Heroism is the flavor of the literature of the past. It is the theme of ancient poetry no less than love. The two—love and heroism—have gone hand in hand. Yet heroism unbridled has done some bloody things. The best things put to the wrong use often do the greatest harm. So it will not do to trust to natural heroism. The heroism of paganism is not ideal. But the heroism that God has given to every person—some more, some less—supplemented and directed by the Christian spirit, furnishes us with the noble deeds. The stories of ancient Greece are inferior to the stories of the Christian Martyrs. The sufferings of those who never knew Christ lack what he supplied the Christians who suffered. The heroisms of the Christians among the Chinese during the recent Boxer uprising has furnished us with a modern example of Christian heroism.

For the Members.

1. Paul, who is the first subject of the heroism of our lesson, was on one of his missionary tours of Asia Minor. He was planting the gospel in many places for the first time. He was braving the dangers attendant upon the same as a labor of love, not in the hope of gain, such as led men to brave the low temperatures and eternal snows of Alaska during the gold fever in the Klondike country.

2. In the case of Paul, Christian heroism is called upon to endure not only the opposition of paganism to the gospel he preached, but the envy and instigations of those who were of an opposing sect in his own nation, and, for practical purposes, one might say a sect of his own religion. The Jews came from neighboring towns and stirred up the people against him. The Christian heroism of Paul was called upon to endure suffering from within and from without; the cruelty of paganism and the treachery of Pharisaism.

3. Christian heroism stands its ground. It does not flee from the field of danger. The "disciples" stood around Paul. They could have denied the faith. This would have been a splendid time for them to have concluded that Christianity was not worth the sacrifice. Christian heroism furnishes a circle of comfort within the fellowship of the persecuted. As Paul comes to himself after that cruel stoning, the first sight that greets him is the group of fellow sufferers looking down into his face.

4. Concerning the heroism of the native Christians in China during the Boxer uprising Amos R. Wells says: "A day was set for the killing of all Chinese Christians who would not recant. The next Sunday the attendance of one society was 90. Out of one Chinese society of forty only twenty were left. Out of another sixty-five only twelve were left alive. When the Boxers sent for one Chinese Christian, he put on his best clothes, for he said he expected to be taken that day to the palace of his King. After his head was cut off, they cut out his heart to see where he got his courage. A Chinese society of forty-four members in San Francisco gave in one year $1,500." Should not such examples forever silence our complaining over our hardships?

Quiet Hour Thought.

The heroism of the Master and of his first followers in pagan lands: do they not put me to shame?

DAILY READINGS.

M. David's heroes.	1 Chron. 11:17-19.
T. David's heroism.	1 Sam. 17:33-51.
W. Jonathan's heroism.	1 Sam. 14:1-14.
T. Paul's heroism.	Acts 18:5-10.
F. Jason's loyalty.	Acts 17:1-9.
S. Two sufferers.	Acts 19:23-32.
S. Christian heroism.	Acts 14:19-23.

Midweek Prayer-Meeting.

Feb. 24 1904.

MISSIONARY HEROES.

—Mark 16:15.

"Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to the whole creation"—Mark 16:15.

1. The First Missionary. The author of this command, and of the sublime conception which it embodies, was Himself the first great missionary, sent of the Father to manifest His love to a sinful world. Love lay behind this enterprise. "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John 3:16.

2. The Apostolic Missionary Heroes. The Apostles to whom Jesus gave the above commission, and to whom He also gave the Holy Spirit, were missionary heroes, most of whom gave their lives to seal their testimony in behalf of Christ. They are sent forth as lambs among wolves. The whole world lay in sin, and many were hostile to the gospel which they proclaimed; but they were commanded to deliver the message to all nations. They allowed neither hardships nor privations nor dangers to hinder them from carrying out their Lord's command.

3. The Missionary to the Gentiles. Among all the missionary heroes of the world none has done so much to endear himself to the church universal, as Paul, the missionary to the gentile world. In afflictions, in poverty, in perils, in stripes, in imprisonments, in shipwrecks, in persecutions and in martyrdom he proclaimed the unsearchable riches of Christ. The motive of his great life work, we learn from his own words: "The love of Christ constraineth me." The same divine compassion which moved Christ to come unto the world and to give his life a ransom for men prompted his servant Paul in his abundant labors.

4. Modern Missionary Heroes. Who does not know of the wonderful story of Carey, of the Judsons, of Moffatt, of Livingston, of Morrison, of Paton, "the apostle to the Hebrides," of Bishop Taylor and others whose names we can not here mention? Among our own missionaries we have men and women who are truly missionary heroes, and whose names will be held in honor among us for their unselfish and arduous labors in the mission field. We cannot mention their names, here, but they should be as familiar as household words in our homes. Every church should be ambitious to have some representative from its members devoted to the work of world-wide missions. Parents should be glad to have a son or daughter volunteer for service in the foreign field.

5. The Obligation is Universal. We must not think of the work of missions as belonging to a few consecrated spirits who are willing to go to the foreign field. We may have and must have the missionary spirit in our churches. If we cannot go we must help to send. In some way we must have partnership in this great enterprise. There are missionary heroes in this country, who by their work and sacrifices for the cause of missions deserve to rank with those on the field.

Prayer: O Lord, as Thou hast commanded Thy disciples to go into all the world and preach the gospel to the whole creation, we beseech Thee to so endow us with Thy Spirit, that we may willingly and gladly do what we can to further this divine enterprise. Send forth more laborers into the field, and if we may not go, lay it upon our hearts to assist those who can. Bless our missionaries and their work, and bless the churches abundantly that have fellowship with them in carrying out Thy great command. For Thy name's sake. Amen!

A compulsory voting law has been introduced in the New York legislature. If they don't get out the full vote in a lot of those Northern States we'll have to reduce their congressional representation.—The Atlanta Constitution.

IT IS TOO BAD

That So Many of Our Homes

Are without good literature for the children, the husband and the wife and they are constantly reading all kinds of trash. We have therefore determined that we will

Give Away $10,000 Worth of Our Best Books

The following great books are absolutely free to you if you will write us at once. Ten thousand dollars' worth must be given away, and you and your neighbor's home might as well be blessed as others:

Heavenward Way. J. H. Garrison. Price . . . . .	$0.75
Queen Esther. M. M. Davis. Price . . . . .	.75
Half-hour Studies at the Cross. J. H. Garrison. Price . . . . .	.75
The Temptation of Christ. J. B. Briney. Price . . . . .	.75
Christian Baptism. A. Campbell. Price . . . . .	.50
Wonders of the Sky, or God's Glory. W. J. Russell. Price . . . . .	.50
Elijah. M. M. Davis. Price . . . . .	.75
The Bible Hand-Book. W. W. Dowling. Price . . . . .	.75
In the Days of Jehu. Breckenridge Ellis. Price . . . . .	.75
The Christian Minister's Manual. F. M. Green. Price . . . . .	.75
Soul Winning. E. H. Kellar. Price . . . . .	.75
Dr. Carl Brown, or True Success. Miss M. F. Miles. Price . . . . .	.75
Helpful Bible Readings. A. B. Moore. Price . . . . .	.75
The Young People's Prayer-Meeting. Cal Ogburn. Price . . . . .	.75

All we ask of you is to send one new subscriber to THE CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST with $1.50, the regular price for the paper, and we will send any one of the above books free, postage prepaid.

Or, if you have not paid your own subscription, send $3.00 for your subscription and the new subscriber and we will send you any one of the following books, postage prepaid. These books are absolutely free. All we ask of you is the above little bit of missionary work and place a first-class religious paper in your neighbor's home:

Lesson Commentary for 1904. W. W. Dowling. Price . . . . .	$1.00
Form of Baptism. J. B. Briney. Price . . . . .	1.00
Moses. D. R. Dungan. Price . . . . .	1.00
King Saul. Breckenridge Ellis. Price . . . . .	1.00
Walks About Jerusalem. Isaac Errett. Price . . . . .	1.00
Talks to Bereans. Isaac Errett. Price . . . . .	1.00
Campbell's Theology. W. E. Garrison. Price . . . . .	1.00
Life of A. Campbell. Thomas W. Grafton. Price . . . . .	1.00
Men of Yesterday. Thomas W. Grafton. Price . . . . .	1.00
Life and Works of James A. Garfield. F. M. Green. Price . . . . .	1.00
Jesus as a Teacher and the Making of the New Testament. B. A. Hinsdale. Price . . . . .	1.25
The Genuineness and Authenticity of the Gospel. B. A. Hinsdale. Price . . . . .	1.25
Young Folks in Bible Lands. B. W. Johnson. Price . . . . .	1.00
A Vision of the Ages. B. W. Johnson. Price . . . . .	1.25
The Man in the Book. H. S. Lobingier. Price . . . . .	1.00
Leaves from Mission Fields. N. M. Raglan. Price . . . . .	1.00
What Is Your Life? W. J. Russell. Price . . . . .	1.00
Mary Ardmore. J. H. Stark. Price . . . . .	1.00
Hugh Carlin, or Triumph of Faith. J. H. Stark. Price . . . . .	1.00
Tribble's Sermons. J. M. Tribble. Price . . . . .	1.00
Wheeling Through Europe. W. E. Garrison. Price . . . . .	1.00

Every one of the above books are first-class. Nicely bound in cloth and worth every cent of publisher's price in cash.

These Offers will last only till March 1, 1904.

Christian Publishing Company
1522 Locust Street
St. Louis, Mo.

News From Many Fields

Baltimore Letter.

Our city of more than half a million people is overwhelmed in the greatest fire disaster in the history of America, save that of Chicago in 1871. Starting a few minutes of eleven o'clock Sunday morning, Feb. 7, in one of the largest wholesale houses in the city, it raged unchecked for thirty hours, sweeping out seventy blocks in the heart of the city. In addition to our own well equipped fire department, five engines came from Washington in 31 minutes, from Philadelphia in 105 minutes, from New York City, from York, Pa., from Altoona, from Harrisburg, from Wilmington, Del., and half a dozen smaller towns, but instead of being checked the lust of devastation seemed to increase every moment.

Great fire-proof buildings, twelve and sixteen stories high, would be smitten by sheets of flame first on one side, then the other, and the next moment great volumes of smoke and forks of flame would burst forth from every window and swell into a sheet of fire above the roof several hundred feet high. Thus it leaped and raged and smote art, wealth and the fortunes of thousands into ashes, until the winds changed and drove it back toward the harbor when it ran for a mile along the water's edge.

Our daily papers are now being printed in Washington, for all the newspaper buildings, save one, were burned to the ground, also nearly all the banks, trust companies, nearly all the wholesale stores, many of the retail houses, office buildings, warehouses, wharves, several churches and some residences are now lying in the smouldering debris. The origin of the fire is unknown and the loss is estimated anywhere from $100,000,000 to more than double that figure. The mercantile life of Baltimore is paralyzed and the churches must necessarily feel this keenly. Martial law has been declared for ten days and the whole city is appalled.

None of our own church buildings were in the path of the fire, but many of our brethren were burned out. While messages of condolence have been flashing over the wires from all parts of the country and Europe to the mayor of our city, it is gratifying that our brethren at a distance have not forgotten us in this calamity, and we appreciate their good words and prayers.

This disaster will doubtless effect the Christian Temple, which is now in course of erection and we may have to suspend operations for a while if we not do receive outside aid sufficiently large to go ahead with the completion of the building, but we are going to stand by our post. Everything here now is nervous and critical and our prayer is that God will make this calamity a blessing to our entire city.

PETER AINSLIE.

537 N. Fulton, Ave., Baltimore, Md.

New England.

W. J. Wright, evangelist, from Washington, D. C., is holding a meeting in the Danbury, Conn., church, of which E. Jay Teagarden is pastor. Previous to his coming, there had been 24 additions within six weeks at the regular services, and since his coming, the revival continues with deepened interest.

E. F. Randall has left Swampscott, Mass., and is now pastor at Tonawanda, N. Y. Bro. Randall is a good man and an able preacher, and we were sorry to lose him from New England.

Bro. Hall L. Calhoun, pastor of the Haverhill church, will complete his special studies at Harvard University this June and return to Kentucky. The Haverhill church will then be in need of another pastor. We wish we could keep such men as Brother Calhoun in New England.

The Boston church is still pastorless. Harvard students are supplying the pulpit. The attendance at the services continues to be good and the interest excellent.

Charles Forster and A. J. Wilson are the only two pastors representing our movement in Vermont. The first is pastor at West Pawlet, the second at West Rupert. They are graduates of the School of Evangelists, of which H. S. Johnson is president. They are earnest, intelligent, consecrated, and have a firm grip on the truths of the gospel of Jesus' Church.

The Springfield, Mass., church is enjoying the best audiences in its history. During the month of January there were five additions.

Frank H. Bailey, superintendent of the Bible School of New England, a member of the Danbury church, is supplying the pulpit at Bridgeport, Conn. The brethren at this place for years have had a hard struggle for existence. At times it seemed as if they would have to give up, but the "faithful few," with hope born out of their faith in God, have held on, and with the assistance of Brother Bailey, it is hoped that the Lord will open ways to develop, strengthen and establish the work.

J. H. Hardin is meeting with success in his endeavors to plant a church in Portland, Maine, one of the most beautiful cities in New England. We are constantly receiving appeals from scattered Disciples to enter new fields—fields ripe for the harvest, but our forces are weak and our means limited; we cannot respond. It is heartrending to feel that we cannot answer these Macedonian appeals. However, we believe in God and in our brotherhood, and have confidence that it will not always be so.

G. A. REINL, Cor. Sec. of New Eng.

South Dakota.

J. K. Shellenberger, of Mankato, Minn., recently held a meeting for the church at Arlington of which A. A. Seymour is the pastor. At the last report there were twenty-five additions. This is a very successful meeting in South Dakota. This is one of our best churches and its present condition is largely owing to the efficient ministry of Brother Seymour who has been pastor of the church for over six years.

Word comes to us that the work at Highmore is prospering under the leadership of Brother Thompson. The brethren are greatly encouraged and report the outlook hopeful.

The church at Verdon has been prospering under the ministry of Harry Walsen. It is becoming a great missionary church which speaks well of its pastor. They are now in a meeting with C. W. Worden as evangelist. Brother Worden is enthusiastic and successful. We are looking for great results in this meeting.

The work at Sioux Falls is moving steadily forward. The pastor, E. A. Orr, is delivering a series of lectures before the students of the business college which are much appreciated.

O. E. Palmer, of Armour, is in a meeting with the church at Oacoma, the only New Testament church west of the Missouri river. During the summer Brother Dodge held a meeting in this new town which resulted in a congregation and a new house of worship. Brother Palmer will find in Brother Dodge an earnest companion in the gospel work.

R. M. Ainsworth has located with the church at Platte. They report additions at most every service. All floating indebtedness has been paid and the congregation enthusiastic and hopeful.

J. F. Ainsworth accepted a call to the church at Alexandria for the second year. The church has lost a number by removal, but have had a number of additions. They report an increased interest and the prospects brighter than for some time.

There have been six additions to the church in Aberdeen since last report. They expect soon to begin a meeting.

The church at Armour is justly proud of their new pastor, O. E. Palmer, recently from Indiana. South Dakota brethren will gladly welcome him to our ranks.

M. B. AINSWORTH, Cor. Sec.

Aberdeen, S. D.

Hiram House.

'All friends of the Hiram House Social Settlement in Cleveland will rejoice to learn of the unexpected surprise that came to the warden, Mr. G. A. Bellamy, a few days ago. Mr. Bellamy has been suffering lately from overwork and insomnia and the directors sprung a surprise upon him by holding a secret meeting and voting him a "purse" of $300 and two months leave of absence, together with a substantial increase in salary. From the smallest beginning this work has grown with ever-increasing proportions until now the present imposing house attracts the attention of every passer-by. And more than that it has come to hold a large place in the lives of the people in this "down town" district of Cleveland. The Hiram House playground and the Hiram House spirit are known and prized by thousands of the young people that swarm in this neighborhood. All this work and equipment is mainly due to the painstaking and persistent efforts of Mr. Bellamy.

During the last year an entire new story was added to the already large building, greatly facilitating many features of the activities carried on. Of, perhaps, even more importance was the addition of a 52 acre farm—the Horseshoe Glens—to the material equipment. This farm is located several miles from the city on the Chagrin Falls car line and is a beautiful wild tract of land—and ideal camping place. On this farm a very large cottage was erected at a cost of $6,000 and fitted with accommodations for 40 children. Here in this shady and sequestered nook the children of the poor and their tired mothers can be sent during the sultry days of mid-summer.

Already there are evident and definite results in sight as the harvest of Hiram House work, and I, for one, wish this enterprise may continue to find a hearty support and that my old time friend of the Hiram days, may return from his vacation renewed in strength and thus be able to continue the enlargement of this work with his wanted enthusiasm and energy for many years to come.

H. L. ATKINSON.

Nebraska.

W. W. Divine just closed a short meeting at Overton with 26 additions to the church, 19 of them by baptism. They are seeking a pastor. Brother Divine is missionary for the Board at Kearney.

Brother Ogden added 10 to the church at North Platte. There were two other baptisms. The church has bought a lot, and is planning to build as rapidly as possible. C. F. Swander is the missionary in charge under the State Board.

W. B. Harter held a two weeks' meeting at Plainview church where E. M. Johnson ministers. No additions.

J. H. and Mrs. Reeves have been in a meeting at Norman. One baptism, one reclaimed and one by statement. The church has been set to work again, and hope is on the ascendancy again. This worthy couple minister at Minden and Norman.

O. A. Adams reports 70 enrolled in his young people's class at Valparaiso, with 59 in attendance last Lord's day. This class is in a contest and is pushing things. Melvin Putman and Miss Egbert will begin a meeting on the 14th.

E. V. Forell has been holding a meeting with the fragments of the Hampton church. No work has been done there for some time. He had two additions, reorganized the church, and arranged to preach for them on Lord's day afternoons. The church is greatly encouraged and will prosper.

J. E. Wilson has been in a meeting at Firth. Eight added to last report, six by confession and baptism.

D. M. Sayles has been called half time at Giltner. He needs one other point for half time.

S. J. Epler will preach half time at Lowe Center. This is the Cotner student that walked ten miles through the rain and snow to his appointment.

C. P. Evans is preaching regularly at Bartley.

Walter S. Hayden, Jr., has located with the Chadron church, beginning Jan. 12. We are hoping for a steady advance of this work under his direction. This is another mission of the State Board. W. C. German has taken the McCook work, and this, too, is a mission.

H. A. Lemon and Frank McVey are still at work at Waco. Additions are not numerous, but the interest is excellent, and the church desires the meeting to continue.

Brother Austin's meeting at Irvington will close with this week. He has been met with a most unusual condition. The hall was occupied overhead by lodges that met often, and the noise was not edifying. He had to dismiss on account of other things in the hall he was using. There seems to be a spiritual deadness almost unparalleled. He will be at home for a few days for a needed rest.

Frank Emerson Janes preached at Omaha First Church on the 7th. One evening a young lady came, the next her mother, and the third, her grandmother. Truly "A little child has led them."

Brother Janes has been called for another year at Fremont with large increase of salary. The church is in a thriving condition. The meeting, with over 60 additions, has strengthened the church.

J. S. Holley has taken the work resigned by Elmer Ward Cole at Falls City.

We are approaching the annual offering for foreign missions. Our churches should make unusual preparations for this work, and make it a generous offering. There should be a distinct advance in all our missionary enterprises this year, as our reports are likely to be scrutinized by more people of other faiths than common. But above all, our Master asks us not to be content with what we have done, but to do larger things. Remember the first Lord's day in March. W. A. BALDWIN.

Lincoln, Neb.

Virginia.

D. E. Hanna, of Kentucky, who has preached so acceptably at Ocala, Florida, has begun work in Goodsonville, Va., and adjoining churches. He is highly commended and will, we believe, do a splendid work in this important field.

R. H. Jones, of North Carolina, recently a student at the College of the Bible, Lexington, Ky., has begun work at Corinth, near Richmond, and will take two or three other churches soon. The lamented L. A. Cutler preached at Corinth for some years.

C. O. Woodward continues to have large congregations at Manchester. Recently a heater was put in the baptistry, and the baptistry itself was relined. Brother Woodward gave a lecture to pay for this work. There are accessions at this church continuously. A purse of $25 for a Christmas present is a good testimonial as to his hold on the hearts of his brethren.

G. W. Remagen, a minister of the German Reformed Church, who was baptized by B. H. Melton in October, has accepted a call to the churches of Mathews county, Va.

Robt. E. Elmore, who resigned at Tazewell, has, at the urgent solicitation of that good church, recalled his resignation. While he remains with the church, he is to have the right to devote more or less time each month to mission work under the direction of the Virginia Christian Missionary Society. This is a good example for our stronger churches.

Since Jan. 1, seven new men have begun preaching in Virginia, and there are yet two or three vacant fields. We are in correspondence with other men and hope to have every church supplied by the advent of summer.

The churchhouse at Blacksburg, recently purchased by our brethren, is soon to be remodeled and painted. A parsonage will likely be erected this summer.

We have heard that H. H. Moore has resigned at East Newport News. Do not know where he intends going.

P. A. Cave is now in a meeting at 30th Street Church, Newport News, which began Feb. 8. Brother Cave is a good evangelist, and will no doubt hold a splendid meeting in this good church.

The Park Place Mission has its house nearly done, and expects to use it by April.

Virginia is getting ready for foreign missions. She will very likely make the largest mission offering in her history in March.

H. C. COMBS, Fin. Sec. V. C. M. S.

In and Near Buffalo.

The Richmond Avenue Church, at its annual meeting, re-elected the old board of deacons, adding thereto Brothers C. S. Phillips, A. B. Clark and George Randolph. Brother Miller, the earnest and efficient pastor, has been in a meeting during the past three weeks, doing the preaching himself and doing it admirably. The meetings have resulted in only a few accessions, the reasons for which lie apart from the preacher and pastor, and need not be discussed. On Feb. 22, a grand missionary rally is to be held in the church, over which Bro. A. McLean will preside, and at which addresses will be made by returned missionaries and others. A glorious time is anticipated. The Richmond Avenue Church has now under discussion the question of becoming a Living Link church with a good outlook for an affirmative decision.

Jefferson Street Church is flourishing under the discreet and energetic guidance of Bro. B. S. Ferrall. The church has just enrolled itself among the Living Links.

Bro. E. O. Tilburn commenced his pastoral labors with the Forest Avenue Church at the beginning of the year.

Bro. Lowell C. McPherson, our missionary in Cuba, was in the city last week, and spoke in his old church, the Jefferson Street.

Bro. Charles A. Young, of Chicago, has been holding a meeting with Brother Hull's church in North Tonawanda, resulting in five accessions.

The church at East Aurora is still pastoralless, and the church in Fredonia is in like condition.

Bro. G. W. Randall, of Swampscot, Mass., has entered upon the pastorate of the South Tonawanda Church, which is to be congratulated upon the fact of having secured his efficient services.

The church in Williamsville has secured the pastoral services of Bro. D. C. Tremaine, last of West Rupert, Vermont. It is understood that he is acceptable to the entire membership, a fact which argues a long and successful pastorate.

ANSON G. CHESTER.

Buffalo.

Ohio Letter.

The moral forces of Ohio are deeply stirred just now over the Brannock Ward Option bill before the legislature. This bill gives to wards in cities the same opportunity to vote out saloons that is now enjoyed by the township and municipality. But the politicians, and especially Senator Hanna, says it would not be wise to pass any temperance legislation the year before a presidential campaign! But in the mean time the saloons will still press into the residence districts of our cities. The thing to do now is to address personal letters and petitions by the hundred to your representative and state senator urging the passage of this bill. The thing to do later if the bill is not passed, will be to retire all who become obstructionists now. The Republican party, so dominantly in power in the Ohio legislature, will suffer far more by not passing this bill than they will if they pass it. Write to your representative now, the time is short.

Grant E. Pike has the deep sympathy of the brotherhood in the loss of his wife. Brother Pike and his children were also afflicted with scarlet fever. He has been preaching at Kent for some time.

H. L. Atkinson has entered Oberlin College for 12 weeks of special work, and will preach

NATURE'S GREATEST CURE

An interesting letter to our readers from Hon. H. L. Dunham, Ex-Mayor of Dover, N. J.

Dover, N. J., Nov. 12th, 1902.

I had both kidney and liver trouble for over three years. I tried the best physicians in Washington, D. C., Pittsburg, Cincinnati and Chicago, and regret to say that I received very little benefit until I commenced taking the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. After taking the first bottle I noticed quite a change, which satisfied me that at last I had found the right medicine. I continued on until I had taken four bottles; by this time I noticed such a marked improvement in my health, in every way, that I felt satisfied I was cured. But, to be positive beyond a question or doubt, I was in Chicago during July, 1902, and went to the Columbus Medical Laboratory, No. 103 State St., and had them make a thorough and complete microscopical examination which showed my kidneys and liver to be perfectly well and healthy. I have their written report in my possession, signed by the doctors of the above Medical Laboratory, which is recognized as one of the best in the country.

Very truly yours,

H. L. Dunham

Ex-Mayor of Dover, N. J.

The mild and prompt effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. Recommended and taken by physicians, used in hospitals and endorsed by people of prominence everywhere. To prove what Swamp-Root will do for you, a sample bottle will be sent absolutely free, by mail, also a book telling all about Swamp-Root and its wonderful cures. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and be sure to mention reading this generous offer in the St. Louis CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST.

If you are already convinced that Swamp-Root is what you need, you can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at the drug stores everywhere. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

for Chesterland and Fowler's Mills. When his school work is done the parsonage at Chester will be remodeled and Brother Atkinson and his new bride will occupy it.

J. P. Meyers and J. Walter Wilson, a preacher and singer, are with W. F. Rothenberger and the Ashtabula Church in a successful meeting this month.

Another Ohio preacher has gone the way of all the earth, and taken unto himself a wife. This time it is T. E. Winters, of Greenwich. The happy bride was Miss Lena Luce of Charleroi, Pa. The Greenwich Church gave the bride and groom a delightful reception upon their arrival. Brother Winter is now in a meeting assisted by John Joyce as singer.

The Cleveland and vicinity preachers will have a universal exchange of pulpits Feb. 28, in the interest of foreign missions. Sixteen churches will thus hear a missionary sermon from an outside pastor.

T. A. Fleming is doing things at Miles Avenue, Cleveland. A meeting with home forces has resulted in over 100 additions. The house will be repaired and all things seem to be revived.

G. F. Assiter is in a meeting at Martin's Ferry. He speaks very encouragingly of the work there. He refers to the excellent work of Bros. Dew and Moffett, who have preceded him in this field. They builded wisely, and he is entering into their labors.

J. G. Slayter closed his meeting at High Street, Akron, with 51 additions. Brother Slayter goes to New York City for a meeting beginning Feb. 15.

Chas. Darsie has been at Paulding two years. In that time 130 have been added to the church. $3,700 have passed through the treasurer's hands. Of this $600 went to missionary offerings. The Paulding Church now has 350 people on its roll who live in the community, and 100 who do not. The absent ones receive at least one letter a year to keep them in touch with the work. Beside all this the church conducts a country Sunday-school and has recently organized a new church near by. A meeting with C. R. Oakley, of Wauseon, as preacher, resulted in six accessions. C. A. FREER.

Illinois Notes.

Memorial services were held in the College Chapel recently in remembrance of two important lives which were in close touch with Eureka College. They were very different yet each in his way devoted his life to the honor of God and service to his cause. H. K. Swisher was old, full of years, ripe for the reaper; an industrious farmer, devoted to the church and to the cause of Christ. He was quiet, reserved and true. He generously remembered the college in his will and will hereby speak the message of life around the world by the men and women which his means will help to educate in Eureka College.

Brother S. M. Thomas, a graduate of Eureka College, and a young preacher of rare promise, was called home in the very morning of usefulness. The churches of Chandlerville, St. Augustine and Lanark were blest by his ministry and many souls, which he led to Christ, are left to represent his sweet spirit and life.

Earnest prayer was offered in behalf Sister Swisher and Sister Thomas, that the grace of God may comfort and bless them in their loneliness.

Education Day has come and gone. It is coming more and more to be known that the education of the ministry and leaders in the church must be considered, if we are to continue to grow as we ought. If the college is not supported, our whole cause suffers. Jesus trained his ministers, Paul trained evangelists and pastors, so must we. Tuition helps, but will not support a college. It is too early to predict what Education Day has meant in our state, but reports are in from 36 churches in Illinois and more to follow. A representative of the college was present at several of these places. More than one hundred names were added to the Illinois Education Association. Cash and pledges have been received to the amount of $1,076.72. This includes some dues on membership and answers to special letters. We are grateful for this liberal response and we believe the amount will be materially increased when the returns are all in. This means much for our great work at the very foundation of all our growth. May the Lord bless every giver, and every preacher who worked for the offering.

Lewistown is one of our older churches which has been a recruiting station for other and more destitute portions of our great country. This often unduly discourages many of our churches. They, however, should consider that those who remove are so many missionaries trained for the Master's use sent out into the wide world. It also enlarges the hearts and liberality of those who remain in giving them additional opportunity to sacrifice for the Master.

Would it not be well for each church to keep a list of missionaries, thus sent forth, and get reports from them occasionally especially for annual meetings? Would it not stimulate the absent, encourage the old church and inspire it to prepare its people better for their possible future? Lewistown has been negotiating with Bro. A. P. Aten, of Roseville, to become their minister.

Ifava has recently grown into a good, strong church. W. G. Battenfield has just resigned as minister and is open to engagement. This is the home of Dr. J. H. Breeden, for many years a valued trustee of Eureka College, and the father of H. O. Breeden, of Des Moines, Ia.

Astoria has recently closed an excellent meeting, held by an able evangelist. H. C. Patterson. It has a neat modern house of worship and has a large proportion of excellent people. It has been preacherless for many months, but J. W. Keefer from Indiana, has just taken up the work. Welcome to our state, Brother Keefer.

Baders, Browning and Frederick, on the St. Louis line of the C. B. & Q., all have rather small memberships, but good territory and good church buildings. None of them have any regular preaching. They are near together and another preacherless church, Pleasant View, is only about seven miles away. This would be a fine field for the right man. There are many good people in these churches, ready to do their part in the Lord's work.

Vermont is another old church. G. W. Ross, a graduate of Eureka College, has ministered to it for eleven years. It is needless to say that it is a strong and useful church. We will learn by degrees, slowly perhaps, but surely, that long pastorates make strong churches. In order to this, however, some conditions must obtain. Preachers and people must not expect either to be angels. There ought to be mutual love and admiration, but the church that raves over a newly installed preacher is apt to weep little at his early departure. There must be genuine godliness upon the part of both and a fervent desire and co-operation to build up the kingdom of God. J. G. WAGGONER.

Iowa.

G. A. Gish has not been employed by the church at Nevada.

The Kellerton meeting that is being held by Jesse S. Coffin is nearing 100 additions.

That was a great meeting that Bro. C. D. Hougham held at Grant Center near Zealing, in which 65 were added to the church; 41 of the number were by confession and baptism. It was a fitting close of Brother Hougham's three years' successful pastorate.

We rejoice in J. Will Walters' great meeting of 54 accessions at Webster City.

Sixty-two accessions in the Hamilton-Wilkinson meeting at Corydon.

Lawrence Wright and Smith are in a meeting at Dallas Center. They just came from a meeting of 49 accessions at Beatrice, Neb.

M. L. Anthony is having a fine meeting at Castana. He had only about 12 members to begin with, but the first week resulted in eight confessions, all grown people and all but two married.

Bro. M. L. Buckley reports 3,167 additions last week.

Friday, Feb. 5, your secretary was at Clinton. Friday evening being the time for the midweek service, and with a little extra effort by the use of the telephone and messenger I had the opportunity of meeting almost the entire membership. I found the church still wrestling with the lot problem. Whether to secure a cheap lot in a poor location or an expensive lot in a central location is the question. The matter will be determined soon. Victor F. Johnson is the pastor and is doing an excellent work. He is one of our most successful young preachers. His first year will expire in March, but at the evening service on Friday while I was there he was called for another year.

I was at Olin over Sunday and spoke both

Piles Cured Without Pain

In the Privacy of Your Own Home.

The free trial package which we send to all who write will give instant relief and start you toward a perfect cure. After you have tried that, you can get a full-sized package from any druggist for 50 cents. Frequently one package cures. It is applied in the privacy of the home. Call for Pyramid Pile Cure and nothing else. All druggists have it, for it has cured so many cases of piles and relieved so much suffering and is so popular a remedy that no druggist can afford to be without it.

MRS. MAUD SUMMERS, Cured of Piles by Pyramid Pile Cure, After All Remedies and Doctors Had Failed.

The healing process begins immediately with the first application and continues rapidly till the sufferer is perfectly cured. The pain ceases at once and you go about your duties without further inconvenience.

This is much more sensible than being cut and tortured with a knife. It is much more satisfactory than a humiliating examination by a physician. It is much cheaper than paying a big doctor's bill for an operation. It is a certain, safe and painless cure for piles.

Write Pyramid Drug Co., Marshall, Mich., for free trial package which will be sent in plain wrapper. After that is used, you can get full-sized package from us or any druggist for 50 cents.

morning and evening. The congregation at Olin is pastorless and somewhat discouraged. They want to employ a good man for half time.

Our board had its regular monthly meeting on Tuesday of this week. Among other things considered was the time for holding the next convention. The time set was June 20-23. The sessions will begin Monday night, and not Monday afternoon as heretofore. The program will be wrought out in full soon.

There remains only four months until the convention. These will be busy months for all and we hope to come up to the convention at Albia with a report that will make all hearts glad. In order to do this every congregation that has not done so should send in the offering. If your congregation has not sent in the offering, I trust that it will be done soon. B. S. DENNY.

Church Helps
MAGIC LANTERNS, STEREOPTICONS
for illustrating sermons, giving entertainments, illustrating hymns. Finest collection of slides. Large catalogue FREE.
McALLISTER MFG. OPTICIAN.
49 Nassau St., New York.

CHURCH FURNITURE

Pews, Pulpits, Etc.

The best that money can buy.

Grand Rapids School Furniture Works

Corner Wabash and Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

Kansas.

At Oakland, a suburb of Topeka, Neal Overman, one of our state evangelists, is in a splendid protracted meeting. This is one of our new congregations, with a new building. The meeting is nearing the close of the fifth week with just 100 additions, 79 baptisms, 18 reclaimed and three by statement. A good many of those baptized are from other churches.

Of course the entire town is stirred over this large ingathering. Brother Overman is preaching the gospel with power. The meeting goes on indefinitely.

J. Ira Jones, our pioneer state evangelist, with Bro. Bert Bentley as singer, is nearing the end of the fourth week at La Cygne, with 33 additions. This is a very hard field, but the meeting is creating a deep interest and the town is aroused. The good work continues.

At Perry, C. C. Atwood and wife are laying siege. Meeting at the end of eleven days resulted in 11 additions with crowded houses. The new church is to be dedicated about the 21st.

C. A. Hill and wife are starting a promising meeting at Smith Center. Several added and interest growing. W. S. LOWE.

Topeka, Kan.

Founders' Day at Eureka College.

The students and friends of Eureka have learned to expect the utterances of Founders' Day to be characterized by sanity of judgment and breadth of view. The program this year did not disappoint them. The speakers were men well acquainted with the educational situation and they spoke their minds freely. The opening address, on Friday evening, Feb. 5, was delivered by Dr. Nathaniel Butler, of the University of Chicago. His subject was, "Some Present Day Ideals in Education." He drew clearly the distinction between the college and the university. The college aims to develop the student physically, intellectually, socially and spiritually. The university fits men for special work. The place of the college in our system of education is, therefore, not doubtful. The university is demanding of those who seek to enter its technical and professional schools that they come with the training which the college gives. Time spent in the college is time saved. Success comes to those who have made thorough preparation.

The first address of Saturday, Feb. 6, was delivered by President Thomas McClelland, of Knox College. He spoke on "Education, Old and New." Dr. McClelland welcomes the changes through which the college has passed within recent years. Athletics, the elective system, and the new methods of discipline are all for the best. It is well that the scope of education has been enlarged and that the material equipment of the college has been correspondingly enlarged. But a note of warning is needed lest we lay "disproportionate stress upon quantity to the neglect of quality." There is no lack of men with the power of large achievement. The cry is for men of the right fundamental qualities.

"The Small College" was the subject of J. E. Bangs, assistant state superintendent of public instruction of Illinois. "We must look, in the future, to the university for the specialist, the scholar, the man especially learned in his profession, but, I think, we will continue to look to the small college for a goodly proportion of our practical men of thought and action, of character and devotion, men so vitally necessary to our national life. If we are to continue a Christian nation, then the Christian college, carefully administered, is a necessity."

W. J. Ford, whom the people of Eureka delight to honor, paid a worthy tribute to the memory of John Darst, the good man who for so many years was the friend of the college.

W. J. Whetzel, our county superintendent of schools, showed the advantages to the community which the college brings. As a financial investment, the community could afford to give the college four thousand dollars a year for the next five years. B. H. Sealock represented the students. He reminded the students of their responsibility to the college and urged them to meet this responsibility with enthusiasm. The claims of the Illinois Christian Educational Association were presented by Mrs. Maude Conklin in a paper of exceptional merit.

We turn our faces toward Feb. 6, 1905. At that time we shall celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the college. The spirit with which the friends of the college come to its support during the year will have much to do with the character of the celebration. The trustees have planned for larger things. They believe the churches of Illinois will endorse their plans in a substantial way. SILAS JONES.

Re-dedication at Fairview, W. Va.

Fairview, West Va., is one of the oldest towns in the Pan-handle of West Va. For a number of years it was the county seat of Hancock county. A Christian church was organized in this town thirty years ago. It has had a prosperous existence ever since. During the past summer this church building was thoroughly repaired and refurnished, and it is now one of the neatest village churches in this part of the country. Geo. B. Evans, a graduate of Bethany College of the class of '92, is the beloved pastor of this congregation. The writer was invited to be present and to conduct the re-dedicatory services. All the money needed to meet the indebtedness incurred by the improvements was secured on the day of dedication. T. E. CRAMBLET.

Would We Do Likewise?

When the "Friends," often called Quakers, heard through Mr. Garland, the Y. M. C. A. secretary, that I was to speak in Portland, Maine on a certain Sunday evening, in the Y. M. C. A. hall, and that I probably had no engagement for the morning service, and as they were without a minister, they invited me to preach for them. I accepted the invitation. I was a perfect stranger to them all. I had never before been in a Friends' meeting. I found the order of service very little different from most Protestant religious meetings. I found the people to be highly intelligent, spiritual and devout, with a keen relish for the rich things of God's word. They invited me to preach the next Sunday, which I did. One of the members then suggested that as I had no place to hold services week nights, why not use their vestry or large, beautiful lecture room? This was at once arranged. They then asked me to speak in their pulpit at third Sunday, which I did, meantime speaking in the vestry week nights to such of our brethren and the general public as would come in. At the close of the third Sunday's services, though they had remunerated me for filling their pulpit, and I requested to be allowed to pay at least their actual outlay for the use of their vestry, they would receive nothing. Remember that I was an entire stranger to these people and very few of them knew anything of our people when I went among them. I think their simple-hearted, Christian hospitality and courtesy worthy of report. It did me great good, and I believe I was able to do them good. In bidding them good-bye last night, I gave them a brief sketch of our movement, complimenting them on the fact that while we preach Christian union, I had found them ready to practice at least a part of it. I told them that I had heard of Quaker meetings all my life, but had never enjoyed the privilege of attending one till I came to them; but that if theirs were a fair sample, I heartily believed in Quaker meetings.

I wonder how many of our churches would thus welcome a stranger, allow him to use their church house freely to further the interests of his own body of people, and send him

RHEUMATISM

Cured Through the Feet

Thousands are cured at home every month by MAGIC FOOT DRAFTS.

Why not YOU?

Try Them—FREE

The Drafts cured Mrs. W. D. Harriman, wife of Judge Harriman, of Ann Arbor, Mich.

They cured H. C. Van Valkenburg, Providence, R. I., of an intensely painful case of muscular rheumatism.

They cured severe rheumatism of the arms, neck and back for T. C. Pendleton, Jackson, Mich.

Mrs. Caspar Yahrdsdorfer, Jackson, Michigan, 70 years old, was cured in a few weeks, after suffering 30 years.

The Drafts cured James Gilbert, Locomotive Dept., Mich. Cent. R. R., Jackson, Mich., after 27 years of pain.

Dr. Van Vleck, Jackson, Mich., writes that they cured him and he is now using them in his practice.

They have cured hundreds of cases probably just like yours. Isn't the chance worth taking? You try them free. Send us your name. We will send you by return mail a pair of Magic Foot Drafts—prepaid. If you are satisfied with the comfort they give you, send us One Dollar. If not, you send us nothing. You decide. Magic Foot drafts are worn without the least inconvenience, and cure rheumatism in every part of the body by stimulating expulsion of acid poisons through the great foot pores. Splendid booklet, illustrated in colors, free with the trial Drafts. Don't suffer, but write today to the Magic Foot Draft Co., 20 Oliver Bldg., Jackson, Mich.

Barnes Business College

BOARD OF EDUCATION BUILDING, ST. LOUIS, MO.

Established 22 years. Eight expert teachers. May we tell you what a business course with us means? And we'd be pleased to say something about our shorthand and Touch Typewriting course. We give personal instruction, and can offer advantages not to be obtained elsewhere. Catalogue free.

on his way with earnest prayers for God's blessing to attend him. Some would, I am sure, but I fear many would not. Would it be right for us to act thus? Would it controvert our plea if we should?

At the end of these services, ten persons met at a private house and covenanted to assemble every Lord's day for the breaking of bread and study of the scriptures. I am to return in the spring to help them still further along. J. H. HARDIN.

5 Fountain Hill, Boston.

Through Service to Florida.

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad in connection with the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad operates a through buffet drawing room sleeping car daily between St. Louis and Jacksonville, via Montgomery, Alabama. This car leaves from the Union Station, St. Louis, at 8:45 P. M., arriving at Montgomery next evening at 7:45 P. M., and Jacksonville the second morning at 8:30 A. M., and making direct connections with through trains for all points in Florida. No route to Florida offers more attractions for the sight-seer than the route via Montgomery, traversing as it does the most populous and fertile section of the South. For rates, time tables, maps or sleeping car reservations, address, J. E. Davenport, Division Passenger Agent, Louisville & Nashville Railroad, 206 N. Broadway, St. Louis, Mo.

A Favorite Cough Remedy. For Colds, Sore Throat, Asthma, Catarrh, no more useful article can be found.

Avoid Imitations. John J. Brown, Jr.

Our Budget

—A people who are a million and a quarter strong, ought to have enough missionary spirit to give a quarter of a million for foreign missions.

—Carry on the canvass for the ten thousand new subscribers. Every regular reader of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST is a friend of all our missionary, educational and benevolent enterprises.

—Have you sent in your pledge for the pavilion, or exhibit building of the Disciples of Christ at the World's Fair? There is no room for delay, now, if we are to be on time.

—The Committee on World's Fair Exhibits, of which the Editor of this paper is chairman, would be grateful for information concerning historic pictures, papers, letters or other articles which should have a place in our exhibit. They will be carefully guarded and returned to their owners at the expiration of the Fair. All should feel an interest in making the exhibit as historically interesting as possible.

—J. C. Reynolds, Macomb, Ill., who is steadily recovering from his late illness, writes in a personal letter to the editor, as follows: "I have received quite a number of letters that were called out by what you have said about me recently in the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. These letters are very precious to me. They are from persons whom I taught in former years, whom I baptized, whom I married. I did not know before this, that I have so warm a place in the hearts of good people. They do not wait until I am dead to tell me." We are glad that there are some people who do not reserve all their flowers for the graves of their friends, but scatter a few along their pathway to cheer them on their pilgrimage. One forget-me-not, used judiciously in this way, is worth more than a cart load of roses piled on the coffin or on the new made grave.

—L. F. Fuqua is now preaching half time for the church at Stroud, Okla.

—R. M. Bailey has left Brooklyn, Iowa, to become pastor of the church at Martel, Iowa.

—The Church Extension Board received $500 in annuities from friends in San Jose, Cal., last week. This is the 106th annuity gift to the Church Extension Board.

—W. S. Hayden has resigned the pastorate of the Christian Church at Longmont, Col., and has gone to Chadron, Neb. The church at the former place was loath to give him up.

—L. A. Chapman, of Grand Valley, Ont., began his third year with that church Feb. 1. During the past year the church has raised over $1,850 for all purposes, which is more than it ever raised before.

—J. C. Dickson has resigned his work with the First Church, Tyler, Texas, after a four years' pastorate. The church has doubled its membership during that time and the debt has been almost entirely paid.

—The missionary rally held at Youngstown, Ohio, Jan. 29, was a great success. Many of the churches in the Mahoning Valley were represented and the attendance was excellent. Brothers Wharton, Bentley and McLean delivered inspiring addresses.

—Alex. McMillan, pastor of the Christian Church at Winnipeg, recently read a paper before the ministerial association on the "Development of Protestantism." It was a strong plea for the unity of Christians upon the fundamental truths as being the goal of the development of Protestantism.

—The Second Christian Church, Cedar Rapids, Ia., in planning for a roll call and reception to all its members on Wednesday evening, Feb. 17, sent out an invitation with a perforated coupon attached, which all members were requested to fill out and return, stating whether or not they would be present, and if not, why not.

—Mary A. Byram, of California, has just given her second sum of annuity money to our National Benevolent Association. This shows her appreciation of the work done by the society for the relief of children and the aged and friendless sick, and her satisfaction with the business methods of the association. Write Geo. L. Snively, 903 Aubert Ave., St. Louis, for information concerning the annuity plan.

—E. L. Powell recently preached at Macaulay's Theatre in Louisville on "The Lights and Shadows of a City." He took occasion to rebuke the municipal government for permitting gambling to go on unmolested in Louisville, and spoke forcibly against the bill now pending in the Kentucky Legislature to reduce the offense of operating a slot machine from a felony to a misdemeanor.

—Our National Benevolent Association has prepared a beautiful Easter concert exercise that it will furnish free of cost to all Bible-schools writing to Geo. L. Snively, 903 Aubert Ave., this city. It portrays the association caring for its hundreds of aged Disciples, dependent orphans and friendless, indigent sick. That the church is doing this practical work should be widely known.

—Cephas Shelburne writes: "Bro. G. L. Wharton was with us on Sunday, Feb. 7, and spoke to us on the tithing system of giving. My people were delighted, and we believe it will result in great financial and spiritual good to the church. No greater good could come to our churches, missions and benevolences than having Brother Wharton deliver this address to our people. It ought to be heard by every church in the brotherhood."

—W. J. Russell, pastor of the East End Christian Church, Pittsburg, had a nocturnal visit recently from an uninvited guest who carried off the silverware and such other articles of value as could be found in a preacher's house. Shortly afterwards, on Jan. 28, which was the pastor's birthday, a group of the members presented themselves, also by night and unexpectedly, and reversed the process of the burglarious visitor by leaving the pastor an ample supply of plate and many other articles of interest and value.

—Prosser, Wash., is a strategic point in a new and growing country. The church was organized there about a year ago by W. F. Cowden. The congregation is not strong enough to do the work unaided and appeals for help to provide means for securing a suitable location. In this rapidly growing western town, everything depends upon promptness, and a dollar wisely expended now may save five next year. Brother Cowden endorses the appeal. Remittances should be made to Josiah Burchett, church treasurer, Prosser, Wash.

—South Bend, Ind., had a successful missionary rally on Feb. 9, which was attended by delegates from neighboring churches in northern Indiana and southern Michigan. Mrs. Princess Long, who is now singing in a meeting at the First Church, South Bend, in which the pastor, J. P. Rice, is doing the preaching, contributed by her songs to the success of the rally. The churches at South Bend and St. Joseph county are planning to become a Living Link county for foreign missions. The work at the Second Church, South Bend, is prospering under the ministry of Roy L. Handley.

—The Akron Missionary Rally held in High Street Church of Christ on Feb. 1 was the most inspiring and best rally ever held in the 15th district in the interest of missions. There were about 500 people in attendance at the services through the day. Representatives from nearly all our churches were present and large delegations came from many. The program was of the first order. Every delegate went home a better Christian, with the determination to be an instrument in God's hand to help raise a quarter of a million dollars for foreign missions the first Sunday in March."—A. W. PLACE.

—I desire to commend and endorse your courageous confession quoted below from your Anniversary Number and to assure you that it expresses the sentiments of a large and rapidly increasing number of your brethren:

"But this I do confess, that after the manner which some interpret our plea for New Testament Christianity, I am not sound. That interpretation is too narrow, too partisan, too unspiritual and altogether too unlovely in its spirit and method, to meet my idea of the great, broad, Christian plea, which I fell in love with in my young manhood, and for the sake of which I left the church of my fathers that I might devote my life to its advocacy. To that ideal I have tried to be true."

For Christ and the liberty wherewith we have been made free by him.

Phoenix, Ariz.

W. H. BAGBY.

—"A very interesting and helpful foreign missionary rally was held at Wayne Street Church, Lima, O., Feb. 5. Many unique missionary maps showing the statistics and the field were used. The maps were made of ribbon. Living link churches were connected with the point of foreign contact by silken cords. The addresses were inspiring and full of meat, worthy of any platform. Bro. A. McLean presided as he alone can preside. Brother Wharton, missionary from India, and Brother Bentley from China, gave addresses that stimulated to effort. Brother Kempfer spoke of the pastor as a missionary leader. Brother Reiter of Prayer for missions. G. H. Sims on the watchword, and Brother McLean on several statistical and deeply interesting features. It was a fine gathering and comes again by invitation next year. Have you had a rally? If not, write McLean and have one."—G. H. SIMS.

A Good Man Has Fallen.

Word comes to me from New York that James Carr is dead. He was a good man. I knew him well; I loved him. He was my friend. I am grieved to think that I will see him no more. He had lived more than four score years. He was a member of the Church of Disciples, now meeting on West Fifty-sixth Street, New York, I should say, for a full half a century. He was steadfast in his devotion to the church from first to last. He believed in his church; he believed in and loved his brethren. For many years he was an elder in the church. His time, strength, money, were always at the service of the church. There are only a few men like James Carr in his devotion to the church. He was born and reared in England. The average religious Englishman believes in his church; but our Brother Carr surpassed the average Englishman in his attachment to the church of which he was a member. In the now long distant past this particular church in New York had its full share of troubles, and the men might go, and other men might come, but James Carr never abandoned the church. Some preachers he did not like; but he remained during all these years loyal to the church and supported it by his personal presence and money. He was liberal with his money, too, when his financial resources are considered.

My acquaintance with James Carr began in New York City in 1868. He was the first man in the city to write to me about becoming pastor of the church—then meeting on West Twenty-eighth Street. My reply was a refusal to even consider such a proposition. But Brother Carr could not be disposed of so easily. He continued the correspondence. By and by it fell into the hands of another. The result was thirteen years of work in New York.

My conception of the Christian religion and James Carr's conception were not always in perfect accord. He had an impression that I was inclined to be broad gauge. He was a strict constructionist; I was not so strict; but this made no difference. There never was an unkind word between us, nor an unkind thought, of which I have knowledge. He was inclined to the fellowship of the anti's. He was a frequent contributor to the Christian Leader. He was a great admirer of J. F. Rowe. He was a steadfast friend of J. S. Bell—the successor of J. F. Rowe as editor of the Christian Leader. He was far more in accord with their teaching than he was with mine; yet I never had a more steadfast supporter in my work, in any place, than James Carr. He was genuinely and truly liberal.

Some who pose as liberal are narrow, bitter, sectarian.

I was told that the treasurer's books show that James Carr was not absent from the church a single Lord's day in forty years! But, as a matter of fact, he was at one time absent by reason of illness three months. At another time he was in Europe eight months—while I was in New York; but the books of the church treasurer do not show that he was absent. His contribution was placed in the basket even when he could not himself be present. Some member of the family must represent him, and place his contribution in the basket. How much better the church would be if all its members were like James Carr!

"What sort of a church would my church be if every member were just like me?"
Denver, Colo. B. B. TYLER,

Anniversary at Weston, Mo.

On the last day of January, the church at Weston observed the 50th anniversary of occupancy of their present house of worship. The congregation was organized a little more than two years prior to the opening of the house of worship. Oliver C. Steele, of Platte Co., and A. H. F. Payne were present at the organization. The congregation met for worship for these two years in private houses, except on occasions when they could borrow the use of a meeting house. John M. Railey, the Weston banker for so many years, and son-in-law of Oliver C. Steele, was the first elder and continued in the office until his death only a few years ago. John M. Railey, Col. John Doniphan, nephew of General Alexander Doniphan, Dr. Thos. Beaumont, with perhaps two others were the building committee authorized to secure the money, secure the lot and erect the house. This they did, and completed what is even yet a commodious house, at a cost of more than $4,000.

Oliver C. Steele, and that prince among preachers, Moses E. Lard, of Missouri, conducted the services on the day of the opening. It was a day of great rejoicing. The small company of disciples were proud of their achievement, especially in view of the larger and better facilities for the preaching of the gospel and the worship of the church. Special mention is made of the songs of that day when in the observance of a supply of hymn-books, the preacher "lined out" the words two lines at a time.

For fifty years (excepting a short time during the civil war when the house was occupied by soldiers,) this house has been opened, and the large and deep-toned bell has called the worshippers together. For the greater part of the time they have been able to sustain regular preaching or have met for social worship.

The following are the names of some of the preachers who have served them: O. C. Steele, M. E. Lard, Dr. J. W. Cox, James Henshell, W. J. Pettigrew, Josiah Waller, John C. Howell, David I. Burnet, A. H. F. Payne, Jas. A. Meng, John T. Riley, B. F. Reeves, R. A. Aife, J. C. Howell, now of Oklahoma, R. A. Thompson. The following have held protracted meetings: T. M. Allen, Alex. Procter, T. P. Haley, M. M. Goode and others.

T. P. HALEY.

Ministerial Exchange.

J. P. Davis, Golden City, Mo., is open to a call as pastor, or to hold meetings. He has a series of three lectures as follows: "Martin Luther," "Three Great Reformers," and "Tongues."

Byron Burditt, singing evangelist, is open for an engagement after Feb. 22. Address Lafayette, Ind.

B. B. Burton, 1109 26th St., Des Moines, Ia., is open for engagements during March, in Iowa, Missouri or Kansas.

W. H. Applegate, of Camp Point, Ill., says of Miss Rhoda M. Early, leader of song: "She has a rich voice and sings to the hearts of the people. She is also a good personal worker and in every way worthy of the confidence of Christian people." Address Miss Rhoda M. Early, care of Charles Bloom, Le Roy, Ill.

E. L. Frazier, Marion, Ind., is open for engagements as evangelist after March 30.

O. D. Fournier, of Yale, Mich., closes his work with that congregation March 20. During his pastorate of two and one-half years, there were added to the church, 35 by baptism, one by letter and ten by statement. He is now open for correspondence with any church desiring his services.

Harold E. Monser, Speed, Mo., is at present employed by the First District Board of Illinois to try and organize four new churches in northern Illinois. He will be open for engagements after July 1. Prefers work in larger cities.

The Miami (Mo.) Christian church desires, to extend a call to some good man to serve as pastor. Man of family preferred. Address Chas. H. Hitchborn, Clerk Church Board.

Wm. Mondy, of Kirksville, Mo., is employed half his time at Bible Grove and Greensburg, and would like the balance of his time taken by country churches in that vicinity.

C. H. Altheide, singing evangelist, is open for engagements in March and April. Address Bloomfield, Ia.

Thos. J. Thompson, formerly of California, Mo., has located at Carthage, Ill. He is preaching at Adrian half of his time. Is open for a call.

M. L. Anthony, evangelist, will soon be open for an engagement. Address 810 E. 3rd Ave., Oskaloosa, Ia.

The church at Hamilton, O., is looking for a good man to succeed G. O. Black, who closes a seven year pastorate with the Hamilton church April 1. Salary, including parsonage, is equal to $1,500. Splendid church building, modern parsonage. Apply with references to Geo. A. Bachelor, 107 Heaton St., clerk of church.

Jottings:

The "Fortieth Anniversary" number of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST is simply superb, and how many precious memories does it awaken in our hearts. I have personally known nearly all its editors: J. C. Reynolds, J. W. Karr, B. J. Radford, Dudley Downs, (my father in the gospel) O. A. Burgess, A. F. Smith, J. H. Smart, J. H. Garrison, B. W. Johnson, D. P. Henderson, G. T. Carpenter, Allen Hickey, J. M. Mathes—the names and faces of all these have been familiar to me.

I also had a finger in this pie! For many years I was a regular contributor to its columns, and when the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST was moved from Oskaloosa to Chicago I was one of its editors. I have done a vast deal of work for the paper, not only with my pen; but in the way of subscriptions, and without the hope of any pecuniary reward. I have had the honor of the largest paid up subscription upon the books of the Christian Publishing Company. The paper has not failed to make its weekly visit to my home for thirty years.

The CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST is a great paper. Upon what meat has this Caesar fed that it has grown so great? It has devoured the Gospel Echo, Bible Advocate, Christian Herald, The Christian, Christian Pioneer, Christian Messenger, The Evangelist, Christian Record, The Faithful Witness and The Church Register. All this was such wholesome food that it was readily assimilated and no fit of indigestion followed!

The writer has entered the evangelistic field again and he is in a meeting at Edina, the county seat of Knox county, Missouri. We are having fine audiences and good interest despite the bitter cold weather.

Since the first of the year Edina has been without a preacher.

Several churches in this part of Missouri are now without preachers. Among these I mention Kahoka, Winconda, Knox City, La-Belle, Novelty.

Kirksville has just employed a Brother Thompson from Oklahoma to succeed H. A. Northcutt.

J. W. Davis, of Kirksville, preaches for Cherry Box, Hazel Dell and Illinois Bend. He has served these churches many years and

St. Louis Readers

Who have furnished rooms to let, with or without board, can secure desirable roomers for the World's Fair period by advertising in the want column of :

The Christian - Evangelist

they largely owe their life and prosperity to his labors.

Brother Nicoson has been employed for another year at Memphis and his salary is increased to twelve hundred dollars. The church has had many additions recently.

H. R. Trickett reports an improved condition in the church at Macon City.

My home is yet in Clearfield, Iowa.

SIMPSON ELY.

C. W. B. M. in Missouri.

We are rejoiced to hear of our colored sisters. The state president, Mrs. D. M. West, of Kansas City, reports the organization of an auxiliary in the home church, with 12 members. Tidings not reported, as Mrs. West, who organized the auxiliary, is anxious to have it start right—with every member a Tidings reader—and is working to that end. The officers are: President, Mrs. Lena Scott; vice-presidents, Mrs. Annie Lewis and Mrs. Belle Pierce; secretaries, Mrs. Birdie Neal and Mrs. Maude Brown; treasurer, Mrs. Emily Mott. An auxiliary also exists at Osage City.

The secretary organized at Maplewood on Jan. 20, with 10 members. Officers are: Mrs. Susie Gregory, Mrs. W. G. Stewart, and Mrs. Mary Weidmer. Bro. G. A. Hoffman is the pastor.

I quote from a letter from one of our live Missouri pastors, "Wonder no longer, my sister in Christ, but know, that I have found the auxiliary at —, and will see that it does not stray into the darkness of indifference, and become lost; it is doubtful if I would have accepted a call to this church, if there had been a live C. W. B. M." More and more our pastors are talking like this one, and many churches are losing opportunities to get first-class men, because it has no C. W. B. M. auxiliary.

If any one can spare a November, 1903 Tidings, will she please send it to

MRS. L. G. BANTZ.

5738 Vernon Ave., St. Louis.

Dedication at Indianapolis.

Yesterday, Feb. 7, the North Park Church of this city dedicated its remodeled building, the pastor, Austin Hunter, preaching the sermon. Short addresses were also made by A. B. Philpott, D. R. Lucas, F. W. Norton, G. M. Anderson, C. W. Harvay, A. L. Orcutt, B. L. Allen, C. M. Martz and others. Singing Evangelist F. C. Huston was also present and contributed to the services by his sweet singing. The attendance throughout the day was large. Over a thousand dollars was raised.

The capacity of the building is doubled. There is a large lecture room downstairs and Sunday-school room upstairs. This is a young church, not quite seven years old. One of the interesting features is a Business Men's Bible Class with over fifty. During the last two years our membership has doubled. With our enlarged equipment, we now enter upon an era of greater growth.

A. H.

Correspondence

Our Western Letter.

Yellow journals probably have their uses and possess a value; but what their uses are, and what their exact value is I am not able, at this moment, to divine. But the paper with startling headlines, printed in red ink, sometimes in blue, is with us and present indications are that for some time it will remain. Thomas Jefferson must have had papers of this character in mind when he said: "Nothing can be believed which is seen in a newspaper. Truth itself becomes suspicious by being put into that polluted vehicle. The real extent of this state of misapprehension is known only to those who are in condition to confront facts within their knowledge with the lies of the day." The same now, Mr. Jefferson!

In this part of the world an interesting discussion is on, precipitated by definite charges concerning the low state of morals in our public school pupils, made by a third or fourth rate daily paper. This irresponsible purveyor of "news" avers that seventeen school boys were found, on a recent Sunday afternoon, in a vile resort in Denver. Later, in a sheet of similar character, there was an intimation that these boys attended Sunday-school and church in the morning before going to "the row" in the afternoon. The purpose, of course, was to reflect in the first place, on the public schools and, in the second place, on the Sunday-schools and churches.

I am decidedly skeptical. In respect to this story, I am an honest doubter. Boys are sometimes silly, and now and again reckless. Girls ditto. As a rule boys are not bad. When they are bad they are not totally depraved, nor are they utterly destitute of sense. Generally girls are good. The morally bad boy or girl is the exception. It is not at all like a boy who is starting in the way of immorality to join himself to sixteen other boys animated by a similar purpose. On its face the story is, to say the least, of doubtful credibility. For myself I give the boys the benefit of a doubt.

Good, however, comes from the story in this respect and to this extent:

Our interest is awakened and a discussion has been started concerning the present moral discipline, or lack of moral discipline, of our young people; a subject of tremendous and far-reaching importance. Upon the moral character of the American people depends the stability and perpetuity of our free institutions. Government of the people, by the people and for the people cannot exist among those who are ignorant and immoral. Virtue and intelligence are essential to the stability and perpetuity of the American Republic. It was because there was a large degree of intelligence and virtue on the part of our fathers that this free government came into existence. For the same reason it continues to this day, i. e., the people, as a rule, are intelligent and moral. Shall this condition continue? This is the question now before us.

How to train the rising generation in the principles of morality is a problem. The old time domestic discipline no longer exists. The family altar has almost entirely disappeared. The catechetical method, on the part of the Christian ministry, has fallen into innocuous desuetude. The Sunday-school has taken the place of the home in the moral training of the young—so far as the place has been taken. The Sunday-school is far from perfect. The work of instruction in our Bible schools is almost entirely in the hands of untrained and inexperienced persons. Here and there, now and again, are found in the schools competent men and women—competent for this task—but they are the exception. The pupil is not, generally, didactic. Within recent years there has been an improvement at this point; but perfection has not been attained. To this proposition there will doubtless be a general, if not universal, agreement. I know of no denomination, and I am not wholly ignorant of the customs and usages of my brethren in the various Protestant denominations—I know of no denomination in which the children are carefully and catechetically trained, unless it is the Lutherans.

In our public schools something is done in the inculcation of general moral principles; but the moral instruction in schools supported by the state, is, of necessity, divorced from the doctrines of the Christian religion. In the true and full sense of the expression Christian morality is not taught. It is not safe to affirm that a high plane of moral life can be maintained apart from religion. What then? We are face to face with a serious problem—a problem, as I have said, affecting the continuance of our national life.

There are two organizations in existence which are, at this moment, I think, looking toward the solution of this grave problem. I refer to the "National Congress of Religious Education," of which the Rev. J. E. Gilbert, D. D., of Washington, D. C., is General Secretary, and the "Religious Education Association," organized in Chicago one year ago, of which the Rev. Dr. Ira Landreth is General Secretary. I acknowledge allegiance to both of these organizations. I am not, however, sanguine as to satisfactory results. I see no reason why there should be two such organizations. One ought to be sufficient. It is not easy to free one's self from the impression that some person has an ax to grind. Is this suspicion destitute of foundation? So mote it be.

The Bible is the text book of morals. But the Bible, generally, has no place in our schools. The only authoritative text book is ruled out. When it is used it is used in a perfunctory or mechanical way. The formal reading of a few verses and the speaking of a few words of prayer in the presence of the pupils possesses a zero value. It is safe to affirm that the Bible will not, in the present generation, be made a part of the curriculum in our schools, primary, secondary, advanced, supported by taxes collected from the people. If the Bible were more recognized and used, the teachings in our public schools, with an exception here and there, are not sufficiently intelligent in its contents to use it with ethical advantage.

Two principal schemes have been proposed. The first is the selection of reading from the Hebrew and Christian Scriptures. Concerning this proposition it may be said that if selections were made satisfactory to the supporters and patrons of the public schools, for the reasons above given, they would possess but little value. The present teachers are, generally, incapable of bringing out the ethical teachings of the selected readings.

The second is the use of The Ten Commandments given to the Hebrew people at Sinai by Jehovah, through Moses. It is said, and with truth, that the ethical teaching of the commandments, as far as it goes, is satisfactory to Jews and Christians, to Romanists and Protestants, to Agnostics and believers.

INTENSE SUFFERING

From Dyspepsia and Stomach Trouble

Instantly Relieved and Permanently Cured by Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

A New Discovery, but Not a Patent Medicine.

Dr. Redwell relates an interesting account of what he considers a remarkable case of acute stomach trouble and chronic dyspepsia by the use of the new discovery, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

He says: "The patient was a man who had suffered, to my knowledge, for years with dyspepsia.

Everything he ate seemed to sour and create gases in the stomach. He had pains like rheumatism in the back, shoulder blades and limbs, fullness and distress after eating, poor appetite and loss of flesh; the heart became affected, causing palpitation and sleeplessness at night.

"I gave him powerful nerve tonics and blood remedies, but to no purpose. As an experiment I finally bought a 50 cent package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at a drug store and gave them to him. Almost immediately relief was given, and after he had used four boxes he was to all appearances fully cured.

"There was no more acidity or sour, watery risings, no bloating after meals, the appetite was vigorous and he has gained between 10 and 12 pounds in weight of solid, healthy flesh.

"Although Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are advertised and sold in drug stores, yet I consider them a most valuable addition to any physician's line of remedies, as they are perfectly harmless and can be given to children or invalids or in any condition of the stomach with perfect safety, being harmless and containing nothing but fruit and vegetable essences, pure pepsin and Golden Seal.

"Without any question they are the safest, most effective cure for indigestion, biliousness, constipation and all derangements of the stomach, however slight or severe."

I am not certain, however, that the saying of The Ten Commandments by rote, day after day, would possess any special value. The saying of the commandments in church, as a part of the worship, is one thing; their citation in school, separate from acts of devotion, and apart from the solemnities and sanctions of religion, is a different matter. What would be the ethical value of the Decalogue used in the manner suggested in our public schools? This is a legitimate and almost necessary inquiry at this point.

A distinguished Denver minister says: "Teach morality in the same way that arithmetic is taught. Make it a definite part of the curriculum. Drill into the children the rules of morality. Can arithmetic be taught without rules? The rules of morality are The Ten Commandments."

To this position my reply is, Morality is much more than a merely verbal mastery of rules. True morality is a spirit. Persons are not made moral by learning a form of words. I have never heard, for instance, the Lord's Prayer recited more accurately and fluently than by prisoners in jails and penitentiaries. They know the words; they can "say" the prayer. In it and in "The Ten Words" they have been carefully drilled. But are they

LAMP-FITS.

How do you know what chimney fits your lamp?

Your grocer tells you.

How does he know?

He don't.

Do you then?

That's about how lamps are fitted with chimneys by people who don't use my Index; and they complain of bad chimneys! Lamp-Fits indeed! Do you want the Index? Free.

MACBETH, Pittsburgh.

moral? Rules are important; I do not say essential, in the inculcation of morals. But rules are not sufficient. They may be "on the tip of the tongue," as we say, and the master of the rules of morality in this sense be a scoundrel. Rules may be sufficient in learning arithmetic, but not in learning morality—of course I mean practical morality.

The personality of the teacher is of far more value in the generation of a moral spirit, temper, state of mind, than any book or set of rules. If the teacher possesses a high moral sense and is a pattern of moral deportment the pupil will unconsciously imitate the spirit of the preceptor and come to move on a higher plane than can be attained by memorizing and reciting stately the best possible rules—merely as rules.

Have I said enough to cause you to see, if you did not see before, that the moral discipline of the rising generation is a very great and an exceedingly grave problem? Then I am, for the present, satisfied.

Meantime, let it be understood that the work of training the young in Christian morality—and this is the only true morality—is in the hands of the church. It is pre-eminently and specifically the work of the church. This work must be done by the church from the pulpit, in the home, from house to house and through the Bible-school. The pastor and his helpers must be the leaders. Methods ought to be considered. The ways of doing the work must, if possible, be improved; special attention ought to be given to the training of teachers for our Sunday-schools. The need is not so much improved lessons as improved teachers. Done by the church, moral training will not be divorced from the Christian faith, nor ought it to be. When the church through any of the channels indicated, or through unnamed channels, does the work, it will be so intimately associated with religion that no person can tell where the one terminates and the other begins, and this is as it should be.

Denver, Colo.

B. B. TYLER.

Jottings by the Way.

We have long cherished a desire to see California and the Pacific slope. The opportunity has come this winter during convalescence from a fever. This is not the season of the country's greatest beauty, but we have seen enough to understand the charm of this favored region for the thousands who flock thither every year. The welcome of the people is as genial and generous as the blessed sunlight that bathes mountain and plain. Perhaps this is one reason for its popularity.

We entered the state by way of San Francisco and were surprised to find such a truly magnificent city on a spot which a few years ago was covered with desolate sand dunes. Her splendid water facilities are not exceeded even by New York, and we have never seen such mammoth ferry boats, commodious railroad stations and perfect equipment for handling large crowds of people.

Going south from San Francisco on the train, we had the company of the Presbyterian state evangelist. He said: "Your people are getting a great hold on this state. I know personally many of your ministers. They are good men, and I am proud of their friendship." We were ready to believe this after seeing some of our churches in southern California.

We had the pleasure of speaking to Brother Smither's congregation in Los Angeles, and also that of Brother Dowling in Pasadena. Brother Smither is just starting his fourteenth year with the First Church. The right kind of a man gains momentum with each succeeding year. One of the most encouraging things in our work is this increasing tendency toward longer pastorates. It takes a man three or four years in a city to get his bearings and lay the foundations for permanent good. Short pastorates in the cities are often a waste of time. Brother Smither's wide influence in southern California is due not only to the sterling qualities of the man, but much more to the fact that these qualities have been brought to bear on the same people through so many years.

Bro. F. M. Dowling illustrates the same principle in Pasadena. His influence is not confined to his church where he is so greatly beloved. He is one of the best known men in the whole city, and his personality touches the public life at many points. In this way a man multiplies his influence. Pasadena is greatly in need of a new church building. The location of some constables opposite the present church interferes greatly with the services. Besides, the congregation has outgrown its present building. Here is an opportunity in this rapidly growing and world-famous resort to build a structure worthy of our people and our plea. We ought to have here a building whose very appearance would be an index of the growing power and importance of our people in the religious world. Pasadena as a great thoroughfare is a strategic point, and it would be a mistake to erect here a building that would be dwarfed and overshadowed by the splendid churches around it. Some of our wealthy people ought to help Brother Dowling do this service to our cause. His congregation cannot do it of themselves. With the help of a few thousand dollars, our influence in this city could be doubled.

We had also the pleasure of worshipping with Bro. B. F. Coulter's congregation in East Broadway, Los Angeles. He is doing a large and important work. Most of the churches in southern California have received assistance from his generous hand. Bro. R. P. Shepherd, late of East Orange, New Jersey, was in a meeting with this church when we left California, and people were turning to the Lord.

We had the pleasure of meeting with the brethren of southern California in their monthly ministers' meeting, and speaking to them on "City Evangelization"—a theme of immense practical importance just now in Los Angeles, a city of 140,000 souls, which doubles its population every ten years, and in many other centers which are rapidly becoming cities. It was an inspiration to meet these brethren. The spirit of evangelism is strong with them. They are wide-awake, up-to-date, and are grappling manfully with their problems. The convention of 1905 will be surprised to find what a strong front California is presenting in our work.

The trip to Santa Catalina, a lovely island eighteen miles out in the Pacific, will linger in memory as a delightful dream. One is always tempted to try to describe such a marvel of natural beauty, but it cannot be done. It must be seen in order to be appreciated. We had the good fortune to run across Bro. Geo. Vandervoort, of North Tonawanda. How pleasant is the face of a friend in a strange place! Catalina is a paradise for fishermen, and Brother V. has a story to tell of a "catch" that would make the apostle Peter want to "go a-fishing" again.

Another rare treat of this visit was ten days spent at Martin's Camp up in the Sierra Madre Mountains. Brother Dowling drove us out seven miles from Pasadena to the foot of the trail. There we mounted burros and began the ascent. The trail zigzags up the mountain side for nine miles amid such beauty and sublimity of scenery as we have never seen before. The foot-hills are barren, but soon we reach the wooded slopes, the prospect widens, precipices yawn beneath, and every advance is a surprise and wonder. The camp is nearly 6,000 feet high. One has a splendid view of the cities below, the blue Pacific in the distance, and Santa Catalina and Santa Barbara 75 miles away. Here 40 of us sat down to a sumptuous Thanksgiving dinner, every article of which had to be brought up on the backs of the faithful burros. It is good to be in such a place, to listen to the eternal stillness, and have communion with God amid these mighty works of his hand.

In December we came on to Phoenix, Ariz., a Mecca for so many afflicted ones. The climate here is supposed to be a specific for sthma, rheumatism and all sorts of throat and lung troubles. If people come in time, they are benefited or cured, but many come too late. Phoenix is a thriving little city with most of the modern conveniences of life and

Total Abstainers

Insured in the Total Abstinence Department of SECURITY MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY, receive larger dividends in the ratio that the mortality of the department may be lower than the general mortality of the company.

Policies may be registered by the State of New York, thereby guaranteeing by a special deposit with the State the full reserve values.

Those insured in this department are entitled to an endowment issued by National Total Abstinence League (Incorporated by State of New York) which will largely increase surplus earnings. For particulars or Special Agency proposition, address

LEVI F. HOAG, Manager,
140-141 Times Bldg., 41 Park Row, New York.

If you purchase a

PIANO OR ORGAN

with the name

upon it, you will have the VERY BEST MUSICAL INSTRUMENT that money can buy. Prices and terms most reasonable. Catalogues free to any address.

THE ESTEY CO.,

1116 Olive St.,

St. Louis, Mo.

Mention this paper.

The Only Published Addresses of
ALEXANDER PROCTER

are contained in

"The Witness of Jesus"

A cloth-bound volume of 404 pages.

Every Christian, particularly preachers of the Word, should have it on their book shelves.

Price, $1.25.

Christian Publishing Company

1522 Locust Street

St. Louis, Mo.

fully as much culture as one would find in any northern city of its size. Just now the city is full of people who have come to escape the blasts of the northern winter. They get what they come for. Eternal sunshine reigns supreme, and no breath of blizzard ever reaches us. It seems as if we were in another world. These sheltered valleys are a natural sanitarium, and increasing multitudes are destined to come to them every year. Just now the territory is greatly exercised over the matter of joint statehood with New Mexico. It would be a pity to join together those whom God has separated by race, religion and political sentiments. The two territories should be permitted to remain as they are. Neither is yet ripe for statehood.

Our church here, under the faithful ministry of Bro. W. H. Bagby, with Sister Bagby as most efficient organist, is doing a good work. They are now in their second year and already have a strong hold on the community. The church has had to surmount many difficulties to reach its present efficiency: The constant coming and going of members, inevitable in a place like this, is a great drawback. There is, however, a strong nucleus of earnest and devoted resident members, and they are the mainstay and hope of the church. Bro. Grant K. Lewis, of Long Beach, Cal., recently assisted Brother Bagby in a meeting which resulted in 11 additions.

After my illness of last winter, my physician recommended a year of rest from pastoral work. The time is now about up, and I bless God for returned health and fitness for service. It has been hard to keep quiet so long, but the year has taught me much not to be learned in the schools. My ministry ought to be stronger and richer, and come from a more grateful heart for all the mercies of the past.

Phoenix, Ariz.

J. M. PHILPUTT.

More Complimentary Words of Our Anniversary Number.

The Christian-Evangelist is growing in favor with its readers. E. J. LAMPTON.

The more I read your paper, the more I think it ought to be in every home. GEO. O. NEWCOMB.

I assure you nothing gives me more pleasure than to work for the Christian-Evangelist. R. E. MCKNIGHT.

The Christian-Evangelist ought to be in every home. It inspires one to nobler and better living. MRS. F. F. JACKSON.

I don't want to miss an issue. We think that the Christian-Evangelist is the best paper published anywhere by our brethren. We are anxious for its weekly visits. S. K. MERRITT.

I congratulate you upon the splendid success and the high standard to which you have brought the Christian-Evangelist and wish you abundant usefulness for 1904. E. M. MARTIN.

I have taken the Christian-Evangelist since 1855. I have taken it so long I cannot give it up now. I took it when the Creaths wrote for it and it was no larger than Ayer's almanac. M. F. LITTLE.

I feel that I cannot do without the Christian-Evangelist. I am 62 years old, but read almost every bit of it and find something good on every page. May it live on after 40 years and always be as good. MRS. SARAH A. GARDNER.

Allow me, also, to speak my enjoyment of the patient, sympathetic and broad-minded tone of your paper in dealing with differences and disputes, both internal and external, of our brotherhood. A. HOLMES.

I find the Christian-Evangelist very helpful in many ways. It is uplifting to the soul and tells so much of what the brotherhood is doing for the cause of Christ. Success to you and the Christian-Evangelist. J. C. REYNOLDS.

I enjoy reading the Evangelist very much. It has such a good spirit and is so helpful. May our Father in heaven give many years to the editor and multiply the readers of the Evangelist with each passing year. WM. JACKSON SHELBURNE.

The anniversary number of the Christian-Evangelist is of special interest to those who have known and loved the paper so long. I assure you I shall do all in my power to aid in securing the 10,000 additional subscribers. MRS. J. M. HENRY.

I have subscribed for one or more numbers of the Christian-Evangelist for thirty or forty years. May you long continue to furnish spiritual food that we are privileged to send to our absent children and ministers who are not able to subscribe. H. C. JACKSON.

Nineteen years ago when we first established our little home we sat down one evening to decide what papers we must have. The Christian-Evangelist was one of them, and during all ups and downs of these nineteen years it has been with us a welcome friend among strangers in a new country. MRS. W. P. RICE.

It is my abiding conviction that the least thing I can do for any church member is to get him to subscribe for and read the Christian-Evangelist. It never fails to give them a deeper interest in religious matters, and particularly to support the officers in their efforts to strengthen the local church. W. H. SHANKS.

MUSIC LESSONS FREE

at your home. We will give, free, for advertising purposes, 48 music lessons for beginners or advanced pupils on Piano, Organ, Banjo, Guitar, Cornet, Violin, or Mandolin, (your expense is small). We teach by mail only and guarantee success. Hundreds write: "Wish I had known of your school before." For booklet, testimonials and FREE tuition contract, address U. S. SCHOOL OF MUSIC, Box 870, 19 Union Square, New York, N. Y.

I like the Evangelist very much and hope you editors who differ will not divide the church over your differences. A. C. ATEN.

[Our good brother will always find the Christian-Evangelist true to the gospel of Christ, and will always work for, not division, but the union of all God's people.—EDITOR.]

I have been reading your anniversary number. I congratulate us on the distinguished ministry vouchsafed to us by the Christian-Evangelist under your leadership. It is but a fitting token of our appreciation that we should ask the Lord for yet thirty years more of the same ministry. I. J. CAHILL.

I have been taking your paper for more than 20 years. I do not know how you can make it any better, unless you put a little more prohibition in it this year. I endorse all the good things, especially Brother Lamars. May you have health and strength and wisdom from above to continue your work many more years. J. M. IRVINE.

When the writer of these lines removed from Ohio to Bedford, Ind., in the fall of 1876, J. M. Mathes was one of the editors of the Record and Evangelist. Before college opened, when we had been there only a few days, he said: "You will want to take the paper?" I replied, "Yes." I have been a subscriber and reader ever since. I rejoice in its work and prosperity. J. A. BEATTIE.

I have just spent an hour or two reading your inspiring Anniversary Number. How it rejoices my heart, and how earnestly I pray you may be given many more years of fruitful editorial labors. I have read the Christian-Evangelist for more than twenty years, and I shall never be able to put into words the gratitude I feel for its service to my personal and ministerial life. SUMNER T. MARTIN.

Permit me to thank you for your great Fortieth Anniversary number of the Christian-Evangelist. The congratulatory expressions from so many world-renowned editors, authors and ministers show most conclusively that your influence has been very wide among leaders of thought and expression. I wish you many years of growing usefulness among an appreciative people, both within and without our fellowship. OSCAR P. SPIEGEL.

I have taken the Evangelist ever since it, as "The Christian," was published in St. Louis, and was a stockholder at one time. I was taking both the "Evangelist" and "The Christian" when they were united, and have worked for the paper ever since. I have gotten what subscribers I could and have paid for from four to six subscriptions and I expect to take the paper while I am here. I was an admirer of Brother Johnson, loved to read his editorials and I love the mild, Christian spirit of Brother Garrison through all the adverse criticisms that he has passed through. I enjoy your Anniversary Number very much indeed. It brings to me so many pleasant memories of early days of this reformation. For I am almost a pioneer of the movement. My first Christian paper was the Christian-Messenger, published by B. W. Stone and D. P. Henderson, in Jacksonville. Have taken the Millennial Harbinger, Bible Advocate, The Gospel Echo published by E. L. Cralg, at Carrollton, Ill., in which was written the obituary of my husband, H. S. Savage, in 1865. MRS. S. F. SAVAGE.

INDIAN BEAD WORK 10 Bunches Assorted Colored AND BURNT LEATHER Beads and Book, Patterns and Instructions, 50c., which cost elsewhere $1.50; the Book, Patterns and Instructions without Beads, 10c. A Colored View of World's Fair Purse or Card Case, 25c., with name burnt on fine leather, all prepaid. H. D. HILL, 411 Olive Street, St. Louis, Missouri.

Christian Lesson Commentary For 1904.

By W. W. DOWLING.

Linen Cloth Binding; 407 Pages.

$1.00, Postpaid.
$9.00 per dozen, not Prepaid.

THE NINETEENTH VOLUME IN AN UNBROKEN SERIES.

ADAPTED for use by the Officers, Teachers and Advanced Pupils of the Sunday-school. THE TEXT is printed in both the Common Version and in that Authorized by the American Revision Committee, in Parallel Columns.

ITS ADVANTAGES.

It Declares the Whole Truth According to the Scripture.
It Contains Colored Maps Prepared with Special Care for This Book.
It Contains Selections from the Scholarship of the World's Commentators.
It Contains Blackboard Illustrations on Each Lesson.
It Contains Illustrations of many of the Prominent Places Mentioned in the Lesson.
It is the Cheapest Lesson Commentary Published, Considering its Amount of Matter.

Christian Publishing Company
1522 Locust Street St. Louis, Mo.

AMERICA FOR CHRIST

The American Christian Missionary Society calls attention to the vast need of our beloved country. Three-fourths of the land is missionary territory to us. Ours is the plea which presents the gospel as the power of God unto salvation. There never was a time when our plea was more gladly received or more productive of immediate results. In thirteen weeks, since the Detroit Convention,

21,229 Baptisms Have Been Reported

through regular channels. Add to this 1,459 who have come to us from the denominations, and we have a total of 22,688 additions in thirteen weeks, or an average of 1,745 per week.

We can be said to have firmly established the cause in but eight states. In nearly all the other states our cause is still in its infancy and can not live without help. More than $50,000 additional appropriations have been asked for already this year. This in the face of the fact that but $56,000 of last year's income was available for mission work.

The Home Board is asking of the brethren $200,000 this year, for pressing needs.

The Corresponding Secretary asks that this great work shall be given its rightful place in the hearts and the help of the brotherhood. The Board is planning wisely and broadly. They ask the preachers to join with them in a mighty forward movement. May is the date of concerted action. Shall we prepare for it? Write us your heart.

BENJAMIN L. SMITH, Secretaries
GEO. B. RANSHAW,

American Christian Missionary Society

Y. M. C. A. Bldg., Cincinnati, O.

Marriages.

HUNT-SPINSBY.—Married, at the parsonage of the Hamilton Ave. Christian Church, St. Louis, on Monday, Jan. 25, 1904, Mr. Edward J. Hunt and Miss Irene Spinsby, both of this city, F. J. Nichols officiating.

McREYNOLDS-TAYLOR.—Married, at the minister's residence, 1532 Camp St., New Orleans, Feb. 8, 1904, Mr. Samuel Westley McReynolds and Miss Bessie Hackney Taylor, of Carthage, Mo., Oscar P. Spiegel, officiating.

VAN NATLA-KELLY.—Married, at the home of the writer at 1027 Farrar St., St. Joseph, Mo., on Jan. 25, 1904, Mr. Jas. D. Van Natla and Mrs. Edith M. Kelly, both of St. Joseph, N. Rolla Davis officiating minister.

WAGNER-GARRETT.—Rev. Clarence E. Wagner and Miss Myrtle M. Garrett were married Feb. 3, 1904, at Burlington, Kan.

Obituaries.

Notices of deaths (not more than four lines) inserted free. Obituary memoirs, one cent per word. Send the money with the copy.

ALLEN.

Lucy Frost Allen was born July 6, 1857, at Plattsburg, Mo., and became a member of the Church when 14 years of age. She was married to Dr. Chilton Allen, Jan. 1, 1877, and removed to Winchester, Ky., in 1882, where Dr. Allen died October, 1895. She returned to her home with her son Webster and daughter Katharine, and in 1891 they removed to St. Louis, where she died Feb. 3, 1904. Dr. J. Ellis preached her funeral here. She lies at rest in Woodlawn Cemetery near our city.

Plattsburg, Mo. J. W. ELLIS.

CASADAY.

After long suffering from dropsy Wm. Casaday passed away Feb. 4, and was buried the 6th; was born in Indiana May 31, 1829. Eight months ago we buried his dear old wife. Both were members of the church and died in the faith. Two noble sons and one daughter survive them.

Milton, Iowa, Feb. 8. IRVIN T. LEBARON.

COOK.

On Jan. 24, 1904, our youngest son Carroll left us for the "better land." He was near 12 years old; a loving, affectionate child, that always made glad our hearts and home. Now our hearts are filled with crying and bitterness, and our home is oh, so lonely. But we find comfort in the promises of God, and the hope of the gospel, and in the many many tokens and expressions of love and sympathy of our kindred in Christ Jesus.

S. M. AND M. A. COOK.

DOYLE.

J. J. Doyle on the 10th day of January, 1904, in the 91st year of his age, at Quincy, Ill., passed into the Great Beyond. Bro. Doyle was a true type of the honest Christian gentleman; firm in his convictions of right and justice, fearless of criticism in his life efforts for the welfare and happiness of his friends and loved ones. Though full of energy in business pursuits, he was never able to do more than provide a sufficiency of this world's goods for his family, from whom he demanded respect and obedience as its head. Mr. Doyle was no pessimist, but while in health looked ever on the bright side of life. His last illness was brief and possibly painless, as he quickly passed away after being stricken with paralysis. He leaves five sons and two daughters, Miss Mary H. Doyle of Quincy, Ill., and Mrs. R. T. Leake of Hannibal, Mo. The sons reside in the States respectively, J. Q. in Colorado, J. L. in Utah, C. W. in Arkansas, F. F. in Nebraska, and the writer, W. H., is a resident of St. Louis. Many friends mourn the demise of J. J. Doyle as a man who was in possession of many good qualities and a true Christian character.

Sisters and brothers!
Nor weep nor bow thy heads in anguish;
Accept as good the will of God,
His soul has fled to fields elysian!
His body rests beneath the sod.

Life on earth to him no longer,
Gave of pleasure, health nor gain;
Cease thee, then, to grieve, but ever
Strive to chant the sweet refrain:

Keep in peace and love eternal.
Precious God, our father's soul:
Grant us strength to tread unflinching,
Paths which lead to heaven's goal.

4412 Castleman Ave. W. H. DOYLE.

FRY.

James M. Fry was born March 28, 1843; died in Kansas City, January 27, 1904. October 6, 1869, he married Miss Lampton, of Platte county. He became a member of the church at Todd's Creek, Platte county, Mo. His body was brought to Plattsburg, Mo., for interment. The writer preached the funeral sermon. An aged Christian mother, two brothers, a sister, and a son and daughter, with their mother, survive to mourn their loss.

Plattsburg, Mo. J. W. ELLIS.

GREER.

Martha L. (Campbell) Greer, familiarly called "Aunt Patsy," passed into the beyond Jan. 29, 1904, in her 85th year. She was born near Georgetown, Ky., came to Illinois at the age of 12 years, and has lived in and near Rushville for 72 years. She became a Christian in early life and was the last one of the charter members of the church at Rushville.

LEE.

Louise Janette Morse, beloved wife of Hezekiah Lee, died in Santa Ana, Cal., Jan. 26, 1904, aged 44 years. She was the daughter of Horace and Lydia S. Morse, professed faith in Christ at the age of 12 years, and lived a devoted Christian life. At eventide, when the gorgeous rays of the setting sun, overflooded the western sky and waters, her spirit sped away to that eternal world which far surpasses any earthly splendor.

MRS. L. S. MORSE.

MOORE.

Mary J. Moore was born near Cincinnati, Ohio, Jan. 22, 1844. Suddenly died with congestion of lungs at the home of her daughter, Mrs. C. E. Drake, Jan. 31, and was laid to rest Feb. 2, the writer conducting. She was a faithful member of Christ's body 44 years. A most lovable sister and friend.

Milton, Iowa.

MORRISON.

Mrs. Anna Jane Morrison, wife of Hugh T. Morrison, Sr., departed this life at Springfield, Ill., Wednesday, Feb. 3, 1904, in her 57th year, from an attack of pneumonia. She was ill only a few days. The shock came to her family and friends like a bolt of lightning from the clear sky. So sudden was the summons that members of the family in Chicago did not have time to reach the bedside before death came. Before it was realized how severe was the attack she fell into a deep sleep from which she did not awaken. The funeral was delayed until the husband could arrive. The services were held in the First Christian Church at Springfield, Sunday afternoon, Feb. 7, and were in charge of J. E. Lynn of the West Side Church. Brother A. McLean, who is an old friend of the family came from Fort Wayne, Ind., to speak words of comfort and consolation. Judge Charles P. Kane spoke for the church, how it had come in a brief time to love Sister Morrison for her devotion to her family and the church. Her maiden name was Anna Jane McDonald, and she was born in St. Johns, New Brunswick, Canada, May 19, 1847. While she was yet a child her father died and several years later her mother remarried. Grown to womanhood's estate she met and married Hugh T. Morrison and her hand followed where her heart had been given. Her husband was just entering his eventful career as a minister and evangelist. They came to the United States, first settling in Cincinnati, and later living in Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa and for the last few years in Illinois. Their residence in Iowa was for about 18 years, the greater part of which was in Des Moines. Four years ago the family removed to Chicago, and for a year and a half have resided in Springfield. The husband together with four children survive. The former has for a number of months been pastor of the church in Dayton, Washington. The children are Russell A. and Louise C. of Chicago, Charles Clayton and Hugh T., Jr., of Springfield, Ill. The latter two have for the past 18 months been co-pastors of the First Christian Church of Springfield. She is also survived by three sisters, Mrs. Alonzo Ludy, of Winchester, Ind., Mrs. Harry Dobbie and Mrs. Arthur Archer, of Salida, Col. She has two brothers, Edward and Charles Chandler, living in Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island. A mother in Israel has been taken. Her life has been a poem in which not a single discord has spoiled the perfect rhythm. The world is better that such women live, and their memory is a benediction. For such as she the grave has no victory and death no sting.

How to Enjoy Breakfast.

"Just a roll and coffee, is all I ever eat for breakfast." How often you hear this statement, especially among women. Some men talk the same way. What's the trouble? Breakfast should be one of the best meals of the day. It is needed to get up steam for the body and nerve for the daily toil. When a person doesn't enjoy breakfast, there's something wrong with the stomach. In the majority of cases it is tired out and weak in the morning from working overtime trying to digest things which should never have been put into it and in fighting to get rid of poisonous, catarrhal waste matter. While this rough and tumble goes on in the stomach, the brain is made unnaturally active by weird dreams, some of them frightful in nature. Result—mental and physical exhaustion in the morning.

The stomach of a healthy person rests at night, so does his brain. If your appetite is bad, if you are restless at night, if you have bad dreams, if you are distressed after eating, if your breath is bad in the morning, if you are troubled with catarrh, if you are bilious, if you are constipated, if your kidneys do not act properly and if you are generally run down, you need Vernal Palmettona (formerly known as Vernal Saw Palmetto Berry Wine). Only one dose a day is required. Take it on going to bed. You will have perfect rest at night, a good appetite for breakfast and enjoy all your other meals. You can get it at all drug stores. If you want a free sample bottle, to try before you buy, send us your name and address. It will be promptly, postpaid. Vernal Remedy Co., 506, Seneca Building, Buffalo, N. Y.

A Modern Plea for Ancient Truth

By J. H. GARRISON

An epitome of the plea for a restoration of primitive Christianity in doctrine and in life.

94 Pages—Bound in Pretty Oxford Gray.

Price, 35 Cents, Postpaid.

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING CO., St. Louis, Mo.

An Interesting Story in a
Handsome Volume

Altar Stairs

by

CHAS. J. SCOFIELD

Author of "A Subtle Adversary."

Contains

320 pages

on fine book paper.

Illuminated cloth binding.

Seven illustrations.

New type.

Price

$1.50, Postpaid

—Order from—

Christian Publishing Co.,

1522 Locust St.,

ST. LOUIS, MO.

A Chinese Story-Teller

By WM. REMFRY HUNT.

Yellow Cloth Binding; Black
Ornamentation; 167 Pages.

75 cents, Postpaid.

A Unique Book. Distinctly Chinese in binding, illustrations and in the stories it contains.

It affords a glimpse here and there of the actual every-day life and thought of one of the most remarkable and interesting races of people on earth. Not dry or prosy, but bright, interesting and enjoyable.

Christian Publishing Company

1522 Locust Street

St. Louis, Mo.

Evangelistic

We invite ministers and others to send reports of meetings, additions and other news of the churches for publication in this department. It is especially requested that additions be reported as "by confession and baptism" or "by letter."

Special dispatch to the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST.

McMEHEN, WEST VIRGINIA.—One hundred and thirty-one additions. Handicapped for lack of room. Clarence Mitchell is a great evangelist.—J. W. UNDERWOOD, pastor.

JACKSONVILLE, ILLINOIS, Feb. 14.—Scoville and Helm are here. Church crowded every night. Went to opera house to-night. Both galleries crowded; hundreds stood up and hundreds turned away; 22 added. Brother Thrapp, our pastor, preached for Brother Scoville at Chicago to-day.—J. B. WHARTON.

ARKANSAS.—Springdale, Feb. 10.—Ten days' meeting by E. C. Browning, state evangelist; four added by letter. Brother Browning's sermons were uniformly dignified deep and impressive (as well as spiritual).—DANIEL TRUNDLE.

CALIFORNIA.—San Diego, Feb. 10.—I desire to report a successful meeting which the San Diego congregation has just closed. Forty-three persons were added to our membership, and three others were baptized holding membership elsewhere. Jesse P. McKnight, who came to the coast last November from Oskaloosa, Ia., did the preaching. He and his family have united temporarily with this congregation. Our people were so well pleased with him as man and preacher we invited him to lead us in this meeting. He proved to be the very kind of evangelist we longed for. His sermons were direct, scriptural, convincing, persuasive, and his delivery pleasing. His contribution to the success of the meeting was very large. Specially attractive were his children's sermons. Would that more of us had the gift of preaching to children. The church was well organized for the meeting and the co-operation was all that could have been demanded. The meeting was twenty-two evenings in length. We rested Saturday evenings. There were two Sunday afternoon meetings. Twenty-eight sermons altogether. We have a membership now of between 350 and 400. Our Sunday attendance is over 200 and has been for a year. There is a spirit of hopefulness in the church and in the city. San Diego is on the eve of great prosperity, and the church is expecting to feel the effect. Friends in the east who contemplate removing to this state would better look into the merits of San Diego.—W. E. CRABTREE.

Vacaville, Feb. 10.—We have just closed a very interesting union meeting, participated in by the Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian and Christian Churches, the pastors preaching in turn. No conditions or restrictions

GROWING LENGTHWISE

You want the children to grow, but not all lengthwise. When they start that way Scott's Emulsion will help them to grow right—with due plumpness and outward proportion, and with inward vigor and good spirits.

The Emulsion increases digestive power and strengthens the vital organs to get the best and make the most out of all the other food. It gives a kind of help that every growing child ought to have.

We'll send you a sample free upon request.

SCOTT & BOWNE, 109 Pearl Street, New York.

were imposed but brotherly love prevailed, and deference to the customs of others shown whenever possible. All fell in with our way of taking confessions. Other kind of invitations were sometimes given, but no others were accepted. Sixteen made the good confession just as in our own meetings, and nine of them came into the Christian Church.—J. E. DENTON.

COLORADO.—Florence, Feb. 11.—Two have united with the church and four have been baptized since last report.—WARD RUSSELL.

ILLINOIS.—Mackinaw, Feb. 8.—Eleven additions at Mackinaw since Jan. 1.—H. H. PETERS.

Cerro Gordo, Feb. 10.—Preached my first sermon here after moving the last Lord's day of January. Began a meeting with home forces the first Lord's day of this month. Meeting here three days old. Three confessions last night.—S. H. GIVLER.

Scottville, Feb. 8.—Am in a meeting here since Jan. 31 with three added, two confessions. Good outlook for success. Will hold a meeting with home church, Carlville, Ill., in March or April and want a good song leader and personal worker. Fancy soloing not required. Write me at Scottville.—E. O. SHARPE, pastor Carlville, Ill.

Chandlerville, Feb. 9.—Meeting nine days old and two confessions. Pastor T. L. Young, recently from Mississippi, is the preacher in charge. We have charge of the music.—GUY B. WILLIAMSON AND WIFE, Waverly, Ill.

Chambersburg, Feb. 8.—Five added last night at regular service. All men, heads of families. One confession, four reinstated. Many good results of our meeting yet to be realized.—PAUL A. CASTLE.

Petersburg, Jan. 27.—We closed a meeting of 24 days yesterday with 20 accessions: 16 baptisms, four by letter and statement. Bro. H. A. Northcutt, of Kirksville, Mo., did the preaching and did it well. He has built us up spiritually and made us stronger in the faith. Three other churches in the city were holding meetings at the same time.—W. M. GROVES, pastor.

Polo, Feb. 5.—Have closed a meeting in Polo, Ill., and organized a church with 44 members. I was sent here by the first district board. Three of these were formerly members of the Christian church, but only 20 were actually working members. These held their membership in Pine Creek, a country church seven miles away. So 12 were practically a gain to the church. In addition to these there were 12 others divided as follows: Six by primary obedience, two from Baptists, one from United Brethren, one from Lutheran, one from German Baptists, and one from the M. E. An aid society with 25 members and a Bible-school with an enrollment of 62 were organized and $45 per month was raised toward a preacher's salary. The Baptist Church has been rented for a year and the Baptists will nearly all work with us. A good feeling toward the Christian Church has been left in the town and there is a fine prospect for a good church in Polo in the near future. Meade E. Dutt had charge of the singing and was a great help in the meeting. I begin a meeting in the opera house in DeKalb on next Sunday.—HAROLD E. MONSER.

Arcola, Feb. 9.—On May 31, last year, Chas. Reign Scoville was called here to dedicate our new church. He left such a wonderful influence upon our community that we prevailed upon him to come and assist us in a meeting. He was with us 22 days, being here only two Lord's days, as he had to be in his own pulpit one Lord's day during the meeting. There were 141 added to the church and many others we believe will follow. A number of these came from the foremost workers of the Presbyterian Church, among them being one of their elders; others from the Methodists, Baptists and Congregationalists. The city never was so stirred religiously. This has always been considered a hard place to hold a meeting. When the Methodists and Baptists closed their meetings without success, they said they hoped we would be able to do something, but it was not long until we were doing too much to please them. I have never known a man more able than Brother Scoville to stand against such allied forces as opposed us. Infidelity and sectarianism had to go down before the powerful sermons of the evangelist. The result of this meeting puts the Church of Christ by far the strongest in this little city, and there are nine churches here. We reached some of the best and most influential families in our community. Three years ago we had 150 members, now we number 400. Such a plea as the Bible furnishes us with such an evangelist as Brother Scoville, is sure to win. L. T. FAULDERS, pastor.

Jacksonville, Feb. 12.—Have just begun a two weeks' meeting and have 13 added—seven

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL.

Few People Know How Useful It Is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly every body knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but, simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath, and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says: "I advise Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I got more and better charcoal in Stuart's absorbent Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

confessions last night.—CHAS. REIGN SCOVILLE.

Charleston, Feb. 12.—Allen Wilson is preaching every night to a full house; 11 accessions since Sunday.—WILL F. SHAW.

INDIANA.—Kendallville, Feb. 3.—Started a meeting here Jan. 3. The pastor, Brother Bass, was to do the preaching, but was taken ill after the third night of the meeting. During the three weeks of the meeting we changed preachers three times. Two nights we had no preacher, and I did the preaching, singing and conducted the Bible reading. Yet with these obstacles in the way, we were blessed with 13 accessions, 10 of which were the results of personal work; one young brother who wishes to begin studying for the ministry next fall.—H. S. SAXTON & WIFE singing evangelists.

New Richmond, Feb. 11.—Closed two years with the church here last Sunday with five confessions. Four made the good confession the Sunday before when A. L. Crim, a former pastor, preached here; 11 to be baptized to-night. Can be secured for one meeting this spring.—GEO. W. WATKINS.

Brazil, Feb. 11.—Our meeting here has been in progress two weeks; 33 additions to date. H. H. Northcutt, evangelist.—E. L. DAY, pastor.

Martinsville, Feb. 8.—We had a delightful day here yesterday. One baptism last evening, and one addition by letter. No one could ask for a better hearing than we have had here during this bitter cold. Prospects for our March offering are very bright.—M. W. YOCUM.

Shelbyville, Feb. 12.—Bro. H. O. Pritchard, pastor of the church here, is conducting a protracted meeting. So far about 25 souls have been added to the church.—J. E. MASTERS.

IOWA.—Castana, Feb. 10.—I came here one week ago. Four additions last night; eight in all to date; look for more to-night. The church at this place has no Sunday-school, no prayer-meetings, no Christian Endeavor. We shall try to set things in order.—M. L. ANTHONY, evangelist.

Keokuk, Feb. 8.—Great audience last night.

A Letter of Interest.

The Fillmore Bros. Co., Cincinnati, O.

Gentlemen:--I have had charge of church choirs and have done special choir work for the past seventeen years. The past ten years I have used your 'Praise Hymnal,' and I can say without reserve that it is one of the best all-round collections of hymns that I have ever used or seen. It has in it the qualities that live, the music of the better class, and very little of that worthless 'logwood' so commonly used to fill up. After ten years of constant use, my church is not ready for a change. I do not know of a book in the market which could take its place. Its music is as dear to me as when the books came crisp and new from the bindery. Allow me to congratulate you upon the great success you have had with this excellent collection.

Yours respectfully,

J. P. Lowry.

Chorister, Christian Church.

Gibson City, Ill., Jan. 20, 1904.

Rather a good testimonial that. THE PRAISE HYMNAL receives many of them. It is the book for the churches to use. Write us about this, or any other musical matters.

THE FILLMORE BROS. Co., Cincinnati, O.

Two young men responded to the gospel invitation. This is a fine work.—J. W. KILBORN.

Dallas Center, Feb. 6.—Meetings at Beatrice closed Sunday night; 44 confessions, two by letter and three by statement. We found in Brother Price a true "yoke-fellow." It was a pleasure to work with such a loyal pastor and congregation. We just arrived and begin at once with Prof. Lockhart. His work in Drake prevents his being with us only on Saturday and Sunday of each week. The membership here comes largely from the country. Much will depend upon the kind of weather during the meeting. Our next meeting will be in Montana.—LAWRENCE WRIGHT AND SMITH.

Zearing, Feb. 10.—The writer closed a two and a half weeks' meeting recently at Grant Center, our new country chapel north of town. Church organized; 65 added, 41 by confession and baptism. We begin our third year with the Zearing Church next Lord's day.—CHAS. D. HOUGHAM.

Stanhope, Feb. 11.—Ransom Cole recently closed a four weeks' meeting in Stanhope, where I have been laboring since Oct. 1, 1903. This special effort resulted in nine additions, eight confessions, one reclaimed. Our meeting closed with large attendance and splendid interest.—W. C. COLE.

Lake City, Feb. 13.—Last night closed a remarkable meeting here. Evangelist H. E. Van Horn has preached the gospel for five weeks in its simplicity, and with force and power. We had no pastor during the meeting. Brother Arney, our local choir leader, had charge of the music. Forty-eight were added to the church, thirty-three by confession, seven from the denominations. Almost all were adults; four were old gray-headed men, one being over 72 years old. The church has been strengthened and built up by the splendid sermons of Brother Van Horn.—G. L. SMITH.

KANSAS.—Lyndon, Feb. 9.—One confession last Lord's day.—J. F. POWERS.

Caldwell, Feb. 10.—I have accepted the work at this place, and will begin March 1. Visited them Feb. 7, and there was one confession.—LEE H. BARNUM.

Moline, Feb. 5.—We began a meeting with home forces Jan. 3, and closed Feb. 1. Present results 15 added to the church, eight baptisms, two from the M. E. Church and five otherwise. All considered this was a good meeting, as this is a hard field. More will come as the result of the meeting.—E. L. POSTON.

Humboldt, Feb. 8.—Our meeting in this important city began yesterday. The interest is intense from the first. House packed and two added at second service. Brother and Sister Hensly are fine workers, and have all things ready. My health is greatly improved and am growing better every day. Brethren will address me hereafter at Oklahoma City, O. T.—D. D. BOYLE, evangelist.

South Haven, Feb. 10.—Last night we closed the greatest meeting in the history of this town. Many of the best business men of the town who had seemed indifferent to religion confessed Christ and put him on in baptism. Whole families came, until 78 had been added. Fifty-three of these were by baptism, 11 by letter and statement, four reclaimed and 10 from the denominations. Several more will unite at almost the first opportunity, as they were hindered by sickness. We more than doubled our membership and all are full of joy. This, with the grand meeting held at Hunnewell, in which Sister Hazelrig did the preaching (previously reported), makes about 150 additions in this field in the last two and a half months.—J. W. MORRIS, pastor.

KENTUCKY.—Lexington, Feb. 10.—The writer's twelfth year of service with the Broadway Church, Lexington, Ky., recently closed. During that year there were 194 additions to our membership; $8,441.11 was raised for expenses and repairs; $1,576.97 for missions and benevolence—$10,018.08 in all. Every department of our work is in a most healthy condition, the church is united and earnest, and we enter upon our new year full of hope.—MARK COLLIS.

Vanceburg, Feb. 10.—Five additions here at regular services during the past month: three by letter and two by confession and baptism. One of the latter was from the Presbyterians, the other from the world. Both were baptized the same hour of the night they made the good confession. Christian Endeavor day offering for Damoh, India, work was $10. Our society here also supports a boy at this orphanage.—ROY LINTON PORTER, minister.

MICHIGAN.—Yale, Feb. 8.—One confession on Lord's day, Feb. 7.—The work here is in good condition.—O. D. FOURNIER.

Saginaw.—Meeting here 15 days old; 21 added. Continue with large audiences.—RAUM & SEXTON.

Ionia.—Our meeting closed last Sunday evening with 72 additions, nearly all by conversion or from the denominations. Considering the very severe weather of the last two weeks, the meeting was remarkable. Robt. M. Hopkins, of Louisville, Ky., aided in the song and personal work. Our large auditorium was always well filled and on good evenings and Sundays it was crowded. We have had over 100 additions within the year, besides the organization of the new church at Belding with over 100 members.—W. B. TAYLOR.

MISSOURI.—Downing, Feb. 1.—During the year 1903 there were 45 additions under my ministry, 37 by confession and baptism, one from the Baptists and the remainder by letter. There were five Sundays in the year on which I held no service on account of sickness. Officiated at ten weddings and conducted nine funeral services.—W. H. COLEMAN.

East Prairie, Feb. 9.—Bro. Jesse T. Craig, of Poplar Bluff, closed a three weeks' meeting here last night. Ten confessions, two by statement, one reclaimed and the church much strengthened are the visible results of his labor. Brother Craig is an able preacher, and his plain yet honest and loving presentation of the truth won for him the love and respect of all who heard him.—A. L. HUFF, minister.

Edina, Feb. 9.—We have just finished a most enjoyable sixteen days' meeting in Edina. There were nine additions—two by letter and seven conversions. I am engaged to help in a meeting at Virginia, Ill., beginning Feb. 21. J. W. Carpenter is the pastor there.—SIMPSON ELY, Clearfield, Ia.

Bowling Green, Feb. 4.—The churches at Frankford and New London have employed Bro. J. S. Clements. He is a good, strong preacher, whom I have known for a number of years, and I am glad to welcome him to this part of our state.—E. J. LAMPTON.

Spring Garden, Feb. 5.—I held a week's meeting at this place; will close Sunday night. Church revived and meetings well attended. Two confessions, prospects fair.—B. McDONALD, evangelist.

Marshfield, Feb. 9.—1 assisted Bro. J. R. Blunt in a meeting of twenty-two days at Richland, Mo., last month. Result, 25 con fessions, four from Baptists, one from United Brethren who had been baptized and 13 by letter and statement—43 in all. Blunt is beloved by everybody. He is a capital fellow to work with; an excellent pastor.—F. M. HOOTON.

Isadora, Feb. 9.—Nineteen additions to congregation—nine by primary obedience, ten from statement and denominations, result of meeting by J. H. Coffey at Pleasant Ridge schoolhouse. Brother Coffey has been a successful and faithful minister for over forty years.—C. F. W.

Kirkville, Feb. 8.—I have accepted a call to the churches at Bible Grove and Greensburg for this year. The work at both places is starting off nicely. A better class of people cannot be found anywhere than at these two churches. I would be glad to visit any churches that want preaching one-fourth time or I can hold meetings. The church at McFall is needing a good meeting; they are worthy; an able man ought to go there.—WILLIAM MONDY.

Jasper, Feb. 13.—We had three additions here last Sunday, one by baptism, two by statement.—O. W. JONES.

Kirkville, Feb. 11.—There were four additions here Sunday and two at last night's service, one young lady making the good confession. If any of the churches in the vicinity of Kirkville need a preacher for half-time, I can place them in correspondence with same.—G. W. THOMPSON.

Butler, Feb. 13.—I resigned the work at Adel, Ia., to take the work at Butler, Mo., where I take charge Feb. 14. Had a most pleasant pastorate at Adel. That people is consecrated and loyal and progressive. Our work there was quite successful, there having been 43 accessions since June, 1903: 23 baptisms without the aid of evangelists. They will need a pastor at once. Prospects at Butler are bright.—H. JAS. CROCKETT.

OHIO.—Newark, Feb. 8.—Two confessions yesterday. This makes five since last report. Recently organized a brotherhood of I. C. A. with 88 members.—H. NEWTON MILLER.

Cleveland, Feb. 8.—Twenty-nine additions at the Dunham Avenue Church yesterday. Twenty-eight by confession and one by letter.—M. J. GRABLE.

Steubenville, Feb. 8.—Two additions yesterday and two Wednesday night at prayer-meeting. Three confessions and one was from the Baptist Church.—H. H. MONINGFR.

Van Wert.—One from the Presbyterian by baptism, Feb. 4. In January the church gave its annual report which showed the most money raised, the greatest number of additions and the largest Sunday-school in its history.—H. E. STEVENS.

Cleveland, Feb. 9.—Miles Avenue Christian Church of this place has just closed a very successful four weeks' meeting, conducted entirely by its wide-awake pastor, T. Alfred Fleming, resulting in 130 additions, mostly by confession. Brother Fleming is doing a great work here, and his ability and zeal cannot be too highly commended.—E. E. HEALY, Elder.

Toledo, Feb. 10.—Things are going nicely here. There have been 30 added to the church since we came here four months ago. I began my meetings here last Sunday. Three additions so far in the meetings. J. W. Kerns, of Crafton, will be here next Monday night to continue the preaching for me.—W. D. VAN VOORHIS.

Portsmouth.—Have been here 12 days with 127 added.—HARLOW AND REIDENOUR.

OKLAHOMA TERRITORY.—Oklahoma City, Feb. 8.—I have just closed a short meeting at Hebron, Neb. There were fifteen additions, R. A. Schell is in the sixth year of his pastorate. He is doing fine work. He is loved and respected by all the people of the town. Good church and a good preacher.—S. D. DUTCHER.

Geary, Feb. 8.—We closed the Spring Creek meeting last night. Held near the Mayent postoffice, Woodward county for three weeks with 40 additions; baptized 11 yesterday. Of this number, there was one reclaimed, one from the Presbyterian, one by letter, 11 baptized and 26 by statement. We received two dozen Gospel Hymns No. Two, as a present from the Christian Publishing Co., which did good service in this meeting. We would like to hear from brethren in Woodward, Day, Woods and Beaver counties. Address us at Geary.—R. S. SMEDLY, Living Link Evangelist.

Stroud, Feb. 11.—We have a membership of about 50 members. A good little house and preaching two Lord's days in each month. A good Sunday-school. But with the entire force of all the churches the saloon element is in the majority. It is a hard move for us here.—REV. L. F. FUQUA, Box. 432.

TOPIC CARDS FOR 1904

Uniform Prayer-Meeting Topics for the year, per hundred	$0.25
Midweek Prayer-Meeting Topical Outlines for the year (a booklet of 52 pages), per hundred	1.50
Y. P. S. C. E. Prayer-Meeting Topics for the year, per hundred	1.00
Y. P. S. C. E. Prayer-Meeting Topics for three or six months, with list of Officers, Committees and Leaders, per hundred	2.75
The Topical Hand Book, containing Mid-Week Topics, Y. P. S. C. E. Topics and Sunday-School Topics for the year, per hundred	3.00

AND ALL OTHER CHURCH SUPPLIES

Christian Publishing Co., 1522 Locust St. St. Louis, Mo.

OREGON.—The Dalles, Feb. 2.—During the past six months the membership of The Dalles church has been doubled; 17 having united at regular services and 47 in our recent meeting held by our state evangelist, Brother Holmes. In addition to this splendid gain in numbers over $700 was raised in pledges. This money when paid will clear the church of all indebtedness and leave enough on hand to repaint the building. We all praise God from whom all blessings flow.—F. ELMO ROBINSON, Pastor.

Athens, Feb. 10.—Closed with 152 additions. J. W. Jenkins is very close to my ideal pastor. The congregation is one of the best I have known. The people know how to make an evangelist long to see them again. Sixty people gave a dollar each to have Mrs. Moore visit us from Iowa and to return with me. I go next to Harris, Mo.—W. A. MOORE.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Washington, Feb. 8.—A very profitable and successful meeting has just been closed with the historic First Church of Washington, in which E. W. Thornton, of Pittsburg, did the preaching in a most attractive and winning manner. Thirty-nine were added, 26 of them by confession and baptism.—E. A. COLE, pastor.

TENNESSEE.—Nashville, Feb. 8.—Four additions to Woodland Street Church Sunday: one by letter, two by confession, one reclaimed.—JOS. DARDEN ANNISTEAD, minister.

WASHINGTON.—Mount Hope, Feb. 2.—About three months ago Bro. Melford W. Smith, of Fullman, Wash., and Bro. F. O. McColly, singer, of Teco, Wash., held a four weeks' meeting in Mount Hope, the result being the organizing of a church of 45 members, about one-half by confession and baptism. Then they went to Waverly, seven miles south of Mt. Hope, and had a three weeks' meeting, organizing a church with 28 members. Then on Jan. 8 they began a meeting in Rockford, five miles east of Mt. Hope, which closed Lord's day night, the 31st, with the following result: organized a church with 43 members. There was only one member of the Christian Church in Rockford when the meeting began. Mt. Hope and Rockford have hired Brother Dean, of Spokane, for full time, one-half at each place.—JOHN FISHER.

WISCONSIN.—Milwaukee, Feb. 9.—Meeting closed last night; large audiences, 29 additions, nearly all adults and heads of families. Enlarged territory for future work. Meeting conducted with home forces.—C. M. KREIDLER, pastor.

Waitsburg, Feb. 9.—Our revival meetings have been running three weeks and there have been 39 additions. We will continue at least another week. I am quite sure others will come ere we close. The interest is fine and attendance good. There have been additions every night for nearly two weeks. We are using home forces.—W. T. ADAMS.

Pomeroy, Feb. 8.—Meeting closed at Davenport, Feb. 4. Brother Gist, the pastor, began the meeting a week before we arrived and had four added; there were 21 after we began, making 25—16 baptisms, four from the denominations, five restored. Brother Gist is doing a good work at Davenport. The church now numbers about 140; the Sunday-school averages 100. We are now at Pomeroy with Brother Sanders.—T. F. STEPHENS AND WIFE, evangelists.

Rosalie, Feb. 8.—The work at Rosalie starts off well. Commenced here Jan. 1; have had seven additions by letter and one confession. We assisted our brother, W. T. Adams, of Waitsburg, two weeks. He is having a good meeting; 19 additions to date. We begin a meeting here with home forces to day.—A. J. ADAMS, pastor.

A Perfect Gem of Literature

Contained in 82 pages

Wonders of the Sky

By W. J. RUSSELL

It is written to emphasize that

The Heavens

Declare the Glory of God.

Both old and young will enjoy and be benefited by reading this charming little book.

Price, 50 cents, postpaid.

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING COMPANY,
1522 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo.

WORLD'S GREATEST BELL FOUNDRY
CHURCH, PEAL AND CHIME BELLS
ESTABLISHED 1837
J. W. WILSON & COMPANY
BOSTON, MASS.

PLYMYER CHURCH BELLS
UNLIKE OTHER BELLS
SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE.
WRITE FOR CATALOGUE
TELLS WHY.
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

American Bells
Sweet Toned. Far Sounding. Durable.
AMERICAN BELL & FOUNDRY CO.
FREE CATALOGUE NORTHVILLE, MICH.
41 Cady Street.

$3 a Day Sure
Send us your address and we will show you how to make $3 a day absolutely sure; we furnish the work and teach you free, you work in the locality where you live. Send us your address and we will explain the business fully, remember we guarantee a clear profit of $3 for every day's work, absolutely sure. Write at once ROYAL MANUFACTURING CO., Box 125, Detroit, Mich.

SUBSCRIBERS' WANTS.

Miscellaneous wants and notices will be inserted in this department at the rate of two cents a word, each insertion, all words, large or small, to be counted, and two initials stand for one word. Please accompany notice with corresponding remittance, to save bookkeeping.

MISSOURI FARMS—Nice land, $30.00 an acre. Address M. Wight, Iantua, Barton Co., Mo.

COMPLETE College Education by mail, highest degrees granted. Inductive University, Lisbon, O.

FOR SALE—A brand new upright piano at a bargain price. Address D. care Christian-Evangelist.

MARIA MONK—Black Nunnery Exposed. New and complete edition by mail, 35 cents. Address J. D. Williams, box 330, Columbus, Ohio.

FOR SALE—General store; good, clean stock; Christian Church; good business; sickness and death the cause Correspondence solicited. Box 45, Crawford, Mo.

WIDOW, member of Christian Church, in good standing, desires position as housekeeper in minister's family with small children; best of references given and required. Address D. care Christian-Evangelist.

WANTED—Parties to write to me who have as much as $1,500 to invest in a business that will pay more than 100 per cent profit. Will pay R. R. fare one way to responsible parties who will investigate this. Address F. E. Gilmore, Hills Hotel, Bloomington, Ills.

Current Literature

Any book reviewed in these columns (except "net" books) will be sent postpaid by the Christian Publishing Company, St. Louis, on receipt of the published price. For "net" books, add ten per cent for postage.

The Atonement and The Modern Mind. By James Denny, D. D., Professor of New Testament Language, Literature and Theology, United Free Church College, Glasgow. (A. C. Armstrong & Son. $1.)

This work, as the author tells us, in the preface, was suggested by certain criticisms on, and questions raised by, his previous work, "The Death of Christ." These objections arise, as he thinks, from two sources: (1) Certain tendencies or moods of the modern mind which are naturally unfriendly to the central truth in the atonement, and (2) certain misconceptions as to what the New Testament doctrine of the atonement is. Broadly speaking, the first two chapters of the book deal with the former, and the closing chapter with the latter. The book will have a wholesome effect in counteracting certain loose views concerning the atonement, and in modifying some of the older views which are responsible in part for the reaction to an opposite extreme. The author rightly magnifies the atonement as that by which God mediates forgiveness to the human mind. Not only is it such a revelation of God's love as to bring men to penitence and faith, but it also declares God's righteousness in his attitude toward sin and the sinner. On the whole we find ourselves in sympathy with the author's view of the atonement as against the "modern mind" which opposes it, but there is a disposition to maintain some of the old theological terms which stand for theories that have been abandoned, and which, we think, should be abandoned with the systems to which they belong. The author seems to us to belong to that class of scholarly, evangelical writers, who are able to understand the modern mind, to appreciate what is true and praiseworthy in it, and to mediate the truth of the gospel to it. May their tribe increase!

Ultimate Conceptions of Faith. By George A. Gordon, minister of the Old South Church, Boston. (Houghton-Mifflin & Co. $2 net.)

This is rather an audacious title for a book, but its author is an audacious thinker. Audacity, however, is not the chief quality of Dr. Gordon's thinking. Strength and clearness, with a faculty for getting at the heart of things, are the controlling characteristics of his books. This work is the ablest of those which have been put forth by this vigorous thinker. It contains the lectures delivered in the autumn of 1902 in Yale University on the Lyman Beecher foundation, except the first and third chapters which are deemed essential to the author's course of thought. Chapters one, two and three, deal with the preacher as a theologian, pointing out the relation between religion and theology and the value of theology to a minister of the gospel, and the advantages which the minister enjoys of testing the value of his theology in preaching. All this leads up to the main line of thought, that of ultimate conceptions. According to the author's treatment, the individual ultimate is personality; the social ultimate, humanity; the historical ultimate, optimism; the religious ultimate, Jesus Christ; the universal ultimate, the moral universe; the absolute ultimate, God. A chapter is devoted to each of these ultimate conceptions.

It will not be denied that these are, indeed, ultimate conceptions, and when one has followed the author carefully through his studies, he will not fail to be impressed with his reverence for the past, with his spiritual insight, which discerns the errors as well as the great truths of the past, and with his courage in denouncing these errors, no matter how hoary with antiquity, and his em-

FERRY'S

SEEDS

Experience has established it as a fact. Sold by all dealers. You sow—they grow. 1904 Seed Annual postpaid free to all applicants.

D. M. FERRY & CO.
DETROIT, MICH.

MEET ALL NEEDS

phasis upon the old truths in spite of their age. His explanation of the doctrine of the Trinity will no doubt clear difficulties out of the way of many minds, proceeding, as he does, through human nature to interpret the nature of God. One may withhold his assent here and there from a conclusion of the author, but one cannot but feel that the reading of his book is both a spiritual and an intellectual tonic, well-fitted to key the mind up to do its highest and best thinking. We commend its reading, especially to ministers of the gospel.

THE CHRIST IN MODERN LITERATURE, by George Hamilton Combs, one of our Kansas City preachers, is easily one of the best books turned out by the Christian Publishing Company, St. Louis, Mo., in a long time. It is beautiful in diction, comprehensive in its scope, touches a vital subject and draws a splendid conclusion. — Colorado Christian Herald.

257 pages. Handsomely bound, price $1.00 postpaid. Christian Pub. Co., St. Louis, Mo.

As Seen From the Dome.

(Continued from page 216.)

vices and our model structures are licked up in a moment and our best powers of resistance seem pitifully weak. Man boasts of controlling natures, but he is still like Carlyle's Minnow, knowing the crannies and pebbles of his little Creek, but ignorant of ocean tides and periodic currents, trade winds, monsoons, and moon eclipses by which the condition of his little creek is regulated and may from time to time be quite overset and reversed. He should learn humanity.

We see also how unstable a thing is wealth. Here are men who were millionaires on Sunday morning and in one short day have become poor. "Riches," the wise man tells us, "take unto themselves wings and fly away." Accumulations of thousands in a lifetime of labor go up in smoke, which a single spark is responsible for, and men who had climbed to the top must begin again at the bottom. It is the old story. Croesus, whose name is the synonym of great wealth, is taken captive, stripped of his treasures, and in old age supported by the charity of Cyrus. God alone is great. The things that are unseen are the eternal things. Cornelius Vanderbilt, worth $100,000,000, asked them to sing, as he lay dying, "Come you sinners, poor and needy." Blessed are they that do his commandments for they shall enter into the city that hath foundations, the city which no fire can ever destroy.

The Quiet Hour

The man who keeps busy in the service of the Lord does not have time to be afraid of public sentiment.

Keep your conduct abreast of your conscience, and very soon your conscience will be illumined by the radiance of God. — W. M. Taylor.

He who lives for others will have friends, but he who lives for himself must not complain when he finds the world forsaking him. — Earthly Discords.

Say not, "The days are evil, Who's to blame?" And fold the hands and acquiesce—Oh, shame! Stand up, speak out, and bravely in God's name. Mallbie D. Babcock.

Always remember, that sincerity is the very soul of religion. A single intention to please God and to approve ourselves to him must animate and govern all that we do. — Doddridge.

The world o'erflows its cup of woe,
Each heart has felt the knife of pain,
But I would have my soul to know
That all is best, that God doth reign.
— Visions and Other Verses.

Put a seal upon your lips and forget what you have done. After you have been kind, after love has stolen forth into the world and done its beautiful work, go back into the shade and say nothing about it. Love hides even from itself. — Drummond.

Each day comes as a fresh gift from the hand of God. In it are just the experiences his loving wisdom has ordained. Meet with a brave heart all that is in the day's portion, but shrink not from phantom's lions, or shadows that seem to blot out the sun.

Amid the maddening maze of things,
And tossed by storm and flood;
To one fixed trust my spirit clings—
I know that God is good.

I know not where his islands lift
Their fringed palms in air;
I only know I can not drift
Beyond his love and care. — Whittier.

Insufficiency, all-sufficiency, efficiency—these are the three keynotes of this strong and striking Scripture and of every strong and efficient Christian life. We must start at the deep sense of our utter insufficiency, but just as firmly must we be assured of Christ's all-sufficiency. Humility is paralyzing when it leads to discouragement, but stimulating when it throws us upon Christ. Then comes efficiency, and the consciousness of our divine equipment for everything that God expects of us. We have no right to expect to fail; and, while utterly sensible of our nothingness, "we can do all things through Christ who strengtheneth us." — Christian Missionary Alliance.

Distressing Stomach Disease

Quickly-cured to stay cured by the masterly power of Drake's Palmetto Wine. Invalids no longer suffer from this dread malady, because this remarkable remedy cures absolutely every form of stomach trouble. It is a cure for the whole world of stomach weakness and constipation, as well as a regulator of the kidneys and liver.

Only one dose a day, and a cure begins with the first dose. No matter how long or how much you have suffered you are certain of a cure with one small dose a day of Drake's Palmetto Wine, and to convince you of this fact the Drake Formula Company, Drake Building, Chicago, Ill., will send a trial bottle of Drake's Palmetto Wine free and prepaid to every reader of this paper who desires to make a thorough test of this splendid tonic Palmetto remedy. A postal card or letter will be your only expense.

Family Circle

Hymn of the Vaudois.

For the strength of the hills we bless thee,
Our God, our fathers' God!
Thou hast made thy children mighty
By the touch of the mountain sod.
Thou hast fixed our ark of refuge,
Where the spoiler's foot ne'er trod;
For the strength of the hills we bless thee,
Our God, our fathers' God!

We are watchers of a beacon
Whose lights must never die;
We are guardians of an altar
'Midst the silence of the sky:
The rocks yield founts of courage,
Struck forth as by thy rod;
For the strength of the hills we bless thee,
Our God, our fathers' God!

For the dark resounding caverns,
Where thy still, small voice is heard;
For the strong pines of the forests,
That by thy breath are stirred;
For the storm on whose free pinions
Thy spirit walks abroad;
For the strength of the hills we bless thee,
Our God, our fathers' God!

The royal eagle darteth
On his quarry from the heights,
And the stag that knows no master
Seeks there his wild delights;
But we, for thy communion,
Have sought the mountain sod;
For the strength of the hills we bless thee,
Our God, our fathers' God!

The banner of the chieftain,
Far, far below us waves;
The war-horse of the spearman
Cannot reach our lofty caves;
The dark clouds wrap the threshold
Of freedom's last abode;
For the strength of the hills we bless thee,
Our God, our fathers' God!

For the shadow of thy presence,
Round our camp of rock outspread;
For the stern defiles of battle,
Bearing record of our dead;
For these snows and for the torrents,
For the free hearts' burial sod;
For the strength of the hills we bless thee,
Our God, our fathers' God!
—Mrs. Felecia Dorothea Hemans (Browne).

A First Sight of One's Mother.

A minister living in an Indiana village received a call once from a parishioner:

"Will you go to Indianapolis for me?" he asked. "We have decided to send Johnnie there for an operation. We have received encouragement that he might yet be made to see."

Johnnie had been born without sight, and now a lad of six, bright and sunny, and hardly realizing that he lacked anything to make life happy, he was facing a future of darkness, little hope having till now been given to his parents that anything could be done for his eyes.

"Go with my wife and Johnnie," said the father. "I cannot go; I dare not go. But stay with her until it is over, and either rejoice with us or comfort us, and send me word as fast as the lightning can fetch it."

The minister went and stayed with the lad. The oculist, not overconfident, began his work and preserved till, with a thrill of triumph in his tone, he said:

"The boy will see."

